Washington. The Russian embassy publishes the outlines of the plan said to have been presented to the Peace Conference by Russian representatives at Paris for the solving of the Russian problem. It asks for the recognition, as de facto Governments, of all National authorities inspired with democratic ideals and enjoying the support of the population, pending the establishment of a federation of the Russian States.—Reuter.

GERMAN GOVERNMENT TO MOVE

Berlin. 22nd April. — The German Government has decided to transfer the seat of the National Assembly from Weimar to Berlin, probably after the summer recess.

TERRIBLE AEROPLANE FATALITY.

FIVE OFFICERS BURNT TO DEATH.

A terrible aeroplane accident occurted about two o'clock yesterday morning at the Aerodrome at Weyhill, near Andover, three officers and two non-commissioned officers being burnt to death.

A Handley-Page machine was starting on a night flying trial when it crashed into the hangar, over turned and immediately burst into flames. The breeze fanned the fire and the machine was soon burning fiercely, the flames being seen for miles around.

Although the fire brigade was quickly on the scene, nothing could be done to save the seven occupants. Two of them managed to extricate themselves and were taken to hospital badly burnt. The other five were killed. Their names are Major Bachelor, Capt. Atkins, Lieut. Whiteside, Flight-Sgt. Hills and Cpl. Ward.

BRITISH SAILORS AT PARIS.

Two special trains from Cherbourg and Brest reached Paris yesterday and a body of men representative of the British Navy began their round of festivities.

The Admirals were received at the Gare des Invalides by the Chief of the General Staff of the French Navy, by a representative of the President and by the Paris municipal authorities.

In the afternoon a parade was held at the Invalides and the men were inspected by the Governor of Paris and Sir David Beatty. Afterwards the gallant admiral was received by the President and invested with the Grand Cross of the Legion of Honour.

The evening programme consisted of a gala performance at the Opera and a performance at the Chatelet.

AMERICAN NAVAL SECRETARY'S VISIT.

To morrow Senator Daniels, Secretary for the United States Navy, accompanied by his wife and son and a staff of Naval experts, is due in England for a visit which will extend to 8th May. The party will be accommodated in a battle cruiser at Scapa Flow, where it will visit the German fleet.

On 30th April Senator and Mrs. Daniels will motor to Windsor to lunch with the King, and will subsequently attend a dinner in their honour given by the First Sea Lord of the Admiralty.

DEATH OF JUSTICE BARGRAVE DEANE.

The death is announced of the Right Honourable Sir Henry Bargrave Deane, P.C.

Mr. Justice Deane was one of the soundest judges in the Probate and Admiralty Division of the High Court, especially in nautical cases. His treatise on the Law of Blockade was a text book on the subject. He was knighted in 1905 and retired from the Bench in 1917.

WHY NOT "FLYING."

Harry Tate, the popular comedian, proposes to undertake a world tour in a Handley-Page aeroplane, carrying with him all the necessary scenery and equipment for the production of his well-known sketch "Motoring."

He proposes to fly from London via Gibraltar and Malta to Colombo. All the principal cities in India will by visited, also China, Japan and the United States. His intention is finally to return from New York by air across the Atlantic, if by that time the weather is fine enough for a start.

ROUTE MARCH OF OVERSEAS MEN.

Included in the triumphal march of Dominions troops through the Metropolis on 3rd May will be four thousand Canadians, five thousand Australians, one thousand New Zealanders and one thousand South Africans.

The procession will march from Grosvenor Gate via Hyde Park Corner and Constitution Hill to Buckingham Palace, where the King and other Royalties will receive the salute. After this ceremony the route will be via Victoria-street, Whitehall, Trafalgar Square, Strand, Kingsway and Oxford street to the Marble Arch.

LITTLE WILLIE'S PLANS.

It is stated that the ex-Crown Prince proposes to return to Germany at the conclusion of Peace. He will live privately, residing either at Potsdam or at a castle in North Germany.

WISE IN TIME.

The Independent Labour Party Conference at Huddersfield almost unanimously rejected a motion demanding that the Government of the United Kingdom should be based on the Soviet system.

CANADIAN WELCOME HOME.

Montreal. The first returning troops of the first Canadian Division received an enthusiastic welcome at Montreal.

The 13th and 14th battalions and other small units arrived on Easter Sunday. Practically the whole of the city turned out and gave them a tumultuous welcome. The whole garrison joined in a triumphal march through the city.

Many more men are returning this week, at a rate which has completely stopped all dissatisfaction with the unavoidably slow progress of repatriation.

Among the names of well-known people who died yesterday appear those of the Earl of Cottenham and Major Jasper Selwyn. The latter was formerly master of the Dulverton Hounds and had also rendered great services in the old volunteer movament.

SHEER PERVERSITY AT LIMERICK.

"IT MAY BE FOR YEARS."

The extraordinary position at Limerick continues, but threats of violence are now frequently heard. Numerous priests and monks are assisting to keep order among the sullen but orderly crowd which is still congregated at Sarsfield Bridge.

People possessing permits distributed food and warm clothing.

The strikers amuse themselves by singing the "Red Flag," the soldiers good humouredly replying with snatches of rag-time songs.

Every road leading into Limerick is guarded by a barrier of barbed wire and a detachment of troops. The principal bridge across the Shannon has a tank drawn broadside across half its width, with guns trained down the main thoroughfare, while a Lewis gun covers the approach to the bridge.

No collision with the troops has occurred as yet, but the tempers of many of the strikers are becoming ugly and it is feared that they may get out of hand. They declare that they are determined to remain where they are for ever unless the military allow them to pass freely.

Many of the crowd re-entered the city during Monday night by crossing the river upstream in boats and making their way across the fields, carefully avoiding guarded roads.

The remainder held their ground until yesterday afternoon, when they deceived the troops by stratagem. They proceeded into the country as if for a walk and then boarded a train from Ennis. On reaching the ticket checking platform outside Limerick station they were locked into the carriages by the soldiers, but on the entry of the train into Limerick they escaped through the off-side doors of the carriages, which were not locked, and mingled with the crowd. All was quiet yesterday evening.

General Sir Frederick Shaw arrived at Limerick yesterday and after conferring with the commander of the garrison, returned to Dublin in the evening.

The troops at Limerick station have been reinforced.

RECORD BANK HOLIDAY IN EVERY RESPECT.

Shortage of beer and high prices were responsible for a very sober Bank Holiday in London. At several London and suburban police courts yesterday there was not a single case of drunkenness and at other courts the number of cases were far below the average.

Although one and a half million people visited Hampstead Heath on Monday — the largest crowd ever seen there — the charge sheet at Hampstead police court was blank.

It is estimated that the London tramways on Easter Monday carried three hundred thousand more passengers than on any previous Bank Holiday.

WELL KNOWN BARONET FOUND SHOT.

Yesterday morning in a Leicestershire plantation near the residence of some relatives with whom he had been staying, the body of Sir Archibald Orr-Ewing, the well-known Scottish baronet, was found. The cause of death was a gunshot wound.

The deceased baronet, who was sixty-six years of age, succeeded to the title in 1903 on the death of his brother. He was a member of the Royal Archers (King's Body-guard for Scotland) and was formerly a Captain in the 3rd Bn. Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders.

He is succeeded by Lt. Col. Orr-Ewing of the Scots Guards.

NEW ANTARCTIC EXPEDITION.

A British Imperial Antarctic Expediton has been formed under the leadership of Mr. John Cope, a member of the 1914—17 expedition. The party expects to leave in June 1920 and to return in 1926. The object of the expedition is to ascertain the position and extent of mineralogical deposits in Antarctica; to investigate the distribution and migration of whales; study meteorological and magnetic conditions in Ross Sea and Enderby Land and their influence on similar conditions in Australia and South Africa, and generally to extend the knowledge of Antarctica with a view to its economic development. The famous ship "Terra Nova" has been secured and an aeroplane will accompany the expedition.

SWISS HOTELS EASTER-EGG.

Interlaken, 21st April. Those hotels of the Bernese Oberland in which Allied soldiers were interned received a pleasant surprise during the Easter holidays in the shape of a payment of five hundred thousand francs.

This sum was sent by the Entente Powers as an extra boarding allowance for the period from September to November last.—Reuter.

ROUND BRITAIN TOUR.

Two Handley-Page aeroplanes which are touring the United Kingdom alighted at Belfast on Sunday and subsequently continued their flight to Cornwall via Dublin.

The machines left Andover on Saturday and arrived at Edinburgh the same afternoon, crossing the Irish Sea on Sunday. Each carries nine passengers, and the total lenght of the tour will greatly exceed that of the Trans-Atlantic flight.

Captain C.H. Perkins, of the Middlesex Regiment, who has been appointed professional at the Stafford Castle Golf Club, was formerly a caddie on the Mid Surrey links.

FLYING THE ATLANTIC OCEAN.

COMING BACK TO THE FIELD.

St. John's, Newfoundland. 22nd April. — Fog and rain prevail again to-day, making the conditions for the trans-Atlantic flight unfavourable unless the weather is better in Mid-Atlantic.

If the unfavourable weather continues it is probable that several new competitors for the trans-Atlantic flight will arrive in time to attempt to jump off with Raynham and Hawker.

An aerodrome is being prepared at Harbour Grace for the Handley Page machine which is going to attempt the flight. An agent of Boulton and Paul, Ltd., of Norwich, arrived yesterday in order to select a site for an aerodrome, arrange about petrol supply and the storing of spare parts for the company's machine. — Reuter.

New York. The thirty-six observers, mechanics and repairers of the Naval Air Station at Rockaway Beach who were selected by the Navigation Bureau to further the United States Navy's plans for the trans-Atlantic flight, left Rockaway yesterday aboard the "Aroostook" bound for Newfoundland. It is understood that the "Aroostook" will proceed later to the Azores, where she will act as supply ship.

The cruisers Columbia and Baltimore have also been detailed to assist in the flight. All the men aboard the "Aroostook" have been chosen from naval air stations in France.

Yesterday fifty-four destroyers were making ready in anticipation of orders to proceed to points along the trans-Atlantic route for the purpose of acting as patrol boats.

SIR DOUGLAS HAIG'S MESSAGE TO AUSTRALIANS.

The editor of the soldiers' paper The Australian at Weymouth has received the following message for publication among the Australian troops at Weymouth Camp.

"I have been asked to send you an Easter message and I cannot do so without thanking you and all other Australians who served with me in France and Flanders for the splendid share you have taken in bringing about the victory which all ranks of the army in France were determined to achieve.

Now that your work is done and you are looking forward to returning to the homes you left at the call of duty, I hope you will carry with you a kindly feeling for the men of the British race, who fought beside you, and who in that greater knowledge born of comradeship in war have learnt to regard the Australians with so much affection and respect. I wish you all a safe return and every prosperity in the future. — Haig, Field Marshal."

TRADE UNIONS ON PRE-WAR FOOTING.

The text has been issued of a Bill to be introduced by the Minister for Labour restoring trade union practices which were in abeyance during the war.

It provides for a penalty of twenty-five pounds daily for nonconpliance and says that proceedings against an employer may be instituted by a trade union or federation of trade unions. Such cases will go before munition tribunals, which will continue in force for the purposes of this Act, but under the jurisdiction of the Minister for Labour instead of the Minister for Munitions.

EXTRAORDINARY NEW YORK WEDDING.

At New York on Tuesday, Miss Margaret Carnegie, heiress to the Carnegie fortune of a hundred million sterling, was married to Ensign Miller.

It was the simplest wedding New York Society has seen within anybody's recollection. The bride was attended only by Miss Dorothy Miller, sister of the bridegroom, and only twenty guests were present at the ceremony, which was performed at the Carnegie Mansion on Fifth Avenue.

EFFECT OF MUZZLING ORDER.

As the result of the Muzzling Order, the Dogs, Home at Battersea is busier than it has been for many years. The usual number of dogs housed there is between two and three hundred, but the Home opened on Tuesday morning with six hundred dogs. By use of the lethal chamber this number was reduced shortly after to five hundred. Dogs were being brought in continuously all the morning, the majority being strays. Many people are turning their dogs adrift rather than take the trouble to obey the muzzling restrictions.

STOCK EXCHANGE RE-OPENS.

The London Stock Exchange re-opened on Tuesday with a good tone. Firmness characterised all sections throughout the day, but owing to holiday influences the volume of business was small. Gilt edged securities hardened. Indian stocks had a better tone on receipt of the latest news from India. Oils were in renewed request and with a scarcity of available securities quotations further improved in a number of cases. There was also a revival of interest in Gold Mining Sections, notably West African descriptions.

HOUSING STRIKE SUGGESTED.

Mr. Robert Smillie, President of the Miners Federation, speaking at Glasgow, said that new houses should be erected on land owned by the people. He was prepared to ask the people to declare a strike on the housing question.

At the request of the High Commissioners the Deon of Westminster has arranged for a service in the Abbey on the 24th May in memory of the fallen members of overseas forces. Their Majesties the King and Queen have signified their intention of being present.

THE AFTERMATH OF WAR.

It is not given to all to keep a stout heart in days of trial and perplexity. There have been occasions during these years of war and during the armistice when many Englishmen have been perturbed by the signs of the times. They have seen symptoms of discord, of persistent class jealousies, of greedy materialism that is stark and impenitent, of clamorous agitation that refuses to be stilled. They have viewed these tokens of social and political unrest and are saddened by the sorry spectacle. It is true that some bolder spirits, even in their perturbation, claim the unrest as an awakening of the public conscience, and are hoping that in wise hands our country's destiny may be fulfilled in a happier morrow. But whether one fears the worst or hopes for the best it is undoubted that we are passing through a tumultuous epoch in which good and evil are strangely mixed, an epoch which will alter very completely the fashion of our empire.

Happily for us the province of The Cologne Post does not permit of any intimate discussion of political and social affairs. But it may not be out of place to speak in general terms of the close connexion in our national history between wars and social movements. Our sole motive is to furnish hope for the pessimist and comfort for the man of doubtful heart. The schoolmaster is abroad in the Army of the Rhine, and we can learn something from his primer. The words are Lord Brougham's; but the moral is ours, for Lord Brougham in his great speech did not anticipate a time when soldier and schoolmaster could be one and the same person. Much can happen in a hundred years.

War is never without its aftermath, if one may use a daring metaphor, for it always brings with it a crop that must be weeded and harvested. For our present purpose we select two wars in which England was heavily engaged, wars which are instructive in their lessons. The first is the Hundred Years' war, begun by the French policy of Edward III in 1337 and finished but a short time before England was rent in twain by the bitter struggle between the partizans of Lancaster and York. The close of this long drawn-out campaign, in which Crecy, Poitiers, and Agincourt are names of renown, heralded the outbreak of revolution in England. Jack Cade's rebellion was the inevitable reaction of war. There were throughout the country general unrest and deep discontent, and the men of Kent rose in their wrath "to correct public abuses and to remove evil counsellors." The people were dissatisfied with the conduct of the French war, with the heavy taxation consequent on that war, and with the appalling waste of public money by state officials. "The realm of England was out of all good governence" in the middle of the 15th century. Yet what followed? The spirit of social and political unrest passed away, and before the century closed the Tudor sovereigns had brought England to her haven of peace and unwonted prosperity. "The spacious times of great Elizabeth" were the climax of an era of turbulence and sorrow.

The second war is not medieval but modern; it is once more a war of England against France — the France of Napoleon, not of Joan of Arc. In 1815 our country gained one of its greatest victories on the field of battle, for Waterloo spelt the doom of General Bonaparte. But it is not an exaggeration to say that England suffered more during the six years that followed Waterloo than during the Napoleonic wars. These years were an epoch of discontent and disaffection. The National Debt had risen enormously, taxation was grievous, there was a gross waste in financial administration, and "paper currency" brought many evils in the realm of trade. These were days that tempt analogy, for agricultural prosperity which had been notable during war speedily vanished when peace came, commerce was hampered at every turn, and unemployment was prevalent. Riots took place in many parts of England. Machinery and implements were destroyed, labour demonstrations were carried out in no peaceful manner, and the Peterloo Massacre unhappily crowned an era of suffering, and revolt gave place to the tranquil activities of commerce and manufacture. In the middle of the 19th century England gained a wondrous pitch of prosperity; and whatever be our criticisms of the Victorian age we cannot deny that in the spheres of invention, shipbuilding, engineering, and, in truth, every art and science, it was an age of renown.

We realize the dangers of prophecy and even of generalization, but we feel sure that an historical lesson can be learned. The Hundred Years' war and the Napoleonic wars had their ensuing periods of turmoil, and it is inevitable that all great wars should have such periods in their wake. But these were in each case followed by eras of stability, prosperity, and greatness. Thus as we view our own times we may take hope. For a short time there may be social excitement, economic striving, and moral unsettlement, but these will subside as the dawn of a new epoch breaks through our grey skies. Remember that the great Victorians, men of mark in science, art, and letters were born when England was fighting for her life against Napoleon; and in your remembrance gather the courage of optimism.

FOR KING AND EMPIRE.

The King, the King! God save the King! From land and sea and sky,
From billet and from battlefield, from trench and battery,
From Salonica's scorching heat, from Belgium's wintry plain,
From Nile and Tigris, Marne and Meuse, from Somme and Dise and Aisne,
From shot-swept beach and deadly ridge in grim Gallipoli,
From ships that keep unending watch across the wild Morth Sea,
To all her sons, in all her land, sure of their answering,
The Nother Country pledged the toast "Gentlemen, the King!"
"The King, God bless him!" Swift and sure the loyal answer comes:
Can you hear our armies marching to the rolling of the drums?
We come, we come, from north and south, we come from east and west,
From earth's five continents we come, to succour the oppressed;
Kingdom, Dominion, Commonwealth, Union and Empire, we,
Five thousand thousand freemen sworn to keep our liberty;
Beneath one flag one King we serve, for one sure end we fight: —
God save the King, God guard the flag, and God defend the right!

CLEMENCEAU'S SECOND NOTE.

The Berliner Morgenpost says that "the second note is still not clear, as no mention is made that negotiations will be made on the basis of equality of rights."

The Berliner Volkszeitung, however, says that "though still haughty, it is better to grasp the contents of the note rather than to stick at its tone."

EDUCATION.

BY JUVENIS.

There have already been several articles published on this subject in the Cologne Post; some written by Education Officers, others purporting to come from sarcastic privates, but hitherto no one has voiced the point of view of the Educational N.C.O. He certainly deserves some notice; at least, he thinks so himself. The writer trusts that the few suggestions made in this article "will not return unto him void, but will accomplish the thing whereto he hath sent it."

Some people seem to hold the strange but erroneous idea that the Educational Staff is a superfluous adornment to the Battalion. They seem to think that it is a convenient excuse set up by certain people of intelligence to hold rank under false pretences, and thus to evade duties, both on parade ground and fatigues. It is admittedly difficult to drive sense into some people's heads, and it is equally difficult to eradicate that foolish idea from the minds of these misguided individuals. Most of these people are many years behind the times. Their whole mental outlook is bounded by the Barrack Square, and they fail to see that, while they have been mentally dozing, Infantry Training Regulations have taken second place in War Office estimation to the Education Scheme. It is useless to argue with such people; they seem to think, for example, that a man who gains his stripes by twelve years of bellowing on a parade ground is infinitely superior to anyone who is granted the same rank in consideration of his mental abilities, attained often at the cost of many years of labour.

This idea, though so utterly preposterous, brings down upon the Education Staff innumerable insults and petty annoyances. The instructors are treated with a very objectionable condescending tolerance by the older established branches of the Army. They receive no fraternal assistance from their compeers in the Battalion, instead the are treated as a pampered Pekinese dog would be by a common or garden terrier. Now these ideas must be changed; if kindness will not appeal to them, then methods such as are used towards a refractory child must be adopted. The Education Staff must not be treated as a "buckshee" reserve of men who can be drawn upon to supply picquets and other duties which should by supplied by Parade Ground individuals.

The old idea prevalent even in the high places of the Army was that lawyers, civil servants, and bank clerks were most useful in the Sanitary Squad, while farm labourers and crossing sweepers monopolised the positions of authority. That conception of a successful organisation proved a complete failure, and the War Office now exalts to his proper position the long-despised man with educational abilities. Naturally these newly-honoured people receive all the jealousy which the said labourers and crossing sweepers can bestow upon them, this taking the form frequently of critical remarks as to their musketry qualifications or caustic references to neglected rifle slings.

One remedy for these ill-timed sneers in my own opinion lies in the hands of the Army Education Authorities. Every other specialist branch has its own proficiency badge, signallers wear crossed flags, P.T. people wear crossed swords, but the Education Staff alone remains unadorned with any mark denoting proficiency in that direction. Why could not Divisional examiners set papers, equal in difficulty, for example, to the London Matriculation Examination, and make the examination open to all Educational-Instructors, whether N.C.O.'s or Officers. Those successful in passing the examination, and also recommended as to teaching ability by their own Education Officers, should be allowed to wear some badge of merit, which would be held in quite as high esteem as the more easily gained insignia of the other Specialist Staffs.

Then comes the ever absorbing question to N.C.O.'s of Regimental Duties. Should he do guards, piquets, fatigues or any other pleasant duties which a thoughtful R.S.M. can devise? The answer to my mind, is most emphatically, No! No man is competent as an instructor in Education to face a class even of A IV Boys, unless he has spent hours of preparation on his lectures. It is a different matter to get up and "gas" about the parts of a Mark 3, Star, L.E. rifle, from taking a class of the same boys in English literature.

The former needs a parrot-like memory, while the latter needs intelligence only acquired by hard study of the subject in question. The Education Staff should be given every opportunity for private study, and the Battalion Education Officers can easily satisfy themselves that this time is being put to a proper use.

It would be a good thing if inter-battalion conferences were arranged from time to time; these to be attended by representatives of the staffs of each battalion. In that way many suggestions and new ideas could be promulgated, and faults in the different local schemes detected and rectified.

Those on this great work realise the opportunities before them, but their energies are to a certain extent handicapped. We not only would like recognition by the granting of a proficiency badge, but every opportunity should be given, not only to the rank and file, but to the instructors to gain more and more knowledge. Thus in continuing their own education, they are fitting themselves for their daily Battalion duties—Education.

51st ROYAL SUSSEX.

We had just settled down at Wahn comfortably, and the daily routine was in full swing, when the rumours started. We were moving! Where? Ah! that was the query. Each of the various people who gave us the information was quite sure that he was the man with the "goods." Our destinations were varied — up the line, Bonn, Siegburg and Cologne were a few of the places. The date of the move? Just as varied. And each informant was just as emphatic that his date was correct. Then the advance party was warned, and it became known that we were moving on Wednesday the 17th, and were going up to the outposts. The order was given that kits and blankets were to be wrapped in waterproof sheets before being stacked. This was simply pandering to tradition, as the Battalion had always moved on a wet day. It was right, however, as Wednesday dawned cloudy and threatening, and as soon as kits were nicely stacked, down come the rain. Breakfast was at 6 a.m. and the Battalion, less the platoons who were travelling direct to the line by lorry, marched off at 7-10 a.m. to Wahn station en route for—. A short journey, then out of the train and on the march. Battalion Headquarters and "W" Company were bound for—, and several of the old campaigners prophesied that these "boys" would never "stick" the hills in marching order. They were wrong. The journey—up hill all the way—was done in fine style, and the "boys" marched into the village, band playing, as "fresh as paint."

The rain came down again just to remind us that traditions must be maintained, but a hot meal was soon provided, billets allotted and the Battalion once more temporarily settled. Reports from the companies on outpost duty state that they also have settled down, are very keen on their new duties and are doing well.

THE MORALS OF MACPHEERSON.

When I left I decided to take Macpheerson O. as my batman. In the light of future events, it was a happy thought, for Macpheerson saved my life. Macpheerson upheld my good name, and for ever and ever hereafter shall the tribal handle of Macpheerson be lauded and honoured by my children and their children's children. In any case, it is said that the ideal batman is born not made. But Macpheerson is more. He is the super-ideal-batman, and must have numbered amongst his forefathers many a steward of great worth to the chieftain Macpheerson of Macpheerson. In a burst of confidence he once told me that it was written that a Macpheerson once tended the Pharaon's themselves.

But I stray . . . .

As I left the Mess with a whispered good-byee the Company Commander met me. "Jammy, lucky, fortunate person. What have you done to deserve this? Three weeks by the blue Rhine. Three weeks of eyebrows upward tilt, ears waggling, by the front, commence! Ugh!" he breathed "May they stiffen you . . . ."

The R.S.M. at battalion H.Q. said "Good luck, sir! Hopes you has a good time, sir, and could you bring back a football or two for the boys, Sir?"

Sinclair at Brigade waved a cheery bon voyage, and said it would "do me a world of good." That night I sat outside the R.T.O's hut waiting for the waggon and dreaming of foaming lager beer and the other delights of Cologne.

Macpheerson turned me out the first morning in a pair of humiliating "things" that only served to accentuate the ten minutes to three set of my feet and legs. With horror I learned I should wear them throughout the course.

All that morning I was taught, once more, to do rrright arrress and forrrm fourrrs, with the only difference that I had to "nip to it."

For the two following weeks I did upward jumps and was initiated into the mystic steps of a weird travesty of the Hielant Fling. I vied with O'Grady and his wives, graduated in very elementary zoology, learning to distinguish at a moment's notice between crows, cranes, crabs and other faune. On other occasions I was made to lie flat on my back and perform circular volutions with my legs in the circumambient atmosphere. Or, to stimulate my brain, the staff instructor would persuade my right-hand neighbour — who possessed the strength of a Hercules in his arms and the speed of a Donaldson in his legs — to chase me giddily round a circle the while he applied impetus to my person with the obnoxious aid of a belt. Such an indirect application to induce cerebral activity does not appeal to me.

I did wondrous feats called flying pigs and cross-buttocks at the instigation of a knobbily be-muscled wrestling merchant and learnt to stop the swipes of Jim Harris with various parts of my anatomy. In the afternoons I scrambled madly in the mud, endeavouring vainly to pop a soppy football into a small basket suspended at a ridiculous height above the ground. So the days passed . . . .

They weighed me in to wrestle and box. "Only one round of two minutes, sir," said the Staff seductively, "and you get two points for the Section."

They stripped me and I grunted, strained and panted on a mat with another nude being. At night I listened vacantly to someone saying "Seconds Out. Time." . . . and woke up later.

The last straw is stated, proverbially, to fracture the spine of the dromedary. On the second last day they told me that I should "pass out" next morning, being down for examination by the Great-I-Am. I promptly fainted.

* * *

To Macpheerson, as he bathed my bruises with sal-volatile and renewed the beefsteaks that night, I wearily opened my heart, and he listened with becoming gravity.

"Sirr," said he, "Dinna lat that worry ye. Leave it tae me."

I went on parade next morning with my heart throbbing to "Leg, Neck, Arm, Trunk, Leg"; marched down to the tune of "Left foot sideways, nips firm" and prepared to perish. The periods passed but the Great-I-Am came not. We formed up, did our usual four practises of moving to the right in fours, by the Section leader, Platoon Officer, and R.S.M., before the Company Commander tried his hand. I only realised when I got off parade that I had escaped.

* * *

I sought out Macpheerson when we were safely on the Boulogne-Cologne Express.

"Private Macpheerson," I demanded, "how did you do it?"

"Sirr," he replied, with caution, "I gied ye a promise an' I kep' it."

"Yes," said I expectantly.

"As tae the working details" he proceeded, with thoughtful mien, "I'd like tae point out that the room o' the purrson wha was tae examine ye was deid aulow yer ain. Like mornin' when I passed I cud keek in an' see lots o' things, in parteecular a set o' false teeth sittin' in a glass o' watter on his table."

"Sirr," he looked at me apologetically, "On the mornin' o' the examinashun, they got misleid for a while . . . . or so A'm led tae believe."

OUR COMPANY COOK.

Imagine a disreputable figure clad in a suit of very greasy overalls, unshaven and sometimes unwashed, with a stump of a cigarette behind his ear and there you have our Company Cook.

He it is who attends to the want of the inner man, and woe betide any unfortunate person who crosses his path.

He, the indispensable, who "grouses" when he is warned for parade, and asks to be returned to duty, always turns up at the critical moment of a long route march with that very refreshing dixie of tea.

Struggling sadly along behind his beloved cooker and girt with equipment which, to all appearance, has not been cleaned since he was "employed," he makes a pathetic figure and enlists the sympathy of all who meet him.

Nevertheless, who in the company would not sell his very soul for the privilege of being Company Cook.

All the little delicacies which fall to his lot, the early morning mug of tea and the extra rations which, somehow or other, find their way to the cookhouse, are they not worth the job?

The comments of his Company Commander have no effect on his personal appearance and only once in a year or so do you see him clad in respectable garb, with flashes and chevrons complete, and that is when he is warned for that exclusive and often far-distant time called leave.

He usually has a large reserve of army vocabulary and his lurid comments on the army in general and all connected with it, baffles description, when he is turned out of bed by the guard at 5 a.m. on a cold, wet morning.

Who is it, who has not cursed the day he was born, because of the mince that looks like a "bran mesh" and of that onion flavour in the tea! Undoubtedly, he has a thankless job, but how nobly he has done his bit".

All honour to the Company Cook—may he enjoy a long life and never suffer as we did when he was the Company Cook!! You see, I once had the job myself!!

POOR DISPLAY BY 8TH AMBULANCE.

WELL HELD BY WEAK "25" TEAM.

At Mulheim on Tuesday. The 8th Ambulance gained a very lucky victory by the only goal scored. "25" Siege played practically a reserve team and they proved capable of giving the crack Ambulance side a very stiff fight, and it is safe to say that but for the brilliant form displayed by Farmer at left back "25" Siege must have scored on at least a couple of times. The visitors played very well together in the opening period but the home halves were excellent in breaking up their attacks.

The R. A. M. C. scored the only goal during the first 15 minutes, Blakeley taking a pass from Turner and placing the ball in the far corner of the posts. "25" were attacking for quite three parts of the second half, but they missed several good scoring opportunities. True, Farmer seemed to be everywhere in the vicinity of the ball and I believe he only made one faulty kick which went for an unproductive corner. On one occasion all the inside forwards were within a few yards of Surgener and yet they could not find the net. At the other end Blakeley failed to turn a penalty to account and Turner with only Brown to beat missed with a feeble effort.

Altogether the R. A. M. C. gave an unconvincing display. Brown kept a capital goal and showed great kicking powers whilst Bennie did much good work at back. Lacey was prominent at centre half and Bennet was the pick of a forward line lacking confidence. As stated, Farmer was a host in himself and Holmes at outside right was very speedy but a poor finisher. The teams were:

"25" Siege Battery: Lt. Brown, Bennie, Smith; Cpl. Gilbertson, Lacey, Warbrick, Snowdon, Taylor, Macpher on, Bennett, Wickenkam.

8th Field Ambulance R.A.M.C.: Surgener, Evans, Farmer, Atherton, Mc.Intyre, Cousens, Holmes, Wright, Turner, Blakeley, Walker.

THE MC.LEAN CHALLENGE CUP.

Final Tie 50th Brigade R.F.A.

The deciding fixture for the McLean Challenge Cup took place on Ritterstrasse ground Solingen on Wednesday between C 50 and D 50. Unfortunately owing to Colonel McLean being transferred to England, he was not able to present the Cup to the winning team. This was his ambition as, in earlier days, he commanded C/Battery, to which the winning team belongs.

The Cup was presented by his successor Lieut.-Colonel A.M.R. Mallock who made a fine speech, congratulating the team on their victory. At the conclusion three hearty cheers were given for Colonel McLean and three more for Colonel Mallock.

The Game.

C/50, owing to a strenuous week-end, had to do a bit of shuffling in their team. Bdr. Oldacre, who had been the Battery Centre-forward and had given many a goal-keeper a shock, owing to his strong shooting powers had to take the position in goal, through injuries received during the week-end. D 50 were full strength.

Tethur, C 50 outside right, broke away but his splended centre went begging owing to the forwards not being able to keep their feet. Sergt. Donovan opened out the play by a lovely pass to Dvr. Gibbons but the D/50 defence was playing a sound game, and forced him to kick to touch. D 50 then had a turn, and by some good forward play enabled Shennan to give Oldacre a warm handful, who, with quickness and judgement, cleared.

C/50 were awarded a free kick for hands, the outcome of which was the scoring of a goal, by Sergt. Donovan who sent the ball well into the net. B.S.M.Law of C 50 who had a great liking for the sludge took his men down in open formation and when nearing the goal tried hard to score, just missing the upright. Half time C/50 1; D/50 0.

Afer change of ends D/50 pressed hard butt Hodgson and Hunter were playing their best at back. Turner of D 50 then brought a change to his side by sending the outside left away, but Lieut. Kee who had played a splended game stopped his progress. After a give and take game D 50 broke away, the outside right sent the ball across and D/50 inside left soon took this chance and passing to Dettley enabled him to equalize. When the whistle went C/50 were making tracks for D/50 Goal.

HIGH TIMES AT MECKENHEIM.

The warrant officers and Sergeants of the 51st Welsh Regt. played an amusing rugby match. on Monday in which the rules of the game were somewhat amended.

The teams were the "cant's" and the "Cans," the former being composed of players who knew nothing about rugby, while the referee also confessed to absolute ignorance of the game. As may be imagined, the proceeding were greatly amusing. The final score was rather doubtful.

185 v. 354 SIEGE BATTERY.

This game was played at Weidesheim near Cuchenheim on Easter Monday morning and resulted in a win for the home side by 2-0. The game was interesting. The outstanding feature was the play of St. Atherton the goalie, of 354 S. Bty. who brought off some fine saves. Gnr. Downs scored with a good header before half time and after continual pressure 354 S. Bty. were awarded a penalty. From the resultant kick, Gnr. Trotter shot high over the bar. The second half brought out better soccer from both sides, and Pte. Burton added another for the home side. 354 S. Battery played up well, but were unable to score and 185 S. Battery won by above mentioned score.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

Owing to the enormous pressure on space, "The Rambler's" notes are unavoidably held over to-day.

KILTIES AT LUXEMBURG.

8th BLACK WATCH EASTER VISIT.

The 8th Black Watch were honoured as the chosen representatives of the 2nd British Army to engage the National Sporting Club of the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg, in a game of football which was played on Easter Sunday at Luxemburg.

IN THE CITY.

The team left on Friday, and after spending a night in Cologne, proceeded on the Saturday to the "Duchy." The visit of the "Kilties" to the Capital stood out as an epoch in history in that quarter. No British soldier has previously been in the City. A quiet evening was spent on the Saturday at the pictures, etc. On Sunday morning members of the Sporting Club acted as guides in showing the visitors over the town. Selections by the town band were given in the City square, where Luxemburg seemed to be "en masse."

THE GAME.

A large crowd of about 2,000 spectators assembled at the Sporting Club's ground. The homesters have quite a good record, having been only once beaten, while their team contains five internationals. The "Jocks" clad in the Royal blue of Scotland, with the Thistle on left breast got a good reception as they were led on by a piper playing the regimental march. The home team were equally well received, and after the usual photographs were taken, the British Consul kicked off. The first half was stubbornly contested, the Luxemburg boys relying mostly on speed and quick following up, while the "Scotties" served up the traditional Scotch play, close inside forward work, and accurate passing. The latter had the better of exchanges, but principally owing to good goal-keeping by Conzemius, the home custodian. At half-time there was no score.

The second half opening promised a great tussle, and events proved this to be correct. The tricky play of the inside forwards of the "Watch" was greatly appreciated by the home supporters who were not slow to express their appreciation. But what a cheer greeted a fine goal scored by the local centre-half, Meyer, who all through put up a great game. Then did the "Jocks" knuckle to in earnest, and five minutes later, Lce. Cpl. Russell got in, and beat the home keeper all the way. Shortly afterwards Lce. Cpl. Bisset put through with an unsaveable effort. To the end, the "Scotties" pressed, but no further score ensued, and Luxemburg retired defeated for the second time in their history by 2 goals to 1.

AND AFTER.

In the evening the Clubs met in social capacity. Dr. Razen, president of the Club, in an able speech (in French) welcomed the visitors to Luxemburg and congratulated the team on their play. He referred to the splendid achievements of the British Army during the war. Major Shepherd, who accompanied the team, replied for the Black Watch and thanked Dr. Razen and the other members of the Club for all they had done to make their visit such a great success. Afterwards the teams dined together, and spent a very jolly evening.

The "hom ward" journey was made next day, and the "Jocks" will always remember a splendid week-end in the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg which before had been but a name to them all, and also for the great kindness shown to them by the home clubs officials, and everybody in general.—

The Following were the teams:

Luxemburg team:

Goal, Mons. Consemius; backs, Mons. Thorn and Wirtz; half backs, Mons. M. Schuman, Meyer and Clivio; forwards, Mons. G. Schuman, Flammany, Munchen, Gangler and Krombach.

8th Black Watch team:

Goal, Pte. Bell; backs, Pte. MacCaskill and Sgt. Abbie; half backs, Lce. Cpl. Robertson, Pte. Ness, Lt. Miller; forwards, 2/Lt. Drummond, Lce. Cpl. Bisset, La Cpl. Russell, Capt. MacKenzie and Pte. Murdoch.

HAMISH ARMOUR.

This page on Saturday will contain an announcement of vital importance to all cricketers.

185 v. 24 SIEGE BATTERY R.G.A.

A very interesting game was played at Weidesheim, near Euskirchen After a spell of midfield play, Pte. Cro by scored for the home side. On the resumption, the play was much more interesting and after pressing for some minutes Sgt. Puchard equalized for the visitors. Gnr. Andrews, who had been playing consistant good football by fine individual efforts, scored 2 goals in quick succession for 185 S. Bty. and decided the game.

B.Q.M.S. Daire, after a splendid tackle, passed to Gnr. Fratter who added yet another for the same side, and 24th S. Bty. got one in a scramble. The home team ran out winners by 4-2 in a game which kept up the interest of the crowd to the end.

53 d MANCHESTER v. 53rd BEDFORDS.

Played at Menden, on Wednesday, and resulted in a win for the Manchester by 5 goals to nil. The Manchester side was ably led by Lt. Fairman, who played a good game at left back. The goals were scored by Abbot (2) Chadwick (2) and Garner. Chadwick, as usual proved a tower of strength to his side, and played a sterling game at centre forward. Lt. Bedford played well for the Bedfords and was dangerous on more than one occasion, but the team as a whole was quite outclassed.

A FIELD MATCH AT ESCHBACH.

The 19th Battery, Middlesex Rgt. (Pioneers), entertained the 1/7 Battn, of the same Regt. at Eschbach on Thursday. Within eight minutes, Gray, (who has seen good service for Paisley and Clapton Orient) scored from a good pass from Thornton. Ten minutes later, the visitors' centre scored, with a rather lucky shot. After good play by both teams, Thornton scored with a fast low shot. He got another goal a little later.

The second half was more evenly contested. Ten minutes from time, the referee gave a penalty for hands against Lt. Barker of the 19th, and from the resultant kick, Purney, the visitors right back, scored with a shot in the far corner of the net.

The winners team was: Capt. Black; Pte. Perreff and Pte. Dobson; Sgt. Watling, Lieut. Barker and Pte. Doblin; Sgt. Ray, Sgt. Gray. Pte. Paylor, Drum Major Thorton and Pte. Farmer.

A v B COMPANIES — H.L.I.

A special Easter attraction was held at Delbrück on Monday in the form of a football match between "A" and "B" Coys fo the 16th H.L.I. Both teams played well, but "B" Coy were rather the better side, and secured a well deserved win by 3 goals to 1.

Kenyon and Hird were the stars of the day, and considerable credit is due to them for the splendid victory.

RACQUETS AT QUEEN'S CLUB.

FIRST ROUND PUBLIC SCHOOLS CHAMPIONSHIP.

The first Public Schools Racquets Championship held since 1914, commenced at Queen's Club yesterday.

Winchester accomplished the expected by beating Haileybury in the first tie, the result being Winchester (D.R. Jardine and R.H. Hill) 15, 15, 15, 15; Haileybury (W.L. Phillips and R. Hallword) 0, 5, 9 and 2 respectively. Eton, represented by P. Lindsay and T. Bodin, beat Clifton in the persons of G.O. Togart and S.H. Newman, by 15—7, 15—8, 15—11 and 15—6.

Lindsey is probably the best player in the tournament, having, in addition to good all-round play, a powerfull back hand. As he is well supported by Boden, the pair should stand a good chance of bringing the Championship to Eton.

G.S. Butler and G.W.F. Hazlehurst for Marlborough beat P.N. Durlacher and the Hon. D.C. Tunch, Wellington, by 15—2, 15—6, 15—8 and 15—13. As was expected, Harrow (W.D. Mc. Pherson and W.A.R. Collins) beat Charterhouse (G.B. Gamett and L.G. Cox) by 17—15, 15—6, 15—8 and 15—10, while Malvern (C.G. Robson and M.E. Partridge) secured a victory over Cheltenham (E.J. Pye-Smith and G.R. Neale) to the tune of 15—2, 15—5, 15—3, and 15—2. Malvern are more or less the dark horses of the competition and it would not be a matter of great surprise were they to go a long way after having secured this initial and handsome victory. Possibly the final may see Eton and Malvern engaged, and the match should prove an interesting one.

THEATRE OF WAR FOOTBALL CHAMPIONSHIPS.

In the Theatre of War Association Football Championships yesterday, B.E.F. (France) defeated Italy by 3—1.

For the winners, Lee scored twice the third being added by Campbell. Calvert scored Italy's only goal. By virtue of winning this match, B.E.F. (France) qualify to play in the final at Stamford Bridge on May 1st.

HENLEY REGATTA.

Where is Mother Country's Crew For the King's Cup?

No steps have yet been taken to select the crew to represent the Mother Country in the race for the King's Cup at Henley, says Reuter.

For this event, Australian and New Zealand eights are already training on the Thames. It is considered that the Army authorities should take the initiative in this matter.

MANCHESTER RACE MEETING.

Beautiful weather, good going and large crowds prevailed at Manchester races yesterday. Following are the returns.

Jubilee Hurdle Race: 1, John Jackett (8/1); 2, Saint Eloi (7/2); 3, Stamton (7/1); Seven ran. Won by three lengths; a bad third.

Five Hundred Pound Steeplechase: 1, Turbine Secundus (10/1); 2, Loch Allen (7/4); 3, Bernstein (6/1); Six ran. Won by two lengths; four lengths between second and third.

Other winners: Topsey's Baby (4/1); Roman (2/1); The Whisp (6/4); Vaticun (1,2).

Birmingham Meeting.

Winners at Birmingham were:—Lesson (9/2); Unadorned (6/4); Paragra (3/1); Idyl (1,5) Sans Atont (4,6); Lama of Tibet (5/2).

ROEHAMPTON HARD COURT TOURNAMENT.

In the second round of the singles at Roehampton, M.J.Ritchie beat the Hon.F.Fisher, New Zealand, by 6-3 and 8-6. R V.Thomas, Australia, beat V.Burr by 6-0 and 6-3. In the third round G. Patterson, Australia, beat L.Raymond, South Africa, by 7-5 and 8-6.

MIXED DOUBLES.

Thomas, Australia, and Miss Ryan, California, beat L.N.Doust, Australia, and Mrs. Craddock by 6-3 and 6-0. Mishu, Roumania, and Mrs. Greville beat G. Dodd and Miss Kelly, South Africans, by 6-5 and 6-1. The Roumanian player, Mishu, easily beat F. W. Doanisthorp by 6-1 and 6-4 despite the latter's huge racket, which is twice the normal size.

CRICKET.

In the second innings of their opening match, at Leyton, yesterday, Essex declared with the score at 196 for six, but were unable to dispose of Public Schools in time to win the match The latter team added 39 to their overnight score, thus bringing the total to 139 for the first innings. They then scored 160 for nine in the second stand.

37th Bn. M.G.C. OFFICERS v. THE BATTALION.

At Mulheim on Saturday. The play at first was ragged and appeared to be one sided in favour of the men. The officers, however, warmed to their work and thanks mainly to the fine goalkeeping of Lt. James, the score was 1—1 at half time, Lt. Loveday having scored for the officers, and Regan for the men. In the second half both sides pressed in turn without avail. Taking into consideration that neither of the teams had played together before, the play was certainly quite good, and well fought.

PAGEANTRY AND SPORT.

GREAT EVENT AT SINNERSDORF.

In delightful weather and before a huge crowd of spectators, No. 5 Field Ambulance provided a thoroughly successful sports meeting at Sinnersdorf, on Monday.

At 9.45 several members of the Ambulance, adorned with stripes, crown and rosettes, prominently displayed, sauntered up towards the battlefield. They composed the committee.

The preliminary heats were run off at 10 o'clock and at 1 o'clock the sports proper commenced, the chief prize being a silver cup kindly presented by Lieut. Col. T.T.H.Robinson D.S.O. for the winner of the most points. The other prizes consisted of silver cruets, wallets, safety razors, medals, and other adornments for the home. All the prizes were on view on the ground, and were the object of much admiration from the married men.

The Prizewinners.

The winners of the various events were as follows:—

100 yards flat race: 1, Pte. Cawsey; 2, Sgt. Morris; 3, Pte. Hampson.

High Jump: 1, Sgt. Morris; 2, Pte. Lumsden. (Won at 5 ft 1 in, after which the winner gave an exhibition jump of 5 ft 3.)

220 yards flat race: 1, Pte. Cawsey; 2, Sgt. Morris.

Long Jump: 1, Sgt. Morris (19 ft 7 ins); 2, Pte. Lumsden.

Mile race (open): 1, Cpl. Thackery; 2, Pte. Hampson.

Football dribbling: 1, Pte. Devoy; 2. Sgt. Mc Cann.

440 yards: 1, Pte. Cawsey; 2, Sgt. Morris.

120 yards Hurdles: 1, Sgt. Morris; 2, Pte. Cawsey.

Sack Race: 1, Pte. Farrell; 2, Pte. Bourne; 3. Pte. Williams.

Bun—treacle race: 1, Dr. Williams; R.A.S.C.; 2, Pte. Farrell.

Wrestling on horseback: L/Cpl. Ruffle's team.

Section relay race: "B" Section (Right half).

Veteran's Race: 1, Sgt. Alderton; 2, Pte. Merriot.

Pillow Fight: 1, Pte. Pickup; 2, Dvr. Smart

Obstacle Race: 1, Pte. Pickup; 2, Pte. Williams; 3, Pte. Blundell.

The outstanding feature of the afternoon was the fine all round display of Sgt. Morris and Pte. Cawsey. The most points for the day were obtained by Sgt. Morris, who was, in 1914, the British Army Hurdle champion.

Mokes Make Merry.

Towards 3 o'clock, the whole proceedings were almost dislocated by the sudden appearance of what looked like the forerunner of a Barnum and Bailey's Circus, to wit, Sgt. Prior, the orderly comedian for the month, mounted on a donkey assisted by Pte. Brown similarly mounted. The orderly comedian could only be recognised by his being occasionally on top of the moke, which was wearing articles of female underwear on his rear legs. The mokes were easily the most disinterested people on the field and seemed quite bored with the whole proceedings.

Other amusements were provided by Aunt Sally, run by Murry and Day: bottle shys, and a pill guessing competition.

At the conclusion, the prizes were distributed by Lieut.-Col. Robinson D.S.O. who congratulated the recipients on their excellent display.

Tea was then served to the unit and visitors.

Immediately afterwards, strange figures in fancy dress costume were seen wending their way to the starting point, and at 6 o'clock the most peculiar procession ever seen in Sinnersdorf made a triumphal perambulation of the village, much to the delight of the civilian element. The procession eventually landed on the sports ground, where dancing took place until 8 o'clock, and continued after supper in the recreation room.

The thanks of the unit are due to the officers, S.S.M. Birkett, S.M. Hunter, Q.M.S. Cooley, S.Sgt. Sulter, Sgt. Browning and Pte. Browne for a most enjoyable day.

As the oldest inhabitant in the village said last night "Nothing has ever been seen here like it", and we can quite believe him. But we can promise him something even better for Whitsun, that is, providing the demobilization officer does not hustle too much. — G.M.C.

3rd. BATTALION MACHINE GUNNERS.

Sport over the week end has been particularly active. From Kalk the 93rd. Brigade, R.G.A. visited the Battalion and added yet another victory to their number. Goals for them to the tune of six, were scored by Cpl. James (4) Lt. Marrables (2). Throught a good game the visitors proved too good and too big for the machine gunners. For the latter Trigg at back Cpl. Cummings, centre forward, Russell and Lisle, half-backs, saved absolute disaster. As it was there should easily have been two more goals for the losers when forwards missed open goals at a few inches out. 93rd.- Mead; Priest and Yule; Kenyon, Lt. Marrables, Hunt; Hopon, Gladwell, Cpl. James, Tully, Walton. 3rd. Batt.- Conneily, Trigg and L/Cpl. Coulter, Russell, Little, Lisle; Axon, Backley, Cpl. Cummings, Sillett, Taylor.

On Thursday of last week "A" met "D," the former winning by 2 goals to 1. A fast game found "A" first callers at goal. O/C Company again played back developing "some" kick. "D" scored from a corner in the second half via a defending back. During the final tussle for the lead "A" emerged winners as stated.

"Better the day, better the deed." On Good Friday "C" Company retrieved their previous loss and took the better half of seven goals in a competition game with "B." Farrell for "C" scored first and then both teams settled down to the game. "C" had the better of the first half and were winning 3—1 at the interval. The referee was very generous in the matter of "breathing space," and resuming, "B" brightened up. Trigg at back played a strong game and both teams comprised many promising players.

Saturday afternoon was devoted to a trial match in "A" Company. Many "dark horses" did not come to light although "Gertie" once tried his luck. A happy company, just paid out, acknowledged the effort from the line.

93rd BRIGADE R.G.A. v. 51st D.L.I.

Played on a wet ground at Kalk on Thursday. Hopson ought to have scored for he had a clear passage, but hit the goalie with his final shot. The D. L. I. put up a spirited attack and only the fine back play of Yule kept them out. Half time arrived with a clean sheet. The Artillery changed their usual short passing game in the second half and it proved fruitful right away for a fix up in the goal mouth ended in Hopson scoring a good goal from about 20 yards. This was quickly followed by a second from Chance, from a splendid centre of Hopson. Chance got his second goal near the end.

Result 93rd Brigade R.G.A. 3; 51st D.L.I. nil.

ATHLETICS AT TROISDORF.

4th SUFFOLK'S INTERESTING PROGRAMME.

The 4th Bn. Suffolk Regt. arranged a very interesting programme of sports for Good Friday.

After Church Parade, held in the Cinema, a football match was played between the Officers and N.C.O's. of the Bn. The C.O. refereed the game which was full of excitement. Some very clever football ensued in mid field though the Officers side continually pressed the N.C.Os goal. Cpl. Basham in goal played an excellent game for the N.C.Os and saved quite a number of really dangerous shots. Result.—Officers 2; N.C.O's. Nil. In the afternoon "B" Coy held there sports meeting and a big crowd of Troops and civilians (holiday making) attended. Lt.-Col. G. C. Stubbs. D.S.O., acted as referee and also as one of the judges.

The drums played selections during the afternoon and all events were got through without any real hitch, which reflects much credit upon the Hon. Secy.. Lieut. Spellman. M.M., who worked hard to make the meeting the success that it undoubtedly was.

Pte. White. in tip-top form won both the mile and 3 mile flat races.

No 8. Platoon won the Shield presented to the platoon with the most number of points in the company.

LIST OF RESULTS.

Prizes were presented to the winners in each of the events as follows.—

100 yds. Flat Race: 1, Pte. Wargen; 2, Lieut. Spellman; 3, Lce. Cpl. Tomkins.

Throwing Cricket Ball: 1, Capt. Redding, M.C.; 2, Cpl. Boardman. M.M.

Blindfold Race: 1, Sgt. Heffer; 2, Cpl. Rishton; 3, Sgt. Sawyer.

High Jump: 1, Sgt. Rutter; 2, Lce. Cpl. Tomkins.

220 yds. Flat Race: 1, Lt. Ginger. M.C.; 2, L./C. Pendrick.

Long Jump: 1, Lt. Ginger. M.C.; 2, Cpl. Boardman. M.M.

Three Miles Flat Race: 1, Pte. White; 2, Pte Worgen; 3, Lce. Cpl. Beaumont; 4, 2/Lt. Hale.

120 yds. Hurdle: 1, Lt. Ginger. M.C.; 2, Lce Cpl. Tomkins.

Obstacle Race: 1, Cpl. Boardman. M.M.; 2, 2/Lt Skettle.

SUFFOLK KNOCK-OUT COMPETITION.

Final at Troisdorf.

On the Battalion football ground Troisdorf, on Saturday, No. 4 Platoon (A Coy.) and No. 14 Platoon (D Coy.) 4th Battalion Suffolk Regt., met in the final of the battalion inter-platoon knockout competition, which resulted in a victory for the latter by 2 goals to 1. The weather was gloriously fine and the goodly number of spectators, who lined the field, witnessed an exciting game. The C.O., Lieut.-Col. G.O. Stubbs, D.S.O., was the referee.

During the first half, the A Coy., team took the lead through the good offices of Lieut Kraby, but soon after the resumption Lance Cpl. Plummer (D Coy.) equalised by a fine effort. At full time the scores remained equal.

After a consultation the Captains decided to play an extra ten minutes each way. Soon after the resumption the D. Coy. men raced up the field in a fine concerted effort, which resulted in Rumbold adding the winning goal, and although number 4 made desperate efforts there was no further scoring and the final whistle left the result: No. 14 Platoon (D) 2; No. 4 Platoon (A) 1.

The winners will receive medals.

92nd v. 104th FIELD AMBULANCE R.A.M.C.

This match was played at Friedrich Wilhelmshütte on Easter Monday. The visiting forwards gave an exhibition of fine combination. Pte. Houston, the home goalkeeper, had several high shots to save, all of which he dealt with successfully. Following good tackling and headwerk by Pte. Muir, the homesters centre-half, the ball travelled down via the left wing, and from a centre by Pte. Burners, the visiting custodian just managed to save a shot from Major Jackson. Eventually the visiting forwards beat the home custodian after 25 minutes play.

The visitors were not long in finding a weak spot and by many spirited attacks, played on that spot with such good effect that they scored their second goal 15 minutes after the re-commencement. After this success the visiting forwards, admirably backed up by a good defence, were soon attacking the home goal again and from a breakaway by their left wing scored their third goal from close range.

Result: 104th Field Ambulance 3; 92nd Field Ambulance 0.

The visitors although the superior side did not have such an easy victory as the score indicates.

2nd COMPANY R.A.S.C. LANC. DIV. TRAIN V. C/168 BATTERY R.A.F.

This match took place at Beuel before a large attendance of supporters of both teams on Easter Sunday, and resulted in a win for the R.A.S.C. by 4 goals to nil.

Sgt. Davis scored all 4 goals. The R.F.A. goalkeeper played a splendid game and saved the Battery from heavier defeat; their full backs were also excellent. Sgt. Davies played a dashing game at centre forward for the R.A.S.C. while Cpl. Fisher was sound at fall back.

52nd LIGHT INFANTRY v FRENCH ARTILLERY.

The French Artillery team met an eleven composed mainly of the 52nd Light Infantry at Gohr on Sunday. England, France, America and Belgium — to say nothing of Germany — were represented among the spectators.

Before the game started, the Frenchmen accorded three cheers to the English.

The visitors soon showed they could play footer, and always had plenty of dash. Their defence was great, the goalkeeper being brilliant all through the game. Early in the game, after clever individual play. Sergt. Pounds skimmed the bar with a clinking shot. Signaller Swadling, the 52nd's outside left, then made several fine runs finishing up with hot shots, but he was unable to score. Play continued fast until half time, with the score nil. The start of the second half soon found the home team bombarding their opponents goal. The French broke away now and again but were stopped from getting dangerous by the clean kicking of Capt. Whitfield, who gave a good finish to a good match by leading cheers for the French. Result: no score.

THE THRESHER YET

OFFICERS in the Army of Occupation know that a "trench" coat is still a kit necessity. They need no reminder save that the Thresher, the original trench coat recommended by the W.O. in 1914, is yet the foremost—the best in any weather.

NEW TRIPLE ALLIANCE.

A responsible French source announces that good progress is being made with the scheme for a defensive alliance between Great Britain, France, and the United States, under which they will agree to take immediate military and naval action, should Germany break the Peace Treaty, in so far as it affects the proposed demilitarized zone east of the Rhine. The French have all along maintained that this will constitute a danger-point in the future unless adequate security is provided against the possibility of German aggression. Such security, they have further maintained, is not provided by the League of Nations. It was owing to their insistence upon the need of special safeguards that the alliance plan was formulated. The alliance treaty will be an open one, and will apply only to this Rhine area.

REVIVED CELEBRATION.

After an interval of four years, Statford-on-Avon Shakespeare celebration was inaugurated on Monday, and will be continued throughout the week in honour of the poet's birthday. In the centre of the town are displayed upwards of fifty national flags presented by the different nationalities, prominent among which is the large Union Jack given by the King. The celebration programme includes Shakespearean plays in the Memorial Theatre, lectures and recitals, together with a Shakesperean costume ball.

U.S "VICTORY" LOAN.

The "Victory" Liberty Loan opened on Monday with a rush of subscriptions, according to advices received from many parts of the country. The pledges received in New York alone had amounted to $100,000,000 by noon that day.

A striking feature of the celebration in Washington was the reading of President Wilson's Loan message from an aeroplane. By means of a wireless telephone and the newly-invented sound amplifier, a crowd numbering about 15,000 assembled on the Treasury steps heard distinctly President Wilson's words spoken through the air by an army aviator flying at a height of 2,600ft. The crowds cheered as the aviator concluded the message.—Reuter.

OLD MYSTERY REVIVED.

A fifteen-months-old Thames mystery was revived by the recovery of the trunk of a man's body near Walton-on-Thames Sunday morning. The remains were found floating only a short distance from the spot where, in the middle of January, 1918, the hat, bicycle, and some letters belonging to a New Zealand officer were found deposited on the bank. The officer had disappeared from a local hospital, where he was a patient recuperating from illness contracted in France, and his disappearance was never elucidated. New Zealand doctors are examining the trunk to see whether it is possible to establish identification.

PASSPORTS TO THE UNITED STATES.

Attention is specially directed to the requirements of the United States Government that all persons proceeding to the United States of America, either direct or viâ Canada, or travelling through the United States of America in transit for another destination, must obtain the visa of the United States consular authorities on their passports before leaving the United Kingdom. Failure to comply with this requirement may result in detention and the refusal of permission to enter the United States.

British subjects are warned that, on account of the existing shipping difficulties, the visa of the United States consular authorities can only be obtained in very exceptional and urgent cases. Applications from persons who wish to emigrate to the United States of America to take up employment there are not at present entertained.

FIRE AT LENGSDORF.

A fire occurred at the furniture workshop at Lengsdorf, about 11.45 a.m. on Saturday 19th April, the alarm being sounded by the bugler of No. 2 Field Ambulance. The personnel of the Unit quickly responded to the call, and formed a chain between the stream and the scene of the fire, which was the roof of the engine and boiler house. S.M. Dress was in charge of the men who, by their efforts, kept the fire within bounds until a pump and stand-pipe was got in working order. The prompt action of the above unit no doubt saved the whole building from being gutted, as it took the civilians half an hour to rig up their primitive fire appliance, after which the fire was got under control in about fifteen minutes, With the exception of the roof being burned out, and water on the engine, no other damage was caused, and the all clear was given at 12.40 p.m.

One negro soldier in the Argonne was as pale as circumstances would permit and visibly shaken.

"It's de tawkin' shells what gits me," he confided to the lieutenant.

"Nonsense, Sam; shells don't talk."

"Don' you tawk thataway to me. I kin hear 'em plein as day. Four dese ole G.I. cans jus' whizzed by and I heard 'em say: 'Niggah, you ain't going back to Ala—BAM!'"—Stars and Stripes.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

The Editor, in publishing letters from Correspondents, will use his own discretion, and if necessary, limit the publishing of correspondence on any subject whatever. It must be understood, however that he is not responsible for the views stated.

All communications for this column should be brief and to the point, and preference will be given to those which bear the writers' signatures for publication. No letter will be published unless accompanied by rank name, and unit of sender, which are needed for the purpose of reference.

Many letters of a perverse nature have reached the office, and the Editor wishes to point out that these only cause waste of time both to the writer and the Editor himself. Letters of this nature will not be published.

"WHO ARE THE GUNNERS?"

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—I notice in your issue dated 16th inst. some irate "G.G.G.'s" hold forth on the "usurpation" by a correspondent of the title "the gunners," in connection with the M.G.C.

May I point out to "G.G.G." that because "the gunners" may possibly have been frequently used to denote members of the various branches of the Artillery, it does not follow that (1) the sole right to such a designation belongs to Artillerymen, or (2) the peculiar suitability of such a title to the artilleryman—a tremendous number of whom are "drivers," etc. On the contrary, such a title is peculiarly suited to members of the Machine Gun Corps, most of whom are "gunners" and in any case to talk of "usurpation" is foolish.

Further to "cast any aspersion" on the M.G.C. (vide the last para, of your correspondent) would indeed be difficult in the light of the glorious record of that wonderful War-baby "The Machine Gun Corps" in the great War, and the message of H.M. The King after reviewing his troops abroad.

G.H.T.

COBLENZ PONTOON BRIDGE.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—I note that in the article "A Trip up the Rhine," S.E.H. is interested to know the method of manipulating the pontoon bridge at Coblenz. The device is extremely simple.

The moveable part of the bridge is in two sections, each of which is kept in position by two cables secured to the bed of the river and wound up by steam winches mounted on the section.

To open the bridge, these cables are merely run out, thus allowing the current to swing the sections clear of the opening.

Conversely, to close the bridge, the cables are wound up again by the winches, thus pulling the sections into place again.

By tightening or slackening one cable more than the other, the section can by steered in the desired direction.

R.A.O.B. LODGE.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—I should like you to draw your readers' attention to the fact that there is a lodge of the R.A.O.B. held weekly in Cologne.

Any member of the order can have full particulars by applying to me, address as given below.

Trusting you will make this known through the medium of your valuable paper.

Northern Division, Cologne.

Answers to Correspondents.

[The flow of correspondence, since the Cologne Post was instituted, has been enormous, and the Editor would like to point out that only a certain number of the innumerable questions can be answered in each issue. Should any inquirer find that his question has not yet been answered, he can have the assurance that it will receive attention in due course, and the answer will appear accordingly. Many questions have been received which could be answered much easier by the Adjutant of the unit concerned, and all such cases which affect the unit commander must be taken to him and not sent here. — Ed.]

B. P.— Thanks for your letter. We regret, however, that it cannot be published as yet.

Derby Lads.— Yours is a question with which we are unable to deal. All such matters are dealt with by unit commanders.

Sigo.— Yes, there are ponies down pits. They are of just as much use when blind in the pit. (2). Stamps must be used on letters addressed to Denmark. (3.) Post-corporal can deal with this. You must give list of contents on outside.

Enquirer.— We will try and obtain these.

4-Knockers.— This is the wrong department for any knowledge of Demobilization.

Retained.— You are wrong in your facts, and we therefore cannot publish your letter.

F. F.— Answered by Post.

Constant Reader.— See answer to "4-Knockers." Apply through your Adjutant.

Oxo. — If you address a letter to the individual in question, c/o this office, we will forward it to him.

A. F.— It is not known yet.

One of them.— The idea is to make a distinction between '14 and '15 men, and not between fighting men and "base wallahs," as you say. That is the sole reason for the addition of a rosette to the ribbon.

Ge rdie.— See first part of answer to Sigo.

Mons Boy.— A matter for your Adjutant to deal with.

18-pounder.— It would be better for you to ask some person to ask Division for the facts. Sorry we cannot give you the information offhand.

Provost— Yes, the particulars of which you should be able to obtain from your orderly room.

J. P. W.— Your Education Officer ought to be able to help you.

SOLDIERS AND FIREARMS.

At North London, Thomas William Cole, 19, a private in the Royal Fusiliers, on leave, was charged before Mr. Waddy with wantonly discharging a revolver on Hackney Marshes, and further with carrying the weapon without a license.

According to Cole's story, the revolver was a souvenir from the war which contained two cartridges. Wishing to get rid of these, he took the weapon to Hackney Marshes on Saturday afternoon and fired it into the River Lea. It was said that a woman fainted, and that other people were alarmed. Constable Stanton, 181 J. arrested the soldier and preferred the charges named.

On the first charge Mr. Waddy convicted the accused, and under the Probation of Offenders Act bound him over in 20s to come up for judgment if called upon within three months.

Mr. Waddy marked the second charge "Not dealt with," saying that it was a matter for the Commissioners of Inland Revenue to proceed if they thought it advisable or desirable to do so.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

PEACE NEGOTIATIONS.

Excitement and, in some cases, nervousness can be noticed with regard to Germany and the forthcoming negotiations. The opinions of the Press are varied. Whilst many express optimism there are some which seem to be probing for loopholes into which they can crawl, only to emerge, after the heat of the conflict, with that proverbial "I told you so."

There is a great agitation on the part of the Press to urge the Government to accept merely terms based upon the formerly-issued principles of Wilson. In these they find themselves able to acquiesce, but they are fully aware that the "Council of Four" includes three other equally strong members of whose principles they are not sure, and who might prove a little too violent.

Slaves of the Entente.

"Germany can never sign conditions which make the German people the slave of the Entente." Thus states the Deutsche Zeitung "A people of seventy millions cannot be controlled by violence for any length of time, for the day must come when they would break their chains."

Back to Russia.

An old question has re-asserted itself amongst some of the German public, due, it is said, to the violence of the Entente during recent weeks. It is a question of the German policy in regard to Russia. The Vossische Zeitung, in a recent issue stated that the "Eastern orientation" of the German policy, abandoned for a time whilst the Wilson peace seemed to promise acceptable conditions, has been taken up again in consequence of the unbearable oppressions of the Entente. Today "back to Russia" means to throw one's self into the arms of Bolshevism, for Russia now is vastly different from when the German militarists concluded the Peace of Brest-Litovsk. The Bolshevism of to-day is not lying on ground before the German victor. It has become a terrible threat to the whole of Europe, and to-morrow it may be that Bolshevism will dictate the convenants. And yet, German policy has become so weak that it considers this an outlet to avoid the violence of the Entente. We shall perish, but Bolshevism will spread over the whole of Europe, and we shall have at least the satisfaction of seeing our enemies perish with us."

It is obvious that the Vossische Zeitung wishes to find some consolation in its doom — a consolation, though, which will never be realised.

Emigration to the States.

A movement which advocates emigration is being formed in Germany and is finding much sympathy especially amongst business men, engineers, and miners. The latter-named body are urging a mass emigration to South America (Brazil or Argentine) and it is reported that negotiations with the American authorities are already in progress. It is said that the emigrants will always keep in touch with the fatherland, and they will make further propaganda for extended emigration.

The whole idea has its foundation in the present industrial unrest and the future terrible economical situation of Germany.

Kinship of Leaders.

The Deutsches Volksblatt makes a strong and peculiar statement with regard to the leaders of the new revolutions. "In spite of all differences in the conditions of Russia, Hungary, and Bavaria, there is, however, from every point of view an intimate kinship between the leaders of the new revolutions. They belong all to the same international type, as strongly expressed in Lenin as in Trotsky, in Bela Kun as in Erich Muhsam.

"Their hysterical, neglected, and ill-shaped literature, which finds an unexpected opportunity in which to change in a fact its theoretical anarchism is at home in Petrograd as well as in Moscow, in Budapest and Munich just as in Berlin."

The Renewal of Relationships.

In an interview with a representative of Le Temps, Ebert, President of the German Republic, dealt with the question of the necessity for the renewal of good relationship between France and Germany. "Germany," he says, "will be the first to make this renewed relationship a practical one, by helping France to rebuild that which has been destroyed by war." He furtner urges that this work will be done all the better at the expense of Germany by using voluntary labour rather than by German prisoners. He protests against the withholding of prisoners now that the time for peace negotiations has arrived.

RHINELAND NOT A GUARANTEE.

In commenting upon the future of the Rhineland he remarked that "the creation of a neutral buffer state of Rhineland and Westphalia would not be a guarantee of future peace or of the good relations between France and Germany. Ebert hopes "that their own intellect will hinder the French politicians from requesting Germany to make a signature to the peace conditions which in principle would not agree with this point of view."

Erzberger and the Continental Policy.

At the recent meeting of the Peace Commission of the German National Assembly, Herr Erzberger protested against the formation of a political alliance between the continental powers of Europe, a brief outline of which we published last week. He said that "such an idea is represented by a small group of simple-minded politicians, and would destroy the basis of the League of Nations. The foundation of the German policy must be the fourteen points of Wilson and the agreement of the 5th November, according to which we declared ourselves ready to sign a peace following the fourteen points of the American President. One of the conditions of this peace is the League of Nations with full equality of rights of all people."

Erzberger then answered to von Richthofen, who had declared that the armistice negotiations led by Erzberger had aggravated the opposition between France and Germany, and that the attitude of France towards Germany was more sympathetic than that of Great Britain and America. He said: "It is not true that Clemenceau took any interest in the food-providing of Germany. No cabinet in the world is more capitalist and chauvinist than the Cabinet of Paris. Nowhere is the influence of the socialists on the Government weaker than in France. We will seize with joy the opportunity to have better relations with France, but it does not depend on us.

"The German Government is doing its best to conclude a just and durable peace with all people and with France also."

"INVISIBLE" SIGNALS IN WARFARE.

At a recent meeting of the London Physical Society, Prof. R.W. Wood, of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, gave a most interesting account of the use of invisible light in warfare. "Invisible signals" does not sound a very practical proposition, but nevertheless this was one of the innumerable aids to warfare provided by science during the great struggle—and to the man of science it is all so simple. The principle of invisible signals is based on the fact that the human eye is normally only affected by a part of the seven primary colours, which mixed together, form white light. Thus if we write the initials of these seven coleurs in their natural order, it is found that the human eye is insensitive to the extremes. The film on photographic plates, and certain other chemicals, are acted upon by the light represented by the V. I. B. whereas the eye uses chiefly the B. G. Y. O. R. colours.

Hence if for our signals we use only violet (V.) light the eye will not see it, but an observer equipped with specially prepared chemical screens can pick it up.

In practice the lantern (projecting) apparatus was so arranged as to send a very narrow beam of light and was so fitted that this narrow beam could be "aimed" at the observer. In daytime all the light of this narrow beam, except the extreme red (R), was filtered out by coloured glasses, and this, drowned in the blaze of sunlight, was invisible except to a properly equipped observer. This observer (receiver) had a glass screen which cut out all the daylight thereby leaving the red light used by the sender easily visible.

By night the ultra-violet (V) rays were sent out, the I. B. G. Y. O. R. being cut out with a screen by the sender. The receiver was equipped with an apparatus with which he could see these rays and thus was able to take the message which was invisible to everyone not so equipped. Each of these methods could be employed practically, up to a distance of six miles.

At sea a Cooper-Hewitt lamp, giving very strong ultra-violet (V) rays, was employed, and all the ordinarily visible light was filtered out as before at the source, so that to the ordinary eyesight nothing was visible, except a very faint glow. The observer on another ship, equipped with apparatus enabling him to "see" the ultra-violet rays, could read the signals easily up to four miles. This arrangement was found of great value in keeping in touch the different ships of a convoy at night, the ordinary visible light of each ship being, of course, prohibited by the possible proximity of enemy ships.

One curious effect noted by Prof. Wood was that when this ultra-violet light fell on a mouth of "mixed" teeth, the real ones were seen to be luminescent and easily visible, while the false ones remained black and invisible.

THE FOURTH MAN WON.

They were having a contest to see who could tell the biggest war lie.

"I drew a bead on a Boche airman with a rifle, wireless him 'Hands up,' and made him come down inside our lines," said one.

"I whistled like a 75, scattered an enemy machine gun squad, captured the gun and took the whole crew prisoner," said the second.

"I sneaked a limousine, ran it to a German corps headquarters, told the C.G. I had a message from the Reichstag for him, and brought him back to our regimental P.C.," said the third.

"My spirals never came down," said the fourth.

ITALIAN DELEGATES AND PEACE CONFERENCE.

SECRET TREATY.

CRISIS OVER FUTURE OF ADRIATIC.

RUSSIAN BOLSHEVISTS ADMIT DEFEAT.

DIFFERENCES OF OPINION AT PARIS.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS INTENTIONS.

A serious crisis has arisen at the Peace Conference over the question of the Italian claims on the Adriatic, chiefly over the disposition of Fiume.

Signor Orlando has withdrawn from the deliberations of the Council of Four.

The Italian claims were on Monday evening considered by a Council of Eight, the extra members being M. Pichon, Mr. Lansing, Baron Sonnino and Mr. Balfour.

WILSON'S REVELATION.

President Wilsan has made a declaration about the question of the Adriatic to the following effect: —

When Italy entered the war, she did so on the basis of a definite and secret ag cement with Great Britain and France, known as the Pact of London. Since that time the whole aspect of affairs has changed. Many other powers, great and small, have entered into the struggle. They were all unaware of the pact. The Austro-Hungarian Empire, then the enemy of Europe, to whose disadvantage the pact was designed to operate, has crumbled to pieces. Italy and the other Allies agree that these portions must now form independent states to be associated in the League of Nations, not with the states which were our enemies, but with Italy itself and the great powers which were ranged with Italy in the great struggle for liberty. We shall establish their liberty as we shall etablish our own. They will constitute a number of small states whose interests must be guaranteed as scrupulously as that of the greater powers.

The war has been finished — it must be said — by offering Germany an armistice and a peace based on principles des ined to establish a new order of right and justice. It is on these principles that peace with Germany has been not only conceived but formulated and on them it will be executed. We must however apply to the Balkan States the same principles as we are applying to peace with Germany. To hand over Fiume to Italy would be to create the feeling that we have deliberately placed this port, on which all those states depend for access to the Mediteranean, into the hands of a power of which it is not an integral part and whose sovereignty, if it were established there, would inevitably seem a foreign one. Every question relative to the settlement bears a new aspect given by the same victory of right for which Italy has made such great sacrifice, in blood and money. America is the friend of Italy and, by the mandate so generously given to her by her associates in the war, was privileged to take the initiative in the peace that is so near accomplishment. It is an obligation to apply all these principles all round, and it is in full confidence that I believe Italy will not insist on anything to which she has not an undeniable right."

PRESS COMMENTS.

President Wilson's sensational declaration has not yet been generally commented upon on the London papers, but a few editorials on the matter generally had been written before the news of the withdrawal of the Italian delegates had been received.

The Daily Graphic, while disdaining any hostility to Italy, refers to her "obdurate attitude" and advocates the Croatian claim to Fiume.

The Daily Chronicle, without condemning President Wilson's "momentous innovation", writes sympathetically of Italy's position, though it admits that the issue is one whereon opposite opinions can honestly be held. It says the result of making an exception in Italy's case to the hitherto secrecy of the Conference is to jeopardise the whole idea of the League of Nations.

The Daily News says that the two antagonistic principles which have been in veiled conflict throughout the Conference have now met in a death grapple. If Wilson's principles are to prevail, all claims like that of Italy's must be abandoned; but if Orlando's claims are recognised there is an end to the principle of self-determination everywhere.

The Daily Express says that the British Nation must blindly support Lloyd George.

The Morning Post military correspondent, declares it will be an incredible act of stupidity and baseness to desert Italy.

The Times says that Italy's best friends wish and pray that she will hearken to President Wilson's appeal. England and France will abide by the pact of London if necessary, but they agree with President Wilson's contention that since the treaty the whole situation has changed. England and France also agree with President Wilson on the moral claim of the lands to the north and north-east of Fiume to an outlet to the sea and will not hesitate to act upon this conviction if forced do do so. The decision is in Italy's hands. It will affect her whole future and the future of the world.

ITALIAN PREMIER LEAVES PARIS

Signor Orlando has writen to M. Clemenceau informing him that following the declaration of President Wilson, the Italian delegation decided to leave Paris at 2 p.m. yesterday.

To a Press representative he is reported to have said that the Italian delegates could not help but cease to collaborate in the work of the Conference. "In my turn I shall state our point of view in a message to the Italian people tomorrow."

Great excitement prevailed throughout the evening at the hotel where the Italian delegates are accommodated. When Signor Orlando and Baron Sonnino entered the vestibule at 9.30 they were received by a tempest of acclamation. Signor Orlando was deeply moved. He bowed to the assembly and said Gentlemen, the only cry one wants to shout now is not 'Long live Orlando' or 'Long live Sonnino' but 'Long live Italy'."

The two delegates stayed in the hall speaking with English, American, French, Japanese and other journalists until nearly midnight.

Signor Orlando confirmed to th Matin that he was leaving Paris at 2 p.m. the day following but stated that his colleagues of the delegation will stay perhaps a few days more.— He added— "We are not leaving Paris, breaking with our Allies. We only ask them to take our interests in their hands and we trust that they will loyally perform this mission."

Signor Orlando intends to convene Parliament quickly. He says that he has no doubt about his reception and the reception of his country. He declares that, at the time of the signature of the armistice with Austria, he made express reservations about several of the fourteen points especially as regards the ninth. He affirmed that Italy will pay the greatest heed to the opinions of her Allies. "Nothing," he said, "must shake her Alliance with France and Great Britain, formally concluded before her entrance in the war and since that time cemented by the fight in the common cause."

Signor Barzilai declared to the "Petit Parisien" that Italy's dignity was incompatible with the act of President Wilson, whom he reproaches with having addressed an appeal to the Italian people above the heads of the members of the conference and of the King of Italy.

FEELING IN ROME.

Rome. 23rd April. — In response to an invitation printed by the evening papers for a demonstration on the subject of the Italian claims, a crowd assembled yesterday afternoon on the Piazza Colonna carrying flags inscribed "Long live United Italy", "Fiume", "Orlando", "Sonnino" etc. "The demonstrators, singing patriotic songs, marched to the Capitol, headed by the Mayor, Councillors, Senators, Deputies and Officers.

Arrived at the Capitol, the mayor in a speech said that Italy "refused to have her war aims betrayed by hypocritical intrigues or to allow the fruits of her victory to be gathered by enemies. — Reuter.

As we go to press news reaches us through Havas that not only is Signor Orlando's departure postponed but that there is every prospect of a speedy and amicable adjustment of the disputed points.

BOLSHEVISTS ADMIT DEFEAT.

News received from Omsk dated 18th April indicates that the Siberian offensive towards Kazan is progressing energetically. Agryze, an important junction, has been taken with considerable military spoils. The Siberian armies are within twenty-six miles of Buzuluk and the town of Glazoff, between Viatka and Perm, has also been taken from the north.

In the direction of Samara the Siberian vanguard is approaching Kinel. By the capture of that town Orenburg would be cut off from Bolshevist Russia.

Bolshevist reports, which are no longer able to conceal the brilliant attacks of the Siberian troops, state that the Red armies are retreating along the whole of the Eastern front.

One Bolshevist regiment stationed at Samara refused to proceed to the front and has since revolted against Soviet rule. — Reuter.

Copenhagen. 22nd April. A Warsaw message announces that General Haller has arrived there. Polish cavalry occupied Vilna while other troops occupied Novoyoudokund.

At Baranovitch the Bolshevists fled in panic. Reuter.

NORTH RUSSIAN SUCCESSES.

In General Maynard's recent offensive operations near Lake Vigo, East of the Murman railway, and four hundred miles South of Murmansk the enemy lost ninety-eight in killed and eighty-two prisoners, twenty of which were wounded. Many sledge loads of wounded were seen being removed, whilst a train which was taking away the retreating Bolshevists was badly damaged by our shell fire.

Much booty was captured, including guns, ammunition and large quantities of railway material.

This Allied attack near Lake Vigo was previously reported to have been carried out by Russian national troops. It resulted in our gaining complete control not only of the main road from the South to the White Sea but of the Lake Vigo region betwenn the Murman railway and Archangel.

ITEMS OF GERMAN NEWS.

Telegrams to the Kölnische Volkszeitung announce the following: — At Augsburg the Spartacists and Revolutionary workmen have been disarmed. Both sides sustained heavy losses.

Russian girl students are doing duty as clerks in the police bureaux at Munich.

The announcement that the Government will move from Weimar to Berlin is not known "officially."

The Chief Headquarters of the German army at Kolberg, will be dissolved early in July.

Up to the end of March eighty-two million marks were expended at Berlin on behalf of the unemployed.

DESERTER SHOT BY THE ESCORT.

JUSTIFIABLE HOMICIDE.

At Lambeth Coroner's Court yesterday the inquiry was resumed into the circumstances attending the death of Pte. Savage, who was shot by a member of the escort while endeavouring to escape from custody.

The tragedy took place in the purlieus of Waterloo Station, whither Savage was being conducted en route for Portland, where he was due to serve a sentence of ten years imprisonment for desertion.

When he attempted to escape he was handcuffed to another prisoner.

L.Cpl. De Bues, who was in charge of the escort, said that ammunition was issued to him on leaving Calais. He could not say who gave him the ammuntion but he was certain it was nobody below the rank of sergeant. He received no instructions as to what was to be done with it.

Pte. Clarke, who fired the shot, said he aimed at Savage's boots.

The jury returned a verdict of "justifiable homicide," adding a rider to the effect that they considered the escort insufficient.

NATIONALISATION OF MINES.

SECOND SANKEY REPORT.

Having sat in private overnight for discussion of the preliminaries, the Coal Industry Commission re-assembled in public yesterday morning for the second stage of the inquiry. This is to take evidence for the report upon Nationalisation promised by Mr. Justice Sankey for presentation to the Government by the 20th May.

A number of scientific economists, text-book writers and university professors gave evidence.

Sir William John Ashley, Vice-Principal of Birmingham University, giving evidence, said his view was that if Nationalisation is adopted, the control should provide for definite representation on the controlling authority of all consumers, both private and industrial.

Application was made for royalty owners to be represented on the commission when evidence is taken on the question of royalties. The chairman said that the application will be considered and the decision announced to-morrow.

NEW LIGHT ON AUSTRIAN DUPLICITY.

The Times today publishes the text of a document which has come into possession of their political correspondent in Paris. The document shows once more in an absolutely unmistakeable manner the insincerity of the Austro-Hungarian Government in their whole policy following upon the assassination of the Archduke Francis Ferdinand on 28th June 1914. The Austro-Hungarian Government dispatched Herr von Weisner to Serajevo to make a report upon the circumstances of that assassination. On 13th July von Weisner sent the following telegram to the Ministry for Foreign Affairs at Vienna: — "Serajevo. July 13th. 1914. 1.10 p.m. Knowledge of Serbian Government of direction of assassination plot or participation in its preparation and supply of weapons for it is proved by nothing and cannot even be suspected. There are, on the contrary, many grounds for regarding this supposition as being untenable."

"This further proof the Central Empires duplicity is very timely," says the Times. "Not only will it reinforce the conviction of the Allies that the war was deliberately forced upon the world by the Teutonic powers but it will also serve as a reminder on the eve of the conference at Versailles of the bad faith which characterizes Teutonic diplomacy."—Havas.

HOW TO OBTAIN SIGNATURES.

Scheidemann and other German ministers have devoted much time to asserting what may or may not be done by Germany in certain contingencies regarding the signing of the Peace treaty.

A saner and more realistic comprehension of the situation is shown in a statement by Maximilian Harden, the Socialist editor of "Zukunft," who told the Daily Express correspondent in Berlin that in his opinion the blockade alone would be a powerful enough weapon to bring about the signature. —Havas.

GO TO THE FIELD CASHIER.

Cologne shops are prohibited from displaying money changing announcements printed in English.

LONDON STOCK EXCHANGE.

On the London Stock Exchange yesterday the Oil group was again the centre of activity. These securities made further progress at first but later on profit taking was in evidence and initial gains were lost.

No revival in other departments is expected until the terms of the budget are known. The general tone was good. Siberian Mining Shares strengthened on receipt of the military news.

ZEEBRUGGE DAY.

April 23rd., besides being St. George's Day and the anniversary of Shakespeare's birth, is also "Zeebrugge Day," It was on 23rd. April 1918 that one of the most desperate enterprises of the Navy was carried to a glorious achievement.

The survivors of the famous assault received yesterday morning from Sir Roger and Lady Keyes a postcard inscribed "In memory of St George's Day 1918," conveying a kindly personal message to each recepient. On the reserve of the card is a photogravure of the Zeebrugge memorial tablet.

Captain Tupper, of the Seamen's and Firemen's Union, told a meeting of Aberdeen fishermen that medals will be presented by the Union to members of the crew of the steamer "Vulture," who refused to take Ramsay Macdonald to Russia in 1917.

AVIATORS' TERRIBLE DEATH.

CAUSE OF THE DISASTER.

The Hampshire County coroner held an inquiry yesterday morning concerning the deaths of the five airmen killed at Weyhill aerodrome. The evidence showed that the Handley Page was detailed for a tour round Britain, and was scheduled to start at two o'clock in the morning.

An officer stated in evidence that Major Batchelor was said to be a very careful pilot. It seemed to witness however that he was too careful and that in avoiding too steep a climb at the take-off he hit the shed in the dark.

Captain William Bannerman, R.A.M.C., said that all the deceased were killed before being burnt. Major Batchelor and Lieut. Whiteside had fractured skulls and the others must have been crushed.

A verdict of accidental death whilst on duty was returned.

STRAND GAMBLING RIOT.

OFFICIAL REPORT.

An official report was issued yesterday by the American authorities in which they repudiate responsibility for what has been generally described as the "Strand riots," which occurred on the 9th March. The official report of the investigations, which were conducted by a joint American Army and Navy Board, states that the board of inquiry went thoroughly into the question of the causes and results of the outbreak and find that responsibility for the disturbance cannot be definitely determined. The report further states that at no time was the crowd composed exclusively of Americans.

In the case of the American soldier who was found to be in possession of a revolver, disciplinary action has been taken, this being contrary to orders.

BARONET'S SUICIDE.

VERDICT.

A verdict of suicide whilst temporarily insane, following a nervous breakdown due to war overwork, was returned by the jury at the inquest on the body of Sir Archibald Orr-Ewing, who shot himself in a plantation near Leicester.

PRINCE OF WALES TO BECOME A FREEMASON.

The date of the initiation of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales into Freemasonry has been provisionally fixed for 2nd. May, probably in the Household Brigade Lodge.

ST. GEORGE'S DAY.

St. George's Day was very generally observed in London, roses and appropriate emblems finding a ready sale in the streets.

The Lord Mayor presided at the Mansion House at a meeting of the Royal Society of St. George, and sent the following message to H.M. the King:

"The members of the Royal Society of St. George, on the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Society, offer your gracious Majesty all loyalty and devotion. May this eventful year, by the blessing of God, herald an era of peace, contentment and prosperity throughout your Majesty's Dominions and the world."

TO ENCOURAGE SPORT ON SUNDAYS.

Captain P. F. Warner presided at a meeting held at Holborn Restaurant yesterday to discuss the formation of a Sunday games association. He said that during the war, games after Church hours on Sunday had been the rule throughout the army. Demobilized men would expect to continue Sunday afternoon games, otherwise they would grouse and in these times we could not afford to have too much grumbling.

He advocated the creation of a department of sport as a branch of the Ministry of Health or the Board of Education.

Captain Spencer suggested the formation of a Headquarters Council, with branches all over the country.

Upwards of twenty sports governing bodies were represented at the meeting.

WHY THE BLOCKADE LASTS.

Replying to a deputation from the Women's National Liberal Federation which urged the immediate relaxation of the blockade, Mr. Bonar Law explained the difficulties which had first to be surmounted.

They include military and financial considerations, the shortage of shipping and the absence of means of internal distribution in Germany.

Much has been done, however, to relax the severity of the blockade, and all restrictions will be removed when peace is signed.

MILITARY FUNERAL FOR NURSE CAVELL.

It has been decided that the funeral in London of Nurse Cavell on the 15th May will be entirely military. No civilians will follow the cortege.

At Victoria Station the body will be received by a strong military escort and taken on a gun-carriage to Westminster Abbey where the first part of the funeral service will be held. The remains will then be taken to Liverpool-street station for conveyance to Norwich where they will be interred in the Cathedral.

HOTEL KEEPERS STRONG ACTION

Many hotels in London have decided to refuse to take permanent residents in future and are giving notice to quit to guests who have occupied rooms for long periods. This step has been taken owing to the immense demand for accommodation in London and the shortage of rooms.

FLYING THE ATLANTIC OCEAN.

FALSE STARTS AND FEARS.

The Air Ministry states that there is practically no change in the general anti-cyclonic pressure distribution over the whole of the Atlantic route. There is a considerable amount of fog off Newfoundland.

St. John's, Newfoundland. 22nd. April. Lieut. Raynham and Capt. Morgan, the Martinsyde airmen, decided this afternoon to attempt what they described as another trial flight. Forthwith the Sopwith party became alarmed, suspecting that an attempt was being made to out-wit them. They hurriedly began to make their machine ready. Eventually neither party ventured out, on account of the fog.—Reuter.

St. John's, Newfoundland. 23nd. April. The weather remains wretched, with much fog and rain. Flying is unlikely today.—Reuter.

St. John's, Newfoundland. 23nd. April. Both the Martinsyde and Sopwith parties are apparently reconciling themselves to the prospect of a long delay as they are making plans for social occasions here for some days ahead.

The general impression obtains that with the weather as it is at present there is little likelihood of any flight being possible before next month.—Reuter.

Washington. 22nd. April. The United States Navy seaplanes No. 1, No. 3 and No. 4 are expected to make an attempt at the Atlantic flight early next month. Each seaplane will carry a crew of five. Equipped with four Liberty motors they will carry sufficient fuel to make the flight to Ireland without stopping. The start will be made from Newfoundland.—Reuter.

ROYAL REGIMENT OF ARTILLERY.

IMPRESSIVE MEMORIAL SERVICE.

His Majesty the King, Colonel of the Royal Regiment of Artillery which has the proud prerogative of holding the right flank of the British Army in line, attended St. Paul's Cathedral yesterday when a memorial service was held for those members of the regiment who fell during the war.

The Lord Mayor of London, Sir Horace B. Marshall was present in state. Queen Alexandra and Princess Victoria also attended the service.

Among the congregation were Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, General Sir Henry Wilson, General Arbuthnot (who fought in the Crimea) and many other distinguished officers.

A hundred trumpeters were posted on the steps of the Cathedral and sounded the salute when the King arrived.

As the Royal Regiment of Artillery has no colours, a gun was placed "in action" at the foot of the chancel steps, its muzzle pointing to the congregation.

At the close of the service the "Last Post" was sounded by a bugler stationed in the West gallery, and was answered with "Reveille" from the East gallery.

During the war the Royal Regiment of Artillery lost 3,135 officers and 39,727 other ranks, killed or died of wounds.

ST. JOHN'S AMBULANCE.

NEW DIRECTOR APPOINTED.

H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, as Grand Prior of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, has approved the appointment of Earl Donoughmore as Director of the St. John's Ambulance Department in succession to Earl Ranfurly, who has resigned.

IRISH NATIONAL STRIKE IMPROBABLE.

Four members of the Executive Irish Labour Party have arrived at Limerick from Dublin to consult the local committee. A National strike is now considered to be very improbable.

LIVERPOOL PRISONERS' DARING ESCAPE.

Three men under arrest for alleged housebreaking escaped from custody at Liverpool yesterday. They were being conveyed in the prison van "Black Maria," from the court, where they had been remanded, and by breaking the ventilator at the back of the van, made good their exit.

They have not yet been recaptured.

HOME OF GEORGE WASHINGTON.

Twenty-five thousand pounds is being appealed for by the Daily Telegraph to equip Sulgrave Manor, as an Anglo-American meeting place and storehouse of memorials connected with the Washinton family.

H. M. the King has subscribed one hundred pounds, and Mr. Lloyd George has written in support of the scheme.

(Sulgrave Manor lies about 6 miles from Brackley, in Northamptonshire. It is noteworthy as being the birthplace of General George Washington, the first President of the United States of America, an office he held for two consecutive periods, 1789—1797.)

THE LONELY BATTLE PEERAGE.

An article in the Globe shows the distribution of hereditary honours since 1916. Forty-nine new peerages or promotions in the peerage have been created, and seventy-six new baronetcies.

Out of the 125 hereditary honours only one was bestowed on a member of the fighting forces, namely, the Viscounty given to Admiral Jellicoe.

Owing to the muzzling order hunting is impossible in the scheduled areas.

AN IDEAL ARMY PAPER.

We hasten to remove any mistakes that the title of this article may beget in the minds of our readers. We are modest at heart, and we have no illusions regarding the pre-eminence of "The Cologne Post." Ours may be the ideal Army, but our newspaper makes no claim to be its ideal gazette. This frank confession of human weakness is not amiss in these days of egotism and advertisement, and it may well be a step towards greater achievement. "The Cologne Post" is not without ideals, and we make no apology for a discussion of the features that a worthy military newspaper should possess.

A newspaper of this kind is beset by difficulties on all sides. It is printed in a foreign country, alien compositors set up its type; it is staffed by a handful of men who are soldiers first and then journalists; it is read and criticized by very diverse classes of people, by our own soldiers, by our friends in England, by an encompassing and watchful race which till a few months ago was in active warfare against us, and each of these classes can be divided into well marked sections.

Was there ever a newspaper issued to a heterogeneous public in circumstances comparable to ours? And there is the great difficulty of severe limitation. Time and again it has been a criticism of the Church that it is an institution which knows only moral demands that are prefaced by "Thou shalt not." The Church can repudiate the charge more easily than can an Army newspaper. The ominous words constantly ring in the ears of our Editorial Staff. "Thou shalt not" discuss King's Regulations or Army Orders, or aims, organization and methods of the Army. We fully recognize the propriety of this limitation, and we boast that we observe its precepts. Politics, too, are forbidden in our newspaper, for soldiers ought to show no political bias. We may receive the political propaganda of our home press, but we must not in any way retaliate.

Let there be no mistake—we repeat that these limitations are most proper, but our point is that journalism in an army paper must have kindly sympathy, for it moves and has its being in a narrow sphere. It is like the tiny gold-fish that must disport itself meekly within the crystal bowl. What leader-writer can there be who has not spent a wakeful hour dreaming of a brilliant article on the Terms of Peace or the eloquent escapades of Mr. Lloyd George and Lord Northcliffe? But there is no leader-writer who would wantonly overstep his limits. He has always before him the picture of Thersites, the soldier and critic in the Greek army at the Siege of Troy, whose scurrilous vapourings brought upon his head the drastic, fatal strength of an Achilles.

But "within the rim," if we may put Henry James's title to another use, there is much good work to be done by an efficient and dignified army newspaper. First of all, it can supply to soldier exiles the news of the world from which they are shut off, and it can supply news well in advance of the arrival of home papers. If it is a disadvantage that full comments must not be made on all items of information it certainly is an advantage to have news that is not garbed in any propagandist fashion. That is what we profess to give. Again, an army newspaper can give news of its own little world, news of an army at school or at play, news of each unit, serious or humourous episodes that interest soldiers, friendly personalities that lighten the burden of life, and incidents or views that help in the growth of brotherliness.

In addition to news of the wider or more restricted worlds there is in an efficient army paper the possibility of eliciting precise information on the many knotty questions that are gravely or lightly discussed in soldiers' messes. An editorial staff cannot claim the attribute of omniscience, but it has some small equipment of reference literature and ought gladly to play the part of arbiter in wordy dispute and friendly counsellor in the pursuit of wisdom. Further, there is the sphere of belles lettres. Any newspaper worthy of the name opens wide its doors to literary aspirants. It may be that even in pages of The Cologne Post some future essayist or poet may fatefully pour out his libation to the Muses. The eyes of the world are upon you, good readers.

One word more. It is our ambition to guard jealously the honour of our empire, to keep fast our patriotic faith, to pass on unblemished the fair tradition of our country. The newspaper of the British Army of the Rhine must never fall below the best.

THE CREEPING BARRAGE.

Written 20th September, 1917, on the Ypres Front by one who was there.

'Twas Flanders and France,
In that great advance,
On battlefields old in story,
By the din of the gun,
We thundered, "well done,"
Long live the King and his glory.

Where we laid all night,
'Twas a pitiful sight,
Mud and rain in trench and valley;
We cursed the mad Hun,
For all he had done,
And swore to repulse his rally.

All my Pals were there,
On the Ypres so bare,
Towards the enemy creeping;
We hugged the wet loam,
Thought of all at home
And the lives in our safe keeping.

With rifles well gripped,
We floundered and slipped,
As the battle of blood was brewing;
"Good luck," dear old boy,
"Safe journey," and joy,
As we crept to Jerry's undoing.

The barrage had ceased,
And being released,
Charged madly through shot and shell,
And the soft golden sun
Saw the work well done,
On a battlefield of hell.

Down the duckboard track,
Some will never come back
From that battlefield old in story.
No more war trench and mud,
For the boys have made good
And passed to a higher glory.

They're resting out there,
Jolly Pals, ever dear,
By farm and copse on the loam;
They've all done their bit,
The Hun had to quit,
Soon he will pack up for home.

We are thinking to-night
Of that more peaceful sight,
The "old folks at home" and "of you,"
Tired, muddy, and sore,
We are dreaming once more
Of loved ones tender and true.

God! hasten the day
When we all march away
From battlefields old in story.
How the dear home will ring,
When we all cheer and sing,
Hurrah! for the Empire's glory.

WILLIAM ROBERT PATTERSON, F.R.G.S., ETC.

Why, now that you have a good camera, do you not develop your own pictures? It will pay you to do so. The apparatus required could be carried in one's pockets, the cost is very little, and one learns more of the power of light and of time. Your pictures will improve if you develop them yourself. If you are not economical in photography at the outset you will lose interest in it, you will say, like many others, that as a hobby, it is too expensive.

But, then, realize that by careless exposures, you waste both time and money.

Realize, also, that a few really good pictures, bought by one of our illustrated newspapers, would pay for your camera. To develop your spool, your film-pack, or a dozen plates, would cost you something about twopence, once you possess the necessary apparatus, which is—

(1) A small red lamp. Personally I use a red electric-bulb of standard size. Wherever I may be, provided there is an electric installation in the building, my bulb serves.

(2) Two dishes of "papier mâché." These are clean and cheap.

(3) A small bottle of developer (Entwickler)

(4) A small packet of "hypo" (Hyposulphite of Soda).

(5) A small measuring glass.

Beyond these all that is required is fresh water for washing the negatives and for diluting the developer. Proceed thus: Pour your developer into one dish and your "hypo" (at proper strength) into the other. Have a bowl, basin, or pail of clean water at your side. Light your red lamp. Prepare your roll film, your first film in the pack, or your plate. Agitate your plate or film in the fresh water, shake it, and then plunge it into the developing solution. The reason for previously agitating the photograph in water is to remove dust, to prevent bubbles, and to ensure an even flow of developer over the whole surface.

Agitate your film or plate also in this dish in order to prevent stains, bubbles, and other causes of imperfection. Watch the negative carefully After the expiration of a minute or so, if the exposure has been correct and the developer well mixed, you will see dark patches appearing; these patches are the high-lights, such as sky, white walls, faces, bright coloured clothing that best reflects white light. When these patches are greyish and not yet black, hold your plate or film against the red light, in order to study the light and shade. Now turn your negative over and view it from the glass or celluloid side, but this time not against the red light. Examine it downwards. When the back of the film-surface assumes also, in the high-lights, a very dark grey colour, than you may assume that your picture is ready for the second bath, the fixing solution (hypo), after washing again in water.

Do not be impatient. Give your picture time to deepen in intensity. Now, in the "hypo" the plate or film must remain until every vestige of its whitish-yellow colour has disappeared. Even when you think you can see none, let it remain therein a few minutes longer. Then place it in clean water for at least ten minutes, rubbing the film-surface gently now and again with the finger, or clean cotton wool, under water. The resulting negative must be completely dry before you attempt to take a print from it. Common faults are—

(1) Over-Exposure. This is evident when the picture flashes up too quickly in the developing solution. This may be remedied to a certain extent by adding more water, thus weakening the strength of the solution.

(2) Under-Exposure. The picture comes slowly and needs a stronger developer.

Remember that in open country, with no walls or trees to impede the passage of light from the sky, you may snapshot at high speeds, if the sun is shining, at lesser speeds if the light is diffused and at still lesser speeds if the heavens are clouded.

A wall or a row of leafy trees makes a difference, according to the strength of light from above.

Two parallel walls or rows of leafy trees make a greater difference still.

Now, bear these things in mind!

(1) When the sky is blue and the sun is shining, work very rapidly, and reduce the diameter of your aperture.

(2) When the sky is not blue, but hidden by a sort of white vapour, not separate clouds, yet bright, you may work at high speed with a good lens, and with an open aperture.

(3) In summer time, unless the sky is obscured by thunder clouds, you may always work rapidly.

(4) Always look at the sky and study the direction whence comes most light, then turn your back or side to it.

(5) Study the reflection of light. In winter, for instance, on a fairly bright day, with a snow-scene, you must expose rapidly. Whenever there is much reflection, work according to the amount of light from all quarters.

(6) Remember whilst taking your photographs that not all light comes from above. Endeavour to have the most light possible both direct and reflected, upon your object.

LONDON DIVISIONAL MENS CLUB.

The London Division claim to be "setting the pace" in providing for the comfort and entertainment of their N.C.O's. and men visiting Cologne, the centre of their activities being the Divisional Mens' Club, Glockengasse, and on Easter Sunday, the Winter Tea Garden was opened for the first time.

The spacious hall was tastefully decorated with shrubs, plants and flowers, and furnished with about forty occasional tables where well over 200 men sat down to a sumptuous tea. After tea a smoking concert was held, by way of an opening ceremony. The President, Major A.O. Needham, M.C., D.A.Q.M.G., of the London Division, made a happy little speech on behalf of the Divisional Commander, welcoming the men, and explaining what was being done to foster the social side of their soldiering on the Rhine, incidentally mentioning that the club provides sleeping accommodation for about 80 men while on pass. In conclusion he made the whole company happy by inviting them to test the capabilities of the staff of waiters by ordering drinks at his expense.

Several members of the Divisional Concert Party, which is at present in process of being remodelled after being severely handled by the Demobilization Department, provided an excellent Musical Programe.

By the way, the London "Daily Sketch" of the 18th inst. includes an excellent snapshot, taken in Cologne, of two London Division men, in the act of fixing one of the well-known directing boards "To the London Division Mens' Club."

THE EPISTLES OF PETER BIRSE, JUNIOR.

Sir,— My old Scots friend Peter met with a calamity yesterday. He was suddenly informed that his leave warrant was through. Naturally this drove other things from his mind and he tells me that he forgot all about his weekly epistle; at the same time he asks me to forward some.

I suppose 'twill be too late to come in in its usual Thursday place, but knowing how he'll blagard me if it does not appear I beseech you to put it in as soon as possible.

Maybe "other things" will interfere with his next week's epistle but should it not be forthcoming your Scots readers will, I know, be sympathetic and forgive the delinquent. We have all had leave — "once upon a time".

Yours, PETER'S PAL.

AN EXCITIN' HOLIDAY.

Dear Maister Editor,

As the prince o' poets says, some are beorn great, some achev greatness, an' some hae greatness birs'd upon them. I was beorn tir'd, anything excep' notoreety for vaurious sins, an' naething but fateegs have been birs'd upon me. Guid Friday, hooever, was a mercifu' exepshun; the day dawn'd wi' nae prospecks o' toil in front o' me nae a glood presentit itsel 'in m' industrial canopy o' blue.

My only predeecament was hoo was I tae spen' the day in the maist pleshurable an' at the same time legeetimate fachun? My first thocht was tae hurl aboot a day on the tramwye-cars, seein' the traivellin' was for naething; an' coonting up at nicht how muckle I'd saved. But on second thochts I resolv'd tae hae a day o' perfeck an' undilutit enjoymeut, so I made up m' min tae veesit a cimitery. I us'd tae daunder oot the length o' Kirsty's Grave at home on a Sawbath afternune, an aince or tunie feelin' a bit freevilous I gaed on a week-day i' the Glesca Fair holidays fan m' aunty Lenby was bidin' wi' us, so tat's guid enuch at home is guis enuch in Coloan.

Rinnin' into Sawdust Jock at the corner o' the Bricht Strassy I teli'd him m' program-for the day.

"Foo no mak' a bist o' yersel Peter, says he rale nastykin', "an' veesit two or three cimiteries? Foo no thoroughly enjoy yersel fan ye're at it?"

The dirty-moth'd snipes! I believe in takin' a' thing, including wine, an' pleshure, in strick moderashun.

For an oor an' a half I search'd Coloan for a cimitery — fat the sacreleeus Australyans ca' a bare-yaird — put wid ye believe it, I cudna fin' an suld or new. Is Coloan anither Blairgourie? Dae the fowk here never dee? Have they learn'd the secret o' immortality? Or are they still runnin that Cadaver factory they used to advertise?

A TABACCANIST DEEMIE.

It was over late tae think o' a Caisuality Clearin' Stashan, or a Field Am'lance, so I agree'd tae risk my life, such as it is, in the han' o' a unknown an' maybe no very frien'ly furriner. A sonsy, clean-lookin, deemie in a tabaccanists' shoppie, wha cud speak English like an English umman, direckit me tae a dental prackteeshner i' the Apoasels' Cloister, wha was garantee' tae emty yer mooth without pain or delay, an better still, for only 5 marks. I aince hed a holiday spoil'd in Roathsey because o' the exorbitan' chairges o' the local dentists. They wainted three-an'-saxpence for drawin' a single tooth — nae a double ane, mind ye, Maister Editor — so I made up my min' tae wait till I got back tae Aiberdeen, whaur they draw teeth for a bob an' richt weel tae, besides allooin' je tae loiter as lang as ye like in a velvet chair, drinke' water oot a bonny cristal tumler. I saved half a-crown, but, as I said, it spoil'd my holiday So it pleas'd me tae think that the German chairges were sae moderate.

OUR HEADQUARTER COMPANY.

The idea was first conceived away back in Blighty some two or three weeks previous to our departure overseas. A War Office order had been received to the effect that we of the 15th Blankshires had been selected to from one of Churchill's "well paid, well fed and well contented" battalions of the Rhine Army. What then was more natural than that we should form a H.Q. personnel? We all had vague notions as to who did constitute H.Q. personnel, but the Orderly Room Sergeant arrived and explained that it was all "eye wash" for the Corps Commander's farawell parade. Fortunately he was right, for all that "H.Q." meant to us in Blighty was that all fellows who had "staff" jobs were to consider themselves as belonging to "H.Q." personnel. The battalion had settled down comfortably in its new quarters when the rumour went round that M—had been appointed O.C. H.Q., and well we knew it, too! A new company office suddenly came into existence, wherein, hidden away behind stacks of books, files, and correspondence, were O.C. H.Q. together with his C.S.M. and C.Q.M.S. Having formed a nucleus, the officer proceeded to take a fancy to almost half the Battalion, and chits were sent in all directions informing all and sundry that Pte. Atkins had this day been appointed to the Battalion Sanitary Staff and would in future take all orders from O.C. H.Q. We did make an effort to get all the H.Q. personnel housed in one billet on a certain Monday morning, but there were so many orders and counter orders that we decided to abandon our Fred Karno stunt and leave it to the men to decide for themselves as to whether they were batmen, band and drums, or transport.

Yes that was a great day when we journeyed to Cologne to commandeer the crockery. What mattered lunch or tea! What mattered it if we did miss the six o'clock train and had to remain in Cologne until midnight! Wasn't the fact that the Company Commander was going to inspect our billet sufficient justification? O.C. H.Q. had fairly got the breeze up and we were out to help him and by hook or by crook we were going to get the best billet and the best mess room in the whole Battalion.

The great day arrived and one of the Education Staff was conscripted into service to supervise the exhibition. What a proud fellow he was when he surveyed his handiwork—cruets, plates, breadbaskets and the hundred and one odds and ends of "eye wash" that had been laid out under his supervision. Surely the Corps Commander will imagine that he has strolled into the officers' mess! What excitement there was in the air! How we waited with baited breath for the arrival of the dear old general who was going to bestow his praises and smiles upon us! At long last, he came — a runner from the Orderly Room to say that the inspection was over and "you can pack up." Think of it, reader! We had been missed, and all our trouble was in vain. Was it fair? Was it right? My answer is, that there dwells in the Orderly Room a certain wag, and maybe, "He knows about it all — he knows — he knows."

DUREN AMUSEMENTS.

Duren this week is enjoying the pleasure of Miss Inez Bensusan's Woman's Theatre Company appearing at the Theatre. The programme given on Monday was enthusiastically received. The amusing sketches formed part of the programme, the remainder being filled up with a variety of songs to suit everyone.

The artistes received many encores, and loud applause a the end of the performance.

A member of the audience was heard to remark: "Mon, its fine to hear English-speaking lassies again."

A change of programme is to be given on Thursday.

153 LABOUR COMPANY.

WHIST DRIVE.

On Wednesday evening a fourth of a series of Whist Drives was held at Company Headquarters, Severin Strasse. The prizes were carried off by: Pte. Williams (1st Ladies) Pte. G. Wharton, (1st Gents). Pte. G. Butler (2nd Ladies) Pte. H. C. Willey (2nd Gents) Pte. Frowde (Ladies Booby) Pte. J. Toone (Gents Booby) Pte. Woods was awarded a consolation prize. These drives are very popular amongst the troops and provide good amusement.

51st GORDON HIGHLANDERS, DUREN.

A most enjoyable evening was spent on Saturday in the Recreation Room of the 51st Gordon Hrs. at Duren. A concert was given by members of "C" Company and an excellent programme was carried out.

One of the most amusing items was a sketch "Charlie on Guard" introducing at the same time Charlie at the pay-table. The humourous antics of Lt. Robertson who represented Charlie appealed to the audience.

Monologues by Lt. Bell held the audience, while the capers of Lt. Fraser were strictly in keeping with a popular comedian. Lt. Reanie, dressed in feminine attire, called for love at first sight Lt. Chambers was the pianist.

51st DEVONS v. R.E.

A very interesting match was played on Easter Monday between the 51st Devons and R. E. on the 51st ground. A rather strong wind was blowing which made accurate football impossible. A fine piece of individual work by Hicks enabled Morris to find the net.

On the resumption of the game the visitors struggled hard to get the equalising goal, the forwards combining well, but the home defence held firm, and the goal was never really in danger.

OFFICERS v. EMPLOYED.

Officers and Employed men of the 24th Siege Battery R.G.A. opposed each other at football on Monday, the former winning by 3—2. An amusing account of the encounter has been submitted, but we regret pressure on space will not allow of its insertion to-day.

LONDON D.A.C. SPORTS.

These sports, held on Wednesday, were in every way a great success. The prize list will be published on this page to-morrow.

VETERINARY HOSPITAL v. R.E. SIGNALS

On Wednesday afternoon No. 8 Vety. Hospital, played the R.E. Signals, and after a hard fast game beat them by 4 goals to 2. The R.E.'s scored first, but the hospital soon equalized and the teams crossed over with the score 1—1. Soon after the kick-off, the Vets. scored from a penalty and quickly added two more goals. Then the R.E's pressed hard and scored their second goal. Both teams played well and showed some very pretty football.

FOOTBALL "FAREWELL" AT TROISDORF.

SAPPERS V N.C.O's — 565 A.T. COMPANY. R.E.

There has been a much discussed topic in the 565 A.T. Coy., R.E. as to which were the more proficient footballers, the N.C.O's or the Sappers. As the "backbone" of the former were shortly to leave for Blighty, it was decided that a farewell match and an answer to that discussion should be provided on Tuesday.

A start was made, and a fast, interesting game followed. Each goal was visited repeatedly and the abilities of the rival custodians tested, yet each kept his charge intact until the interval.

After a lengthy pause, the Sappers made tracks for their seniors goal, but met with too stubborn a defence to make any impression. After a spell of midfield play they renewed their attack and at length were rewarded by Cole scoring what proved to be the only goal. Though many of the contestants rarely indulge in the lusty game of football, the fare served up for the spectators was exceptionally good, few better games having been played on that ground. Several minor 'casualties' occurred, due to the great enthusiasm of the players, all of whom "went the pace" from the start until the final was called. Before the match, many and varied were the comments on the possibilities of the C.S.M.'s display with the whistle — afterwards all agreed that he had done remarkably well.

5th "KOYLIES" SPORTS CHAMPIONSHIP.

"B" Coy enhanced their chances of winning the 5th K.O.Y.L.I. sports championship by disposing of "C" Coy in the tug—of—war competition on Monday.

The teams were evenly matched. Two "pulls" sufficed to decide the issue. The second, however, "C" Coy came within inches of pulling their opponents over, but "B" made a magnificent recovery and gained the points in fine style. The winning team was composed of:—

Cpl. Roby, Lce. Cpls Davies and Marshall and Ptes Wright, Kingsbury, Bridges, Coombes and Scaife. Reserves:—Ptes Lovesay and Ratford.

SPORT: HERE, THERE AND EVERYWHERE.

'JOCKEYS' DEFEAT STRIPES.

526th COMPANY. R.A.S.C.— N.C.O'S. v. DRIVERS.

Played at Froitzheim on Easter Monday—From the kick off the Drivers pressed hard, but the N.C.O's. full-backs Cpls. Varley and Nicholson put up a strong defence, clearing well. The defence was pierced after five minutes play by a splendid shot by Dr. Wilkinson. Again the 'Jockeys' pressed, and Sergt. Dinnewell in goal had a hot time for a couple of minutes, saving two raking shots from the foot of Driver Rinder. From the goal kick the "Non. Coms." pressed very hard, and had hard lines in not scoring, the Drivers' full-backs Watson and Lawson proving impregnable. Corporal Woodward at centre half played a sterling game for the N. C.O's, and executed some very good work. Some clever combined work was put in by Drs. Huddleston, Sykes, Wilkinson and Rinder, which looked liked a second goal being scored, when the whistle went for half-time.

On resuming, the N.C.O's. attacked time after time, some hard work being put in by Staff. Sergts. Ibootson, Haigh, Dacre and Coates. Corpl Whittingham on the left wing made some brilliant runs, and put in several good centres, none of which, however, resulted in a goal. In turn the 'Jockeys' retaliated, and but for the splendid tackling of Cpl. Woodward, would have scored. A good run by Drs. Sykes, Huddleston, McLean and Wilkinson ended in the latter scoring his second goal. From the kick off the ball travelled from goal mouth to goal mouth, neither side being able to put the ball between the sticks. Eventually, however, Dr. Wilkinson completed the 'hat trick,' the goal being the result of a pretty passing movement between Drs. Rinder, Wilkinson and Sykes. This third goal seemed to rouse the N.C.O's., who pressed hard, Corpl. Lawrence passing the ball to Staff Sergt. Ibbotson who scored the first goal for them, a few seconds before the whistle blew for time.

The game was ably supervised by Capt. W.G. Darling. R.A.V.C. Result: Drivers. 3; N.C.O's, 1.

FOUND — a "GOALIE!"

3rd. BATTALION, M.G.CORPS.

The 52nd. Durhams visited the 3rd. Battn. Machine Gunners' barracks on Wednesday afternoon for soccer. The machine-gunners started off in good style but held on to the ball too long. After ten minutes a good pass up field by the newly made Lance-Jack, Neale, gave Farrell at outside left the chance to score with a nicely placed low shot. The D.L.I.s got dangerous and twice in succession things looked black for the machine gunners but Scofield showed himself a goalkeeper of resource and made two brilliant saves. Half time: — M.G. 1, D.L.I. 0.

The visitors snapped up a corner early on in the second half and only a fine save by Scofield averted a goal. D.L.I. played a one back game for the whole of this half but at last Neale got through and D.L.I.s only just saved. Fine work by the forwards of the machine gunners unfortunately yielded no result, but Bell and Lt. Roberts both shone. From a combined run of Neale and Bell the latter scored from the former's well placed pass. Spectators were treated to an excellent exhibition of goalkeeping and Scofield should improve, to be a first class man between the sticks. The game finished in the Machine Gunners' favour 2-0. A good game was spoilt by the one back game played by the D.L.I.s.

53rd BN., ROYAL SUSSEX REGT.

A CHEERY EVENING AT LIND.

The Officers, N.C.O's and men of "B" Company of the 53rd Royal Sussex Regiment spent a cheery evening together on Tuesday, the occasion being the first of a series of whist drives with which it is proposed to supplement the rather limited attractions of the tiny village of Lind where they are stationed.

The Drive was held in the camp institute and between eighty and ninety competed the arrangements included an interval for light refreshments.

Sergt. S. Perkins (1), Cpl. A. Emery (2), and Sergt. W. Burton (3) carried off the chief prizes. Cpl. A. Clayton, L/cpl. W Dobson, and J. T. Pte. Robinson were also successful with sealed numbers, while C.Q.M.S. A.t. Dowsett found himself the recipient of his own cunningly prepared "Booby."

There were well-deserved cheers at the conclusion for 2 Lieut. A. J. Lyons who organised the gathering and acted as M.C., and for Captain J. A. E. Gemmel, the O.C. Company, who presented the prizes, of which he was one of the donors.

23rd MIDDLESEX v. 228 FIELD COMPNY R.E.

Continuing their success, the 23rd Bn. on Sunday last, defeated the Engineers at Hunrath by 5 goals to one. It is true that for the greater part of the second half the "Sappers" were without their inside right, who sustained an injury to his knee, but victory had been assured in the first half, when the Middlesex were leading 3—1. The visiting forwards were ever agressive, and the R.E's defence was no match for Rogger and Scott, who gave a clever exhibition throughout. The former was responsible for 4 goals — one from a penalty — and Scott scored the other goal after a particularly smart piece of work. The bulk of the play was scored by the backs and forwards and Fogg, at right-back for the Middlesex, gave a fine display. The Engineers' left-back kicked with much power, but was not fast enough for the opposing forwards. After the first half, the game lost much of its interest, the infantry men slacking down considerably and losing several good opportunities of increasing the score. The Middlesex team was: Lieut. Tickle; C.Q.M.S. Fogg and Lieut. Bury; Sgt. Redgrave, Lieut. Harrison and Lieut. Dashfield; Lieut. Aiton, R.Q.M.S. Scott, C.Q.M.S. Rogers Lce. Cpl. Creasey and Pte Poulton.

21st Bde. R.G.A. LEAGUE.

24 SIEGE BATRERY R.G.A. v. 71 H.B. R.G.A.

Played at Aeshe on Tuesday. Kicking down hill, and with a following wind, 71 scored two goals in quick succession. 24 equalised before half time their first goal being scored from a wondrous angle by the "ever-nippy" Pinchard. In spite of the advantage of the slope 24 failed to score in the second half and the play was fairly represented in the draw, 2-2. 24 S.B. have not yet been defeated in this league.

HOCKEY RESULT.

2nd Royal Scots (Cadre) 5; 51st D.L.I. nil.

ARTILLERY AT EFFEREN.

70 SIEGE BATTERY v. 319 SIEGE BATTERY.

Owing to several of their regular players suffering from injuries, 70 Siege Battery were only able to field a very weak side at Efferen on Wednesday against 319 Siege Battery. The latter also had more or less of an experimental eleven doing duty, and they were fortunate to share the 2 goals scored. The 70's front line, apart perhaps from Dent and Lancaster, were fairly weak and Swan missed 'umpteen' scoring chances in the opening half by either dallying too long with the ball or erratic shooting. The forwards throughout were well supported by the halves and had they availed themselves of the many opportunities presented to them "70" must have been a couple of goals up before the interval. As it was the teams changed over with a blank score sheet. Soon after the restart Manson ended up a brilliant run with a fine centre. The Ball went out to Wood and the outside left placed in nicely for Swan to score. Play than became more even and from a breakaway, Pennington, when almost on the line, centred into the goalmouth. Before Gunby could clear, the ball was rushed through the goal by Amos. Both sides tried hard for the winning goal and Mc Kinley sent in a lovely high shot from 30 yards range which Ellis did well to tip over the bar at the expense of an unproductive corner. Hardy and Manson were very sound backs, the former showing excellent judgement; whilst Gray, Eaton, Brazil, and Shortt worked hard and successfully for the visitors.

The teams were:— 70th S.B. Gunby; Manson, Lt. Hardy; Haworth, Mc Kinley, Bdr. Wells; Lancaster, Bdr. Dent, Swan, Jones, J.E. and Lt Wood.

319 S.B.:— Ellis; Eaton Cpl. Gray; Brandon, Brazil, Shortt; Bdr. Cariston, Amos, Gee, Robins and Pennington.

THE IDLE RICH AT PLAY.

O'CONNELL'S GREAT DISPLAY.

Many amusing incidents occurred in the return match at Efferen on Monday between the "Employed men" (The Idle Rich) and a reserve eleven of 70 Siege Battery the latter winning by 2—1. O'Connell displayed "International" form in goal, but he must be still wondering how he brought off one remarkable save from J. E. Jones. It was a beautiful cross shot coming along at a great pace and surely nobody was more surprised than O'Connell when he managed to divert its progress. Allowing that this was a "lucky'un" he played a really fine game between the sticks, and although the battery forwards eventually beat him I am very doubtful as to whether it was a legitimate goal as the ball appeared to have been gently but firmly pushed past the uprights. He had no chance with the second goal, which was scored at close range by J. E. Jones.

Pellow obtained the "Employed's" only point after Leyton had negotiated a shot from Valentine "Busty" Clark, at back, when beaten by the forwards, would cause them to falter by appealing for offside, and often, in a race for the ball to beat Dent, he would quietly knock him out of his stride with his elbow. The referee closed his eyes to these little transgressions of the rules, but then, was it not Bank Holiday?

Corporal Halbard electrified the crowd with his brilliant runs on the left wing, and the "Pip Pock" sergeant must have marvelled at his great staying power which, of course, he (the Sergeant) would assert was due to his early morning "Medicine."

The teams were: Employed men — O'Connell, Bombr. Underwood, and Jones, E; Bombr. Wells, G. Smith, and Morrison; Bombr. Dent, Pellow, Mares, Manser, and Valentine.

70 Siege Battery: Leyton; Salmon and Clark, Renyard, Edwards and Simpson; Cpl. Bowman, Mc Kinley, Cpl. Payne, Jones T.E. and Cpl. Hubbard.

IMPORTANT TO CRICKETERS.

If you are interested in cricket do not fail to see the important announcement on this page to-morrow.

THE LIGHTER SIDE OF FOOTBALL

2/4th v. 51st HANTS OFFICERS.

A football match of varied interest took place at Wermelskirchen on Easter Sunday. In response to a challenge from the officers of 2/4 Hants, the officers of 51st Hants took the field in all the disguise and panoply of association footballers. The sartorial effect was excellent, and it may be said at once that the weakness of 51st Hants team did not lie in this department. Soon after the kick-off it became apparent to the spectators that the game would be full of unexpected happenings, and alive with unusual interests. The 2/4th team pressed from the start and when the half time whistle sounded the score was still nil. The second half was more prolific in goals; five were scored, all by the 2/4th. It may be said (to be interpreted by either team as it thinks best) that the closing score, 4—1 was no criterion of the play.

THE HANDLING CODE.

BRIGADE MEETS BRIGADE AT GEMUND.

310th Brigade and 312th Brigade met at Gemund on Easter Monday, the teams comprising about an equal number of officers and other ranks. For a time matters were very equal, but the 310th soon settled down and a rush up field headed by Sergt. Brigham resulted in a score by Sapper Johnson, the kick at goal failing. Soon after, from a penalty, Capt. Gillespie kicked a beautiful goal for the 310th, but a similar attempt by the 312th just failed. Shortly before half time, the 310th threequarters got going, and after some good passing Corpl. Mathewman ran in under the post. Capt. Gillespie easily added the additional points.

Half time: 310th 11 points; 312th. Nil.

The 312th set a good pace and after a great run down the field, Lieut. Whitworth grounded the ball behind the line just as he was collared by two opponents. The kick failed. Then the 310th threequarters got busy, and two more tries were put on by Sapper Johnson and Bombdr. Fletcher, one of which was converted.

Final: 310th 3 goals (1 penalty) 2 tries-19 points; 312th 1 try-3 points.

For the winners Capt. Gillespie played a fine game, his goal kicking being great. Sergt. Brigham led the forwards in great style and took a lot of stopping.

Of the losers Lieut. Whitworth and Lieut. Ramsay were the pick.

1/6th WELSH v. 17th FIELD AMBULANCE.

The Welsh were at home on Sunday to a side from the 17th Field Ambulance, and after a sporting game, ran out easy winners by 3 converted goals, 6 tries to nil.

The feature of the game was the brilliant play of the "Welsh" left wing who notched 8 of the tries, the other falling to Cpl. Rees. A strong wind nullified many good attempts at converting. Final:— 1/6th Welsh 3 converted goals 6 tries; 17th Field Ambulance, nil.

M.A.C. SPORTS AT EUSKIRCHEN.

FINE WEATHER, A FINE SHOW AND A FINE CROWD.

A most successful and enjoyable programme was arranged by 47th M.A.C. for Easter Monday, and took place on the football ground, North School. There was a large and enthusiastic crowd. Some of the events caused great excitement.

The most keenly contested race of the day was the 100 yds. flat, for the C.O's special prize presented by Capt. McMahon R.A.M.C.). Pte. Green won this by inches, with Pte. Rice, beating Pte. Parry by a foot, for second place.

The obstacle race, ever popular with "Tommy," was a stiff problem, and Pte. Parry, from "Gallant Little Wales," eventually proved the winner.

The Blindfold Boxing was as funny as ever, and caused roars of laughter.

The following is the list of winners: —

100 yards Race: — 1, Pte. Green; 2, Cpl. Bessell; 3, Pte. Huffey.

Three Legged Race: — 1, Cpl. Bessell and Pte. Green; 2, Pte. Owen and Pte. Philip; 3, Pte. Willis and Pte. O'Brien.

Egg and Spoon: — 1, Pte. Parry; 2, Pte. Huffey.

Football Dribbling: — 1, Pte. Jolly; 2, Pte. Owen; 3, Pte. Parry.

Sack Race: — 1, Pte. Mc. Dermott; 2, Pte. Jolly; 3, Pte. Phillip.

220 Yards Handicap: — 1, Pte. Rice; 2, Pte. Parry; 3, Cpl. Bessell.

Obstacle Race: — 1, Pte. Parry; 2, Pte. Rimmer; 3, Pte. Jolley.

Potatoe Race: — 1, Pte. Parry; 2, Pte. Owen; 3, Pte. Rimmer.

Horse Mop Fight: — 1, Pte. Hestor and Pte. Justice; 2, Pte. Fear and Pte. Philip.

Veterans Race (over 38 years): — 1, Pte. Hestor; 2, Lce.Cpl. Barford, 3, Pte. Willis.

Blindfold Boxing (Heat Winners): — Cpl. Bessell, Pte. Parry, Sgt. Higgins and Pte. Hinton.

Tilting the Bucket: — Sergt. Higgins and Pte. Holsworthy.

A special 100 yards Scratch Race was run for a safety razor in leather case, presented by Capt. McMahon O.C. 47th M.A.C. This was won by Pte. Green.

The judges were: — Sgt. Raymond and Sgt. Dodson.

WEST YORKS SPORTS.

The West Yorks Regt. have started their sports in real earnest. On Easter Tuesday anybody visiting Blucher Park Zeppelin ground would have thought it was a Divisional sports day. Knickered figures greeted the eyes everywhere in Bickendorf. Firstly a crowd would run past best on seeing as much of the surrounding country in the shortest possible time. Then would be heard cheering and noise proceeding from boxing rings. Lastly, but not least, in Blücher Park, on the Zeppelin Ground, crowds of sporting figures were encountered; 12 teams playing football (a Platoon Knock-out Competition) some pulling at tug-of-war and others engaged in all kinds of items. Keenness was very marked all round. Some of the results of the platoon competition were:—

14 Platoon 3, 2 Platoon 1; H.Q. Platoon 6, 8 Platoon 0; 7 Platoon 4, 6 Platoon 1; Band and Drums 1, 4 platoon 0; 13 Platoon 1, 11 Platoon 0; 15 Platoon 1, 3 Platoon 0.

HIGHLAND DIV. M.T. v. 51st Bde. GORDON HIGHLANDERS.

The return match between the above teams was played on Easter Sunday at Düren. Some excitement was caused by three successive corners against the M.T. Coy, and Harvey had no difficulty in dealing with a well directed shot, but Cinnamon headed a beautiful goal from a corner after 25 minutes play.

The play fluctuated in spite of the strong wind, and the Gordons' defence had to get busy to deal with a breakaway be Shuttleworth, whose well-timed centres aroused the interest of the spectators. Hill's play at centre forward for the R.A.S.C. was a feature of the game. The Gordons were penalised three times for offside. They worked very hard and the forwards were well fed by a good set of halves. When the whistle went for half time they had registered all three goals by Cinnamon though this by no means represented the run of the play.

After the exchange of ends the M.T. team worked skilfully, Storr repeatedly getting away on the right. Ten minutes play in the second half saw the Gordons lead reduced, Mackay running through the backs and scoring with a good shot.

Rough play, which was characteristic throughout, subsequently led to the referee stopping the game with still fifteen minutes to go, notwithstanding his having previously warned the Gordons on this point.

THE YOUNG GUARDS IN FORM.

Two very interesting matches were played recently, when the young Guards showed their sporting ability.

The first was played last week in Blucher Park, when a draft of A IV boys, recently belonging to the 51st West Yorkshire Regt., assisted by C.S.M. Stone, also of that battalion, played "C" Coy of the 1/4 (Hallamshire) York and Lancs.

The young Guards, well kept together by C.S.M. Stone, soon got going and at half time were leading by two goals to nil.

The game in the second half was more even, the Hallamshires being exceptionally dangerous, but with Rushton and Powell at back and Clarke in goal, they had great difficulty in scoring. There were no further goals.

The return match was played on Good Friday when the Lines were packed with spectators. The game was keen from the commencement and Wills had to be helped off the field with a sprained muscle in the first five minutes. He was able to resume play later. Both teams played hard, but the shooting was poor in front of the net.

The game ended in a goalless draw and everyone admitted that no more satisfactory result could be desired.

OFFICERS v. SERGEANTS — 1/6th WELSH.

The Officers of the Welsh after defeating the "rest of the Batt" in Rugby were challenged to a game at Association. The challenge was accepted and took place on Easter Monday. Up to half time, it looked as if the Sergeants were in for a good thing, but on changing over things went very badly for them. Their two goals lead was soon wiped off and "one up" registered against them, much to their surprise. Final: Officers, 3; Sergts. 2.

A NATIONAL HOLIDAY.

ST. GEORGE'S DAY.

On Wednesday a resolution was made at the Mansion House with a view to adopting St. George's Day as a national holiday. Since the glorious naval attack on Zeebrugge on April 23rd of last year, St. George's Day has taken on a new lease of life. To many this day will long be one of mourning, but to the nation and the future generations the wonderful deeds of bravery at the historic Mole will rise above the sacrifices that were made and will enrich the memories of a day which has never failed to stir the patriot.

The spirit of the public was doubly manifest this year and roses were in greater demand than ever, whilst the Royal Society of St. George sent large consignments of emblems to all theatres of occupation and to the Fleet.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS CLUB.

We are informed that the Public Schools Club, which closed down in 1915, is about to be reopened and hopes to carry on the excellent work inaugurated in 1909. During the years it functioned the club proved a great success, but was forced to suspend operations in March 1915, because more than 80 per cent of its members were in the army, a glorious record.

It is now felt, however, that the time has come when the survivors might "call the roll" —alas! how many will fail to answer! — and start again the club's activities. A temporary committee, comprising R.T. Squire (Westminster), Dr. E.J. Blackett (Stonyhurst), L.A.M. Fevez (Westminster), Lt. Col. C.J.H.W. Francis, R.E. (Clifton), P. Sutherland Graeme (Malvern), A.J. Lawrie (Fettes) and C.R.V. Wallace (Rugby). The first-named is the chairman, and Mr. W.R. Williams, with a temporary office at 10 Queen Anne's Gate, Westminster S.W. 1, is the secretary.

When the club closed down in 1915 a considerable amount of members personal property was left in the hands of the secretary, who would be glad to get into touch with the rightful owners.

BOOM DEFENCE SERVICE.

"ARDUOUS DUTIES DURING WAR."

The Board of Admiralty have issued a message, thanking the Boom Defence and Barrage Service for the good work it has rendered during the war. Below is given the text of this message

"Before the disbandment of the Boom Defence and Barrage Service, the Board of Admiralty desire to record their appreciation of the satisfactory manner in which the service has carried out its arduous duties during the war.

"The Boom Defence Service was responsible for placing, in as rapid a manner as possible, defences against submarine and surface attack at the principal war anchorages used by his Majesty's Fleets. From the first the work was realised to be onerous, and the personnel of the service was also called upon to exercise much ingenuity and initiative, especially in the early days of the war, when it was urgently necessary to improvise defences. Their duties grew enormously with the development of the submarine menace, and as the theatre of operations extended to the Mediterranean and overseas, and fresh war measures, such as the increase in the protection of new anchorages for convoys, were introduced from time to time. Dangerous enterprises were also successfully undertaken, one example of which was the laying of the barrage across the Straits of Dover, a work which went far to hamper the movements of enemy submarines.

"Effective barrages were constructed and important navigable channels denied to the enemy by the sinking of prepared ships, the depositing of heavy structures, and the erections of obstructions of a permanent character. All these operations called for a high degree of skill and seamanship, and were often carried out under difficult and trying conditions.

"The work of dismantling the defences is no less arduous. The salving of a vast quantity of valuable material necessitates delaying the demobilisation of many who have strong claims for early release to enable them to revert to their calling, but my lords rely with confidence upon the loyal and patriotic spirit with which the strain of war has been borne by the Boom Defence personnel as being an earnest of its readiness to continue the work to a successful conclusion.

"My Lords thank the officers and men of all branches, and the fishermen who joined this service. The arduous nature of the work, necessarily performed with small vessels, and the monotony at time of the duties, calling for ceaseless vigil and energy, are recognised and my Lords have pleasure in recording their opinion that the Boom Defence and Barrage Service can rightly claim that its contribution towards the protection of his Majesty's and Allied ships and vessels making use of the permanent and temporary anchorages in all the theatres of naval operations, has been of inestimable value to the fleets and mercantile marine not only of Great Britain, but of the Allied and Associated Powers."

MAY DAY IN FRANCE.

LABOUR PREPARATIONS.

In France the 1st May is always devoted to Labour Festivities. The preparations for this year's programme are now in progress and the Federation of Food Workers will issue the last instructions on the 24th at a mass meeting of butchers, bakers, pastrycooks, waiters, grocers, &c. The position of these workers is not yet clearly defined, for it is realised that a complete stoppage of the restaurant service of Paris would be serious, as Paris depends much more than London on its restaurants.

Another attempt to change the character of the demonstration has been made by the Municipality of Pavillons-sous-Bois. The Municipality has decided to follow the example of the Prefecture of the Seine, and make the First of May a holiday for the municipal workers. In addition, there will be a distribution of food to aged people, to the poor, and to families of refugees and unemployed, comprising soup, one or two kilos of bread, one kilo of rice or lentils, one kilo of potatoes and carrots, and ½lb of biscuits. There will also be games for the children, and, in the evening, speeches and dancing.

TOMB OF PROSPERITY.

WANTON DESTRUCTION IN BELGIUM.

Nowhere is the irreparable nature of the injury caused to Belgium by the German crime of 1914 more terribly apparent than in the portion of the Meuse valley which lies between Liége and Fiémalle. Five years ago the view from the hills between which it is enclosed presented a marvellous picture of human industry and activity, hardly to be equalled in any part of the world. Mile upon mile of steel-works, collieries, foundries and railway sidings lined the banks of the river, on which strings of barges, tugs, and steamers unceasingly passed up and down stream. By day the sky was blackened with the smoke from hundreds of chimneys and by night reddened into the glare of furnaces and jets of molten metal. All the year round the clang of hammered iron, the rattle of chains, the rumble of loaded freight cars, the shrill whistle of locomotives echoed among the hills. To-day the sounds of busy life are rushed at this tomb of Belgian prosperity, and only here and there the smoke from some tall chimneys mounts in the clear air.

German Kultur has passed through the valley on its mission of wanton destruction. In Seraing, at the vast Cockerill works, founded by the great Scotchman who laid the first railways and built the earliest locomotives on the Continent, the loss from the theft of machinery and deliberate damage is estimated at 48 million francs. All machinery that it was impossible to transport to Germany is left in buttered and twisted heaps. On their systematic policy of paralysing Belgian competition for all time German engineers have expended extraordinary labour and ingenuity. At the iron and steel works of Ougrée-Marihaye, second only to Cockerill's in importance, they have not been content with reducing thousands of pounds worth of modern machinery to scrap metal, but have actually, according to plan, blown up the solid concrete machine beds and foundations. Here, in a peaceful district that offered no resistance they have blasted gaping holes which recall the craters of La Bassée or the Somme. Some of the works which are undamaged have been able to re-start on a small scale, and the collieries are producing coal; other factories could open were it not for the lack of raw material. But, unlike Germany, her oppressor, Belgium has nothing left to offer in payment for it. The misery among the working classes, so long underfed and idle, is intense, and the number of workers and their dependents at present receiving State aid is stated at 2,400,000 in a population of little over seven millions.

RE-MODELLING THE WORLD.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

ALL-ROUND DEGENERATION.

The Vorwärts, a well-known Berlin paper, publishes interesting facts about the collapse of the German nation from political, physical, and moral standpoints. It states that this present degeneration is without precedent, and gives the few facts as sufficient testimony rather than publish any long treatise.

ECONOMICALLY.

"The daily production of coal, which in normal 'war time' averaged 300,000 to 400,000 tons was in March reduced to one-tenth this amount, whilst a month later the production only amounted to 12,000 tons per day. A few years ago thousands of trains were rushing through from east to west and north to south; but to-day there is not a dozen fast trains. A journey from Berlin to Leipzig has become an enterprise which must be planned carefully even many days ahead.

POLITICALLY.

"We need only remind ourselves of the prospective fate of the Eastern Provinces and the Sarre District—these pure German territories—of the mad April carnival in Munich; of the rioting in Dresden, Brunswick and Düsseldorf, to realize the abyss into which this war has plunged us.

PHYSICALLY.

"The figures of the decreasing birth rate, of deaths of children and old people, of the tuberculous cases and the deaths resulting from the disease, speak a language which freezes to stone all careless and superficial indifference.

MORALLY.

"Only an anecdote is needed. I went to one of the most select cafes of Berlin with a friend, and there we were asked both to use the same spoon because every day dozens of silver spoons are stolen. It is common knowledge, too, that in our ordinary public-houses these commodities are now unknown."

NEWS IN BRIEF.

To enable naval accountants to be demobilised civilian clerks are being employed at the Naval Barracks, Portsmouth.

Seventy ex-soldiers are learning tractor driving and horse work on the Board of Agriculture's training farm at Brentwood. Two similar farms are at Stafford and Nottingham.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

The Editor, in publishing letters from Correspondents, will use his own discretion, and if necessary, limit the publishing of correspondence on any subject whatever. It must be understood, however that he is not responsible for the views stated.

All communications for this column should be brief and to the point, and preference will be given to those which bear the writers' signatures for publication. No letter will be published unless accompanied by rank name, and unit of sender, which are needed for the purpose of reference.

Many letters of a perverse nature have reached the office, and the Editor wishes to point out that these only cause waste of time both to the writer and the Editor himself. Letters of this nature will not be published.

"THE PARSIVAL."

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.—I venture to comment on a passage in the interesting article on "Parsival" by Major Bles in your issue of April 23rd. He speaks there of "Our Lord appearing clad in a long white robe," and again of "Kundry washing the feet of Christ." As a member of the audience who saw and heard the wonderful performance on Easter Monday, I cannot believe that Wagner ever meant us to recognize Parsival as anything else but a human being like ourselves — elect and chosen it is true, but a human Knight of the Grail Brotherhood type of the deepest purity and single-heartedness. Hence his power. To my mind the whole point of the drama and its teaching is lost, if we think of Christ as being represented in person. True, the appearance of Parsiful in Act III resembled closely the unfortunately somewhat effeminate representations of Christ which we are accustomed to connect with stained glass windows. That was the only flaw in the almost faultless performance. But this need not disillusion us, nor make us forget the fact that the work has for its theme the triumph of an essentially human nature over temptation, disease and wrong, by the power of a burning Charity and a purity of soul shewn forth by one of Christ's followers, not by himself. In this I venture to think, quite apart from the magic of the music, lies the "convincingness" of the whole masterpiece.

FREE TRAVELLING FOR M.P.'S.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post

Sir,— "Verb. Sap." in his rejoinder anent the above, evades an admittance of his mistake in saying that M.P.'s receive not less than £400 p.a., by suggesting that they should take up other employment and so add to their income. Well, I believe in "one man, one job" and consider that M.P.'s should devote their whole time to their public duties. No member can do his (or her) duty to his constituents if his public work is hampered by other employment, whether it be Trade Union work or an extensive practice at the Bar. My friend who had £180 p.a. estimates his expenses for the year for season ticket, postage, and London lodgings at £150, so how can he now receive about £350 p.a. when his total income does not come to that before making the reduction claimed. I am afraid your correspondent could not have read my letter very carefully. Yes, I know the present constitution of the House and know that vested interests and the legal fraternity are strongly entrenched therein. Since the payment of members was authorised the cost of living has more than doubled, and submit that if the cost of living then was what it is to-day, a much higher sum would have been the salary. The member with £180 p.a. told me he was much better off with his former salary, spending, as he did, his whole time with his family in a small provincial town. I am sure "Verb.Sap." will agree that an increase of 100% in one's salary does not quite compensate for an increase of 300% in ones expense's. In the meantime the grant of free travelling would do much to relieve a number of relatively poor members of a considerable hardship. I can assure "Verb. Sap." that the lunch "fable" is not, as he says, a fable, but a fact; and to the member who cannot afford it, it is anything but amusing whatever it might be to your correspondent.

Answers to Correspondents.

[The flow of correspondence, since the Cologne Post was instituted, has been enormous, and the Editor would like to point out that only a certain number of the innumerable questions can be answered in each issue. Should any inquirer find that his question has not yet been answered, he can have the assurance that it will receive attention in due course, and the answer will appear accordingly. Many questions have been received which could be answered much easier by the Adjutant of the unit concerned, and all such cases which affect the unit commander must be taken to him and not sent here. — Ed.]

RATES ON APPLICATION

FIRE AT THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Just after eight o'clock on Tuesday night the London Fire Brigade received a call to the House of Commons, which is connected with the nearest stations. Motor appliances were despatched from the Westminster, Scotland-yard, and Waterloo-road stations, and motor-cars from the brigade headquarters and Manchester-square, the West-end district headquarters. From Blackfriars the river float was also sent up-stream, but she was stopped at Charing Cross, the fire proving to be of a minor character. It occurred in the committee corridor of the House of Commons, where a fuse-box became ignited through a defective electric circuit. The outbreak was speedily extinguished by the use of sand and buckets of water. Very little material damage resulted. The appearance of the brigade appliances in Parliament-square caused some excitement, but this quickly subsided, most of them being sent back at once.

The colonel of the 324th Infantry was out on a night prowl when the regiment was in a quiet sector. Suddenly his path was blocked by a gigantic doughboy, who addressed him in a stage whisper.

"Halt; who goes there?"

"Commanding Officer," the colonel whispered back.

"Advance, Commanding Officer, and give the password."

The password was stealthily murmured in the doughboy's ear. Then the colonel whispered:

"How far is it to the trenches?"

"Three miles, sir."

You could hear the colonel all over the block as he demanded loudly an explanation of why he had been kept whispering there with the Germans three miles away.

"I gotta turrible cold," the doughboy explained. —Stars and Stripes.

ITALIAN PREMIER'S FLYING VISIT TO ROME.

THE REAL POINT AT ISSUE.

HUNGARIAN SOVIET SUES FOR PEACE.

BOLSHEVISTS PANIC STRICKEN IN RUSSIA.

SIGNOR ORLANDO'S VISIT TO ROME.

"A SCRAP OF PAPER."

The hopes which the delayed departure of Signor Orlando raised, that the points at issue concerning the delimitations of the Adriatic coast would be speedily and amicably settled, were doomed to disappointment. Signor Orlando left Paris on Thursday.

Lest this simple fact be misconstrued, let it be stated that one of the chief reasons for his departure is, not that he regards an amicable adjustment as impossible, but that owing to the matter having been thrown into the public melting pot instead of being assayed at Versailles, Italy's dignity is involved. Therefore the chief reason for Signor Orlando's visit to Rome, and we believe that our caption crystallizes the whole thing, is that he may receive a new assurance that he retains the confidence of his King and his country. Nothing more than that.

The problem presented for solution is, should X, the unknown factor, (in this case the partition of Austro Hungary), be taken into consideration. When Great Britain and France compacted with Italy that when the three Powers — for America was still talking at the time — had beaten Austria, any future menace by that Empire should be precluded by taking away her seaboard, it was not foreseen that other friendly Balkan states would stand in need of that selfsame sea-board. One of the most tremendous consequences of Austria's disruption is the rise of the Balkan States. Their accession to the comity of nations does not, nor is it likely, to disturb the balance of power. It simply places Italy, altogether apart from the League of Nations, in loco parentis to those Balkan 'nationeties' which, unless they have access to the sea at Fiume, will be, geographically, European Thibets.

Three days hence the German delegates are due at Versailles to receive the Peace terms, and if Signor Orlando is not back in Paris in time to append his signature to the most momentous document of all time, we trust — and believe — that Italy will see that he is there before the ink is properly dry.

THE CROATIAN PROBLEM.

Uuder the pact of London the Italians were to have Trieste, Pola and part of Dalmatia, while Fiume was to go to Croatia. Italy, however, claims Fiume on the ground that sixty per cent of the population are Italians. The British and French representatives have, it is understood, informed the Italian representatives that England and France will stand by the treaty in all respects, but have advised Italy to forego part of the territory to which she is thereby entitled. If, however, the Italians insist on their treaty rights, Great Britain and France will stand by the treaty, which contains provisions transferring Fiume to the Croatians. If the nationality of the population of Fiume alone, without including its environs, is examined, Italy's claim is justified. On the other hand the Jugo-Slavs claim Fiume with its hinterland as being not only necessary to the newly created Kingdom of Greater Serbia, but as their right, on the principle of self determination. They deny that one small portion of the territory can be withdrawn from an overwhelming Croatian district in order to support Italian claims. It was agreed in April 1918 that any territorial dispute should be settled amicably on the basis of self determination.

As soon as the Adriatic problem came before the Council of Four says the Daily Telegraph, it was clear that so far as the pact was concerned the hands of England and France were tied, while Italy could not be the judge in her own cause. Therefore President Wilson was given a free hand to deal with the whole question. He began by refusing to accept the pact of London as binding him in any way. He, had moreover, in the case of Poland, made public his considered opinion that it was not right to create any new State without giving it, wherever possible, access to the sea. This point has been carried out in the case of Poland by the arrangement made at Danzig, and the case of Fiume is regarded as being on all fours with that of Danzig.

ORLANDO'S DECLARATION.

The actual publication of President Wilsen's statement came as no surprise, he having announced his intention.

Signor Orlando, in a declaration made before his departure, says that President Wilson's statement, made while the matter was still under discussion, is a decided innovation, and he describes it as an appeal made to the Italian nation over the heads of the Italian Government; in effect, an attempt to set the Government and country by the ears.

He reviewed the history of the Istrian peninsular and Dalmatian coast, claiming that unless Italy holds the entire watershed which separates the Adriatic and Black Sea basins her natural line of protection contains a serious breach.

The history of the Peace negotiations will prove, says the Italian Premier, that Italy's representatives have throughout been characterised by a spirit of firmness and conciliation.

Referring to President Wilson's declaration of America's friendship toward Italy, Orlando says "I proudly claim as a right the honour of having been the first man, in one of the most tragic hours of the war, to exhort the people of Italy to resist at all costs. My call was answered with a courage and abnegation of which there are few such examples in the history of the world. In the name of Italy I express the deep feelings of admiration and sympathy of the Italian people towards the American people."

Before his departure Signor Orlando issued the following valedictory message:—"Before leaving Paris I want to offer to the French Nation, to the French Government and to Prime Minister Clemenceau my sincerest thanks for the brotherly hospitality which was offered to me here in Paris, the great heart of France, our Ally of yesterday and to-morrow."

And, we may add, of to-day.

Le Matin says that at a meeting of the Council of Four yesterday a long discussion took place between Mr. Lloyd George and President Wilson "In any case the treuty of London is sacred" said Mr. Lloyd George, according to Le Matin.

EGYPTIAN GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS.

WORK OR QUIT.

Cairo. 23rd April. Hussein Rushdi Pasha, President of the Council, has tendered his resignation, which has been accepted by the Sultan. Work was partially resumed in Government offices this morning.—Reuter.

Reuter learns that the situation in Egypt is quiet but that a strike among certain Government employés continues. General Allenby has issued a proclamation calling upon them either to return to work or resign.

INDIA RETURNS TO THE NORMAL.

Simla. 21st April. Lahore and Amritsar are quiet. At Kasur a number of arrests have been made. Schoolboys have been very prominent in the riots at Sangla.

Delhi. 21st April. Sankailol, Secretary to the Home Rule League, and several others, have been arrested in connection with recent attacks on the police. The city is quiet and everything normal.—Reuter.

In the recent riots at Gujranwala young boys armed with syringes charged with kerosene acted as a vanguard for incendiaries, precluding the police from making full use of their firearms. Eighty-six arrests were made at Amritsar in two days.

The majority of European women and children in the Punjab have proceeded to the hills, Many thousands of British soldiers waiting embarkation for demobilisation have volunteered unconditionally to remain in India if required.

HUNGARIAN SOVIET MORIBUND.

According to news received in British authoritative quarters the Hungarian Soviet Government is expected to fall early in May, owing to internal dissensions, and that the death blow will be given by their own people.

Berlin 24th April. According to the Loyal Anzeiger reports have been received from Vienna that the Hungarian Soviet at Buda Pesth has requested the Entente Mission to send representatives to Buda Pesth to open negotiations concerning an armistice. The Entente replied indicating readiness to conclude an armistice provided the Soviet Government abdicated and a new cabinet was established representing all bourgeois parties in Hungary, and provided also that all Soviet decrees were withdrawn. The telegram adds that negotiations will begin upon these conditions.— Reuter.

KIEFF WRESTED FROM BOLSHEVISTS.

Copenhagen. 23rd April. The Ukrainian Press Department reports that Kieff has been captured from the Bolshevists by insurgents who are well disposed toward the directorate of the republic of Ukrainian peoples.—Reuter.

CONTRA BOLSHEVISM.

SPRING CLEANING RUSSIA.

The Polish army has started a big offensive along a hundred and fifty miles front in Lithuania. It is advancing rapidly and many important captures have been made.—Reuter.

Equally good news comes from Russia. General Kolchak declares that his advance is now going so well that he can dispense with foreign assistance.

Confirmation has been received in official quarters that financially the Bolshevists are in a very bad way. Their leaders have been making certain approaches to foreign capitalists.

Meantime the Bolshevists are issuing counterfeit notes so cleverly reproduced that even bank managers are deceived.—Reuter.

SYME CONTINUES TO PROTEST.

Ex-Inspector Syme yesterday smashed four windows at No. 10 Downing street, the Prime Minister's official residence. Charged at Bow Street police court later in the day he said he did it to call attention to the injustice of dismissing him from the Police Service. He was remanded for a week in custody.

The Army Council announces that the Army etrance Examination in June next will be the last in which the entrance fees will be waived.

MARVELLOUS ROYAL AIR FORCE.

SOME STATISTICS.

A wonderful record of the astonishing development and magnificent work of the British Air Service during the war is contained in a White Paper issued by the Air Ministry. The following are some of the most striking facts.

In August 914 the Naval and Military wings had between them 272 machines and a personnel of 197 officers and 1,647 other ranks. In October 1918 there were 22,171 machines, 27,906 officers and 263,842 other ranks.

Five service squadrons and three training squadrons existed in August 1914, and 138 and 199 respectively at 31st October last.

When war broke out there were four Government aerodromes in the British Isles. On the day of armistice there were 199 training squadrons and thirty thousand pupils under instruction while 21,957 pilots had been graduated as efficient.

The Aeroplane engine industry was practically non existent in 1914 but in 1918 Great Britain possessed the large and most efficient aircraft industry in the world.

On the Western front from July 1916 to the 8th November 1918 British airmen destroyed or brought down 7,054 enemy aircraft, dropped 3,942 tons of bombs, flew over 900,000 ours and fired over ten and a half million rounds at ground targets.

An exceptionally splendid record is that of the Palestine brigade. During the critical period of the final operations not a single enemy aeroplane crossed our lines. In addition to machine guns a certain number of the machines in the field were fitted with 37 m/m guns firing one and a half pounder shells.

The Mesopotamia wing was formed in 1916 and rapidly gained a marked ascendancy over the enemy's air service, which was manned and equipped by Germans. This supremacy was constantly maintained.

In 1917 two squadrons were provided for India where they played an important part in quelling trans-frontier risings.

During the first month's operations of the photographic section in France only forty negatives were taken. In October 1918 no fewer than 23,247 plates were exposed, and approximately 350,000 prints were issued.

Whereas in 1914 we were only using twenty pound bombs, towards the end bombs weighing three thousand pounds were in use.

A special type of Stokes bomb was very successfully used in Palestine.

PEACE — AND THE KING'S BIRTHDAY.

According to the Evening News an effort is being made to fix Peace-day for 3rd. June, the King's birthday.

ABDUCTION OF YOUNG GIRL.

At Marlborough Street Police Court yesterday the hearing was resumed of the charge against John Ferguson, a Marine Engineer of Glasgow, of abducting Cissie Raymond, aged twelve, of Soho.

A long voluntary statement made by Ferguson was read in court. In it Ferguson asserts that he met the girl at Tottenham Court Road on the night of the 5th April. She was hideously painted and men were following her. She said that she had left home and would commit suicide rather than return. Wishing to protect her and arrange a meeting to effect a reconciliation with her parents he took her to his hotel, bought clothes for her and later took her to his mother's house at Glasgow. He had acted honourably throughout and he feared she would kill herself if forced to return to her parents.

Cissie Raymond, a well grown and self possessed girl, said that accussed spoke to her while she was walking to a girls club. She had not any paint but only powder on her face and rouge on her lips. She alleged that Ferguson asked her to stay with him for a fortnight.

The case was further adjourned, Ferguson being released on bail for two hundred pounds.

BOLSHEVIST PASSPORT FRAUDS.

It is understood, says Reuter, that important information has reached the Government of devices adopted by Russian Bolshevists for the purpose of sending propagandist agents to foreign countries, including England and America.

In December last the Soviet Government issued a decree that all foreigners in Russia must be registered. The Foreign Office required them to hand in their passports with two photographs. In this way a large number of people were deprived of their passports, which were never returned. It is clear that the intention was for the Government to obtain foreign passports which could be altered, other photographs being substituted, the faked passports then being distributed among their own agents.

AN OPPORTUNITY FOR SOVIETS.

Our special correspondent at Berlin writes:—

Several of the shops in Berlin are being run by Soviets in so far as the dismissal and treatment of employés is concerned. The bankers of Germany are reported on fairly good authority to have subscribed a sum of thirty million marks for Bolshevist propaganda in foreign countries.

Hugo Stinis, who was the organiser of compulsory labour in Belgium while it was occupied by the Germans, is said to have offered to hand over two or three of his mines to be run by a workmen's Soviet.

This appears to be a sensible proposal. It will give the Soviets a chance of showing what they can do when up against a job of work, and whether it be successful or not will give them a lesson in the difficulties and facts of business.

SIR ERIC GEDDES.

Reuter states authoritatively that the report that Sir Eric Geddes has been appointed a member of the War Cabinet is inaccurate. He continues to attend meetings of the War Cabinet under an arrangement which has been in operation during the last four months.

West Surrey farmers report excellent first prospects of good crops.

FRENCH ADMIRAL'S TRIBUTE.

BRITISH NAVY RECORD.

"Honour to the British." Under this heading Admiral Besson pays tribute to the British Navy, representatives of which are being fêted in Paris. "Germany" says the Admiral, "Committed two grave mistakes in regard to England; first in believing that she would remain neutral, secondly in ignoring her power, energy and rapidity in facing all situations. A fortnight after the declaration of war the British expeditionary force was fighting in Flanders. A fortnight after the disaster of 21st March last year two hundred and sixty-eight thousand fresh soldiers were at the front. If the Allies had not from the start, thanks to the British fleet, triumphed on the sea no effort on land could have saved them; for had the British Army not been transported to France, the Franco-Belgian Army would have been beaten by the German Army, which was infinitely superior in numbers, material and preparedness. The British Fleet saved France by enabling the British Army to cross the Channel in all security."

Admiral Besson recapitulates in stirring words the tremendous activities of the British Navy during the war, with its four naval victories. The battle of Jutland, he said, was the greatest sea battle fought for a hundred years. The German fleet claimed a victory but dared not show its nose on the sea afterwards, and finally was handed over to the British intact. "When the German Admiral pointed out that the German fleet had not been beaten he was met with the following retort by Admiral Beatty, the hero of Jutland:— "You had only to come out." Admiral Besson points out to the honour of the British Merchant Service that the percentage of its losses in men was greater than the percentage of losses in the armies.

SOVIET PRINCIPLE REJECTED.

The Independent Labour Party, which comprises the most extreme politicans in England and whose leaders were all defeated at last election has held a conference at Huddersfield. Mr. F.M. Jowett, ex M.P. for Bradford, in moving a resolution on behalf of its council regarding the methods of election and the machinery of Government, paid a tribute to the past services of Parliament in saving the people from autocratic rule. The final word on national questions dealt with by Parliament nevertheless rested with the people, to whom Parliament had to come for election. Parliament therefore had some features which must be cherished, but in other respects it failed to meet modern conditions. The people's representatives had no actual contact with the administrative departments of State and the resolution therefore advocated a system of departmental representative committees.

Discussing the experiment in the new form of Government by Russia and Hungary Mr. Jowett said that in England there are deep-rooted parliamentary institutions and to scrap whatever advantages our parliamentary system gives us or to refuse to reform or to adopt a now untried system would be a great mistake. The crucial fact is that under the present system Parliament has to come into actual contact with the people. There is no such provision in the Soviet system. It is a system of delegation. Touch and power must be lost through such series of delegations. British Wireless.

EXTENDING THE CHEVRONS CLUB.

A Fancy Dress ball was held yesterday at Queens Hall in aid of the Chevrons Club War Memorial Fund. The object is to raise 150,000 pounds to enlarge the London Headquarters, and establish branch clubs in India and the Dominions and at the various Naval stations throughout the world. Officers of 180 regiments have contributed 2,000 pounds.

UNORTHODOX CLERICAL ATTIRE

The new vicar of Croydon the Rev. Pat. McCormick, D.S.O., is somewhat surprised that his attendance at the Easter vestry attired in a lounge suit and ordinary collar should occasion any public interest.

He explained in an interview that he had only just been demobilised and found it impossible to get a full clerical wardrobe at once. He also suggested that it would be a good thing to have some sort of a badge which the clergy could wear with mufti.

SEVEN WAYS TO LONDON.

On the removal of the ban on civilian aviation on 1st May seven aerial trunk routes will be established, radiating from London; to Scotland, Dublin, Belfast, Plymouth, Bristol, France and Holland.

Government facilities will be given to pilots along these routes and the Air Ministry will be responsible for the airworthiness of all machines.

WARNING AGAINST DOG SMUGGLING.

No further cases of suspected rabies have been reported, nor is there any confirmation or otherwise of other cases already reported. A strong warning has been issued by the Board of Agriculture against smuggling dogs out of London, which it is believed is being extensively practised.

NEW PEACE UNIFORMS.

A Committee with Lt.-Gen. Sir A.J. Murray as chairman has been set up by the War Office to investigate and report on the general question of uniform for the after war army.

Two of the three men who escaped from a prison van at Liverpool were recaptured yesterday in a barn on the banks of the Mersey.

The Conference of the National Union of Teachers, sitting at Cheltenham, has unanimously passed a resolution opposing military drill at schools

FLYING THE ATLANTIC OCEAN.

WE'RE ? COMING OVER.

St. John's. 24th April. Consternation was caused in the airmen's camp yesterday by a message from the Air Ministry asking the reasons for the failure of Hawker and Raynham to start on the trans-Atlantic flight.

The message declared that all weather reports reaching England indicated favourable conditions. The airmen replied that wireless reports from vessels at sea announced conflicting winds, making a start inadvisable. At St. John's it rained all day yesterday and another downpour is expected today.—Reuter.

NATIONALISATION OF COAL.

REPORT WILL BE DELAYED.

At the resumed meeting of the Coal Industries Commission yesterday it was stated that the members have unanimously decided that having regard to the number of witnesses and the importance of the subject the report will be presented on 20th June instead of 26th May.

With regard to the application for representation of royalty owners on the Committee, Mr. Justice Sankey stated that at a private meeting the Commision had come to the conclusion that since other interests — distributors for instance — were not directly represented, they could not allow counsel to appear. Proofs of witnesses' evidence would be handed in, however, and read publicly before the Commission.

KINMEL CAMP RIOTS.

FURTHER ACQUITTALS.

At the Kinmel Park general court-martial which resumed its sitting at Liverpool yesterday the President summed up the evidence against Acting Cpl. McLeod, who was charged with mutiny and with failing to use his utmost endeavours to suppress the mutiny.

The President said that "utmost endeavour" did not necessarily mean the utmost of which a man was capable, but such endeavour as a man might reasonably and fairly be expected to make.

The trial, which lasted three days, ended in the acquittal of Cpl. McLeod on all charges.

The Kinmel camp riots court martial yesterday acquitted Spr. Murdoch and Pte. Mackenzie. Sentence will be promulgated in the cases of Pte. Wallace and Pte. Vladimir Costughko, a young Russian who was wounded at Vimy Ridge.

MILITARY FORWARDING OFFICER RICHBOROUGH.

The War Office announces that from the 1st. May the Military forwarding offices at Southampton and Avonmouth will be transferred to Richborough. All parcels above postal weight and gifts for the British Army of the Rhine and British troops in France and Flanders should be dispatched via Richborough.

RECORD LONDON MAYORALTY.

The Metropolitan Borough of Wandsworth, the largest of the London Boroughs, has suffered a great loss by the death, which occurred yesterday, of its chief citizen, Lieut. Col. Sir Archibald Dawnay, J.P., C.E.

Among other war activities he raised the 13th (Wandsworth) Bn. of the East Surrey Regiment.

He held a personal record for London, having been Mayor of Wandsworth for more than ten consecutive years, and actually died in office. He was knighted in 1918.

LIGHT CRUISER'S FINE RECORD.

The light cruiser "Royalist" which in the Heligoland Battle sank one enemy cruiser and damaged another and also fought in the battle of Jutland, arrived at Portsmouth yesterday.

During the time she was in commission, the "Royalist" did great service on patrol, steaming no fewer than 85,000 miles.

BRAVO, SOUTH AFRICANS.

Capetown. In the Union House of Assembly on the 23rd April Mr. Malan, the acting Premier, announced that the 15th of July would be observed annually as a holiday, in commemoration of the superb valour and devotion of the South African brigade at Delville Wood in the first Somme offensive.—Reuter.

LABOUR MINISTRY'S GOOD WORK.

Among the first business to be taken on the re-assembling of Parliament next Tuesday will be a discussion of the work of the Ministry for Labour. Sir Robert Horne is expected to give a good account of his department, for the number of strikes shortened and prevented during the last four months is much larger than is generally known.

CAPTAIN RE-ENLISTS AS PRIVATE.

Acting Captain F.W. Kelsey, M.C., of Bishops Stortford, has enlisted as a private in the North Russian Relief Force.

LONDON STOCK EXCHANGE.

The news from Paris caused a decided restraint upon dealings and induced the realisation of recent speculative counters, notably in Oils. British, Indian and Egyptian Stocks remained steady. French and Italian Funds weakened owing to an adverse movement in the respective rates of exchange. Russian Bonds and Minings show good recoveries as the result of Bolshevist reverses.

THE SOLDIER AND HIS BOOKS.

The life and work of the soldier have been a theme of vast interest from the earliest days of the world. Poets have sung rapturously, essayists have discoursed gravely, orators have declaimed eloquently, and preachers have expounded passionately the daring deeds of brave men. But never has the soldier had a greater place in the imagination of his countrymen than in the war that is drawing to a close. Probably the reasons of this prominence are that the campaign of these years is the most renowned in history and that the British soldier in this campaign comes from no one class of citizen but is a representative of every type of manhood. Human interest in him is grateful, but it is also curious. It is remarkable that many ingenious attempts have been made to probe his mind and heart. Some good people have been vastly interested to know what religious beliefs the soldier cherishes, and have sought to find out how far he is loyal or indifferent to the tenets of Christian doctrine. Others have been equally curious as to his attitude towards the conventions and standards of society, and seek to know whether he will on his return to England fit himself into his former niche, or play the part of ruthless iconoclast. There are, again, those who deal less deeply with the soldier, and content themselves with asking what he reads. They believe that if they can discover what he marks, reads, and inwardly digests, they have the secret of his future.

We confess that we also are considerably interested in the reading that appeals to our fellows in arms, though we have no illusions as to the success of our quest. It is important to know the type of literature that soldiers usually choose, for it is still true that "reading maketh a full man". Some English periodicals, noting the coincidence that St. George's Day was the anniversary of the Zeebrügge naval exploit and of the birth of Shakespeare, have commented on the well-known fact that many soldiers have renewed during the war their interest in the works of our greatest dramatist. The Manchester Guardian refers to the matter and is good enough to say that there need be no wonder at our occasional preference of Shakespearian plays before the ephemeral writings of two London journals, notable for their wide circulation. Shakespeare, we are told, wrote much the best war book dealing with our battle scenes; and in the opinion of our contemporary the conversation between Henry V and his warrior comrades on the eve of Agincourt comes nearer the talk of our soldiers amongst themselves than the conventional representation of it in present-day fiction.

We agree with the Manchester Guardian that some of Shakespeare's historical plays make an admirable guide-book even for soldiers who reverence the great master of drama. Some men in the British Army of the Rhine must have seen the site of Agincourt where five centuries ago a stern and bloody battle was fought; some may even have seen at Fruges the parish registers in which the names of many a French and English knight are written, for these warriors thought it not unseemly to go to church together before they fought each other on the morrow.

It is not wise to generalize concerning the literary choice of soldiers, for men can never be alike in their tastes. Some have found that —

"Dreams, books, are each a world; and books, [we know,
Are a substantial world, both pure and good;
Round these, with tendrils strong as flesh and [blood
Our pastime and our happiness will grow."

When they have had their scanty times of rest our soldiers have turned to the world of letters and sought there a welcome relief from the strain and sorrow of warfare. There have been men with power of will so strongly developed that they have carried on to a large extent their former studies, and even in wartime have contributed to the world a goodly addition to its lore. Not a few have begun new studies and made themselves almost expert in some department of knowledge, where hitherto they were out strangers. Some men have gone back to the classics of Greece and Rome, others to the English essayists and novelists, and have scorned to spend time on anything that is not immortal in literature.

But the soldiers who have read seriously are in all probability few in number. Most men who have seen active service have been so exhausted by war's inevitable strain that they have craved books that are full of incident and ingenious plot, books that may not be reckoned masterpieces of letters but have supplied a needed respite from tragedy. Reading for them was complete relaxation of tension, not self-culture, not even an antidote to intellectual slackness. To us it is curious that no one could safely prophesy the kind of books a soldier would select. Some professional men, even university graduates, were well satisfied with the lower grades of literature; whilst men of humbler intellectual station were pleased only when they could read a classic.

No generalization can be made, for the circumstances of war act variously on men's minds. Man is a creature of moods. At one time he spurns all but the truest and highest in art; at another time his mood has changed and the best in literature passes him by unheeded. "Some books," says Francis Bacon, "are to be tasted, others to be swallowed, and some few to be chewed and digested." Have not all of us digested books we should only have tasted, and only tasted books we should have digested? It is war that is to blame, and war is always incalculable.

BLOSSOM, SWEET BLOSSOM.

If you take a walk on an early spring morn,
You will notice the dew all around,
You may pause and then list to the birds overhead,
But there's some other joy to be found,
'Tis the blossom — the beautiful flower of May,
That renders the country with beauty, they say.

You may lounge at your ease in the rays of the sun,
You may picture a wonderful view,
You may gaze for a while at the beautiful sky
As the skylark goes hovering thro';
But the blossom that blooms on the o'erhanging tree
Is enough to convince you what blossom can be.

"Blossom, sweet blossom,
Thou beautiful bloom of the spring!
Kissed in the morn' by the falling dew,
Spreading thy beauty and fragrance, too.
Nature hath made thee a wonderful flower,
For joy on this earth thou dost bring;
And there's nothing so gay,
As the blossom in May,
Thou beautiful bloom of the spring!"

A REMINISCENCE OF 1917.

FROM "POINT DU JOUR" HILL.

BY "UB QUE."

"Point du Jour" hill is the south end of Vimy Ridge and was captured by the British in the first attack on Ap. 9th, 1919.

At last the guide reaches the top of the hill and drops into a communication trench, for from ere onwards we are under observation from the enemy's lines. He leads a little way along the trench down the forward slope and then halts.

"You can get a good view of the German trenches from here, sir," he says, "if you look over careful like."

Cautiously we both raised our heads over the parapet, and what a panoroma met our gaze.

Straight in front the green slope of the hill, intersected here and there by the waving chalky lines of our rearward communication trenches and spotted all over as if with some loathsome disease by the white shell holes, stretched away downwards in the shimmer of the hot summer sun. Between this and the cool green shadows and blue distance beyond ran a broad band of sun baked brown earth, shot torn and shattered, as if some great harrow had been drawn across our front, leaving behind nothing of the green but only one sickly yellow scar from which a few tree stumps stood stiffly up like gaunt fingers raised in mute appeal to heaven.

Here and there where the ubiquitous trenches have passed through some chalk stratum a white band like a twisted piece of tape is visible for a short distance, only to merge again into the universal brown; in another place a reddish heap or perhaps a fragment of brick wall marks the position of Roeux Station and the Chemical Works, to capture which insignificant mounds many brave men have fallen, and indeed still lie as the heavy, sickly taint borne on the summer breeze bears witness. To the right of the Arras-Douai Railway which runs diagonally across the brown scar are more heaps of brick dust, the once picturesque Roeux Chateau, and further to the right still, at the top of a slight rise, like the bristles of a brush appear the shrapnel-stripped branches of Mount Pleasant Wood; while, close by, the Roeux Wood tree tops can be seen, as the ground slopes steeply down to the valley of the Scarpe.

Dominating all this shattered landscape rises a brown heap, bigger and more forbidding than the rest, Greenland Hill, the scence of fight after fight; to-day the Germans hold it; to-morrow who knows? But the crops will be rich there for many a year to come.

It is quite a pleasure to turn from this brown band of death to the cool green countryside beyond, as yet untouched, to the eye, by the finger of war; but there is something different about that landscape, a feeling at the back of our minds that there is some menace brooding over it, a feeling that is explained by our guide in one word.

"Bocheland" he says, waving a hand towards it; and we gaze with added interest as he points out the various features; Hausa and Delbar Woods; and away on the right, a crumpled silhouette on the horizon, Monchy le Preux. Straight in front of us in the middle distance the sun glistens on the roofs of Biache St. Vaast and, further back, Vitry en Artois; to the left and further back still, the slender factory chimneys of Brebieres rise out of the blueness just where the straight line of the railway dips into a cutting and is lost to sight, the eye following it in imagination till one can just distinguish the faint purple pile of Douai Cathedral, now showing clear, now fading away, as the shimmering heat rises, from the ground in front of us and shuts out for a minute the hazy distance.

SCOTLAND'S HOPE.

"A good thirty and nine feet, Peter, but just not quite so good as you were doing yester night."

Peter pulled at his back-pleats and eased the feel round his waist with a smile that might well have said "Well you are a fellow to please!" He took up the stone — a big hard flinty lump — poised it easily in the cup of his shoulder, sank to his usual position, and with a perfect follow-through drove the boulder full twenty inches beyond his last try.

Donald winked approval and looked to me as if to say — "There now!" And, well satisfied, big Peter put on his tunic and we went back to billets.

A strange scene, you may say and yet its recalled very vividly to me the regular evening trial of strength and skill, the keen competition of the younger generation to outleap and outputt their fathers, that they might become known in the clachan as coming men. Many a night I have seen them pant and strain in the conflict of strong youth, and this seemed to bring it all back to me. It pointed unerringly to the one dominant ambition — to excel in sport — a wish which, once formed in a man's character, never wavers.

Peter was the hope of our Battalion. His name, well enough known to the regular attender at our more northerly meetings in pre-war years, was mentioned as sure for the shot and even surer for the hammer in the divisional sports, and to a man we backed him, if not with our purses then at least with our good-will. His easy-going nature was proverbial, and many a time I have seen him cajoled from the stores — where he reigned supreme — to give help to the young aspirant, pointing out such little faults of stance, pose and delivery as appealed to his practised eye, and ever willing to lend his bulk, strength and wily wisdom to the tug-of-war team that held more than a divisional reputation.

Enthusiasm was the keynote of his personality. In sport he was a lion. In company, his quiet purposeful air bade respect and liking, and I had long before come to the conclusion that his whole character was a striking tribute to the strengthening, testing and refining influence of the innumerable contests and trials of strength he had won. The moral effect of our Highland games has been one of the biggest factors in the collective successes our regiments have gained for Scotland throughout the campaign. The sneering wonder of Dr. Johnson at our national rude strength has been more of a tribute than the implied reverse, since he wrote it, and I dare to say that the friendly competition in our strenuous tussles with hammer and ball, in our man-to-man wrestles, in our burn-leaping escapades, have helped as much as anything to stiffen that Scottish backbone of ours of which we are so justly proud.

There is a future to look to. Peter and I have often discussed its possibilities, for we both feel that there will be a revival and a quickening of the interest in our Highland games. A younger generation is coming to the fore. Names that will always stand out magnificiently—Cramb, Nicolson, Corbett, Dinnie—will be succeeded by others equally illustrious. But the ideal thought is that there will come a day when every Scottish youth and man will throw his hammer, his weight and his shot, jump and run and wrestle, with that fine glorious feeling of life and exuberance, with the wish to be good all round — the sure mark of possession of a strong body and a strong mind.

"OUR LITTLE BIT OF ENGLAND."

In a recent issue of the Ex-Service Man, the independent journal for "those who have served," Mr. L.C. Carey has written a very interesting article on the question of the settlement of ex-service men on the land.

"It has been said," writes Mr. Carey," on a public platform that every salaried servant in England, from the general manager of a railway to the man who sweeps the roads, was underpaid. Wages by themselves, in any department of life, are insufficient payment because they mean incessant saving to provide for the future. Every salaried man ought to be guaranteed some ultimate share in the business he has helped to build up so that he can enjoy to the full his present position without being haunted by the continual dread of the future.

I am obliged to allude to this point as the principle has a special bearing on the question of the settlement of our soldiers and sailors on the land. The soil, more than any other property will repay for possession. A slight comparison between the relative positions of an owner and a tenant will bear out this statement.

"The owner can lay out his money with the certainty that he can never be disturbed in his occupancy and that he has an absolutely good asset at his back in the form of property in England. He can leave it to whom he likes. He is working not only for himself but for his children and his children's children, and every penny he puts into the land increases his capital value and therefore his earning power, and he can borrow money, if necessary, on the security of his land, To the tenant, however, all such assistance is denied, as he has no such security and he cannot make a judicious outlay which would mature in course of time because he has no fixity of tenure; he has no inheritance either to pass on to his family.

"I was staying in the New Forest last year and was struck between the difference in the prosperity of the village I was in and a neighbouring one. One of the inhabitants explained to me that the farmers in the prosperous village were all owners while the other one was occupied by tenants. The landlord was quite a good one but the extra incentive of ownership was missing, and the comparison between the two places was remarkable.

"A farmer cares for his beasts, his horses when they are too old to work are pensioned off to pass the rest of their days in quiet in the fields, but what was the reward of the average agricultural labourer before the war? In a great number of cases—the Workhouse. Romford, which is an entirely agricultural town has, I believe, one of the largest, if not the largest, workhouse in the country. This speaks for itself.

"Out of 18s. a week with which to support a wife and family a man could not save much to keep him in his old age, and unless his children were able to support him that was where he ended his days.

"This prospect has been brightened for those labourers who have done their bit and come safely through the war, by the promise of land for ex-Service men. They are now looking forward eagerly to the fulfilment of that promise, when they can once more till the soil, but with the splendid advantage that they will be free men, not servants.

"It will be the salvation of England and the greatest safeguard against Bolshevism if these promises are kept. When this great new class of small owners is created the present unrest will die a natural death; the prosperity of this country will matter to these men and they will therefore do what they can to combat the revolutionary interests which are seeking to destroy it, for they have the greatest stake in the well-being of England—the Right of Possession.

A SOFT JOB.

BY L. H.

This is the story of Pte. Onions, C, of the 13th P.B.I. He enlisted in January 1916, and came out in June, full of patriotic zeal. Pte. Onions never had any luck. Whenever his battalion went in the line he found himself in the shallowest, muddiest saphead. Whenever they came out he found himself on guard. He was always on guard, & he loathed guards. If a brigade or division wanted men, his name was always passed over. If a man was wanted for a course at the base, Pte. Onions never clicked. All the soft jobs passed him by. Only once, when the battalion was in reserve did he have a short Lewis Gun course, and thereafter he groaned and cursed under the added weight of two magazine buckets, over many shell-holes.

Under this extra burden his military ardour gradually cooled and he grew bitter and cynical. He and Brown got trench fever on the same day. Brown's temperature went up to 100.1, and he got away to dock, but Onions' refused to go any higher than 99.9, so he carried on. The shell that gave Smith a Blighty one in the arm only buried him in sandbags. When he went on leave his division was out of the line resting. On his return they were back in the line, and the Q.M.S. said to him. "You are just in time; you can go up with the rations to-night. They are going over the bags in the morning but they'll never reach the objective. The wire isn't cut, and we've no artillery to speak of .... Machine guns? Oh, yes! They're three deep in the German line."

When the armistice was signed, he said, "Now I'm going to wangle things for all I'm worth. No more parades for me. For the few weeks until get my ticket I'm going to have a soft job." So when the Education Officer asked if there were any men who wanted a Divisional Course in Metaphysics, Pte. Onions stepped forward, and away he went.

One day in January the Demobilization Officer said, "There's Pte. Onions. He's had a rough time; We will send him home," and his name went down for release. Then it was discovered that he was away from the battalion, and it was crossed off. When they broke the news gently to him his language was appalling.

So it came about that Pte. Onions went to the Army of the Rhine, and there continued his quest for a soft job. Very soon came his opportunity. A man was wanted for the Divisional Baths. That sounded easy enough, and he went, to find that the baths were in a small village with no canteen, that Cologne passes were unobtainable, and the working hours three times as long as with his unit. There he stayed until November 1936 when it was decided to demobilize all men of over twenty years service, but when his turn came to go, he was marked indispensable to the army, and selected for retention. Broken-hearted, he piled coal on the steam disinfector until the fire was white-hot, then opened the door and crawled in to die. And at that very moment his release was sanctioned. Pte. Onions never had any luck.

URDENBACH'S EASTER THRILL.

B/ 126 AT IT AGAIN.

At the instigation of a very enterprising Quartermaster, "B" Battery, 126 A.F.A. arranged a most exciting cross-country run for Easter Monday. The plan of action was to take the would-be emulators of "Mercury" to Ohligs by lorry, and then let them loose to find their way as best they could. The afore mentioned quarter bloke ransacked the battery in his search for budding Shrubs and Applegarths and eventually peer uaded six victim that their feet were just made for running, and that thousands could be made at it in their spare time, with no trouble or expense etc. Having gathered in these athletics, he furthermore persuaded them to deck themselves in fine raiment, consisting of shorts and shoes. Then decking himself likewise, this valiant quarterbloke, ushered his half dozen victims into the waiting lorry, and then sat himself on the tail-board, in case any escaped en route. On arriving at Ohligs, they dismounted, and ruefully eyed the lorry as it disappeared on its return journey.

Miles and Miles and Miles.

Then ensued a lengthy argument as to which was the quickest way back, and as each one held a different opinion on the subject they decided each to take his own road and let the finish decide who was in the right. At 14.30 sharp, they lined up. The Q.M blew his nose in lieu of whistle and they were off.

They had not gone far along nighst, Ohligs when a kindly civvy stopped them and explained that such exertion was hardly necessary as a train was due in ten minutes. Having brushed aside this obstruction they galloped on, and soon were proceeding in extended order, and were taking their various ways. One already perspiring runner suddenly found himself on a main road, and, seeing a tram approaching, labelled "Benrath", he thought he was quite justified in hanging on, and running behind it. On the way he chuckled to himself at the thought that he would soon be in Benrath and a ten minute sprint would see him home an easy first. After the car had travelled approximately 4 kilometres he turned to enquire from a Tommy on board "How far to Benrath mate?". "Benrath", said the other, "why you're going the wrong way. The car's just come from there."

He let go, sat down on the kerb, and positively howled with delight. Number two tried to take a short cut through a wood, lost himself in the middle, and did not find the way out until dark. No. 3 and 4 took field paths, which they knew would save them miles. After two hours at a gradually diminishing speed, they both found themselves back in Ohligs, having discribed a circle in their wanderings.

A little bubbling stream.

The quartermaster, meanwhile, was steadily plodding along, on a course which he had carefully market out on his map. Unfortunately he had overlooked a small obstacle in the shape of a wide stream that barred his progress. Not being fond of water (neat), he had to make a wide detour to find a bridge, thereby losing much valuable time. The other two contestants met either by accident or design on Ohligs station, took the train back as advised by the obliging civilian, ran round the station at the other end, several times to cause a little perspiration, and then dashed up to the winning post amid the applause of the multitude.

The Q.M. duly arrived an hour afterwards having had his pace somewhat accelerated by the attentions of the German equivalent to a man eating bulldog. The dates and times of arrival of the other competitors will be duly announced in this paper. [I don't think it matters! Ed.]

488 v. 145 SIEGE BATTERY.

A match between these teams was played on Monday on the former's ground at Bonn. The match proved to be a ding-dong struggle from start to finish, each side attacking in turn but only once was the defence of either team pierced.

After about 10 minutes play Dunn got away on the left wing for the visitors and beating his back, placed a nice centre across the goal mouth which Calley converted with a good shot.

The home team had a piece of luck when Lemons, for the visitors, missed scoring from a penalty, awarded for a foul. He kicked the ball straight into the goalkeeper's hands.

The home team opened the second half in spirited fashion, intent on wiping out the visitors lead. Mc. Gough and Easton were prominent in several fine dashes, but the visitors' defence withstood all attacks until five minutes from time, when, from a scramble in the goal-mouth, Mc. Gough netted the ball. Wear at fullback played a grand game for 488. Easton worked hard and was a constant worry to the visitors' attack.

The Visitors' forwards were good, but fell off slightly in the second half. The defence was sound throughout the game, Harcombe being a tower of strength to his side. Result: 145 Siege Bty. 1; 488 Siege Bty. 1.

53rd BATTALION SHERWOOD FORESTERS AT PLAY.

BATTALION SPORTS.

The 53rd Sherwood Foresters held a very enjoyable Sports Meeting on Easter Monday at Surth. The arrangements were in the hands of the Sports Officer who was ably assisted by the Company Sports Officers.

Lieutenant Colonel. C. L. Bond. C.M.G., D.S.O. was President, Major Webb, Major Woolhouse, Captain Heal and Padre Fry, acted as judges, and there were large numbers of competitors for the various events. The greasy pole competition caused much merriment and the obstacle race taxed the resources of the runners. All companies of the Battalion struggled hard to win the much coveted position of Champion Company, and to obtain as many points as possible for the Shield Competition, the result of which will be forthcoming in July.

D. Company were leading at the end of the day with a total of 40 points, chiefly owing to the excellent running of Lieut. Burns, who carried all before him. Sergt. Bell of B Coy also made a very fine show in all the events he entered, especially the Mile Flat Race. At the end of the meeting the Commanding Officer, Lieutenant Colonel C. E. Bond. C.M.G., D.S.O., presented the prizes to the winners and spoke words of congratulation to the men on their turn out and also thanked those who had so ably arranged the various competitions. The prizes were awarded as follows:

100 Yards Aiv. 1, Pte Beacock, D Coy. 2, Pte Hodgkinson, B Coy. 3, Pte King, D Coy.

100 Yards Open. 1, Sgt Morrill, C Coy. 2, Sgt Lakin, B Coy.

220 Yards Aiv. 1, Pte Lissiman, C Coy. 2, Pte Beacock, D Coy.

440 Yards open. 1, Sgt Bell. 2, C.S.M. Searancke, D Coy. 3, Pte Lissiman.

1 Mile Open. 1, Sgt Bell, B Coy. 2, Sgt Sale, A Coy.

Obstacle. 1, Sgt Bell, B Coy. 2, L/C Kemp, A Coy.

High Jump. 1, Pte Mansfield, C Coy. 2, Sgt Wise, B Coy. 3, Pte Whisker, A Coy.

O'Grady Competition. 1, Pte Carner, B Coy. 2, Pte Thorneywell, D Coy.

Officers and N.C.O's Relay Race. 1, N.C.Os.

MACHINE GUNNERS SPORTS PROSPECTS.

3rd BATTALION, M.G.CORPS.

Battalion messing has commenced and not many are missing from the crowded rooms. The number of dogs in attendance steadily increases and one wonders if they are all taken from the B.E.F. kennels or acquisitions from the Rhine.

Daily matches in football continue whilst the weather remains cold and with their progress it becomes increasingly likely that "A" Coy. will emerge winners of the competition between Companies. Unless they throw their chances away in the few games left, names may be prepared for the medals. The presentation of medals for the last competition is now being arranged.

On Thursday afternoon "A" met "C" in the return match (Competition). Result "A," 3; "C," 1. Half backs and a forward let the losers down. "A's" goals were rather cheap, but figures count and two more points go to this company.

On the 30th rugger players journey (with as many spectators as can be packed into two lorries) to Kalk to play the 93rd Brigade R.G.A. Tea is being provided for playors and spectators alike and a good outing (and a good hiding) will probably be enjoyed.

The Hockey fixture with the 34th M.Gunners (Troisdorf) to be played at Riehl Barracks has now been altered definitely to Tuesday, May 6th. We shall entertain our visitors to a good feed and match.

A long-delayed fixture Officers v Sergeants will at last come about on Monday next. This afternoon a battalion team composed of a number of new players, meet all the Transport.

At the end out of the week will come the great Boxing Tournament and it is hoped that names will be sent in forthwith to Company sports' officers so that this event may attract a good crowd and yield sporting results. A special feature will be several fights open to neighbouring battalions of the Durham Light Infantry.

This little par was almost finishing without a reference to the Corporals v Privates' match (soccer) to-morrow, Sunday. Last time the Corporals were shy in coming forward, but Part II orders may have been busy lately and there will be no excuse.

63rd BRIGADE R.G.A. v. 58th BRIGADE R.G.A. HEADQUARTERS STAFF.

Played at Schlebusch. The 63rd forwards at once attached and after a fine piece of work Sgt. Watson took possession and with a great shot beat the goalie. This stirred up the visiting team and they repeatedly attached the 63rd goal but were unable to beat the indomitable Hobbs who is undoubtedly a great custodian. Sgt. Young again proved an energetic and consistant back and together with Killyea their defensive work was excellent. A further effort by the home forwards in which Barr figured largely terminated in a fine struggle in the visitors goal mouth and again Watson made no mistake in adding another goal.

The 68 H.Q. were playing a good game and their efforts were rewarded through Low, who scored after a clever piece of passing. Early in the second half Sgt. Watson retired through a recurrence of ankle trouble and the Mülheimers still further encouraged, went away with a spurt. Cockeral, getting possession, passed to Wilson who equalized. Everyone was now keen on the decisive goal and Shepherd had bad luck with a difficult shot from an acute angle.

Hilton, Shepherd R. and Dickens worked like trojans. All efforts proved unavailing and the game ended in a draw. The match was clean and thoroughly enjoyed and the return will be looked forward to with pleasure.

SOMETHING TO PLAY FOR.

"THE COLOGNE POST" CRICKET CUP.

ENTER YOUR TEAM AT ONCE.

Now that we have all consumed our hot cross buns and Easter Eggs once more, and recovered from the plethora of sporting happenings that are invariably associathed with that season of the year, the young man's fancy lighty turns to thoughts of cricket.

The hurry-scurry season of football has had a wonderful run. Probably the number of matches played since November 11, could the figures be compiled, would run into thousands and there is not much doubt that many more will yet be played in defiance of the changing season.

But, to get to the point. The time has come when cricket must make its appearance, and everything points to the great summer game claiming an enormous amount of attention in Germany.

Already several clubs have been formed and the secretaries of them are busy making up their fixture lists.

The playing of matches without any definite object in view is apt to become rather tame after a while, however, and the Cologne Post, to add the little incentive that makes so much difference to the spirit of competition, has decided to offer a silver cup to be awarded under league rules. It is impossible, in view of the difficulty in estimating the number of teams that will enter, to state at present whether the running of a single league will be practicable or whether it will be necessary to form several leagues for various definite areas.

The competition will be open to all teams, of any formations, and the winners will be awarded twelve miniature cups in addition to the handsome silver cup that will shortly be on view.

Entries should be sent in at once and, if a ground is available, this should be stated. Letters should be addressed to the Sports Editor, The Cologne Post, Cologne.

The rules governing the competition will be published to-morrow.

LONDON D.A.C. SPORTS.

INTERESTING EVENT AT WESTOVER.

These sports were held in beautiful weather at Westhoven on Wednesday, by kind permission of the Commanding Officer, Lt.Col. Wheatley, R.F.A.

Major General Sir S.J.B. Lawford K.C.B., the G.O.C. the Division, and Brigadier General L.C.L. Oldfield C.M.G., D.S.O., the C.R.A., both attended, and the officers and men of the column were present in full strength. There was the keenest competition between the sections, but fortunately for the general interest, the prizes were fairly evenly divided.

It was notworthy that far more of the prizes were won by original column men who are awaiting demobilization than by the reinforcements. The keeness of these men to whom we shall soon be saying "Farewell" was a very pleasant feature of the proceedings. Serious events interspersed with humourous races, such as the boat race with G.S. wagon poles and a tub race. Unfortunately the tubs failed to carry their passengers.

The mules, which were the centre of attraction in most events, entered fully into the spirit of the affair, but at times appeared to be a little uncertain as to the direction of the winning post.

Capt. W.A. Bennett acted most efficiently as chief ring steward. A most pleasant afternoon was concluded by the distribution of prizes by Brig. Gen. Oldfield.

RESULTS:

100 Yards Race: 1, Dvr. Fitzgeorge (No. 1 Sec); 2, Dvr A. Head (No. 1 Sec).

Mule race (British) 1, Dvr. Hider (No. 1 sec); 2, Dvr. Joiner (S.A.A. sec).

Tug of war: No. 2 Section beat No. 1 Section

S.A.A. Section beat Headquarters. Final. No. 2 beat S. A. A. Wrestling on bareback, mules (Indians): S.A.A. beat No. 2 Section and No. 1 Section.

440 Yards flat race: 1, Dvr. Head (No. 1 Sec); 2, Gnr. Partridge (S.A.A.), Relay race: S.A.A. Secton.

Sack race: 1, Dvr. Holmes (No. 2 Sec); 2, Dvr. Bayforth (No. 1 Sec); 3, Gnr. Day (No. 2 sec).

Mule race (Indians): 1, Dvr. Monchi (No. 2 Sec) 2, Dvr: Peatum (S.A.A.).

Officers Jumping: Capt. F. J. Tayler (No. 1 Sec).

Hurdles (dismounted 120 Yards): 1, S S. Markwell (No. 2 Sec.; 2, Dvr. Fritzgeorge (No. 1 Sec); 3, Dvr. Head (No. 1 Sec);

Wrestling on bareback mules (British), No. 2 Section.

Boat race: Heatquarters.

V.C. Race: Dvr. Waldron (S.A.A.); 2, Lt. Remnant (S.A.A.).

N.C.O s Jumping: Bdr. McCarthy (No. 2 Sec).

Boat race: 1, Dvr. O'Brien (No. 2 Sec.; Dvr. Waldron (S.A.A.);

Tub race: 1, Dr. Brown (No. 2 Sec); 2, Gnr Woodford (S.A.A.).

Officers Mule Race: Capt. H. J. Tayler (No. 1 Sec).

WHITE v. BLUE.

"D" COMPANY, 52 RIFLE BRIGADE.

White (13 and 14 Platoons) v. Blue (15 and 16 Platoons). Played at Königshoven on Friday.

"Whites" immediately began pressing hotly and had several good chances of scoring. However, the "Blues" rallied, and carried the ball to the other end for Pullen to score after ten minutes play. Bucked up by their success, the "Blues" again swept towards their opponents goal mouth, and Pullen after a short run, netted once more.

Then followed a period of good, brisk football on both sides, until at last Cpl. Pales of the "Whites" was rewarded with a well earned goal.

On resuming, Cpl. Robertson put the finishing touch to a pretty piece of work on the right, thus increasing the "Blues" lead. "Whites" tried hard to respond, but failed to pierce the stubborn defence of 15 and 16. Just before the end, Cpl. Robertson added another for his side, charging both ball and gealie into the net. Result:— "Blue" 4, "White" 1.

10th v 6th WEST KENTS.

At Wahn a very interesting and fast game between these friendly rivals of the same Regt. took place; the result was 3—2 for the 10th Bn.

A stiff wind blowing across the field rather hampered movements, but from the blowing of the whistle, the ball was kept mostly in the 6th Bn's half. The score at half time was 3—0 in favour of the 10th. But from the change over the 6th, who were the heavier, began to exert pressure. From a breakaway, their score went up, followed by another after a scrimmage in front of goal.

Two men have been fined £5 each for loitering for betting purposes at Liverpool Police Athletic Ground.

NO GERMAN-OWNED RACE HORSES.

Lord Jersey has given notice to move a resolution at the annual meeting of the Jockey Club, barring entries of horses, for races run under the Club's rules, which are the property of German, Austrian, Hungarian, Bulgarian or Turkish subjects or in which such persons have any interest.

RACQUETS.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS CHAMPIONSHIPS.

The semi-finals for the Public Schools racquets championships at Queen's Club, on Thursday, resulted as follows: — Marlborough beat Winchester 17—16, 5—15, 15—12, 15—5, 11—15, 9—15, and 15—10. Malvern beat Tonbridge 15—5, 15—4, 10—15, 17—15.

SPORTING ROYALTY.

PRINCE OF WALES ELECTED MEMBER OF THE JOCKEY CLUB.

At the annual financial meeting of the Jockey Club at Newmarket on Thursday, Lord Jersey announced that H.R.H. the Prince of Wales had expressed his willingness to become a member of the club. The Prince was formally elected by acclamation.

FOOTBALL IN ENGLAND.

LONDON COMMAND v. ALDERSHOT COMMAND.

At New Cross on Thursday, a thousand spectators in a downpour of rain watched the match between London Command and Aldershot Command. The ground was in a terribly muddy condition, but the game was fast nevertheless.

In the first half Turnbull and Brown each scored for Aldershot, while after the interval, within fifteen minutes, Thompson scored twice for the Londoners.

BOXING.

At the Ring on Thursday, Johnny Shepherd of Bow, met Joe Starmer of Kettering in a 20 round contest. After fighting fourteen rounds the referee declared "no contest."

At the Holborn Stadium, in a 20 round contest, Pal. Jones, South Wales, beat Dick Heasman, London, on points. Seaman Arthur Townley beat Sergt. Harry Curzon, Derby, easily, the latter retiring in the 13th round.

Eddie McGoorty at Dublin knocked Tom Gummer out in the second round.

A match has been arranged between Frank Goddard and Joe Becket to be fought at Olympia, London, on 16th June.

BILLIARDS.

In his match against Newman in London on Thursday, Inman made a break of 556.

THEATRE OF WAR CHAMPIONSHIP.

On Thursday, at Aldershot, Salonika defeated Italy at footoall by 5—1. For the winners Killock (2) Simmonds (2) and Fisher were the scorers, while Brown scored Italy's only goal.

LAWN TENNIS.

Heavy rain prevented the continuance of the Lawn Tennis Tournament at Roehampton on Thursday.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

Draughts and Chess.

A letter that appeared in these pages a few days ago, on the subject of a draughts and chess tournament has aroused a good deal of interest. Many correspondents have written subsequent letters asking if the suggestion is likely to bear fruit. If any enthusiast cares to tackle the job of organising such a tournament, I can promise him that the scheme will have adequate publicity in this journal. But, personally, a comfy room and a cheery fire are more conducive to thoughts of a quiet game of chess than the summer-like weather we are enjoying at present

A Derby Sweepstake.

This letter has reached me:

"Could not a Derby sweepstake be organized in the Rhine Army? Tickets, say, 10 marks each, so as to make it open to the rank and file.

I feel sure the boys would welcome it and it could easily be arranged hrough the usual channels. A paragraph in your journal might give the hint to H.Q."

What do other readers think of the idea?

Bonn Amusements.

Many people in Bonn are wondering when there is likely to be a shuffle round with some of the entertainments that are in Rhineland now. There is a large number of troops in and about Bonn and it is complained that the variety of the shows available is not nearly so striking as the excellence of them.

THE RAMBLER.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

Saturday, April 26th, 1919.

Surface wind between West and North-West about 15 m.p.h, cloudy with occasional showers and brighter intervals with good visibility. Still cool, but temperature somewhat higher than yesterday.

OFFICERS SPORTS CLUB.

ITS OBJECTS AND ACTIVITIES.

The advent of the much discussed officers' sports club is almost an accomplished fact. At all events, negotiations have advanced to the extent that a broad outline of the prospective activities of the club is now available. This embraces such definite information as the full designation of the club, the date of its opening, the amount of subscription fees as well as many other items of interst.

A grand inauguration of the club will take place on May 1st at the Lawn Tennis Club, Lindenthal. All officers, whether members or not, are invited to attend and bring lady friends. Refreshments and tea will be provided without charge. A band and pipers will play during the afternoon, when the tennis courts will be available for play.

It is hoped that the Army Commander will be present.

COMPOSITION AND SUBSCRIPTION.

The club is to be known as "The Army of the Rhine Officers Sports Club," and its main object in life, judging by the ambitious programme it is setting out to perform, is to concern itself with every kind of summer pastime that gladdens the hearts of sportsmen. But this association will not merely be administrative, as many people seemed to presume when the project was mooted. Grounds and equipment will be provided by the officials for the general use of members.

Ten shillings a month will entitle an officer resident within five miles of the Cologne cathedral, to full membership while our country cousins, or those officers outside that radius, will be charged only five shillings. Officers residing within the radius may join in any one section for a fee of 5/- per mensem.

The Club will comprise the following sections:

No. 1, The Lawn Tennis, Squash racquets & Badminton Club.

No. 2, The Cricket Club.

No. 3, The Polo and Boating and Swimming Club.

No. 4, The Golf Club.

LAWN TENNIS.

There are 18 courts and a Club House situated at Stadtwald, Lindenthal. A professineal has been engaged and ball boys can be hired. Racquets and balls will be obtainable on purchase; balls can be hired, and a very few racquets will also be kept for hire. There are also four courts at Flora Gardens, near the Zoological Gardens, Cologne. These courts as well at those at Lindenthal will be available for play on 1st May.

No charge will be made to members for the use of the courts, beyond the member's subscrip on. Visitors may use the Courts on payment of a fee of 5 marks.

Arrangements are being considered for the construction of Squash Racquet and Badminton Courts.

CRICKET.

The Cricket ground and Pavilion are situated at Stadtwald, Lindenthal. A professional has been engaged and practice nets will be provided. Bats, pads, gloves etc. will be obtainable from the professional. A list of fixtures will be arranged. The ground will be open on May 1st.

POLO.

Two Polo grounds will be available for members on the Exerxier Platz at Merheim (E. of the Rhine). Balls will be provided on the ground. The grounds will be open on May 1st. And an expert polo player expresses the opinion that polo players would journey from all parts of the Empire to play on such magnificent ground.

SWIMMING, BOATING ETC.

A Boat Club House, and a floating swimming bath have been towed to a selected position half-way between the Hohenzollern Bridge and the Pontoon Bridge on West Bank of Rhine. A second Boat Club House will be acquired if needed. These will be available for members on 1st May, except that one Boat House will be reserved for Germans on Thursdays. Three rowing boats (in addition to the existing racing boats) have been acquired by the Club for the use of members. Teas will be provided.

GOLF.

The Cologne Golf Club is now open for the use of members.

Situation 600 yds. West of Rodenkirchen. Station 900 yds. from tram line. There are 9 holes. From 1st May, golf clubs and balls will be on sale at the Club House and repairs will be carried out. Teas etc. will be provided.

Two professionals will be available for lessons. Times for lessons should be booked in advance. No charge for playing will be made to members beyond their subscription. Visitors will be charged a green fee of 5 marks.

Subscriptions will be paid in advance, for one or for as many months as desired, to:— Major Hon. P. Bowes, Lyon, Secretary, Officers Sports Club, attd. General Staff (Education), H.Q., British Army of the Rhine, Cologne.

A receipt will be given by the Secretary. This receipt will take the place of a membership ticket, and will be produced when required.

At a meeting of the Ascot Parish Council a motion was carried without dissent that Sunday golf on the Royal Ascot Club's links should be allowed. Hitherto the club, which plays on land controlled by the racecourse authorities, has only been permitted to play on week-days, and on an application being made that this restriction should be removed Lord Churchill said he would agree if the Parish Council was in favour.

"THE LONDON DIVISIONAL RACE MEETING"

will take place at the
EXERZIER PLATZ, HOHENBERG,
just East of COLOGNE
on the 28th and 29th April.

First race on each day at 14-00 hrs.

A special service of buses and trams will run to the course on each day, leaving Cöln-Deutz Station from 12-00 hrs. returning after the last race.

Free teas will be supplied for Officers and O.Rs. if previous application for tickets is made to London Divisonal 'Q.' There will be a public refreshment tent for Officers on the Course, and Wet and Dry canteen for O.Rs.

SHROPSHIRES ARRIVE HOME.

PUBLIC WELCOME.

The Earl of Powis, as Lord Lieutenant of Shropshire, gave a public welcome at Shrewsbury to the 1st King's (Shropshire) Light Infantry on their arrival from Cologne after serving in France and Flanders all through the war, and commented on the fact that the battalion had not been stationed in Shropshire since 1807. Lieutenant-Colonel Cautley was in command. The town was en fête crowds lining the route from the railway station to the square where the welcome was accorded.

WAR MEMORIALS.

MERCIER SELECTS A CHAPEL.

A committee, including Lord Edmund Talbot, M. P., Sir Arthur Downes, and Sir H. C. Munro, has been formed to provide a lasting memorial of English sympathy with Belgium. It will take the form of a memorial chapel, the site of which is being selected by Cardinal Mercier, and any surplus out of the fund, for which it is hoped £2,000 will be raised, will be devoted to the restoration of the ruined church to which the chapel will be attached. A church in Lierre has been mentioned as suitable. In its graveyard rest the bodies of a number of British soldiers, the first, it is believed, who fell in the defence of Antwerp. Canon Sprankling, rector of the Roman Catholic Church at Weybridge, Surrey, is treasurer of the fund.

TABLET AND ATHLETIC GROUND.

The officials and staff of the Metropolitan Railway Company have decided, with the approval of their directors, to raise a fund for establishing a memorial to fallen men of the company's service. The scheme is to include the erection of a permanent tablet on the Baker-street Station, the laying out and equipping of an athletic ground for the use of the staff, and the building of a club or institute. In respect of the proposed athletic ground, the directors have offered to place at the men's disposal 13 acres of land at Wembley, already partly arranged as a sports ground. The promoters hope that shareholders and regular travellers on the line will assist the fund, in aid of which Mr. George Robey is giving a concert at the Palladium on the evening of May 11, and quote the war record of the staff, which is 1,200 with the forces and 127 fallen.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

We are informed by the authorities that for all newspapers sent to the United Kingdom, and to all places outside zones of the Army of the Rhine and the British troops in France and Flanders, the postage must be prepaid at the rate of ½d. for two ounces. So when you "send it home," please affix a stamp to each copy of The Cologne Post.

Clitheroe Health Committee has resolved, "viewing with alarm the increasing amount of sickness in the district and in the country generally," to urge the Government to liberate more whisky.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

SPIRIT OF REVENGE.

We note a change in the attitude of the German socialist press towards the question of the new domination o certain states. What was hitherto a decided answer in the negative is now more or less a weak argument that should these provinces be taken away from them, there will always be the possibility of future war. Indeed one can see in their statements a faint intention of using the controversy as a means of stirring up the spirit of revenge. The Vorwärts states that "Germany is prepared to give up territories which do not want to remain within her domain, and also to take financial responsibilities for the rebuilding of devastated areas in the west. But the question is, not as to whether Germany shall make sacrifices, but whether the extent of these sacrifices shall be fixed by a dictate of the victors or by negotiations.

Socialist Desires.

"What we socialists desire from Peace can be expressed shortly. We claim a Peace which will enable us to fight against any future desires of revanche. But this will not be possible if German provinces are placed against their will under foreign domination, or if unbearable burdens are imposed on the German people. A peace which respects the right of self-determination and the limits of physical resistance must be the aim of negotiations, and the latter will prove whether or not the aims can be attained. In any case it is certain that they will not be reached without negotiations."

A Scandalous Note.

The independent socialists of Germany are very bitter against the policy adopted by some of the German authorities. In a recent issue of The Freiheit, the official organ of the party, the actions of Count Brockdorff-Rantzau with regard to the despatch of notes, are very strongly criticized. It says that "The exchange of notes illustrates the terrible public exposure to which the German Government is subjected. On General Nudant's invitation, Count Brockdorff-Rantzau answered by a scandalous note, which must have been considered as a provocation in the Entente countries. The result was a reprimand, which is specially underlined by the ironical representation of the whole affair by Reuter. The actual answer of Count Brockdorff-Rantzau is a retreat on the whole line, a retreat which is for the diplomatic ability of the minister of Foreign affairs. Meanwhile, the reprimand does not seem to have been firm enough, as Count Brockdorff-Rantzau still attaches to the sending of German Peace delegates "conditions" which are quite ridiculous in their unmannerliness. If the leaders of our foreign policy do not understand how fatally they are prejudicing the German interests by their provocating and clumsy behaviour, they should at least learn to understand that they make buffoons of themselves by their continual exposures and give the whole world the opportunity to laugh at the representatives of the German Republic. If the whole Peace negotiations are conducted with the same discernment and ability as is shown at present, the German people can be prepared for a nice result."

"The Kaiser did not want War."

The memoirs of Tirpitz, late admiral-in-chief of the German navy, and promoter of the U-boat campaign, are to be published at an early date by Köhler, at Leipzig. It is understood that many astounding revelations will be made in this new book—revelations which, it is hoped, will enable us to form a much better opinion of the U-boat promoter than we at present hold.

"I think it is my duty," says the author, "to write my own memoirs, because I can prove that our politic l economy was neither decayed nor obsolete, but had all the capacities for progress, and that the political fable of an inconsiderate and war-desiring [illegible]cracy being responsible for this war is not true.

"The Kaiser did not desire war; on the contrary he always endeavoured to prevent it, after among perceived the danger. The war was due to a certain linking of unfavourable circumstances which produced such a situation the leaders were unable to surmount. If, in my apprehension, I represent the activities of people still living, I am far from upbraiding them with unfair intentions or with any fault."

BISLEY DIFFICULTIES.

Arrangements are in progress for the Bisley rifle meeting to be held in July, but although the Army Council has sanctioned the meeting the officials of the National Rifle Association, it is stated, are finding it very difficult to get ammunition, markers, and tents.

REPATRIATION OVER-SEAS.

For the interest of those concerned who shortly hope to be demobilized it is stated that all officers and men, other than members of Dominion and Colonial Forces, who came from abroad after January 1, 1914, and joined the British Army, should write to the Commandant. Repatriation Centre, Morn Hill Camp, Winchester.

Army Form Z 7 will be sent them if they have not yet claimed repatriation, or Army Form Z 45 [application for a deferred passage if dispersed under group 45 (a)] if they have claimed repatriation but not yet received notification that their claim to passage has been approved.

The appropriate form should be filled in on receipt and returned to Winchester as early as possible.

IMPERIAL WAR MUSEUM.

EXTENSIVE CATALOGUE.

One of the greatest and most interesting memorials of the Great War is undoubtedly the Imperial War Museum, which even yet is rapidly extending its catalogue of war souvenirs.

There are, Major ffoulkes, secretary of the museum, told The Daily News, the other day, 52,000 exhibits already in hand. This number includes trophies captured from the enemy, but does not include any of the great collections of representative war material which the Navy, Army, and Air Force are all eager to see preserved in some worthy and accessible place. Nor does it include the tens of thousands of photographs which themselves constitute, perhaps, the finest record of the war.

Where is this vast mass of historic objects to be housed? The question of temporary accommodation is, as Major ffoulkes pointed out, more pressing than that of a permanent home, which has already been reported upon by a Ministerial Committee. If public interest in the scheme is to be maintained, there should be an exhibition of the greater part of the mementoes within, at any rate, six months of the declaration of peace. But it seems impossible to discover any satisfactory centre.

The White City at Shepherd's Bush and the Earl's Court exhibition buildings are sadly dilapidated. The Crystal Palace is now a great demobilisation centre. Most munition buildings, which might be removed to some spot like Hyde Park, are crammed with stores. New permanent buildings could not be got ready for some years. Ordinary buildings are not of much use when you want to exhibit, for example, five different types of tanks, each weighing close on 30 tons. And in our climate the exhibition, in the open air, of guns, many of which have delicate machinery attached, has serious disadvantages.

Nevertheless, it is felt that a great effort ought to be made to show the nation this most wonderful of historic possessions during the coming summer.

Some of the War Museum's treasures, selected almost at random from the things now practically ready to be shown, are:

1,400 pictures of the war by the official corps of British artists.
A collection of Navy models, from trawler to battleship, worth between ten and fifteen thousand pounds.
600 war toys of all nations.
21,000 war posters.
The original autograph signals of Sir Roger Keyes at Zeebrugge ("St. George for England"), and Sir David Beatty, ordering the hauling down of the German flag by the High Seas Fleet.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

The Editor, in publishing letters from Correspondents, will use his own discretion, and if necessary, limit the publishing of correspondence on any subject whatever. It must be understood, however that he is not responsible for the views stated.

All communications for this column should be brief and to the point, and preference will be given to those which bear the writers' signatures for publication. No letter will be published unless accompanied by rank name, and unit of sender, which are needed for the purpose of reference.

Many letters of a perverse nature have reached the office, and the Editor wishes to point out that these only cause waste of time both to the writer and the Editor himself. Letters of this nature will not be published.

QUESTION OF PRICES.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.— Sorry to trouble you, but my friends and I cannot understand "S.G.P.'s" letter to you on the above subject. He says that a "Goerz ¼ plate folding camera costs 450 Marks" and that "by a simple arithmetic sum you will find it would cost you about £9 at the present rate of exchange."

I have checked the above calculation and found it quite correct and simple. But "S.G.P." goes on to say: "But this £9 is worth close on £23 to them (the Germans), for you must remember the mark was worth about 1/— in pre-war days."

This is the sum which is not so simple evidently as "S.G.P." finds it. I have checked his solution and find it absolute nonsense, to say the least of it. He has confused his terms of proportion and simply mixed up German pre-war days with now-a-days, without mixing up our own pre-war days with now-a-days so that his result is very far removed from accuracy.

So far as prices are concerned, that is no business of ours. If I had an article to sell I should certainly try to obtain the very best price I possibly could whether I sold it to an Englishman, a German, or a Chink; and that is certainly what shopkeepers were doing in Blighty the last time I was home. If my prices did not suit certain individuals I should expect them to buy elsewhere or do without, exactly as I have to do in Blighty. But, by the way, why buy these expensive German cameras? Why not encourage our own people at home?

The "simple" sum is this? If in 1914 a mark was worth 1/— what is the value of 450 marks in 1919 when one mark is worth only about 4½d.

Your correspondent's solution is that it depends upon whether you are a German or an Englishman. If you are an Englishman living in Cologne, £9 is £9 only, but if you are a German, £9 is £ 23. If "S.G.P." were correct, why not, then, supposing you have £9,000, become a naturalised German in Cologne, change all your £9,000 into German money, when it would be immediately worth £23,000, and live happy ever afterwards. Or if you are just a common private, why not arrange with a German to exchange a pound or two every day and split the difference between you? Money for nothing isn't it?

P.S. In working out these problems don't forget that in 1914 the Germans gave us 180 marks for £9; to-day they give us 450.

(This is the last letter dealing with this subject which will be published.—Ed.)

Answers to Correspondents.

[The flow of correspondence, since the Cologne Post was instituted, has been enormous, and the Editor would like to point out that only a certain number of the innumerable questions can be answered in each issue. Should any inquirer find that his question has not yet been answered, he can have the assurance that it will receive attention in due course, and the answer will appear accordingly. Many questions have been received which could be answered much easier by the Adjutant of the unit concerned, and all such cases which affect the unit commander must be taken to him and not sent here. — Ed.]

ITALIAN PREMIER'S SOLITARY JOURNEY.

OIL ON ADRIATIC WATERS.

UNITED STATES AND EGYPT.

MURDER OF CURT EISNER'S ASSASSIN.

SMOOTHING INTERNATIONAL DIFFICULTIES.

OIL ON ADRIATIC WATERS.

The announcement by Signor Orlando that all the Italian delegates would leave Paris on Thursday was fortunately not carried out literally. Signor Orlando left to consult the Italian Parliament but his colleagues remain at Paris and there is so far no rupture with the Allies.

Before his departure Signor Orlando, accompanied by Baron Sonnino, had another meeting with President Wilson, Mr. Lloyd George and M. Clemenceau. Throughout the discussion all present displayed the strongest desire to reach a satisfactory solution of the problem under consideration. The heads of the American, British and French Governments expressed to Signor Orlando the hope that the Italian Parliament would also assist in arriving at such settlement. The meeting took place at Mr. Lloyd George's residence in the Rue Nitot.

EXPEDIENCY OF MODERATION.

The tension of Wednesday over the Adriatic question seems to have relaxed somewhat. The Times, in a leading article, says: — "It would be premature to say that all danger of a deadlock has been evaded, but it is greatly lessened and it has been postponed. We feel a stronger trust than ever that the countrymen of Cavour have not forgotten the importance to Italy of commanding, as she has commended from her re-birth, the moral sympathy and approbation of the democracies of the world. The action of the Italian Premier in the course of the day shows that he is sensible, as we felt sure that he would prove to be, of the immeasurable mischief which might be done by an ill-considered step.

"The postponement of his departure from afternoon to evening and the meeting of 'the four' lend a very different significance to his return to Rome from that which was widely attributed to it yesterday and which it might have possessed had he quitted Paris without further debate. It is non explained that apart altogether from the subject of the Peace Conference there are many other questions which require his presence at Rome. These things show at least a very marked and very welcome relaxation of the tension which existed in Paris on Wednesday. Even in regard to a settlement of the Adriatic problem the Prime Minister's presence in Rome may prove to be helpful. Signor Orlando has been in contact with the fundamental facts of the European situation and of the world situation. If he lays them before his country he should be able to convince it of the expediency of moderation."

MEDIATION AND ASSISTANCE.

The Daily Telegraph says that "though we are faced with definite interruption in the work of the European settlement, let us say at once that such an interruption can only be temporary. The position is such that a final and formal withdrawal of any one of the allies from association with the rest in the supreme business of our time is a thing not to be believed in or conceived. It is denied by the past, by the present and by the farthest fore-seeable future and in saying so we refer not so much to matters of sentiment as to facts and necessities with which the policy of all countries must reckon. Because of these things we believe that an accommodation will be reached and it will be noted that a way out of the difficulty was under discussion at the moment when President Wilson issued his statement on Wednesday.

"Plainly the part imposed upon the French and British Government is one of unprecedented delicacy and anxiety. They stand between, firm in friendship for both controversialists, united to either of them by ties not indentical in character but equal in strength, understanding both and sympathising with both. That is their real, their obvious position. It imposes upon their leaders the task of mediation and active assistance which they have unquestionably done and are doing their utmost to fulfil."

GERMAN OFFICIAL DOCUMENTS DESTROYED.

Kaufsky, the German Independent Socialist, who has been engaged for several months in investigating the secret documents in the German Foreign Office and has just concluded his task, has been interviewed by the Echange Telegraph Company's Berlin correspondent. Kautsky says that his examination has thrown an interesting light on German history, particularly during the years immediately preceeding 1914. It was originally intended to publish the documents, but Erzberger had now announced they would not be made public. Kautsky stated that certain documents which might be peculiarly compromising were missing, having been destroyed before the revolution.

He was very surprised at the German Government's attitude in prohibiting publication of the documents and pointed out that such refusal would have a very bad effect on the Allied Governments and perpetuate suspicion of Germany's good faith by revealing that the revolutionary Government is prepared to shield Germany's old rulers.

UNITED STATES AND EGYPTIAN UNREST.

NOTE TO HIGH COMMISSIONER

The Foreign Office yesterday issued the text of an official Note which was communicated on 22nd. April to General Sir E. Allenby, his Majesty's Special High Commissioner for Egypt, by the United States Minister in Cairo. It is as follows: —

"I have the honour to state that I have been directed by my Government to acquaint you with the fact that the President of the United States recognises the British protectorate over Egypt which was proclaimed by his Majesty's Government on the 18th December 1914. In according this recognition the President must of necessity reserve for further discussion the details thereof, along with the question of the modification of any rights belonging to the United States which may be entailed by this decision.

In this connection I am desired to say that the President and the American people have every sympathy with the legitimate aspirations of the Egyptian people for a further measure of self-government, but that they view with regret any effort to obtain the realisation thereof by a resort to violence."

THE FIGHT FOR MUNICH.

According to a telegram from Berlin to the Köln sche Volkszeitung the shops are still closed in Munich, and domiciliary visits, which are the pretext for looting and extortion, are still going on.

Officers who enlist in the Red Guard receive 15,000 marks at once and 3,000 marks monthly, non-commissioned officers 3,000 marks and 1,000 marks monthly. It is expected that on the 1st May a Soviet Republic will be proclaimed at Nuremberg.

LEIPZIG FAIR IN FURTHER DANGER.

The Leipzig council of workmen has addressed an ultimatum to the Saxon Government declaring that if martial law is not abolished on Sunday the workmen will cancel the guarantee they gave for the quiet development of the Leipzig fair.

LAID UP OVER FOUR YEARS.

Hamburg, 25th April. The Imperator, at one time the biggest vessel in the world, leaves Hamburg on the 30th April for Brest, to embark American troops for home. The Imperator has been laid up at Hamburg throughout the war.

2nd HIGHLAND LIGHT INFANTRY REACHES ALDERSHOT.

A most interesting ceremony was witnessed at Aldershot on Thursday, when the 2nd Battalion of the Highland Light Infantry had their colours decorated with wreaths of laurel in memory of all ranks of the battalion who had died during the war. The battalion only reached Aldershot the night previously, a little over 100 strong from the Western front, and was played into barracks by the bands of the brigade. The men paraded under the command of Lieut. Colonel Telfer Smollet, D.S.O., M.C., and received the colours as they were borne on parade with a general salute. Mrs. Graham, wife of Colonel J.C. Graham, D.S.O., and Mrs. Telfer Smollett fastened the wreaths to te tops of the colour staffs with silk ribbons. The battalion then saluted the colours, and afterwards marched past.

PLENIPOTENTIARY MESSENGERS

One of the members of the German delegation to Versailles, viz. Plenipotentiary Professor Schücking, has made the following statement to a representative of the Berliner Zeitung.

"I hope that within the next weeks an acceptable peace will be concluded, even though the conference about details may last for months. In any case the plenipotentiaries will have sufficient powers to sign the treaty of Peace, but of course the National Assemply will then still have to approve the Peace contract. This reservation will certainly be appended to the signature."

REPORTED MURDER OF EISNER'S MURDERER.

Bamberg, 25th April. News has been received from a Government official at Munich that Count Arco, who shot Curt Eisner, the late President of the Bavarian Republic, was dragged out of the hospital and brutally killed by Red Guards.

BRITISH SUBJECTS SHOT AT RIGA.

From Berlin comes the assertion that amongst the 6,000 persons shot at Riga by the Bolshevists are several British subjects.

INTERNED GERMANS LEAVE NEW ZEALAND.

FATAL COLLISION BETWEEN AEROPLANE AND TRAP.

CADET COMMITTED FOR TRIAL.

At Sleaford, Lincs, yesterday, Flight cadet J. C. Chater, was charged with the manslaughter of Capt. Robin Dunn and Lt. Pegg. On the 13th March, Cadet Chater was practising flying and swooping down very low over a road, failed to notice a pony trap in which the two deceased officers were driving. The aeroplane dashed into the trap and the two officers sustained fatal injuries.

Accused said he was diving at a haystack and did not see the trap in which the officers were driving. He admitted that he had signed an order not to dive near roads.

The magistrate said accused had shown reckless disregard for orders, and committed him to the assizes.

Accused was allowed out on bail in his own recognisances.

FUTURE ARRANGEMENTS FOR CIVIL FLYING.

PROTECTIVE MEASURES.

Speaking at the Criterion yesterday afternoon, General Sykes, the Controller of civil aviation said that in the five days of Easter flying 912 people has been successfully carried, without mishap.

Civil aviation, which is now almost at hand, opens up gigantic prospects and possibilities comparable only to what happened when railways were first introduced. Dealing with some of the more important aspects of aviation and the obvious need for stringent regulations, General Sykes said that aviation, being independent of frontiers, is an international affair. The first step therefore has been to frame an international code. As the result of the numerous conferences held at Paris a draft convention has been drawn up and on these the regulations which will govern civil flying at home have been based.

Every possible safeguard will be imposed. Before being tested as to their technical capability all pilots, navigators and engineers will have to pass a searching medical test. Any person wishing to fly any aircraft carrying either passengers or goods or plying for hire must first obtain a certificate that he is qualified and licensed to do so. Every aircraft must be registered. It must bear an official registration number and distinguishing mark of nationality. Periodical inspections will be held. Aircraft will be allowed to leave the ground and to land only at certain aerodromes which have been approved and licensed.

For purposes of national secrecy, there are certain specified prohibited areas over which no aircraft may fly. Precautions have also been taken against the landing of undesirables from the air and for the prevention of smuggling.

OVER ONE MILLION OUT-OF-WORKS.

DEMOBILIZED TAKE HEED.

It is officially notified that the numbers drawing out-of-work donation during the week ended 11th April were as follow:

	Civilians	H.M.Forces	Totals
Men	217,538	347,895	565,433
Women	457,446	917	458,363
Boys	26,093		26,093
Girls	30,134		30,134
Totals	731,211	348,812	1,080,023

The number of policies lodged shows an increase on the previous week of a little over 2,000. The policies lodged, when analysed by industries, show that the rise is in uninsured industries, such as transport and textiles, and the fall is in the insured industries, such as engineering and iron-founding.

There is an increase in unemployment at Liverpool, Manchester and Bristol, and a decrease at Leeds and Nottingham. Unemployment among boys and girls under 18 years of age shows a reduction.

AUSTRIAN PEACE REVELATIONS.

Berlin. The Prague newspaper Narodni Politica relates how the telephone line from Vienna to Berlin was systematically tapped during 1918 by Czech patriots. On October 28th Berlin called Vienna to ask, "What news?" The reply was a surprise. Vienna said, "We are concluding peace." Berlin queried the word "peace" and received the reply: "On account of the untenable situation." Immediately afterwards Vienna called Berlin and communicated what they had heard concerning the journey of the Czech delegates to Switzerland. The line Vienna—Berlin was then cut by a Prague postal official, so that at the critical moment of the revolution communication between Vienna and Berlin would be impossible.—Reuter.

LECTURE FOR COLOGNE TROOPS

Lord Morris, at the request of the War Office, will shortly lecture to the British troops in Cologne on "How the British Empire Saved the World."

ACTION AGAINST SIR E. CARSON.

The first case on the jury lists for the Easter Law Sittings in Dublin was that of Davy v. Carson in which Sir Edward Carson, M.P., is defendant. Major Davy was a candidate at the last election in Belfast, and it is alleged that Sir. Edward Carson, in the course of electioneering speeches, made libellous references to him. The case opened on Friday.

VISIT OF UNITED STATES NAVAL SECRETARY.

HIS BUSY FORTNIGHT.

Naval, Military and civic honours were accorded Mr. Josepnus Daniel, Secretary to the American Navy, on his landing at Dover on Friday afternoon. He crossed the Channel in the United States destroyer "Wickes" which was escorted on its voyage by three destroyers of the Dover patrol and by seaplanes.

As the "Wickes" entered Dover naval harbour a salute was fired by the castle guns and the American vessel dipped her flag in acknowledgment. All the British ships in harbour were manned, the crews cheering lustily. A guard of honour was provided by the Royal Marine Light Infantry with their band, from the Walmer depot. The Port Admiral and others went aboard the "Wickes" and welcomed Mr. Secretary Daniels. As he landed the general salute was given and the band played "The star spangled banner."

Mr. Daniels, in company with Admiral Dampier made a tour of inspection of the Marine Station showing particular interest in the embarkation section through which so many thousands of American troops passed last year.

Accompanied by Mrs. Daniels and Lieut. Daniels the distinguished visitor arrived in London during the evening and was greeted by, among others, the American Ambassador, the American Consul General in London, Admiral Sir Rosslyn Wemyss, Admiral Sir Montague Browning and Sir Alexander Duff, General Hutchinson and General Biddie.

The guard of honour was furnished by the 1st Battalion Coldstream Guards, who paraded with regimental band and colours. As the party left the station they received a very hearty welcome from a large crowd.

Yesterday Mr. Daniels visited the German fleet at Scapa Flow. To-morrow the party will go to Rosyth and after a luncheon at the Admiralty House will visit the Atlantic fleet. Tuesday will be spent at Edinburgh and on Wednesday Mr. and Mrs. Daniels will lunch with the King at Windsor. His stay in this country will end on 5th May when the party will leave Plymouth for Brest in an American destroyer.

NATIONALISATION OF MINES COMMISSION.

THE RETORT COURTEOUS.

At the resumed sitting of the Coal Commission yesterday morning Mr. Harold Cox, the well-known economist, was cross-examined.

Sir Leo Chiozza Money asked him if he were opposed to State ownership of sewers.

Mr. Harold Cox replied: — "I will give you the sewers."

With regard to the coal industries Mr. Cox stated that he would keep the House of Commons out of the question altogether. He said that so far as he was aware the action of the miners throughout the war had been to do the best they could for themselves, regardless of the interests of the community, and that their wages had been increased beyond the increased cost of living.

At the afternoon session Mr. Robert Smillie, President of the Miners Federation, asked that the Marquis of Bute, Earl Dunraven, the Duke of Hamilton, the Duke of Northumberland, Lord Durham, Lord Londonderry, Lord Dyvenor and a representative of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners should be called as witnesses. The chairman agreed.

OVERWORKED DOG'S HOME.

EFFECT OF MUZZLING ORDER.

The rush of dogs to the Dogs' Home at Battersea still continues, and the motor vans that collect the strays from the police-station are hardly able to cope with the number seized. Mr. G. G. S. Rowley, the secretary of the home, has explained the method by which the dogs are destroyed. The dogs are placed in a big truck, the doors are closed, chloroform is sprayed on the dogs, and they become unconscious, in about a second. An engine then starts pumping carbonic acid gas, and death takes place painlessly in less than a minute. As to the carcases, Mr. Rowley stated that the skins go to a contractor, who uses them for different purposes. Good collie skins make fine rugs, and retriever skins become astrachan coats. About 250 dogs are being destroyed daily at Battersea.

HIGH PRICES AND BIG PROFITS.

Commenting on the present high prices of all descriptions of clothing the Times quotes some startling figures from the balance sheets of a well-known firm of Yorkshire spinners and manufacturers.

The profits of this firm for the year before the war broke out amounted to 1,621 pounds.

In the first year of the war the profit reached 24,502 pounds; seconds year, 30,717 pounds; third year, 32,337 pounds and fourth year 39,520 pounds. The average for the four years was thus about 32,000 pounds, representing net profit after paying excess profits duty, super tax and income tax, and in spite of the higher cost of raw material, machinery and repairs.

The excess profits duty alone must have totalled at least 80,000 pounds!

SPRINGBOKS REACHING HOME.

Capetown, 24th April, Contingents of returning South Africans are arriving every other day, Capetown giving itself up to tumultous scenes of welcome. On every occasion the men have been received by the Governor General himself or by some members of the Government. Reuter.

The funeral of Sir Henry Bargrave Deane took place yesterday, at Brookwood.

An announcement appeared in yesterday's Court Circular to the effect that Prince Henry has joined the Military College, Sandhurst.

LIMERICK PASSIVE STRIKE FIZZLING OUT.

COMMITTEE'S PROCLAMATION.

The Limerick strike appears to be collapsing. Yesterday the following proclamation: — "Whereas the question has become a national issue, we hereby call upon all workers who can resume work to-morrow, without a military permit, to do so to-morrow. We further call upon all workers whose daily occupation requires them to procure permits to continue in their refusal."

The effect of this is that there will be no necessity for the crossing of bridges either to go to work or for other purposes and the decision, if carried out by the workers, will mean the re-opening of business in the town.

AUSTRALIANS MARCH THROUGH LONDON.

AEROPLANE ESCORT.

Five thousand picked men of the Australian forces marched through London yesterday in celebration of Anzac day. Along the entire route from Westminster to the city the streets were gaily decorated and crowded with cheering people. The soldiers had an escort of aeroplanes which circled overhead, flying lower than has ever been seen in the city. So low did the planes descend that the roar of the engines sometimes almost drowned the volume of cheering.

At the head of the procession rode the Australian Light Horse, escorting Lt.-Gen. Sir John Monash and his staff. Next came batteries of guns, manned by Australian Field Artillery, these being followed by five divisions of infantry.

The crowd was densest at Australia House in the Strand. Here H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, Colonel of the Guards, took the salute. With him were Prince Albert, Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, Mr. Winston Churchill, Secretary of State for War, the Rt. Hon. S. Hughes, Australian Premier of the Commonwealth, and other Commonwealth Ministers and representatives in London.

At the Mansion House the Lord Mayor of London, Sir Horace B. Marshall, surrounded by many civil dignitaries, took the salute and joined in the ringing cheers which were repeatedly raised.

During the afternoon special performances were given at the theatres, and in the evening the High Commissioner for the Commonwealth held a reception at Australia House.

FLYING THE ATLANTIC.

The Air Ministry reports that weather conditions are decidedly unfavourable for trans-Atlantic flight in either direction.

Major Wood's aeroplane, the Shamrock, which came to grief on its flight from Eastchurch to Ireland, has been returned to Messrs Short's works for reconstruction.

BOYS' BRIGADE DISTINCTIONS.

Among the distinctions won by old members of the Boys' brigade are eleven V.C.'s, thirty D.S.O.'s, 105 M.C.'s, ninety-five D.C.M.'s, and 150 M.M.'s.

The Boys' Brigade has trained over half a million boys. Hundreds of thousands of old boys and old officers have taken an honourable part in the world war, and their early lessons in military drill, obedience and discipline in the brigade have proved of immense value to them. Many of the companies — in London almost all — are now recognised as cadets by the War Office.

MILLIONAIRE'S WILL.

Lord Hillingdon, who died on the 6th April, left a fortune of one million. As far as can be ascertained at present, he bequeaths to his wife a legacy of 2,000 pounds and an annual income of 5,000 pounds, to be increased to 10,000 pounds on the death of his mother. His second son succeeds to the residue of the estate, his elder brother having been killed in the war in 1915.

SIR JULIAN BYNG HONOURED.

The freedom of the Girdlers' Company was conferred yesterday evening on Sir Julian Byng. The investiture was held at the Girdlers Hall, where the General was subsequently entertained to dinner.

In responding to the toast of the "British Forces" he said that the army and the people had become as one during the war. He hoped that never again would the pre-war feeling exist that they were separate parts of our national life.

The Duke of Atholl has written to the Press stating that he has been asked to revive the Scottish Horse as an integral part of the new Territorial Force.

LONDON STOCK EXCHANGE.

A much more cheerful tone obtained in the House, due to the prospects of an agreement being arrived at over the Fiume dispute. Gilt edged securities were firm, tax compounded four per cent War Loan stock being in strong demand. Italian Rentes had a much better tone and were finally quoted two points higher. French Rentes remained weak, in consequence of a rise in the rate to 28.48 per pound sterling. The Russian group met with renewed speculative demand and advanced still further. There was a decided recovery in all groups, yesterday's lower range of quotations attracting fresh buyers. Argentine rallied on receipt of the report that the dock transport labourers had resumed work.

MILITARY TRAINING IN SCHOOLS.

War brings inevitable reaction, and reaction assumes many diverse forms. The study of these is a study in psychology. To-day we deal not with a philosophy but with a small symptom of reaction.

During this week the National Union of Teachers has held a conference at Cheltenham, and various important resolutions have been passed. One of these, we understand, has been directed against military training of pupils in our English schools. We doubt the wisdom of this resolution and the policy which has promoted it. There have been schoolmasters who even before 1914 strongly and conscientiously objected to any training of their scholars which was in its character military, but we feel certain that this class has grown in numbers since war emerged from a vague fear to a stern reality. It is the horror of war and all its works that has strengthened the case of the schoolmasters. Now warfare is one of the world's greatest tragedies. There must be few sane men who can now listen to essayist or orator who declaims on its refining influence. War is the inveterate enemy of moral and spiritual ideals. Yet do not let us in our antipathy to war forget that its gory fingers have spelt out lessons for mankind. What are these? It is too early to attempt a complete answer, but it seems to us that war has taught us a new gospel of fitness, a civic ideal of discipline, and a national warning against unpreparedness. A man may nurse his wrath against army life, but no man can deny that army training, however irksome it may have been, has given to us a new view of physical health. Service under arms has so strengthened and hardened men that they have often defied untold rigours of campaigning. The training of camp and battlefield has shown the wonderful possibilities of the human body. Almost all who have served their King and country have attained new physical health. There is a gospel in fitness. Who forgets Lord Roberts' reply to a friend who doubted the veteran's ability to stand the strain of the South African war: — "I have been keeping myself fit." Fitness may be gained at most times of life; but it is most fully gained in youth, and it is most naturally begun in schooldays. It may be argued that physical instructions need not be military in character.

Our reply is that unmilitary instruction often fails to reach a proper standard of efficiency and cannot ensure uniformity in all schools. Our best guarantee of a worthy training is the aegis of army authority.

There is the further lesson of discipline. One of the speakers at the teacher's conference is reported to have said that "the young people at this time were out of hand and in a difficult frame of mind." We gather from various reports that there is little exaggeration in this statement, and it means that there is amongst young people a lack of discipline. Now discipline is undoubtedly the offspring of military training, and it can well be won without bringing one step nearer to us the bogey of militarism. There is little fear that militarism will ever gain converts in England — she has suffered too sorely in her battle against this dragon of Teutonism. It may be possible to find discipline in more indirect ways than these of military training. Some have found it in the playing fields, some in the pursuit of learning, some in the marketplace. But all cannot find it in such ways. It is reasonable, therefore, that in every school there should be the apparatus and inspiration of a virtue that dignifies and strengthens a people.

The last lesson is national, it is that of preparedness. We have faith in a League of Nations that will spring out of the dying embers of a world conflagration, a League that will vanquish war. But it is well to remember that the temple of Peace is not yet in our midst. It is a beauteous edifice that can not be erected in a day. We do no injustice if we give to our youth training that will make for health and good citizenship, and at the same time make easier a further duty which, pray God, will never more be needed — the defence of our Motherland.

EDGAR ALLAN POE.

In The Cologne Post of yesterday the leading article dealt with the Soldier and his Books, and although no definite generalization was reached it was suggested that many men are interested in literary classics. We have felt for a considerable time that more faith and enterprise might have been shown by the leaders responsible for our recreation. Why should it be taken for granted that soldiers find their greatest and almost invariable happiness in viewing cinema displays and listening to concert parties? These forms of amusement are necessary and must always bulk more largely in our vision than the more serious kinds of entertainment, but we feel sure that if the same advertisement and facilities were given to good lectures on literature, science, and social problems our soldiers would soon display a surprising appreciation of a worthy venture. May we take an illustration which we believe proves our content on? Mr. E.W. Hornung who is known to many of us as the author of Raffles began last night in the Loreley Hall of the Y.M.C.A. a series of "arm-chair talks" on Short Stories and their Writers. For an hour he discoursed on Edgar Allan Poe to an intensely interested audience which entirely filled the lower part of this capacious building. We grant that the Y.M.C.A., and even the British Army of the Rhine, are fortunate in having amongst them an author so well-known in the literary world as Mr. Hornung, and that in him they have an excellent agent in capturing the world of arms for the world of letters. It is good that the attempt has been made and has succeeded so admirably. Many who have not felt the grim glamour of weird and woeful story-telling will now be drawn to that gloomy and pathetic artist in prose and poetry; and many who have already known him and his vagaries will be lured back to the domination of a master. No one loves Edgar Allan Poe, but no one can escape his thrall. Yet did he not write.—

"It was many and many a year ago,
In a kingdom by the sea,
That a maiden there lived whom you may know
By the name of Annabel Lee.
And this maiden she lived with no other thought
Than to love and be loved by me."

THE ABUNDANT LIFE.

ITS PURPOSE AND HARMONY.

BY A CORRESPONDENT.

It was Dr. Martineau who said "The mere lapse of time is not life; to eat and drink and sleep, to be exposed to the darkness and the light, to pace round in the mill of habit and turn the wheel of wealth; to make reason our bookkeeper and turn though into an instrument of trade—this is not life." In all this, but a poor fraction of the consciousness of humanity is awakened, and the sanctities still slumber which make it most worth while to be. Knowledge, truth, love, beauty, goodness and faith alone give vitality to the mechanism of existence. To the average man, life is merely a struggle for existence without purpose, leading to he knows not whither. With blurred vision he does not see the harmony of life so much as its discord and its strife. In spite of the fact that the modern man is hardly more advanced than the materialistic scientists of the early Victorian era, whose watchword was "The survival of the fittest" and whose aim was the conquest of Nature rather than the attuning of oneself to Nature and living in harmony with her laws. The weak despairing motto of the old epicurean "Let us eat and drink, for to-morrow we die" is adopted by the unthinking millions still, as the line of least resistance, and, we may add, the line of least assistance, too. In every man's heart there is a longing for a fuller life, a more abundant life. Some seek it in one way and some in another, and the majority miss it because they seek it not through Him who said "I came that ye might have life, that ye might have it more abundantly." Rabindranath Tagore in Sadhana expresses some beautiful thoughts on this point. In what manner do we accept this world which is a perfect gift of joy? Have we been able to receive it in our hearts where we keep enshrined things that are of deathless value to us? We are frantically busy making use of the forces of the Universe to gain more power; we feed and we clothe ourselves from its stores; we scramble for its riches and it becomes to us a field of fierce competition. But were we born for this—to extend our proprietary rights over the world and make it a marketable commodity? When our whole mind is bent only on making use of this world, it loses for us its true value. We make it cheap by our sordid desires, and thus to the end of our days we only desire to feed upon it, and we miss its truth and the happiness to which it ministers."

> Every generation enjoys the use of a vast hoard bequeathed to it by antiquity, and transmits that hoard augmented by fresh acquisition to future ages

What a problem and a mystery life is. To moralists and philosophers, ancient and modern, we appeal in vain for a solution. They take us so far into the Labyrinth and no further; until Jesus Christ, the Illuminator of the World comes to our rescue to unravel for us the mystery. He it is Who meets man on his search for happiness, and offers Himself for acceptance as "the Way, the Truth, the Life" and following in His footsteps man has the assurance of reaching and attaining to the abundant life. The purpose of life is to harmonise our physical, emotional and mental vehicles; for in this harmony alone there is peace — the peace that passes understanding.

The laugh of mirth that vibrates through the heart, the tears that freshen the dry wastes within, the music that brings childhood back, the prayer that calls the future near, the doubt that makes us meditate, the death that startles us with mystery, the hardship which forces us to struggle, the anxieties that end in trust are the true nourishment of our natural being.

Life is but a means unto an end — that end, beginning, mean, and end to all things—God.

PHILATELIC NOTES.

Owing to the shortage of small silver in Russia the 10, 15 and 20 kopecks stamps, and later the 1, 2 and 3 kopecks, bearing the portraits of various members of the Romanoff family, have been printed on cardboard and used as currency. The Bolshevik issue is so far limited to two values, 35 and 70 kopecks, and the design shows a hand grasping a sword cutting through a heavy chain. The price in England for this pair (unused) is 8/6.

An interesting, though very obviously forged, surcharged stamp has reached me. It is the 200 reis stamp of the 1895 issue of Portugal, overprinted "Acores." No such stamp was issued for the Azores, and the specimen in my possession shows part of a postmark (Lisbo) and the overprint has been machine-made after the stamp was postally used. This was included in a German collection.

Some patient work was necessary to touch up some of the specimens of old European issues; which have been made in many cases from two copies.

When one copy of a stamp was damaged on the right and another on the left, both have been joined together in such a way as to make a single complete stamp and only by microscopic examination or soaking in water, could the fake be detected. Also missing corners and centres have been similarly replaced, the paper being levelled by scraping. The German always had a reputation for working a long time for a small reward.

High prices are being asked and obtained for the set of 11 stamps, issued under the authority of Major-General Funshawe, C.B., for use during the British occupation of Mesopotamia. They are the stamps of the pictorial issue of Turkey, overprinted "Iraq, in British Occupation," and values 1 anna to 10 rupees. £6 = 10 s. is the price asked by London dealers for an unused set, as the Government prohibited the export of these stamps from Mesopotamia. An issue for Bagndad in 1918 was sold at £14 per set and now £50 is asked for the same set.

Me that throughout the whole dam' war
Have never had tea till half-past four!
Me, the Deputy-Dud-Director
Of the Mud Control's S.E. Sub-Sector!
Me that was sure I had wangled it!
Have I been bit? Have I been bit?

Me that was tipped the authenic tip
Straight from the Honours Controllership?
Me that the Home Office wrote to, to see

Us that have angled, butted, and dangled,
Waited and worried, and—worked and wangled!
Make us quickly certain beyond all doubt
That we are not left out—not left out!

WILFRID BLAIR.

THE WRITING ON THE WALL.

It would appear from a statement by Mr. Barnes that Labour has achieved the first definite result at the Peace Conference.

So far, of course, the decisions arrived at have not actually had to stand the test of practice, but Mr. Barnes and his colleagues show sound judgment in placing reliance on full enquiry and frank publicity, before the last resource — appeal to the League of Nations — is called to enforce a decision.

There could be no greater proof of the value of "open diplomacy" than the result of the recent balloting on the Sankey Report.

The safety valve of publicity has turned a great national danger into a great national advantage. Grievance, class hatred, and all the ill-feeling of industrial war have been dispelled by its means, and brought untold benefits to both employers and employed.

It is not suggested that all that is necessary has been done.

Improvement must of necessity be gradual, but the new methods introduced in dealing with industrial disputes has brought about a new era in which "dispute" will be superseded by "policy."

And in that word, "policy," lies the whole future of industry.

Labour can earmark the day as the greatest in its history, when agreement was reached between employer and employed that the questions of wages, profits and dividends were recognised as being of equal importance in framing the policy pursued by individual and collective industries.

Mr. Barnes, in speaking of the competition of low-waged countries, adopted the point of view that cheap labour rather tended to increase than decrease proportionate cost of production, firstly because it did not induce employers to use scientific methods and the best machinery, and secondly, because very low wages would cause dissatisfied workers who would not produce results even commensurate with the lowest wage.

As an example of high-wage results Mr. Barnes quoted the case of the American miners, who, before the war, produced almost double the amount of the British miner, chiefly owing to the use of up-to-date machinery. The American miners' earnings were then about five dollars a day.

In the same way our shipbuilders — the most highly paid operatives in Britain — were able to retain for our country nearly two-thirds of the world's output — again the result of efficient machinery in the hands of efficient workmen.

As an illustration of the non-success of low wages, Mr. Barnes refers to the Chinese, but it is rather difficult to draw effective conclusions from a comparison between the modern machine-driven West and the lazy-going undeveloped East.

The last point has rather an important bearing on the question recently discussed in these columns on the possible employment of coloured labour by Germany, in the event of her being allowed to retain her colonies.

It would be interesting to know what the labour Charter provides against this contingency and in what way Mr. Barnes and his colleagues propose to combat such a menace to labour, should it ever arise.

It is obvious that even the lackadaisical East, marshalled and controlled by a great Western power, using the most modern scientific methods and up-to-date machinery, would be able to successfully compete against the high-waged labour of the world, and undermine the foundations of the "Scheme of Organisation" just born to the labour world.

We consider that these points are of immense importance now that Labour is coming into its own, and has at last taken a definite step to legislate for itself. Let there be no misunderstanding. We do not suggest that Labour is forgetful of the interests of others.

Twin-born with this new-found power and authority is the sense of responsibility. Mr. Barnes utters a timely warning to the new power. Labour must not regard its Charter as a "mere vehicle to voice vague aspirations, but as a means whereby to win practical results."

Its advent to power will sound the death knell of the agitator, the exploiter, and most dangerous enemy of all that is best in the labour world.

Labour has laid the foundations of a Parliament of the World. Its ideals are to replace "Weltmacht" by World Government. Responsible Labour, without striving to attain the views of a few extremists, is pledged to safeguard the "right" of equal opportunity, and to bring about a minimum status of living conditions which will not bring a blush of shame to any civilised nation.

QUESTION TIME.

OR UNCLE ARTHUR'S LETTER BOX.

PART IV.

All questions by correspondents answered with promptitude, special attention being paid to those concerning demobilisation.

HENPECK. — Q. What is the best way to stop the baby waking me up by crying during the night?

A. Get a tumbler full of whisky and a bath full of warm water. Soak the baby carefully in the one; soak yourself carefully in the other; then go to bed. This method is infallible.

CHAUFFEUR. — Q. I was riding in my car this morning when a cylinder dropped off. What should I do?

A. Send it back to the Ford people.

C. Q. M. S. — Q. Can you please tell me who really put the water in the rum?

A. Refer to 'G.'

FIELD CASHIER. — Q. The mark at present equals 5 francs. What is the rate of exchange in other countries?

A. Well roughly speaking, five marks equal one florin or two lire and thirty four centesimi; or one krona and seventy six oere; or one guilder and eighteen cents, which equal one rupee. And a rupee — well that's about half a milrei; or four hundred and ninety six and a half reis; or two drachma and fifty lepta; and each lepta is about half an aspre, one hundredth of a piastre. And if you've got two piastres and a krieda, which equals three-eighths of a mudgeishe or nearly half a yen, and add to it three kopeks, half a staler and fifteen murlins, well you've damn nearly got a bakh and a quarter.

PRIVATE. — Q. In the Hohe Strasse to-day a general passed on my left hand side while I was carrying a parcel under my right arm. What ought I to do?

A. Look in the shop windows.

STATIST. — Q. What is the longest and rarest word in the British language?

A. Demobilisation.

DOUBTFUL. — Q. What is the difference between a weasel and a stoat?

A. You can weasily tell; they're so stoatally different!!

SUSSEX. — Q. What is the meaning of the initials "C. B."?

A. Let me know whether you are a private or an officer and then I will be able to tell you correctly.

MERRIMENT AT NEUNKIRCHEN.

A 51st SUSSEX ENTERTAINMENT.

A very amusing and successful concert was given by "W" Company of the 51st Royal Sussex Regt. in the Y.M.C.A. at Neunkirchen on Tuesday evening. The Battalion Orchestra under the direction of R.S.M. Blake rendered some excellent selections before the rise of the curtain.

The first item by the Padre, Capt. Stride, entitled "Potted Putter" put everybody in a good humour, and he responded to an encore with a character study of a little girl reciting, who was not quite sure of words. Lieut. O'Brien followed with "Somme Epitaphs" which brought down the house. Cpl. Walker next gave "The Broken Melody" as cello solo and this fine musical item was much appreciated. Capt. and Adjutant Story, an old favourite in "Songs at the piano" met with his usual fine reception from the audience and the first half of the programme concluded with a sketch entitled "Charlie Chaplin as a Barber."

Cpl. Hankin admirably portrayed the famous film comedian and his funny mannerisms with his poor victim in the chair left the audience convulsed with laughter. During the interval some popular selections were rendered by the Orchestra, the audience joining in the choruses with great gusto. Lieut. O'Brien then obliged again with a parody of "Alice where art thou" (with variations) and caused much merriment.

Pte Pollard followed with a violin solo from "Cavaleria Rusticana" which was well received, and an Indian club swinging display by Drummer Dunn brought us to the concluding item of the programme, another Chaplin sketch called "Boxing." Charlie's "style" and "ringcraft" were unique and caused a great deal of laughter. Having ultimately knocked out his opponent and the referee, Charlie evidently thought something else was needed, so, tilting his chin to the required angle he carefully "upper cutted" himself and went down for the count. The final tableau showed Charlie standing in victorious attitude on his opponent. Altogether the evening was an unqualified success and reflects great credit on the organiser, Lieut. Cottrell. The accompanist was Sergt. Waller.

"THE FRAGMENTS".
REVIVAL OF WELL KNOWN CONCERT PARTY.

SOUTHERN DIVISIONAL CONCERT PARTY.

The Southern Division concert party are taking over the late 29th. Divisional R.A.M.C. concert party as a nucleus for the new troupe which is being formed, and which is to be known as "The Fragments". Many will remember this party of high class artistes who, a short time back, had a record run at the Apollo Theatre, Cologne, and who have, since the armistice, been playing to crowded houses wherever they have visited.

The Southern Division are fortunate in having such a fine party for the basis of a Divisional show, and with the additional talent, vocal and instumental, which the Division can produce, it should very soon rank amongst the best concert parties in the Army. A favourable circumstance is also noted in the fact that Capt. W. J. Rice, 88th. Field Ambulance, who raised and successfully ran the R.A.M.C. "Fragments" for so long a period, is to take charge of the Divisional party and if past successes are any augury of the future, we shall expect to hear much praise of "The Fragments" in the coming days of occupation.

NEXT WEEK'S COLOGNE ENTERTAINMENTS.

At the Deutsches Theatre, commencing to-morrow, the Hassan Comedy Company and the "Tabs" orchestra of 20 instrumentalists should attract crowded houses. The former will provide music and song with their accustomed skill, while an illusion act by the chief of the party himself will no doubt prove to be thoroughly mystifying.

At the Apollo, a variety entertainment to which many of the best artistes in the Army of occupation will contribute, will be the attraction

1st MACHINE GUNNERS v. 51st WELSH.

Played at Flerzheim on Monday. A large crowd of Welsh supporters came with their team and were rewarded with a fine exhibition of football. Half time arrived and neither team had been able to pierce the other's defence. On resuming, the Welsh fell off under pressure from the home forward's, Molloy opening the scoring for the M.G.C., from a rebound off the cross bar, by a capital drive from the foot of Capt. Watkins. Soon after, Lieut. Chandler added another, and Sgt. Tasher landed the third for the M.G. from a corner. Sgt. Roberts played a good game for the Welsh, but needed support to finish his efforts. Result: — 1st Bn. M.G.C., 3; 51st Welsh, nil.

2nd HIGHLAND T. M. BATTERY v. 527 COY R.A.S.C.

Played at Birgel on Wednesday and resulted in a draw of 4 goals each. After a spell of exciting play, Lt. Ewing opened the scoring for the "Trench Mortars" after 15 minutes, from a good pass from Cooney. The interval arrived without any further scoring. In the second half, the "Trench Mortars" came away in great style, Doyle scoring a couple of goals within ten minutes. The last 15 minutes proved to be very exciting, the R.A.S.C. scoring 4 goals and the "T.M's," with another, making the score level.

43rd ROYAL FUSILIERS v. 59th PONTOON PTS.

The first of a series of matches was played at Volksgarten between the above teams on Wednesday.

Hard and fast play was contested during the first half, neither side finding the net.

The second half opened with a break through for the R.F's due to the footwork of Pte. Rave. He passed to Pte. Hardel who, without hesitation, scored.

Play then became rough, but the steady defence of the R.F's kept all the play in front of the Pontoons' goal. With a fine concerted effort the R.F's added a second goal through Pte. Handel. Result:—R.F's 2; Pontoons Pts. 0.

INTERNATIONAL FOOTBALL IN GERMANY.

IS THE IDEA FEASIBLE?

A sporting writer in the Edinburgh Evening News is kicking up a rumpus on the subject of the practicability of bringing a couple of international teams to Germany, here to fight their battle for the edification of the members of the Army of "Oc."

Our readers may remember, that a little while ago we reprinted a paragraph from that journal embracing the suggestion indicated. Forthwith, in order to get expert views on the matter, we dispatched one of our representatives to question those people whose function it is to look after the amusements and recreations of the Rhineland Army.

He did so, with the result that in no single instance did he find an opinion that considered the scheme practicable.

The objections raised against such a project were, among others, that there was no suitable round accommodation whereat anything like a really large crowd could view the match, and that a vast amount of gate money would be lost.

At the same time, a prominent sportsman in Cologne expressed the view that there appeared to be a tendency to overdo the sending out of various forms of amusement for the troops here.

As a counter = suggestion, the 2nd Army Sports Officer opined that we should have our own international, the teams in which should be be composed of footballers already on the spot.

Here is our contemporary's latest effusion: —

"Imports Barred.

Some time ago in these columns we made a plea for consideration in a sports connection for the boys of the Army of the Rhine, and went so far as to hazard the suggestion that even two international football elevens be sent over to play a series of games. For our pains, the "Cologne Post," the sprightly daily newspaper published by the Army for the Army in Germany is after our scalp. Leading sports officers interviewed have tabled their views that imported sport is not required, and that the khaki-clad watchmen on the Rhine can supply their own international rivalists. We regret that the views of the average "Tommy" have not been given. Imagine the boys of the R.I.I. and Royal Scots Fusiliers saying they were not particular whether they saw the Celtic and Rangers decide the Scottish League championship, or the Cameronians and Royal Scots turn up their noses if the Cup final between Hearts and St. Mirren were fixed for Cologne! The sports writer of the "Cologne Post" remarks that the only importation that interests the troops is the lady entertainer. It is not open to question, in our humble opinion, which the boys would prefer—free admission to the musical entertainment or a two mark tariff to a really representative international match. What has hindered the absolute success of inter-battalion and divisional competitions in the Army, has been the fact that the playing personnel, except in isolated instances, have not been of the class known to the Sunday morning sports column. Give the boys the well-renowned goods in the football line, and as an attraction they will whack all the lady entertainers in England, even in "Jazz" costume."

The football season is having its last flutter and, even supposing the fulfilment of our critic's idea were possible, we should be right in the thick of the summer heat before the arrangements for getting the teams over here could be completed.

However, we agree that it would be interesting to have the views of "the average 'Tommy'" on the subject and we shall be glad to have the remarks of anyone who cares to write us.

THE HANDLING CODE.

52nd v. 53rd Battalions, The Rifle Brigade.

The above teams met at Bedburg on the 23rd inst. The 52nd Battalion proved themselves superior at all points of the game and won by their Battalion No. of points to nothing, viz 52—0. The forwards of the 53rd did not pack at all well at the start; consequently the 53rd got the ball, but their backs could do little with it. After the first ten minutes the 52nd forwards settled down and invariably got posession and gave their backs a chance to show what they were made of.

The first try was scored by Capt. Harrison who got possession after a good bout of passing, and romped round his opponents to score in the corner. The remainder of the score came at regular intervals until no side sounded with the score, 52nd 5 goals 9 tries, 52 points; 53rd, nil. For the winners, the forwards, after they settled down, played a hard game and gave the back plenty of chances which, as the score shows, they accepted. Some good bouts of passing were indulged in, one bout in particular deserving special mention.

After all the three-quarters had handled Capt. Harrison and Lieut. Walker put the reserve pass on. The movement, which was the best of the day, resulted in an easy score. The handling of the winners' backs was good; very few passes being "muffed." The losers were evidently suffering from lack of practice and will no doubt be anxious to clean the slate.

Capt. Harrison, Capt. Shaw, Lt. Walker, Maj. Stafford, Cpl. Jones and Cpl. Heaby all played well for the winners. Capt. Hawkins at back had little to do; the forwards all worked hard. The game was followed throughout by a large number of supporters of both teams, and keenly enjoyed.

EASTERN DIVISIONAL SIGNAL COY. R. E. v. 505 A. T. COY. R. E.

Played at Siegburg on Wednesday. As was expected, judging from the respective records of the two teams, a good game resulted.

Assisted by the wind the Signallers attacked continuously during the first half, but could not score. Banks just missed by inches with a good cross shot and the goalie tipped a particularly hot one from Towell over the bar. On changing over the Signallers went away in great style, Banks causing trouble in the first minute. Play continued to be fast, but the Signallers' shooting was poor. A melee in the Linnets' goalmouth caused great excitement, but the whistle went with no score. The "Sigs" were unlucky not to win. Banks at outside left played a great game for them.

185 "S" BATTERY v. "R" ANTI-AIRCRAFT BATTERY.

This match was played a Cuchenheim and resulted in a win for the home side by the narrow margin of 1—0. The play was very even, the "Archies" being perhaps the better side. B.Q.M.S. Davies scored the only goal. Sgt. Mc Guckin played a sterling game in goal for the winners.

OUR CRICKET CUP.

WONDERFUL RECEPTION OF "THE COLOGNE POST" SCHEME.

ENTER YOUR TEAM NOW.

Indications go to show that our proposal to award a handsome silver cup to the most successful cricket team in the Army of the Rhine (as well as a miniature cup to each player in that team) is being received with general popularity.

Although the first intimation of the scheme was only made known in our issue of yesterday already a large number of enquiries have been received for particulars of the governing principles.

In this project, we are lacking the knowledge of past experience to guide us in its organisation, for the very good and sufficient reason that the competition has not a parallel in history. Consequently, to formulate complete rules and conditions until there is forthcoming some indication of the extent of the area that the competition will cover, as well as the number of teams that will enter, would be a proceeding frought with unlimited uncertainties and a prospect of much subsequent amendment and alteration.

A Broad Outline.

Broadly, however, what we propose to do is this: In order to supply a little encouragement to the many cricketers who are included in the Rhine Army, and to give that incentive to the competitive spirit that always adds to the keenness with which our sports are tackled, we offer a magnificent silver cup (and a dozen miniature cups) to the cricket team that puts up the best performance this season. To ensure that interest shall be sustained, we have decided that the cup shall be competed for under league rules, in preference to the "Knock-out" system. It will be obvious to all our readers that such a project presents many difficulties so early in its career, but these are not by any means insurmountable and in a very short space of time we hope the competition will be running along smoothly.

Judging by the enormously gratifying success with which our proposal has been received on all hands, it appears fairly certain that several leagues will have to be formed for definite areas, firstly on account of the numerous matches that would otherwise be neccessary to arrive at a decision, and secondly by reason of the long journeys that would be involved by competing teams, were we to have but a single league.

Eligible Teams.

The competition will be open to all comers and players will not necessarily be restricted to playing for the team of their own particular units.

For instance, the clerical staff of a certain office may desire to enter a team for the cup, although the composition of that staff is representative of several regiments. Such a team will be eligible and will automatically be included in the league that functions in the area wherein the office is situated.

One rule that is necessary, of course, is the prohibition of any cricketer to play for more than one team in the competition, and any infringement will be punishable by the deduction of a specified number of points.

On the other hand, it would be absurd to lay down that all points must be played for, as is the case with some football leagues. If a team fails to play an appointed match, and there is no sound reason for the failure, there will be a rule governing the number of points to be forfeited for the breach of fixture.

Entries for the "Cologne Post" Cricket Cup competition should be sent in at once to:

51st. DEVON v. SOUTHERN BRIGADE HEADQUARTERS.

In the presence of a goodly number of spectators, the 2nd. Southern Bde. Headquarters drew with the 51st. Devon on the latter's ground at Burscheid on Friday. Bde. Headquarters deserved to win, for they were the more scientific side, but failed at times to accept the chances that presented themselves. Although neither side was at full strength, there was much interesting football, the play throughout being keen and fast. After quarter of an hour's play, Harper for the 51st. scored from a very difficult angle and shortly afterwards Fitzgerald for the Bde. broke away and put the visitors level. During the second half the Headquarters team again resumed the aggressive and kept the ball well in home team's half. The goal, however, was never really in danger, the forwards finishing weakly.

3rd MACHINE GUNNERS.

From all accounts many wished they could actually "wind up the watch on the Rhine" on Friday, when 200 brave gunners (pardon Machine-gunners), went to see if they were sailors. "There were five wise and five foolish." Those that were wise certainly took tea and sugar in their rations. Was that why a certain quartermaster-sergeant dropped out at the last minute or was it the rabbit pie? Before the mariners marched off, all the transport men amongst them were noticeable for their bandoliers which carried the thoughts to life Belts.

A trial game of hockey was played on Friday with casual sides. Quite a number of hermits were coaxed out.

Yesterday the Battalion played in the first round of the Brigade Cup, and a full account will appear later. At the same time a second Battalion side was meeting the Transport and wonderful things were seen.

The coming week is full of interest. Almost all the sports have their appearance. The outstanding event will be the boxing tournament on Friday. Tuesday's issue will contain several items of exceptional interest, including competition tables.

1/4th CHESHIRE DETACHMENTS OPPOSED

In a match at Hersel, between the Roisdorf and Hersel detachments of the 1/4th Cheshires, the former team won 4—2.

Pte. Keeling, the Roisdorf goal-keeper distinguished himself throughout the game by his coolness and resourcefulness. Hersel lost many chances by erratic shooting.

The battalion band ("Snake-Charmers") played a selection during the interval. In the return match between these two teams, the score was reversed.

Several attempts have been made during the past twenty years to popularise Sunday yacht racing, and a new organisation, to be known as the Sunday Yacht Racing Association, has been formed to control the sport.

NEWMARKET RACES.

At Newmarket on Friday, the weather was fine but dull and the going was on the soft side. The principal event on the card was the Craven Stakes, of which the result was: 1, Buchan, 5—2; 2, Bruff Bridge, 6—1; 3, Dominian, 100—7. Eight ran. Won by a length, three quarters of a length between second and third.

The returns in the Flying Handicap were: 1, Freesia, 3—1; 2, Sundari, 9—4; Tregan, 7—1. Eight ran. Won by a neck; one and a half lengths between second and third.

Other winners were: Orpheus (2—1); Little Boy (10—1); Rothesay Bay (4—6); Rescue (100—8).

CATTERICK BRIDGE MEETING.

Victory Handicap: 1, Bold Lover, 5—2; 2, Queen of the Bullet, 5—2; 3, Beerwick 9—2. Six ran.

Other winners at this meeting were: Dynamo (1—2); Mistake (5—1); Look Out (6—1); Schamyl (6—4); Sitter (4—6).

LATEST BETTING.

Newmarket course betting on the City and Suburban: Danseman, 500 to 100; Seatwell, 1000 to 80; Arion, 2000 to 120. Derby Betting: Manfarde, 2,000 to 400; Mackinley, 1600 to 100; Lord Basil, 2000 to 100; Buchan, 2000 to 100 (before winning the Craven Stakes.

RACQUETS.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS CHAMPIONSHIP FINAL.

The final for the Public Schools Racquets Championships, on Friday, resulted in Malbrough, represented by G.S. Butler and G.W.F. Hazlehurst defeating Malvern (C.G. Robson and N.E. Partridge) 14-17, 15-8, 15-7, 15-5 and 17-14.

In the earlier stages of the Championship, which was played at Queen's Club, the standard of play was not quite up to that of pre-war days, but the later contests produced exciting and keen games that evoked enormous enthusiasm.

SPORTING SNIPPETS.

It is highly probable that David McLean, McSkimming, and Blair will assist Sheffield Wednesday next season.

Articles have been signed by the well-known sprinters Jack Donaldson and C. J. Mears, both of Australia, to decide a match over 100yds level for £100, open for £200 a side, on Saturday, May 24.

The Southampton Public Grounds' Cricket Association have decided to ask the Public Lands Committee of the Corporation to receive a deputation on the subject of Sunday cricket in the parks. The season opens on to-day, when Phil Mead's XI. will play a League XI.

J. Sparkes, the steeple-chase jockey, demobilised from the British Army of the East, has returned to Maisons-Laffitte. He will ride for the Fumagalli stable.

Owing to the serious illness of Mrs. Lambert we regret to learn that the return match between A. Lambert, late of Lord's and now with Lord Leconfield at Petworth, and R. Dickinson, of Prince's Club, which was to have taken place at Petworth yesterday has had to be postponed.

A representative of The Sportsman saw Inman on the subject of the wholesale challenges to himself issued by Stevenson. The details of the latter's offers already have received public prominence, and Inman has the matter under his consideration. The champion, however, does not intend making any definite move until he has consulted his backers at the end of this week. Stevenson has expressed his readiness to accept a start in 18,000 up—for big money—on a sliding scale, commencing at 3000 and decreasing gradually.

Preston North End have signed on S. Davies, an inside left, of Rochdale, who has an excellent military record. He went through severe fighting with the Royal Welsh Fusiliers, and gained the Croix de Guerre and Mons Star. He is a native of Chirk, and gained his early experience in the Birmingham League.

At the Jockey Club meeting at Newmarket Lord Jersey, on retiring as one of the Stewards, nominated Lord Lonsdale as his successor which had the approval of the members present.

The world's fly-weight champion Jimmy Wilde has pledged his word to appear at Hoxton Baths on Monday in an exhibition bout on the occasion of the benefit matinee to the Hoxton seconds and whip.

Brentford are touring South Wales next week. Cardiff City, Swansea Town, and Llanelly being met on the first three days of the week.

The Pavilion, Mountain Ash, is to be re-opened for fortnightly shows. The first of these will be held on May 3, when Jim Jenkins (Aberawinpool) and Frank Evans (Mountain Ash) box 15 rounds for £25 aside.

A big steeple-chase for officers of the Allied Armies will take place at Bois fort (Brussels) in June. The stake money will be at least 10,000 francs.

Harrow School Tuck shop in High-st has changed hands for £1260.

The County Wexford Polo Club will resume play this season, commencing on May 15.

The special contest at the Ring next Thursday afternoon will be between Johnny Sheppard (Bow) and Joe Starmer (Kettering). Three ten rounds will also be staged, one of the bouts bringing together Phil Horwood (Watford) and Bill Ganley (Blackfriars).

The scottish Amateur Boxing Gymnastic and Wrestling Association has taken up earnestly the cause of the widow of Johnny Mathieson, the "Fighting Scot," and are holding a series of contests on behalf of his family, which takes place at Hengler's Circus, Glasgow, on May 3.

A money match between Alf Mansfield (Aldgate) and Young Baker (Liverpool) has been fixed up by the Ring for Monday next. The men meet in a return bout over twenty rounds for £50 aside. Bombr Woodman (Wandsworth) and Bill Johnson (Bow) are to box fifteen rounds, while over ten rounds Dan Ryan (Clerkenwell) will be opposed to Clark (Vauxhall).

A link with old-time Yorkshire cricket is severed by the death, at the age of 80, of Mr Seth Waring, of Keighley. He played for the county in 1870, against Surrey, at Sheffield, and against Notts, at Trent Bridge. For 30 years he played for the Keighley Club, and had been a member of the Yorkshire County C.C. committee.

SOCCER AT DUREN.

Highland Div. Sig. Gy, 3, 2.3rd Field Amb. 0. Spr. Godfrey, L/Cpl. Rutherford and Dr. Kirkham scored.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

(With an Occasional Entertainments Note)

Quoit Tennis.

On this subject "One Who Knows" writes as follows:—

"In the Cologne Post of April 10th "Rambler" asks, "Why doesn't somebody introduce quoit-tennis into our sports programme?" Personally, I do not consider this need be legislated for by those responsible for organising sports for the Army of the Rhine.

At all courses of P. & R. T. this form of exercise has been taught and there can be very few units without officers or N.C.O.'s who do not know how to play it.

As "Rambler" remarks, it is a very fine game and one requiring little apparatus. A rope quoit, two rough posts, stuck in the ground, with a rope stretched, about five feet high, from one to the other, are all that is wanted."

"The game is, moreover, suitable for old or young, and can be played almost anywhere. If played out-of-doors, a court is easily marked out by the use of a pointed stick. The dimensions should be as for Badminton, and the scoring, which is much easier to the majority of players, the same as in that game. It can be played "Singles" or "Doubles."

One very important point in this game, as in many others, which is so often lost sight of, is the fact that each time the quoit falls to the ground it has to be picked up. This stooping is, in itself, invaluable, as it not only has a massaging effect on the whole of the intestines but is extremely useful in preventing the "Sam Browne" from being "let out" a hole or two.

To-morrows Sports Meeting.

Given fine weather, the London Divisional race meeting which commences to-morrow, is bound to be a bumper success. Nothing in its organisation has been neglected that is likely to add to the attractiveness of the event. There will be no excuse for anyone who is unable to find the course—to which there will be a special bus service from Cologne—as there are sign boards indicating its direction whichever way one turns. I hear that for one race there are something like thirty probable starters so that "spotting the winner" will be a problem not easily solved. Further particulars may be gleaned from an advertisment on this page.

Another Sports Meeting.

There will be twenty events in an attractive sports programme to be carried out on the P. and R.T. ground on 23rd and 24th May. It seems rather an unwise policy of the promotors, however, not to have one or two of the events open to all comers. By restricting entries exclusively to Headquarters and Army Troops, the meeting will certainly be robbed of a great deal of public interest. But I suppose the promotors know their own business best.

Army Dramatic Company.

The first performance of the newly formed British Rhine Army Dramatic Company will be given at the Deutsches Theatre, Cologne, on Thursday, 8th May, and will be repeated on Friday and Saturday. As already announced, the first work to be tackled will be "Mo Iusc" and included in the caste will be Miss Shirley King, Miss Gabriel Paul, Lieut. J. H. Hope, and Lieut. S. E. Percy. Lieut. Moccata is to direct operations behind the scenes and the production itself will be in the capable hands of Lieut. Percy. Among the future plays that the Company proposes to stage are "Candida" (Bernard Shaw) "The Title" (Arnold Bennott) "Damaged Goods" "The Importance of being Ernest" and "General Post".

When the Company becomes as large as it now promises to be capable, "Abraham Lincoln" will be attempted. For this a caste of 38 men and about a dozen ladies is necessary. It is intended to restrict membership of the Company to officers, N.C.O.'s and men of the Rhine Army and to ladies of the Havre Repertory Company.

Challenges.

With reference to the sports challenges that have been notified from time to time in this column, Lieut. Onions, who is looking after things in the sports department of the Amusement Office at Cologne, is endeavouring to arrange a great "Challenge Night" at one of the local places of entertainment. I have handed him the letters concerned, accordingly, "for necessary action." Therefore, if anyone wants to wrestle, box or otherwise "rough handle" anyone else, he should get in touch with Mr. Onions without delay in order to find a place on the bill when this show comes along.

THE RAMBLER.

1/5 SOUTH STAFFORDS v. 2nd. LEICESTERS.

At Kommern, fine weather, and the prospect of a good match attracted many spectators. The balance of play was in the Stafford favour throughout the game. The "Tiger's" defence was weak and with a nippy forward line in opposition it was evident, ere the game was half over, who would be the winners. Nevertheless, play continued fast and interesting and without a dull moment. The "Tiger's" forward line, of which the inside right was the best, showed a good knowledge of their work but they were up against a defence far too strong for them. Players of outstanding merit for the "Knots" were Pte Mitchell (outside left) and C.S.M. Taylor, (centre), the latter scoring 4 goals, Cpl. Wilkinson 2 and Pte Baxter 1.

This makes the "Knots" third win in succession with an average of 15 goals for and 2 against.

"THE LONDON DIVISIONAL RACE MEETING"

will take place at the
EXERZIER PLATZ, HOHENBERG,
just East of COLOGNE
on the 28th and 29th April.

First race on each day at 14-00 hrs.

A special service of buses and trams will run to the course on each day, leaving Cöln-Deutz Station from 12-00 hrs. returning after the last race.

Free teas will be supplied for OTHER RANKS if previous application for tickets is made to London Divisonal 'Q.' There will be a public refreshment tent for Officers on the Course, and Wet and Dry canteen for O.Rs.

Maj. M. E. Barclay, Norfolk Yeomanry, Join Master of the Puckeridge Hounds, has been elected captain of the Brent Pelham Cricket Club.

"REDUCED HOURS, HIGHER WAGES."

INTERNATIONAL SCHEME.

The Management Committee of the General Federation of Trade Unions have selected Mr. Thomas Mallalieu, of Denton, Vice-President, and Mr. W. A. Appleton, General Secretary, to visit Holland this week to investigate the causes for the postponement of the Trade Union Internationale, which was to have been held at Amsterdam on March 8, but was postponed by the Dutch authorities.

Mr. Mallalieu said to a Morning Post representative that it was of the greatest importance that they should get together and formulate some international scheme with the object of bringing the workers in every country on to something like a uniform basis so far as hours and wages are concerned, for England could not justifiably continue an agitation for reduced hours and higher wages with the workers of overseas competitors allowed to go on working longer and at less wages than in this country. Our export trade could not go on under a system which permitted that to continue.

What is described as a practical performing edition of Byrd's Short Communion Service has been issued to the public by Messrs. Stainer and Bell for the Y.M.C.A. Music Section at the suggestion of Mr. G. T. Holst, who is in charge of the section's work in Salonika and wishes to use it among the troops there. Mr. Holst has himself prepared the edition, with the aid of Miss J. M. Joseph.

Private James Perkins, of the 16th Lancers, a native of Atherstone, Warwickshire, has been presented by the townspeople with 80 War Savings Certificates in recognition of having won eight war decorations—the D.C.M., Russian Order of St. George, Military Medal, French Croix de Guerre, Italian Ordre Decotue, French Médaille Militaire, Belgian Croix De Guerre, and Serbian Silver Medal.

To Holberton, Devon, belongs the distinction of being the first village in the West to have a war memorial in being. The Swan Inn, purchased by public subscription, has been converted into a memorial institute, with reading and smoking rooms, and facilities for billiards, tennis, and bowling. It was opened with a procession through the village and a church service, followed by sports, and is to be developed later by means of a pageant.

OUR PARCELS FROM HOME.

NEW ARRANGEMENTS.

The Secretary of the War Office announces that from May 1, 1919, the Military Forwarding Offices at Southampton and Avonmouth will be transferred to Richborough. From that date all parcels (above postal weight) and gifts for the British Army on the Rhine and the British troops in France and Flanders should be despatched, carriage paid, to the Military Forwarding Office, Richborough Wharf, South-Eastern and Chatham Railway, under the same conditions as those which previously existed at Southampton.

Parcels (above postal weight) and gifts for troops serving at other stations abroad (with the exception of North Russia) may also be despatched via Richborough under the same conditions as those which previously existed at Avonmouth. The public is, however, warned that these goods can only be conveyed in hired transports, which now sail at infrequent intervals; goods sent for shipment should, therefore, be of a nature not likely to deteriorate. Post is by far the more safe and expeditious mode of despatch for all consignments which can be reduced to parcel post limits.

Goods for the North Russian Expeditionary Force should be addressed to the Military Forwarding Officer, No. 9 Shed, Royal Albert Docks, as heretofore.

PUT A STAMP ON YOUR COLOGNE POST.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

We are informed by the authorities that for all newspapers sent to the United Kingdom, and to all places outside zones of the Army of the Rhine and the British troops in France and Flanders, the postage must be prepaid at the rate of ½d. for two ounces. So when you "send it home," please affix a stamp to each copy of The Cologne Post.

TERRITORIAL FORCE.

IS PROMOTION FAIR?

The Daily Telegraph of Friday contains an interesting article on the question of the promotion of Territorial Officers. It states that it has been represented that Territorial officers have been unfairly treated as regards promotion, more especially when their promotion is compared with that of temporary officers of the new Army, and it is the desire of the authorities that this impression should be removed.

It is to be remembered in the first place that the Territorial Force was constitutionally a Home Service Force, and that, although it loyally responded to the request to volunteer for service overseas, those officers who, for various reasons, were unable to proceed overseas had certain rights, and were entitled to be considered for promotion when their turn came. It is also to be remembered that the Force was a permanent force, and that the return to normal peace conditions, as regards the comparative status of the officers of a unit, had to be borne in mind.

The first real difficulty occurred on the expansion of the Territorial Force into two or more lines. On mobilization the officer cadres of the Territorial Force were in many cases not up to establishment, and there were practically no reserves to bring them up to establishment or to reinforce those units which went overseas in the early days of the war. The second lines were originally raised as reserve units to their first lines. It was impossible to spare many officers from the first lines to officer the second lines, and, in fact, officers of the first lines were unwilling to forego their chances of going overseas by being posted to the second lines. It, therefore, became necessary to officer the second and subsequent lines by officers of the first lines, who were unable to proceed overseas, officers from the Territorial Force Reserve, retired officers, and those obtained from other sources. From the time of the expansion of the Force until a later date all these officers, who were brought in, were looked upon as temporary and everything that was possible was done to safeguard the interests and promotion of those officers who were actually serving with units of the Force on the date of mobilization.

TEMPORARY PROMOTION.

As the majority of re-commissioned and newly-commissioned officers were serving with second lines, it was impossible to distribute equally the promotion on the increased establishment over the two lines, without prejudice to those officers who were serving in the force on mobilization, and consequently a system of temporary promotion was instituted which safeguarded the interests of the first line officers in so far that, on joining any line of their unit, they should not be called upon to serve under any officer who had joined the unit at a later date than they had.

A common cause of complaint was that many officers were given direct commissions in ranks higher than that of second lieutenant. This was rectified when the establishment was increased and their promotion was retarded, and the position of those officers who joined the unit before they did was as far as possible adjusted.

Another grievance is that officers of the Territorial Force Reserve and retired officers who have been brought back on to the active list have retarded the promotion of officers who were serving in the force on mobilization. These officers in no way affected the promotion of the latter up to the time when promotions to the increased establishment were made, as they did not count against the establishment and were not considered for promotion, and although they were included in the increase in establishment in all cases the officers who were serving on mobilisation benefited by the increased establishment.

TERRITORIAL AND NEW ARMIES.

The writer then goes on to compare promotion in the Territorial Force with that in the New Army. He says that promotion in the New Army was, until quite recently, entirely by selection, and this was essential in a force which was rapidly raised, where seniority depended entirely on the date of an officer joining, irrespective of his age, previous training, or any other qualifications which rendered him professionally suitable as an officer. Promotion by selection, however, was only made from among those officers who, by the fortune of war, were able to remain with their units and those officers who, as the result of wounds, sickness, or any other cause, did not remain with their units in the field, received no promotion whatever. The Territorial officer, on the other hand, always had his promotion assured to him wherever he might be serving, provided he was recommended as fitted in the field for promotion to the next higher rank.

It has been urged that Terrritorial officers were not considered for command of units and the higher appointments, and that these were more frequently given to other than Territorials. This complaint has been referred to the commanders of Expeditionary Forces and the General Officer Commanding-in-Chief at home on several occasions. They have always replied that the best available qualified officers were selected for commands and appointments, irrespective of whether they belonged to the Regular Army, Special Reserve, Territorial Force, or New Army. The rate of promotion of officers of the Territorial Force has compared very favourably with that of the Regular Army, the Special Reserve, and officers of the New Armies taken as a whole.

WANDERING RUSSIANS.

A remarkable story of the wanderings of three Russians was related at Liverpool recently when they were charged with stowing away on the steamer Poland from Rotterdam to Manchester.

In 1917 they were living in London and elected to return to Russia to fight. On arrival at Archangel the Kerensky revolution had taken place and they were told they were free. They journeyed from Archangel to the Ukraine at the expense of the Government, and later were captured by the Germans, who interned them as Englishmen for ten months. They were then sent with returning British prisoners of war to Rotterdam, where they stowed away on the Poland.

The Stipendiary said he had not the power to order the men back to Russia. They had been 12 days on remand, so he would order seven day's hard labour and then they would be dealt with by the aliens authorities.

PEACE PAGEANT FOR BLIND.

A Pageant of Peace, in aid of St. Dunstan's Day Fund for the after-care of soldiers and sailors blinded in the war, will be produced at Cannon-hill Park, Birmingham, on Whit Monday, June 9, and will continue there for a week. Performances on other dates have also been arranged for Leeds, Nottingham, Newcastle, Liverpool Cardiff, and Portsmouth. Next Tuesday the Lord Mayor of Birmingham will hold a meeting in the Council Chamber to call for the services of thousands of performers. A special stadium to hold 5,000 is to be erected.

A feature of the pageant will be the faithful reproduction in tableaux of the most famous deeds of local regiments. Among the actors at Birmingham will be two men who won the V.C. in Warwickshire battalions. The War Museum is aiding this novel project with information.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

Germany's Proposals.

In a telegram of Thursday from Berlin, the outlines of the counter-proposals to the League of Nations are given.

The German Government proposes that the League shall embrace all belligerent States and neutrals who are signatories of The Hague Peace Treaty. The other States require for their entry into the League the consent of the majority of the members of the League, but the Holy See will have the right of entry without this condition.

The organisations through which the League of Nations' functions will be carried out are mainly a Congress of States and World-Parliament. The former shall be the chief administrative body, and shall be composed of representatives, with equal rights, of all Governments. The World Parliament must give its consent to the most important laws, and the first World-Parliament shall be elected from the Parliament of each State, so that one representative will be elected for every million inhabitants. No Parliament is, however, to be allowed to send more than ten representatives. Two other special bodies are to be created—an International Tribunal and a Mediation Bureau, to decide respectively questions of law and questions of interests. Every difference between the various States must be brought before either body.

War not Legal for Settling Disputes.

The draft further proceeds to state that no longer must war be regarded as the legal method of settling disputes, and armaments must therefore be reduced to the proportions required for domestic purposes. There must no longer be armed ships on the sea, except for the Naval Police Force of the League and adequate coastal protection for each country. All straits and canals are to be internationalised. There must be no economic war, except such as is recommended by the League as a measure of compulsion. A Labour agreement is also given, which in many respects coincides with the recent Labour Charter published in Paris, but in other respects goes beyond it. Regarding colonial questions, the German draft recognises the principle of international administration for tropical colonies.

The Recent Crisis.

It is only natural, perhaps, that the German Press should snap at the opportunity to comment upon the recent developments at the Peace Conference. The Vorwärts says that the present attitude of Italy clearly shows that she entered war, not on account of the Austrian danger or the liberation of pure Italian territories, but merely for the realisation of imperialistic aims. Should her claims be satisfied it would mean the beginning of new warlike difficulties into which the people of the late Habsburg monarchy would be drawn by pure despair.

"Wilson's energetic declaration is the most favourable thing for the idea of a durable peace which has been done in Paris up to now. He says that not interest but right is the attitude to be adopted in the settlement of the word peace. Germany also desires that the principle of right shall be used for her. The same reasons which are against a violation of the small Austrian nation must also prevent a violation of Germany. A Peace which might raise in us the feeling of wrong would be considered by the German people as not accepted and not binding in spite of formal acceptation which perhaps will be forced on them."

The Balkanisation of Europe.

We are confronted with a new accusation, that of attempting to "Balkanise" the whole of Europe. Is there no limit to our enterprise? The Grossische Zeitung, the paper which at present is advocating the policy of the continental league, says that these nations ought to settle their own questions without any intervention from Great Britain. We are accused of doing our utmost to prevent the smaller nations from negotiating directly, and that we are trying to hinder the progress of the "continental community of work." "On the other hand," it says "England wants to negotiate directly with Germany and with everyone of her Allies. The realization of the separate negotiations would be the symbol of the realization of the British war aim—the Balkanisation of Europe."

Utopian Econonomists.

Herr Ebert, the President of the German Republic recently made interesting observations on the resolutiveness of the German Government in an interview with a representative of the Neue freie Presse.

"Germany will not and cannot perish," says he. "The present Government is creating a free socialist Germany by the will of the majority of the people. We will not have a Government of the minority, neither will there be any experimenting by utopian economists. The country is firmly resolved not to yield to any threat or compulsion. Bolshevism is coming on with renewed strength, and we must construct a dam, the breaking of which will drown in its Bolshevistic flood not only Germany but the whole of Europe. This our enemies must realize, and must establish their policy accordingly. The position of Germany in the future depends entirely upon a quick and acceptable peace. If the Entente, however, intends to delay peace or to press upon us a violent one, then surely all I said before will have no value, and the internal power of the German people, too, cannot help any more when it is destroyed so violently.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

The Editor, in publishing letters from Correspondents, will use his own discretion, and if necessary limit the publishing of correspondence on any subject whatever. It must be understood, however that he is not responsible for the views stated.

All communications for this column should be brief and to the point, and preference will be given to those which bear the writers' signatures for publication. No letter will be published unless accompanied by rank, name, and unit of sender, which are needed for the purpose of reference.

Many letters of a perverse nature have reached the office, and the Editor wishes to point out that these only cause waste of time both to the writer and the Editor himself. Letters of this nature will not be published.

THE INVENTOR OF THE STEAM ENGINE.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.— Who invented the steam engine? This question has again cropped up here in Cologne. We are, of course, familiar with the story of James Watt and the steaming kettle and also with the pictures of the supposed incident. Whether or not his youthful mind was ever thus exercised with the problem of the utilisation of steam power we cannot say, but it is certain he was not the inventor of the steam engine, but rather the improver of an already existing type.

Without making reference to the inventions of much earlier dates, which may be dismissed as having proved of little, if any practical value, a thoroughly useful and practical steam engine was brought out in 1705 by an inventor named Newcomen, and continued in extensive use for about 60 years before Watt's first improvements appeared (1765). And of such practical utility was this steam engine, under the then existing conditions, that it continued not only to be used but also to be made long after Watt's improvements (1765—1782). In evidence of the foregoing statement, it may be mentioned that a steam engine of this type has only recently ceased running (1915) at the Farme Colliery, Ruthergien, Glasgow, where it had been in constant use for 165 years. Naturally an object of great interest, it was presented to the Corporation of Glasgow to be erected in Kelvingrove Park as soon as circumstances would permit. The engine being the invention of Newcomen, was known by his name, and also as the "atmospheric" engine, owing to the top of the cylinder being open, and the downward stroke of the piston being dependent upon the pressure of the atmosphere. The mode of condensation was of a very crude character, and it was in this direction that some of Watt's greatest improvements lay.

CLYDESIDE.

THE PARSIFAL.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.—May I say a few words in reply to Miss C.A. Eastgate's comment on my "Parsifal" article.

Does Miss Eastgate believe that the extraordinary resemblance to Christ of the young Knight was purely fortuitous? Or that Kundry in her brown robe and long hair, washing the feet of Parsifal, was intended as anything but the Magdalen, as depicted in religious art since the 14th Century when the Proto-Renaissance paved the way for the Great Awakening? Has Miss Eastgate read Wagner's own letters to Minna Planer? Is any such striking resemblance on the stage ever accidental?

And why is it necessary to term "effeminate" the "representations of Christ which we are accustomed to connect with stained glass windows"? As there was no adequate pictorial contemperary art of the time of Christ, all that Art could do was to interpret His teaching in graphic form. The outstanding features of Christ being His infinite pity, mercy and goodness, emphatically not His strength, is it not natural that the earliest representations of Him by the first artists to emerge from the chaos of the Middle Ages should show Him as the image of those qualities.

And in such matters tradition being stronger than a desire for realistic expression, the figure of Christ as depicted in the Art of to-day is to all intents and purposes that of the time of Cimabué and Giotto.

"DEVOTION TO DUTY".

THANKS TO V.A.D'S.

The Army Council desire to convey to all members of Voluntary Aid Detachments who have worked so hard and with such devotion, their appreciation of the valuable help so unstintingly given during the long and trying period through which the country has passed. The work that has been done by each and all has been of the utmost assistance to the great cause for which the Allies have been fighting for the past four and a half years. The keenness, self-sacrifice, and devotion to duty displayed at all times and in all circumstances have been most marked, says an official communiqué, and without the help of these workers the difficulties regarding the furnishing of adequate care and attention to the sick and wounded would have been immensely increased. The calls made on the members of V.A.D's have been many and various, but they have invariably been met with the utmost ability, tact, and goodwill. The Army Council wishes to express a deep sense of gratitude to these devoted helpers in the great cause of humanity.

PRE-WAR SYSTEM INTRODUCED.

ARMY ENTRANCE EXAMINATIONS.

The Army Council announce that the Army entrance examination to be held in June will be the last in connection with which the payment of contributions will be dispensed with. The pre-war system of contributions will be re-introduced for candidates admitted to the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich, and the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, in connection with the November and subsequent examinations.

OUT-OF-WORK DONATIONS.

In consequence of the decision of the Ministry of Labour to extend the operation of the out-of-work donation scheme to Nov. 24, the President of the Board of Education has decided to extend to the same date the period during which the Board will refund expenditure incurred by local education authorities in connection with the provision of unemployment centres for juveniles established and approved in accordance with the scheme published by the Board.

ITALIAN PREMIER'S GREETING AT ROME

ARCHANGEL ICE BREAKING

WHY WILSON'S DECLARATION WAS MADE

SUPERB LOYALTY OF INDIAN TROOPS

ORLANDO'S ARRIVAL AT ROME.

"THIS VERY GRAVE HOUR."

Rome presented a remarkable spectacle when Signor Orlando reached there on the 26th April. All shops were closed and the streets were gaily decorated with bunting and banners bearing such inscriptions as "Long live Fiume and Italian Dalmatia." The troops marching to the station to form a guard of honour were heartily applauded and until the processional route was cleared vehicular traffic was rendered impossible by the dense masses of people.

All the Ministers and Secretaries of State were at the station to meet Signor Orlando. Three hundred Deputies, a hundred Senators and the Civic authorities were also present.

When the train drew in there was a magnificent ovation. Hymns were sung and aeroplanes circled overhead. The bell of the Capitol announced the arrival. The Prime Minister was carried shoulder high to his car, amid cries of "Long live Orlando and Fiume," and flowers were strewn in his path.

Signor Orlando was obliged to adress the crowd. Speaking from his car he said:— "It is not the hour to make phrases in front of the world which is judging us. We must keep calm and serene, firm in the consciousness of our strength. There are two questions. The first is to know whether the Government and the Italian delegation have truly interpreted the thought and will of the Italian people. (Cries of assent.) I never doubted it, for I know the soul of my people, but I wanted confirmation. Here it is!

"At Paris our workmen abandoned their work and came to show their solidarity with the Government. At the frontier a poor woman in mourning, who had lost her son in the war, came to tell me the same thing, and at Turin and other places masses of our countrymen prevented the train from moving in order to express their feelings. And now Rome is consecrating our work. The first question is answered.

"The second question is to estimate the gravity of the situation. I do not ask for an immediate answer. I do not conceal the danger of this very grave hour and I am standing among you as a brother among brothers, and as a chief who asks you to obey and follow the will of the people. We may be left alone, but Italy must be united and have only one will. Italy shall not perish."

In the Nazionale a group of British officers shouted "Long live the Italian Army," and the mass answered with a terrific shout of "Long live England."

When the procession arrived at the Quirinal the King and Queen were obliged to appear twice on the balcony in response to the insistent calls of the people.

WHY WILSON'S DECLARATION WAS MADE.

The Paris newspaper, Le Matin, asserts that the reason for President Wilson's declaration over the Adriatic question is as follows:—

The document had been ready for about six days. Its existence was known to Mr. Lloyd George and M. Clemenceau, but it was agreed that publication should be postponed until the situation should be cleared up.

While negotiations were still proceeding, President Wilson was stupified to learn that placards proclaiming the annexion of Fiume had appeared in Rome by order of Orlando. Wilson forthwith ordered the publication of his declaration, without even consulting his colleagues of the Council of Four. It will be interesting, adds that journal, to know whether President Wilson did not act on false, or at any rate, greatly exaggerated information.

CLEMENCEAU AND FRENCH INTENTION.

M. Clemenceau has sent the following telegram to Signor Luzatti, Italian ex-Prime Minister.

"My dear and illustrious friend: You cannot doubt that I keep for Italy the same feelings as you do for France, because I have shown them clearly in the darkest days. It is not at the hour of the signature of Peace that there will be any question of denying our reciprocal engagements. The French policy is not the policy of 'Scraps of Paper.' Your sincere and devoted friend, G. Clemenceau."

AFTER FIUME, KIAO-CHAO.

According to the Echo de Paris America does not want Japan to keep Kiao-Chau. It may be, says that Journal, that after the Italian crisis, President Wilson creates a Japanese crisis. The Matin says that Japan will leave the Peace Conference if she does not get satisfaction, while if the principle of equality of races is not introduced into the Covenant, Japan will refuse to participate in the League of Nations.

DELAY-ACTION MINE ON FRENCH RAILWAY.

The explosion of a delay action mine is reported on the Paris-Lille line between Miraumont and Achiet.

The Paris-Beldium lines were cut over a length of 100 yards, but there were no casualties. — Reuter.

NEARING THE CRUCIAL WEEK AT ARCHANGEL.

ICE BREAKING UP.

Reuter learns that the weather conditions on the Archangel front are improving. Prospects of an early Spring and an abnormally early clearance of the ice in the White Seal will facilitate the arrival of reinforcements and greatly restrict the lines on which the Bolshevists can operate.

The Dvina is now clear of ice and the Bolshevists are expected to use their armed vessels. It is confidently anticipated however that our Naval forces at Archangel will deal adequately with them. Reuter.

SUPERB NATIVE LOYALTY IN INDIA.

Simla. 22nd April. The Indian Army has behaved splendidly throughout the present trouble and some of the Native troops have shown magnificent devotion in attempts to help the Government. At one place in the Punjab a native carried a wounded European four miles to safety.

Many of the civil population who participated prominently in the recent mischief are now apparently extremely anxious that all troubles should cease. — Reuter.

AMEER'S ASSASSIN EXECUTED.

Simla. Nastullah Khan has been found guilty of instigating the murder of the Ameer and sentenced at Kabul to imprisonment for life. The actual murderer, an Afghan colonel, has been executed. — Reuter.

PESTILENCE AT MOSCOW.

Stockholm. A telegram from Petrograd states that there were 2640 cases of smallpox at Moscow last week. — Reuter.

HUNGARY NEARING THE END.

Advices from Vienna state that the Czecho-Slovak offensive against the Hungarians has commenced. The Czecho-Slovak Army, numbering 180 thousand, is already at the Hungarian frontier. — Reuter.

EICHHORN'S ADVENTURES CONTINUE.

Berlin. 25th April. Eichhorn, the ex-president of the police, was rescued by a crowd of workmen at Halberstadt, after three hours fighting. — Reuter.

(Eichhorn is the Bolshevist who in the Berlin revolution elected himself President of the Police and helped himself very liberally to Government money. He had to flee from Berlin and subsequently turned up at Brunswick, being captured there by Government troops as he was about to leave by aeroplane.)

THE EGYPTIAN RIOTS.

MURDERED OFFICERS.

The latest official communique from Cairo says that sufficient evidence has now been obtained to identify the eight persons recently murdered in a train between Assiout and Minia as Kaimakam Pope Bey, inspector of prisons; Major C. Jarvis, of the 20th Deccan Horse; Staff Lieutenant Frank R. B. Willby, General List; and five non-commissioned officers. The outrage took place on the 18th April between eight o'clock in the morning and noon, and not on the 15th inst., as originally stated. The trial of the accused will commence shortly. It has been conclusively established that the victims number eight only.

When further disturbances occurred at Abutor, near Tantah, where the villagers stoned an Indian camp, the village was surrounded, six of the ringleaders being arrested and twenty-three of the rioters publicly flogged.

"A punitive fine in the form of live-stock has been imposed on two villages in the Western Delta which failed to comply with orders to clear the railway. Sixty-seven persons have been convicted of rioting in the Wasta area; twenty-seven were acquitted and thirty released after a preliminary investigation. Fifty-seven others are awaiting trial.

COMPENSATION FOR CADETS.

It is intimated by the War Office that cadets who had passed their final examination but had not received commissions in the Army at the date of the armistice would receive compensation for actual and reasonable expenditure prior to 11th November on articles of military equipment laid down in Army Council Instruction 1837, 1917. Further, in the case of cadets who had not passed their final examination on 11th November compensation in full up to a limit of £15 would be paid in respect of articles of kit required by them for use at cadet schools to supplement those laid down in Army Council Instruction 833, 1918.

SIR EDWARD CARSON SUED FOR SLANDER.

OFFICER ACCEPTS HIS APOLOGY.

A good deal of interest attached to a slander action heard before the Irish Lord Chief Justice in the Nisi Prius Court, Dublin, in which the plaintiff was Major William Hamilton Davey, of Belfast, a former candidate for the Parliamentary representation of the Duncairn Division of Belfast, and the defendant was the Right Hon. Sir Edward Carson, M.P. Damages were laid at £ 5,000. Sir Edward Carson was present in court, and occupied a seat at the Press table.

Plaintiff's statement of claim set forth that plaintiff and defendant and another person (Dr. McNabb) were Parliamentary candidates for the Duncairn Division of Belfast. The defendant falsely and maliciously spoke and published of and concerning plaintiff the following words:

"This is the first time that I have had the opportunity of addressing a Belfast audience since the nomination yesterday and I want to say a word or two about the Sinn Feiners. I have two out against me in Duncairn. One of them is in gaol, and I am told that is his chief recommendation; and the other (meaning the plaintiff) is in Derry—at least, he was there yesterday. But so far as I am concerned I say let them all come. In my opinion there never was in the history of this controversy a greater insult offered to this great Imperial Province than when they put a Sinn Feiner forward to contest every seat. What have they done in the war? A gentleman says "Nothing." They did the worst act that has ever been perpetrated by a treacherous and perfidious people—they entered into a league with Germany—aye, at the very darkest hour in our country's struggle with the world-war for freedom, they stabbed us in the back, they shot down our soldiers in the streets of Dublin, they murdered our citizens; yes, and they blackened the character of Ireland not merely in England and Scotland, not only in America, but throughout the world. When the Sherwood Foresters were marching through Ballsbridge to protect the citizens of Dublin these men, from behind the walls of a school-house, shot our brave, honest, innocent men as if they were dogs. These are the men who have come up to woo the honest, loyal citizens of Belfast. They have been traitors to their country in the war, and, as they have been traitors in the war, let us tell them to go elsewhere."

Major Davey promptly complained about these words and Sir Edward Carson explained both by letter and word of mouth that they in no way referred to Major Davey personally.

At his next public meeting Sir Edward Carson said, All I can say is—and I hope Major Davey will believe me, because I don't know why we should not have a clean fight—I never intended, nor do I desire, to associate him in any way with Sinn Fein. If my language was capable of the construction which he has put on it I certainly regret that my language was in accurate, and if I have made any charge of the kind against Major Davey I most sincerely withdraw it. It is no part of my creed to make false charges against any man, and I would certainly much rather make a handsome apology than leave a man under an accusation which he did not deserve.

Counsel for Sir Edward Carson said that his client, while never intending that such a reflection should be made on an officer who had a distinguished record for service in the field, recognised that the words as appearing in the public Press were capable of conveying a serious imputation. He regretted very much that even in the excitement of an election contest there should slip into an impromptu objection an expression that caused offence to a gentleman who has done such good service as a soldier. On Sir Edward Carson's behalf counsel repeated the apologies that had already been made.

Mr. Serjeant Sullivan, for the plaintiff, said he was glad it had been recognised that the action had been brought by Major Davey by no means as a mere personal act of vindictiveness. Major Davey belonged to a class whose position he was afraid was not appreciated as it should be in Ireland, because in all the sacrifices that were made in the great war there was no class in the community that had in the result sacrificed so much as men of Major Davey's persuasion.

When the jury was about to be called Mr. Serjeant Sullivan for the plaintiff said his lordship would not be troubled about the case, and the jury need not be sworn.

Counsel then traced Major Davey's honourable war service, mentioning that he had fought at Armentières, and was wounded and invalided home in May of 1916. In October he was back in the line, and in March, 1917, he fought at Arras. June found him second in command, and in July he held the acting rank of major, which was subsequently confirmed. In October of that year he was in St. Quentin, and in January, 1918, after being sent back to Arras, he was invalided home for an operation arising from his old wound. From hospital in 1918 he came to assist in recruiting in Ireland. In November, 1918, Major Davey rejoined his regiment, and he was now a volunteer for continuation in the Army. Under these circumstances, counsel said, his client was deeply grieved that he should be linked with anybody against whom charges of the nature contained in defendant's speech could be levelled. The action made it perfectly clear how Major Davey stood in this matter. He was greatly pleased that the defendant, occupying as he did a distinguished position in public life, had done what, indeed, was too rare among men holding such high public positions—he had been ready to admit his fault and make reparation for it. On behalf of the plaintiff he accepted the apology in the spirit in which it was offered.

The Lord Chief Justice said he was glad the case had such a happy ending. He could quite understand how an officer in the position of Major Davey would feel it incumbent upon him to bring this action. He could also quite well understand how such a distinguished person as Sir Edward Carson would feel it incumbent upon him to admit his mistake in the frank terms in which he had, so it was satisfactory that the action, so far as it had gone, would result in a complete and absolute vindication of Major Davey, who in the war had faithfully served his King and country. There was no order for him to make, except regarding the taxation of the plaintiff's costs.

BELGIAN MONARCH VISITS COLOGNE.

AEROPLANE ADVENTURES.

The King and Queen of the Belgians have been staying in Cologne for a few days. They left on Monday by aeroplane. They had an adventurous journey at the outset of their trips while flying on their way to visit the Belgian troops who have recently been sent to the left bank of the Rhine to constitute part of the Armies of Occupation. Caught in a hailstorm near the German frontier, the King's machine landed near Düren, but later continued in the direction of Bochum, which it reached at 2.30 p.m.

The aeroplane in which the Queen was a passenger landed outside Liége, where it took in fresh supplies of petrol, and reached Bochum at 1.30 p.m.

A third aeroplane, in which a member of the King's suite was travelling, was carried to Visé, and finally arrived at Bochum at 12.30 a.m. The King and Queen afterwards proceeded from Bochum to Crefeld, where they were received by General Lotz.

BANDMASTERS AND COMMISSIONS.

QUESTION OF EXPENSE.

The question at to whether all military Bandmasters should have commissions is at present being discussed by the authorities. According to the Daily Graphic the War Office is agreeable, but the Treasury is against the innovation on the ground of the extra expense involved. There has been a strong agitation during the past few days to induce the authorities to relent, but without avail.

GENERAL FRENCH'S BOOK OF THE WAR.

CANDID CRITICISM.

To-day the serial publication of Field Marshal Lord French's book entitled "1914" commences in the Daily Telegraph. As the title implies, it deals with the first few months of the war. An outline of the contents indicates that Field Marshal French writes with frankness and describes with the utmost candour his relations with Lord Kitchener during the Mons retreat and in early days of 1915, when he was urgently pressing for reinforcements and larger supplies of munitions. Lord French explains why he resigned and praises Marshal Joffre as one of the world's supremely great leaders. Marshal Foch has written a preface to the book, in which he describes French as "a great soldier who had maintained his troops at the high level of the troops of Wellington."

FUTURE OF WOOLWICH ARSENAL.

Sir Kingsley Wood, speaking at Woolwich on Friday on the outlook for the future of Woolwich Arsenal said, with reference to the continued discharges, that the future of the Arsenal is largely dependent on the decisions arrived at by the Peace Conference. He saw no reason why locomotives should not be built there, or work connected with housing schemes be undertaken. It would be unwise, both for war and peace purposes, to allow the strength of the arsenal establishment to fall below twenty thousand men.

RIOTOUS AMERICAN SEAMEN.

Serious disturbances lasting for two hours occurred at Inverness on Saturday. A large number of American seamen engaged in mine-sweeping operations in the North Sea were congregated near the Town Hall. When requested by the police to move along they became extremely violent. One constable had his head badly injured and a number of other people sustained damage. A series of free fights occurred between civilians and American seamen. Several arrests were made.

AFTER THE WAR UNIFORMS.

KHAKI FOR EVER?

Utility and economy, not colour and brilliance, are the considerations in the minds of Lieut.-General Sir A.J. Murray's Committee which is investigating the general question of uniform for the after war army. There are indications that khaki and blue will be the predominant colours, says the Times.

CLEARING OUT CUTHBERTS.

The War Cabinet has empowered Sir Auckland Geddes to deal, with full Cabinet authority, with all questions concerning the abolition of controls and the demobilization of the temporary staffs of Government Departments. Already a large number of controls have been abolished. It is expected that a full statement dealing with the matter will be issued at an early date.

The Ministries of National Service and of Reconstruction will cease to exist in a few weeks. The Food Ministry will be the next of the war-time administrations to be closed. Any of its functions which may have to be continued permanently will be distributed among the Ministry of Health, the Board of Agriculture, and the Board of Trade.

NO OPERA ON MAY-DAY.

According to the Rheinische Zeitung the Opera house and the Theatre will be closed on May-day, as the different organisations employed, choir musicians, stage hands etc. have decided not to work on that day.

FLYING THE ATLANTIC OCEAN.

MYSTERIOUS MESSAGE.

The Air Ministry has emphatically denied that any cable asking why Hawker and Raynham did not start was sent by the Ministry's Meteorological Staff.

The Daily Mail says that the question is engaging attention as to the source of the unfavourable weather reports sent to the airmen at Newfoundland, at the time when the Air Ministry's information was to the effect that everything was favourable. Indeed the conditions during one spell of twenty-four hours were almost unprecedentedly fair.

It is understood that steps will be taken to safeguard reports from interference and in future they will be communicated to the airmen by special code.

PREJUDICE AGAINST MULES.

EXTREMES IN PRICES.

Handsome prices continue to be realised at sales of demobilized Army horses. At a sale at Reading on Saturday heavy draught horses fetched an average price of 117 pounds. The highest price paid was one hundred and fifty guineas each for a pair. Several light draught horses averaged fifty-one pounds, while seventy saddle horses only averaged thirty-five pounds ten shillings.

The demobilisation of Army mules is at advanced stage, about twenty-five thousand having been sold at an average price of thirty-two pounds ten shillings. About fifty thousand remain to be sold. The highest prices are obtained in Italy where five thousand mule fetched fifty-two pounds. Prices are lowest in England, where two thousand mules have been sold for an average of only nineteen pounds.

In explanation of this great disparity a remount official said there is an invincible prejudice against mules in England. People are not only afraid of them but country pride is against them.

DUKE OF SUTHERLAND'S ESTATES.

HIGH PRICES REALISED.

High prices continue to be realised at the sale of the Duke of Sutherland's estates. Cambusmore fetched 63,000 pounds, Rovie 14,300 pounds, Lairg and Dalchrok 33,000 pounds, Helmsdale and Naviedale 13,000 pounds making a total to date of 355,550 pounds. Other of the Sutherland properties previously sold aggregate 304,875 acres.

NAVAL VISIT TO REIMS.

Travelling by special train, Admiral Tyrwhitt, Admiral Leveson and Admiral Clinton Baker, with 150 officers and men of the British Navy, visited Reims on the 27th April.

The guests were received at the Cathedral by Archbishop Luçon and Monseigneur Neveux. After inspecting the town the party was conducted to different battlefields in the vicinity.

BRAVE V.A.D. NURSE.

The King has been pleased to award the Albert Medal in recognition of her gallantry displayed in saving life to Miss ALICE BATT, Voluntary Aid Detachment.

On October 1, 1918, a fire broke out at No. 38 Casualty Clearing Station at Roulers, Belgium, and quickly reached the operating theatre, where the surgeon was performing an abdominal operation. The lights went out, and the theatre was quickly filled with smoke and flames, but the operation was continued by the light of an electric torch, Miss Batt continuing her work of handing instruments and threading needles with steadfast calmness, thereby enabling the surgeon to complete the Operation. Miss Batt afterwards did splendid work in helping to carry men from the burning wards to places of safety.

IMPERIAL CEMETERY AT BROOKWOOD.

There is now a special military cemetery at Brookwood for those who have fallen in the war, and there are buried there:

300 Australians, 144 New Zealanders, 250 Canadians, 150 South Africans, 131 Americans, and 400 Imperial troops.

ENGLISH OCEAN TUG SUNK.

A telegram from Ostend announces that the British tug Hughli, making the regular journey from Ostend to Dover was sunk near Middelkerke during a fierce storm.

Of the crew of thirty-nine men twenty-nine perished.

A squadron of the Japanese Navy reached Marseilles on the 27th April.

A British officer and a Belgian non-commissoned officer were killed by the fall of an aeroplane in Belgium on Saturday.

Mr. Herbert Samuel has been appointed a Special Commissioner to assist in the reconstruction of Belgium.

THE FATE OF NATIONALISM.

The President of the Board of Education, Mr. H.A.L. Fisher, not long ago delivered a lecture which bore the fascinating title of Political Prophecies. He seemed to take all knowledge for his province, for he displayed a wondrous range of reading in the literature of ancient and modern days. But with a truly English caution he warned his audience against the rashness of historical speculation. Against the happy prophecies of Montesquieu, Heine, and Burke, there must always be set the ill-starred essays of Rousseau, Frederick the Great, and Palmerston. Prophecy is a by-path for the historian, and in it he travels at the imminent risk of his reputation. In truth, if we are not minded to go so far as Trevelyan and frankly declare that history cannot prophesy the future, we can certainly say that the business of the scientific historian calls him to less perilous tasks. Yet peril has its lure.

In these days we are tempted insistently to picture the future. Never was there a time so momentous as these days of travail. Are we to see the birth of a new world, a world of deliverance and hope? The spirit of nationality which has governed political ideals for more than four hundred years is on its trial before the tribunal of disillusioned democracy. Is it to be shorn of its vast powers and supplanted by a new spirit of kindlier and broader dominion? Is nationalism to give place to internationalism? There was a time in Europe when mankind was not greatly vexed by the bitterness of racial jealousy. In the Middle Ages patriotism was a virtue that made little appeal, for the fierce fires of nationality had not burst into flame. There were, indeed, amazing and deadly struggles for the rule of Christendom, and the snow-clad stronghold of Canossa was a medieval symbol of sustained rivalry between Pope and Emperor. Europe always had its Hildebrands and its Henries. But it is remarkable that even in days when passions were excited scholars could wander over Europe in the pursuit of learning, Churchmen could move from one country to another in ecclesiastical promotion, public-minded men could offer their statecraft to sovereigns of alien countries, and, most curious of all, soldiers not only enlisted under the standards of foreign powers but saw no shame in leading armies against the lands that reared them. Truly the Middle Ages fostered a wondrous cosmopolitanism. After the Reformation, a new spirit claimed Europe for its own, and gradually the nations of Christendom became more isolated, more intense in following out national ideals. The age of discovery was more than an age of revival in science, art, and letters; it was an age when the clash of nationalities resounded throughout the world. Under strong monarchies the peoples found new ideals. Religious wars gave place to economic and colonial wars; and the precarious makeshift of a Balance of Powers was the highest safeguard that peace-loving statesmen could devise.

We are now standing at the threshold of an era. As we turn our eyes backward we review the power of Spain in days when the riches of the new world were at her feet, the ascendancy of France when Louis XIV dominated Europe, the greatness of Prussia when Frederick the Great sowed the terror of militarism, the expansion of England when mastery of the sea gave her pride of place in industry and commerce. But we turn our eyes forward, and we see the hopelessness of nationalism. Lord Acton was never wiser than when he laid bare the ruthlessness of uncompromising nationality. Has the time not come when nationalism should be closely scrutinized? Too often it is a creed of individualism; and individualism is not the last word in the ethics of politics. The time will never come when we may not or should not give vent to our country's ideals—patriotism is too precious to die—but the time has come when the spirit of nationality should express itself in a worthier way than that of war.

There were two world powers which might have prevented the passing of national individualism into the tragedy of war — the Church and labour internationalism. But they failed when put to the supreme test. In 1914 the Church might have recaptured the glories of medieval Christendom and entered on a new age of spiritual triumph. International socialism, too, has belied the hopes of its friends. Its adherents have too easily assumed that to doff "nations" and to don "classes" is a world panacea. They cannot achieve real success till they purge their creed of materialism, and that is not an easy matter for men who still cling to Marx. The world looks with faith and hope to democracy, but a democracy that is not spiritual will fail the world. If Church and Labour have not succeeded, where lies our hope? It lies in a League of Nations; and both Church and Labour should see to it that the League shall prevail. The best in nationalism will be conserved under such a league. Mazzini was a fervent apostle of patriotism, yet there is much in his writings that almost anticipates the establishment of our ideal. States are not mere individual units in the world, and the times are ripe for a higher form of unity, which will safeguard every worthy national aim in that it is evolved naturally out of the old order. There need be no violence; there should be no delay.

TO OUR SNORER.

(Composed during a sleepless night.)

Oh thou who in the darkness lies,
Oblivious both to earth and skies,
Why can't you emulate the boys
Who sleep their sleep without a noise.

If only you could wake, and hear
Some subtle echo, sounding clear,
Each vibrant note, which comes and goes
From your stout bellows, via nose,
I'm sure that you would pity me
Who vainly woos tranquility.

Perchance, a rhythm in your blows
Might lull me to a peaceful doze;
And though my sleep should coloured be
By dreams of billows, bounding free
To meet a barrren, rocky shore
And there to break, with splash and roar,
I would not mind; your double bass
Would lightly rest and swiftly pass.

But when at times your breathing stops
With gurgles, splutters, startling pops;
Wheezes in a shrill falsetto,
Rumbles rendered allegretto;
Then, say I, if snore you must,
At least be merciful and just;
I ask it of your charity
To snore with regularity.

ANNIVERSARY OF ZEEBRUGGE.

APPROPRIATE CELEBRATION ON THE RHINE.

It is very doubtful whether even the most imaginative of our modern writers of boys' fiction would allow his mind to take such wild liberties as to conceive so thrilling a series of incidents as those which went to make up the British Naval exploit generally referred to as "the Zeebrugge affair." And even supposing such a plot did occur to him, he would no doubt dismiss it as being too grotesque and improbable even for the delectation of the very youthful.

The plans, and the execution of them, were daring and audacious enough in all conscience, but that the first anniversary of the achievement would be celebrated in no other waters than those of the Rhine, surely the cheeriest and most optimistic prophet did not dare to foretell.

But this happened in truth, nevertheless.

On Monday, of last week, twelve naval boats proceeded majestically up the Rhine, from the base at Cologne, and, after staying the night at Coblenz, arrived at Mainz at Tuesday morning.

The personnel made an impressing landing with colours, a marine escort and an armed party. The flotilla, meanwhile, was anchored in the river, four boats abreast.

At Halle-Platz — whither they marched — the naval representatives were received by the Military Staff Officer to General Mangin, commanding the 10th (French) Army.

Here the procession was re-formed and it is doubtful if the large number of German civilians who lined the street really realized the significance of the event they were witnessing.

A detachment of Spahis led the way in a march through the charming town of Mainz and they were followed by the French bands, members of the British Navy and a detachment of French Naval men, as far as General Mangin's Palace.

The afternoon was devoted to a review on the Rhine, twelve French and twelve British M.L.'s steaming up the water in two lines. General Mangin, afloat in a motor launch, circled round the flotilla (a salute of seventeen guns being fired meanwhile) and took up a position by the breakwater. At this stage, Colonial and French troops took part in the proceedings, providing music of a kind in keeping with the happy occasion, on the river banks.

The General was cheered enthusiastically by those on board each boat as they sailed slowly past.

In the evening, General Mangin entertained 18 of the naval officers at dinner, the remainder dining in the French flotilla mess, while sixteen petty officers visited another mess of the French authorities.

In a brief happily-worded after-dinner speech, the General spoke in terms of admiraton of the British Navy; of how it had convoyed and conveyed the American army to the theatres of war and of how it had defeated the piratical submarines and rendered impotent the power of the enemy navy.

Commander the Hon. P. Acheson, D.S.O., M.V.O., R.N., remarked upon the achievements and conduct generally of the French Army and Navy.

There were wonderful scenes on the banks of the Rhine later in the evening, after a cinematograph entertainment had been enjoyed, when there took place a brilliant firework display. Numerous red flares stretching to opposite side of the water produced an effect against the sylvan scenery that forms so charming a boundary at this part of the river, which was dazzling in its beauty.

A torchlight procession through the main thoroughfares of the town was followed by a gathering of the British and French petty officers outside the Palace, the accordance of three rousing cheers to the General and the singing of "For he's a jolly fellow." These enthusiastic tokens of admiration were acknowledged from the balcony.

On Thursday, General Mangin paid an official visit to Coblentz and was escorted thither by four boats of the British flotilla. The remaining eight boats which left earlier in the day to return to their base at Cologne, were greeted with the greatest enthusiasm by French and American troops, who lined the river banks, en route.

The story of the glorious Zeebrugge exploit has been told and retold to our justifiably proud nation on many occasions, but recapitulation, on so appropriate an occasion as the anniversary provides, is surely not out of place.

On the eve of St. George's Day, 1918, a comparatively small number of Naval men went forth to block the Bruges Canal at Zeebrugge and so to stop the steady stream of enemy submarines and destroyers that crept from out the narrow strip of water to wage war against hospital and merchant craft whether of hostile nationality or otherwise.

Those men undertook their task (and many others were ambitious to participate in it) with the knowledge that their chances of ever coming back were remote indeed, and they completed it with full measure of success.

A small flotilla of miscellaneous craft sailed in broad daylight in order to be at the appointed place by midnight manned by hearts as brave and as daring as any that can be cited in history or fiction. They carried out a plan that had taken six months to complete, in direct range of the most formidable coast defences that ingenuity could devise; right in the very nest of a conglomeration of terrific guns and powerful searchlights, these men dropped their blockships with amazing occuracy, what time an enfuriated enemy poured huge quantities of shells and bombs amongst the smoke clouds, behind which their very unwelcome visitors took a certain measure of cover.

St. George's Day thus has a new significance, and in its celebration by future generations will invariably be associated this latest evidence of the maintenance of our Navy's traditional spirit of audacious daring and endurance.

"SEHNSUCHT."

The sun-kissed slopes of Malvern,
The drowsy medes of Teme,
The wooded banks of Severn Vale
Wrapt in a noontide dream—
These are the scenes which I deem blest,
Wherein my weary limbs find rest.

They shout, the lofty spires
Which soar beside the Rhine,
With grandeur of their Carillon—
I grant that they are fine,
But, finer far to come to-day
And walk with me down Bewdley way.

The blossoms break at Bewdley,
Their perfume drugs the air,
The langour of a summer's day
Lies heavy everywhere.
God, in thy greatness, grant me rest
Amidst my valleys of the West.

O.R.S.

CELEBRITIES IN KHAKI.

by W. E.

PTE OMAR KHAYYAM.

Once upon a time my Battalion was encamped in camouflaged canvas dwelling-places, on the muddy fields of a certain place which the yealled Fisborough.

Now in those days the rain was much and the sun little, so that the surface of the fields whereon we dwelled was like unto a sea of mud.

The very holes in my tent — holes which had oft received my blessing in days of heat — were during this permanent rainy season, an abomination and a desolation unto me. I have often fallen asleep with an imperfect idea of being surrounded with earthy worms. And, though at first my objections were intense, there were perchance times when I would experience a paternal emotion towards the antipedes whose attachment to my aural cavities was so pronounced.

We drew lots one day, as to who should go to the R.Q.M.S. and indent for a new tent. When I saw the unfortunate applicant emerging from that Official's residence, head foremost, and with a careless disregard for the law of gravity (being in fact, some three feet or more from Mother Earth), I was rather relieved that the lot had not fallen upon me.

After a time, Captains of the Day began to weary of the somewhat monotonous duty of acting as Captains of the Night, and of rushing out under the moon in bare feet and pyjamas — all for a mere tent that would become suddenly possessed of lofty ambitions.

Besides, respect for rank could never be obtained from a damp and sleepy Orderly Sergeant at 3 a.m.

An urgent consultation took place. In a fit of unaccountable generosity, the P.R.I., with noble sacrifice, offered the sum of ten shillings per week to be devoted to the mending of the tents.

Some brainy sub. (the supply is, unfortunately, very limited) suggested that the services of a professional tent-maker be brought into requisition.

Accordingly, an advertisement to that effect appeared in the local newspaper.

A few mornings later, there was a "Stunt" parade, and five o'clock in the morning saw me in full marching order and a bitter temper.

The Battalion looked splendid — truly a noble array. The brilliant spectacle of the Orderly Room Staff in full pack rendered the scene even more awe-inspiring.

Why the tent-maker chose that particular moment to arrive is unknown. Having elaborately camouflaged himself behind two mules and a limber, he was not observed until he nearly collided with the Adjutant.

His figure was tall and lean, suggesting long acquaintance with the Privates' Mess. His robe was old and tattered; his stick was thick and long; and his deepset eyes gazed romantically upwards. He halts before the Adjutant. "Behold! Omar the tent-maker! Omar of Nai hàpúr! Omar the Astronomer! Omar the Cooker of the Calender, the King of the Wise!"

"But my good man —" began the Adjutant, already conscious of the concentrated stare of the Battalion in his direction.

"Rejoice to have beheld in the flesh Omar Khayyám—Khayyám who stitched the tents of Science!"

"Of course, I—er—quite understand," murmured the Adjutant, who didn't understand in the least.

"Omar the Great has deigned to come and serve ye that have need of so a one. The ropes of Science — are they not mine to tread upon, nor do I fall? The ropes of Literature, have I not walked on them, and fainted not? How much more, then, can I not tend the ropes of tents and make them whole!"

"What he really means, Sir," ventured the R.S.M. to his bewildered superior, "is that he offers himself for the job of tent-mender." "Oh! — Ah! — 'M! — Better take him to the Orderly Room at once. The C.O. will be there presently."

And so Omar Khayyam and the R.S.M. moved toward the Orderly Room. The old man opened conversation at once. The R.S.M. thought that he must have been a very gay dog in his youth — and indeed, was shockingly surprised to feel, on a sudden, Omar's whiskers tickling the back of his neck, and Omar's voice murmuring into his ear.

"Warrior — tell me — the juice of the Grape? is it near? O for a deep draught of the red, red wine! 'Here with a loaf of bread beneath the Bough, a Flask of Wine, a Book of—'"

Observing a look of excessive boredom on the face of his companion, Omar asked in sepulchral tones whether the warrior had read his Rubaiyat.

The R.S.M.—whose course in English Literature had entirely finished on his last day at school, and which even then, had only included the laboured perusal of certain bloodthirsty booklets purchaseable for one penny — politely admitted his oversight.

They reached the Mess, and the R.S.M. commenced some rapid expenditure on Wine—an indulgence of which Omar seemed particularly fond.

An hour later Omar Khayyam was summoned by the C. O.

Unfortunately, Mr. Khayyam, being by that time in a state of morbid melancholy, was reclining at his ease under a table. With some assistance, however, he reached the Orderly Room safely.

There was much incoherent talk on the part of Omar. Nevertheless the interview terminated with an arrangement that Omar should be given the acting rank of Private with full pay and allowances, and extra duty pay of 6d per day while acting as Battalion tent-mender.

For several weeks he devoted himself most assiduously to his many tasks.

He was much given, however, to sudden fits of joyousness, which would cause him to dance and sing in the most persistent and noisy manner.

While on occasion, the B.O.S. would discover him, long after "lights out," in his tent, contemplating his big toes, and composing romantic poetry by the flickering light of a candle.

We all knew that his tenure of office would be a very short one.

The crisis came when, on a certain summer evening in August, Omar was found in recumbent position in a field hugging with his right arm a barrel once filled with beer, and holding in his left his original MSS of his Rubaiyat. In consequence of the spirit having been transferred from the barrel to his stomach, Omar was thereby much enlivened, and when found at eleven p.m. was singing with raucous voice from his parchment . . . .

Neyt day, the C.O. informed Mr. Khayyam that as the windy season had departed, there was no further need for his services, and he must go too.

The C.O. was observed to strike his name from the roll of the Battalion . . . .

Omar Khayyam turned, and with stately tread, wandered away for ever, murmuring as he wandered.

"The Moving Finger writes, and having writ,
Moves on: nor all thy Piety nor Wit
Shall have it back to cancel half a line,
Nor all thy tears wash out a Word of it."

THE ORANGE LILIES.

4th ROYAL SUSSEX CONCERT PARTY.

The recently formed concert party of the 4th Royal Sussex Regiment held a very succesful opening concert at Wahn on Thursday. Everything went with a fine swing, and those responsible for the production are to be congratulated on a very clever performance. Pte. Oborn rendered "Joan of Arc" in good style, as did Lce Cpl. Evans, "There's a little lane."

"Soldiers like it" with "Katy" as an encore were cleverly sung by Pte. Acton, whose singing is as delightful as his football, Pte. Redmond as the "girl" was very "chic" and, judging by the comments of the audience, Miss Stubbage will have a very strong rival in the next beauty competition.

The evening closed with a very amusing effort by the company, "Ragtime Hopping Troupe." By the applause as the curtain dropped, "The Orange Lilies" have every prospect of a very successful season before them.

PRESENTATION OF MEDALS.

51st ROYAL SUSSEX INTERESTING CEREMONY.

A very interesting and pleasing ceremony took place at Neunkirchen on Thursday last when the Commanding Officer, Lt. Col. V.T.A. Ford, D.S.O., presented the medals to the winners and runners-up in the Brigade Boxing Tournament held at Wahn.

Medals were also presented to the members of the football team of 8 platoon of "X" Company who were champions of the inter-Platoon Football League.

Col. Ford handed the medals to each individual with a few well chosen words of congratulation. The recipients were as follows:

Boxing: Capt. Wheeler, "X" Corps; Cpl. Mempes, "W" Coy; Lce Cpl. Parker, "X" Coy; Lce Cpl. Missen, "X" Coy; Drummer Steels, Headquarters; Pte. Burgess, "X" Coy; Pte. Wilden, "X" Coy; Pte. King, "Z" Coy; Pte. Copping, "W" Coy; Pte. Herbert, "W" Coy; Pte. Walker, Headquarters.

Football: Pte. Dodd, Pte. Hunt, Pte. Warne, L/Cpl. Revis, Pte. Collins, Pte. Mubross, Pte. Cross, Pte. Bleach, Pte. Boneham, Pte. Hampton, Pte. Everett, L/Cpl. Prigg.

CONCERT AT SIEGBURG Y.M.C.A.

A most successful entertainment was given at the Siegburg Y.M.C.A. on Saturday evening by "The Scroungers" (34th M.G.C.). Mr. J. V. Yeatman is much to be congratulated on the all round excellence of the programme. Popular items were rendered by Lieut. Richardson, Sergt. Major Madden, Sergt. Leff, Pte Ogden and Pte Stanton, while Pte Hunt, the female impersonator, and Sergt. Da Silva the "Funny man" were much appreciated by the large audience. A small but efficient orchestra greatly added to the evening's enjoyment.

62nd MACHINE GUNNERS AMUSEMENTS.

The Battalion Football Inter-Company League is still like "Johnny Walker" — "Going Strong," with "B" Company well on the way to final victory.

A very successful Battalion Whist Drive took place in the Central Halle, Arnoldsweiler, on Thursday evening, when 180 all ranks sat down to a most enjoyable evening.

The prizewinners were as follows: —

1st Ladies, Pte. Flintham; 1st Gents, Pte. Brown; 2nd Prize, Cpl. McNiel; 3rd Prize, Pte. Langley; 4th Prize, Pte. Berger; 5th Prize, Pte. Stevenson; Sealed No., Pte. McInnes; Booby Prize, Pte. Prosser.

Sgt. Sillet (A. Coy) proved a most efficient "M.C."

Arrangements are in hand to form a local Concert Party and meanwhile the 62nd Battalion Machine Gunners would welcome a visit from any other local Concert Party.

"KOYLIES" SPORTS TOURNAMENT.

"C" COMPANY WIN AT RUGGER.

There was a fitting finale on Friday to the sports tournament which has been so keenly contested by all ranks in the 5th K.O.Y.L.I. at Liblar. "C" and "B" Coys. met on the Rugger field in a game which decide the championship, and from a hard struggle "C" Coy emerged triumphant, scoring the only try in a game which was packed full of excitement. The final arrived with a clean score sheet. Extra time was played, and just before the end of the first ten minutes Lce. Cpl. Robinson broke away and crossed the line beautifully. Lt. Ebury's attempt to convert was, however, something of a fiasco. Sec. Lt. G.H. Needham was the referee.

This sports tournament, which "C" Coy. have won so well, was a very comprehensive affair, embracing soccer, rugger, boxing, cross country running and tugs of war. We hope to publish the analyses in another issue, but it may be of interest to note here that "C" have not had a goal or a point scored against them in rugger or soccer.

The 24th Duke of Wellington's on Friday defeated "Q" Battery R.H.A., by 7—1.

MEDICINE MEN AT WHIST.

A most enjoyable evening was spent at Kaster on Friday night, when No. 6 Field Ambulance held the last of a series of Whist Drives. A feature of the evening's play was the close running of many of the entrants, no fewer than three having tied for 2nd prize, which was decided by cut. Sgt. Waddell proved a most efficient M.C.

The prizes which were handed over by Q.M.S. Hardy were gained by Pte. Hyndes, Heyes and Graham and Dr. Maltby.

"THE COLOGNE POST" CRICKET CUP: ENTER NOW.

SPORTS AT BRASCHOSS.

"C" Coy 52nd Battn. Bedfordshire Regt.

In spite of the cold and dull weather which prevailed, the sports organized at Braschoss on Friday by "C" Coy of the 52nd Bedfords afforded a large concourse of spectators great excitement and plenty of amusement. Splendid talent was discovered during the day's proceedings, notably Ptes Rochester and Myhill. The former promises to develop into a sprinter of a high order, and from the style in which the latter carried off the 1/4 mile, it will be surprising if more is not heard of him on the athletic fields in the future. In the 100 yds service dress race for W.Os and sergts. of the Coy, great amusement was caused by the failure of the majority of competitors to keep the "strait and narrow path which leadeth to" — — the winning post. The Officer's sprint was productive of great excitement, Lieut. Nokes winning from Lieut. Beresford by fractions of inches. L/C Merry was the "Victor Ludorum" with 16 points, but he of course was previously known as an athlete of repute, his performances at outside right for the Battn. proving him to be something of a speed merchant. The following are the results:—

220 yards: 1, Pte Rochester; 2, L/Cpl Merry; 3, Cpl Barker.

3/4 Mile: 1, Pte Myhill; 2, Cpl Merry; 3, Cpl Barker.

1 2 Mile: 1, Pte Lawrie; 2, Pte Milam; 3, Pte Frizzall.

1 Mile: 1, Pte Myhill; 2, Pte Lawrie; 3 Pte Cloant.

Hurdles: 1, L/Cpl Merry; 2, Pte Cleave; 3, Pte Neave.

High Jump: Tie at 4 ft 6, Ptes Amphbell and Crow.

Long Jump. 1, Pte Rochester; 16 ft.; 2, L C Ball

Throwing the Cricket Ball: 1, Pte Peaman; 78 yds; 2, L/Cpl Merry.

Open 220: 1, R.Q.M.S. Blackwell; 2, Pte Myhill.

3 Legged Race: 1, Cpl Barker and Pte Cleave; 2, Pte Slade and Pte Pricket; also ran C. S. M. Mansfield and C.Q.M.S. Veasey.

Tug of War: No. 9 Platoon.

Platoon Relay Race: No. 9 Platoon.

Obstacle Race: 1, Pte Crow; 2, R.Q.M.S. Blackwell.

W. O. and Sergts. Race: 1, Sergt. Wolgar; 2, Sergt. Dalby; 3, Sergt. Nale.

Officers Race: 1, Lieut. Noke; 2, Lieut. Beresford; 3, Lieut. Whateley Knight.

Capt. A.C. Woodhouse, commanding the Company, and Capt. Brooks gave every satisfaction as judges; while Capt. Campion made an effective starter. C.S.M. Mansfield, C.Q.M.S. Veasey and the other Sergts. of the Coy. rendered every assistance and materially helped to make the day enjoyable and in every way a great success.

WELSH REGIMENT SPORTS MEETING.

52nd BATTALION MEETING.

A very successful meeting was held at Duisdorf on Monday in excellent weather. The band of the Northants Regt. attended, by kind permission of Major G.D. Gauld. M.C., and their tuneful and excellently rendered selections were much appreciated by a large attendance.

The events were well contested. In the opening stages it seemed that no one could be found to equal the really excellent sprinting of Capt Gilbert.

At the conclusion, Brigadier General T.O. Marden C.B., C.M.G. presented the prizes.

Results:

100 yards (open): Capt. Gilbert;

100 yards (A 4): L Cpl. Williams;

100 yards (Sergts.): Sergt. Beynon;

100 yards (Officers): 2nd Lieut. Baldwin;

220 yards (open): Capt. Gilbert;

1 Mile (open): Pte. Wilson;

Company relay race: "A" Coy;

Marathon (3 Miles): Corpl. Burgess;

Tug of War: "C" Company.

K.O.Y.L.I. TUG OF WAR

A noteworthy achievement has to be credited to "B" Coy of the 5th K.O.Y.L.I., who in the inter-platoon tug-of-war competition at Liblar, on Wednesday, succeeded in getting their four teams into the semi-finals. The final was contested by No. 6 and 7 platoons, and was easily the best pull of the afternoon, being the only contest in which three pulls were necessary to decide the issue. No. 6 had the better of the first argument, and seemed like getting the honours in the second, but their opponents recovered well, cleverly regained the lost ground and finally pulled No. 6 over the mark. The final pull was decided amidst tense excitement. And a hard pull it was too; but cohesion did wonders for No. 7, who emerged the champion tug-of-war platoon in the Battalion.

The names of the finalists are appended: —

No. 7 Platoon: Lce. Cpl Marshall, Ptes Geory, Lovesay, Mc Cauley, Hughes, Smith, Wright and Tenkinson. Coach: Sergt. Turner.

No. 6: Cpl. Robey, Cpl. Hopkins, Ptes. T. E. Henderson, W. Henderson, Moxon, Hale, Sharratt, and Radford. Coach: Pte. Berry.

ENCOURAGING THE YOUNG IDEA.

SERGEANTS, 24 S.B. R.G.A. v. JUNIOR N.C.O.'s 24 S.B. R.G.A.

Played at Grossbullesheim on Thursday.

As the result of a challenge, the whole of the eleven sergeants of 24 S.B. turned out to meet the one and two striped striplings of the battery.

The referee did not turn up until the match had been in full swing for twenty minutes and the juniors took full advantage of that fact by scoring two offside goals. Nothing daunted, the sergeants then put a terrific spurt on, which resulted in "Bloater Snelling" putting the ball through the wrong goal—the sergeants'. The spectators by this time were getting delirious and one very assertive individual wanted his gate-money back. He was reconciled by the offer of a front seat in the grand-stand.

In the opening of the second half, that brilliant Corinthian — Sheppard of the Dust'ole Hornets — took matters in his own hand, but unfortunately he miss-kicked. Later on, however, he was only prevented from scoring by the Juniors' zealous goalie. After that unseemly incident, Pinchard removed his overcoat, braces, and indifference which soon enabled him to score three goals in rapid succession for the sergeants. As an encouragement to their youthful comrades, the sergeants then allowed the juniors to score another goal—and Mayon then woke up. Result:—Junior N.C.O's 4; Sergeants 3.

KING WILLOWS.

"THE COLOGNE POST" CUP.

GROUNDS AND GEAR.

If you have no cricket ball and find, as you probably will, that the stocks of the Amusement Officer or the E.F.C. are exhausted, send home for one. Find a suitable field — admittedly a rather difficult matter — mark out a playing pitch and then get it into order.

No roller? Nonsence! Make one. Get a large oil drum, fix an axle in position and then fill it with concrete. Our lawn at home never had another sort on it.

Whatever you do — and we take it you have decided to win our cup — you must get on with it. The winners of the cup will have to go all out to win. Entries are coming in and we note the names of sundry artists with the bat and wizards with the ball who will make and mar many a century before the competition is through.

Do not be discouraged if your prospects of finding an ideal ground appear somewhat remote at present.

There is surely a length of land sufficient for a net. Remember it is the eye which needs the most practice. The whole secret of successful batting is the timing of the ball, following its flight right up to the pitch. One can do that without any special gear.

Doubtless there will be a shortage of grounds in which case arrangements will have to be made for several teams to use the same ground on different days. This will do away to a large extent with the advantage, which out here is problematic, of playing at home. That is all for the good of the game, which is the thing.

Several excellent suggestions have reached us, one of which we will certainly adopt. It is that the winners of the Cup shall play "the rest." Probably we shall endeavour to arrange a function at which the Cup will be presented. We might even consider the idea of an open air fête, although with the month of May here and Spring yet afar off, it is difficult to enthuse on that idea at the moment. "Hope springs eternal," however, and we are hoping.

As soon as we can definitely define the areas of the competition we will announce the rules, which will not be in the least complicated. Meanwhile send in your entries.

POINT-TO-POINT RACES.

16th BRIGADE R.H.A. MEETING.

This Meeting was held on Easter Monday in the meadows West of Klein Vernich.

There was an attendance of several thousand, the Staff and Cavalry being well represented, while the surrounding villages attended down to the last child and dog. The latter were very much in evidence and a gallant Major of the Horse Gunners made a great impression on the local inhabitants by vociferously appealing for revolvers to clear the Course of the pests. The aforesaid local inhabitants appeared to be in some doubt wheter the Major's sanguinary intentions would be confined solely to dogs and hurriedly departed to more peaceful spots.

The entries averaged over 20 for each event. Lt.Col. Spencer Smith and the 16th Brigade R.H.A. may be congratulated on the all round success of the meeting and a very enjoyable afternoon's sport provided for all.

The course embraced a skilful combination of artificial jumps with natural obstacles.

Falls were fairly numerous, but all agreed that the course was thoroughly fair and sporting, and the racing was excellent, finishes being in several cases very close.

Captain Eckstein had very bad luck in the open Heavy Weight race, as when he appeared likely to win the spectators crowded in so much at the finish as to interfere with horse and throw him out of his stride, with the result that he was beaten by Lieut. Elliot on "Lady Bett".

The Officials and Stewards were:

Stewards:— Brig. Genl. W.P. Monkhouse, C.B., C.M.G., M.V.O., R.A.; Lt.Col. D.C. Spencer Smith, R.H.A.; Major A.W. van Straubenzee, D.S.O., R.H.A., Major A.G. Archdale, R.H.A. and Captain J.C. Campbell, R.H.A.

Clerks of the Course and Scales:— Captain F.R. Watson, M.C., R.H.A., and Lieut. M.P. Benton, R.H.A.

Judge:— Brig. Genl. W.P. Monkhouse, C.B., C.M.G., M.V.O., R.A.; Starter:— Captain E.M. Tyler, M.C., R.H.A.; Totalisator:— Captain R. Heraiman.

RESULTS.

3 Mile (officers): 1, Bolleston. Lt. R. Straker, 12th Lancers; 2, Ridge, Major R.F. Bett, D.A.D.V.S. Mid. Div.; 3, Thomas, Major-General C.J. Deveseil, Northern Div.

Totalisator paid 2 to 1 against. Won by half a length. Six lengths between 2nd and 3rd, 10 runners.

3 Mile (officers): 1, Parvus, Mr. F.R. Gaskell, 10th Hussars; 2, No. 33, Lt. L.P. Huggins, "A" Battery, R.H.A.; 3, Bobby, Lt. E.P. Dangerfield, "O" Battery, R.H.A.

Totalisator paid 8 to 1 against. Won by a length. Two lengths between 2nd and 3rd, 20 runners.

One Mile (W.Os. & Sergeants): 1, Kitty, R.S.M. Powley, 16th Bde. R.H.A.; 2, Ginger, B.S.M. Bull, Warwickshire H.A.; 3, Ambrose, Sergt. Kemp, "A" Btty., R.H.A.

Totalisator paid evens. Won by 10 lengths, 15 runners.

3 Mile (officers):— 1, Lady Betty, Lt. R.H. Elliot, Inniskilling Dgns.; 2, Right There, Capt. Eckstein, 18th Lancers; 3, No. 17, Major T.C. Chilton, 505 Btty. R.F.A.

Totalisator paid 2 to 1 against. Won by 4 lengths. Three lengths between 2nd and 3rd, 18 runners.

One mile (other ranks below sergeant):— 1, Betty, Gunner O'Neil, Warwickshire H.A. 2, Tango, Driver Anderson, 15th Bde. R.H.A.; 3, Micky, Corpl. Mangan, "A" Battery R.H.A.

Totalisator paid 2 to 1 against. Won by two lengths. Two lengths 2nd and 3rd, 15 runners.

One Mile:— 1, Maintenon, Driver Kully, 16th R.H.A. Bde. Ammn. Col.; 2, The Brat, Driver Mansell, "Q" Battery R.H.A.; 3, Deception, Driver Ernslow, "A" Battery, R.H.A.

Totalisator paid evens. Won by 20 lengths. A bad third. 11 runners.

5th LABOUR COMPANY, H. Q. v. SIEGBURG DETACHMENT.

Played at Volksgarten, Cologne, on Sunday, in wet weather. Following a corner, Oddie scored for H. Q. The Detachment had a look in and Lt. Wilkins saved well, handicapped by the greasy ground and ball. H. Q. again took up the running and after some passing among the forwards, Forster scored. Shortly before half-time however, a run down by the Detachment yielded a goal scored by Coyle. H. Q. continued to have the better of matters, and Jones scored a third goal. Final:—Siegburg Detachment 3—1.

LONDON DIVISIONAL RACES.

SUCCESSFUL FIRST DAYS PROGRAMME.

The London Divisinal two-day race meeting opened yesterday at Kalk, Cologne, under the most favourable auspices. The weather, although showery, was for the most part bright and sunny and something like 3000 spectators enjoyed a thoroughly good afternoon's sport. Among the many distinguished officers present was the Army Commander.

The officials were:-

Stewards: Major General Sir S.T.B. Lawford K.C.B., Brig.-General F. W. Ramsay, C.M.G., D.S.O., Brig.-General F. A. Dudgeon, C.B., Brig.-General J.S. Percy, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., Brig.-General L. C. L. Oldfield, C.M.C., D.S.O., R.A.

Judges; April 28th: Lieut. General Sir A. Godley, K.C.B., K.C.M.G. 29th: Major General Sir A. A. Chichester K.C.M.G., C.B. Assistent: Captain Coatsworth.

Starter: Brig.-General W. P. Monkhouse C.M.G., M.V.O., R.A. Assistant: Captain J. Clark M.C., 16th Lancers.

Clerks of the Course: Major E. J. Broy, M.C., R.F.A. Captain E. H. Davie, Royal Fusiliers.

Clerks of the Scales: Captain & Q.M.B.W. Jordan, M.C. "Queens" Captain Rickett, Royal Fusiliers.

Secretary Major C.M. Longmore, D.S.O. Hon. medical Officer Captain A.W. Comber, R.A.M.C. Hon. Vet. Officer Captain J.P. Mac Donald, R.A.V.C.

There were large fields for all the events and exciting finishes were frequent.

The results were:

The Kalk Scurry: 1. Ruby (Lieut. Bloddworth R.A.S.C.), 2. Furlong (Capt. combers, R.A.M.C.), 3. Bubbles (Capt. Beauchamp-Nobbs, 9th East Surrys.)

Ubique Chase: 1. Tails up (Major Rasleigh, R.F.A.); 2. Ginger (Capt. Martin, R.F.A.).

Cologne Derby: 1. Boys O'Boys, (Col. Hodgins, A.V.C.); 3. Tommy (Capt. Welham R.A.V.C.).

International Chase: 1. Right There (Capt. Eckstein, 17th Lancers); 2. Paddy (Capt. Hodgins, R.A.V.C.); 3. Yellow Peril (Lieut. McFarlane).

Metropolitan Scurry: 1. Charlie (Major Davidson, R.A.M.C.); 2. Elate (Lieut. Lamb, R.F.A.); 3. Irongate, (Capt. Montgomery, London Division.)

The organisation of the meeting was all that could be desired. A well arranged bus and motor lorry service conveyed spectators from all parts and the arrangements for patrons convenience on the course itself were in every way excellent.

93rd BRIGADE R.G.A. v. 17th ROYAL FUSILIERS.

At Kalk on Thutsday. The most satisfactory feature of the game was the large attendance of spectators. Chance started for the gunners and Stalker at once made tracks for the goal. He beat the centre half and passed to Tully whose well placed shot beat the keeper. Hopson scampered down the wing, placed into Stalker, who calmly pushed it past the goalie. Within another three minutes, Chance made it three. Tully added two more goals before the interval.

The second half was started in a hail storm and it interfered with play considerably. The 17th put up a hard fight and with the least bit of luck would have scored, Cpl. James having hard luck on two occasions. Near the end Hunt scored from a well placed corner by Hopson. Result:—93rd Brigade R.G.A. 6; 17th Royal Fusiliers 0.

The R.G.A. possessed a good defence. Mead's post was not a sinecure. He proved excellent in placing himself in the correct position to deal with what came his way. Priest rather savours of the impetuous, but he has good pace for recovery. Julie is destined to become a class back in the future, his kicking of the wet ball was good. In opening the game Kenyon had no equal and Hurt played an effective game at lefthalf. Olphert was rather off. Tully was the pick of the vanguard, his first and second goals being fine efforts. Chance did quite well in the centre, but things hardly came off for him. Stalker was a schemer and he showed he could shoot. Hopson had little, too little, of the ball, for he showed pace and cleverness. Walton, when he got the ball, was clever without being fast enough. The Fusilier's goalie played fairly well, and he certainly should have saved two goals. The backs were inclined to be wild, the halves were workers, but they failed to support the forwards. Cpl. James and the centre were the pick of a good "middle of the field" forward line.

R.A.F. MATCH at AIX-LA-CHAPELLE.

Considerable interest was aroused over a football match which took place on Thursday between No 2 Kite Balloon Section and a chosen XI representing the Physical Training School in the neighbourhood. A few minutes after the kick off the Section, after a splendid break through opened their scoring, but the play following this was confined to mid-field, where the Schools centre half was seen to great advantage. After a brilliant effort by the Sections right wing, which proved to be a great asset to their side, the centre forward was instrumental in scoring their second goal. Then the School scored and the Section added two more in rapid succession. The Training School put up a very plucky fight considering the few men they had to chose from. The final whistle declared the Section winners by 7 goals to 3.

53rd MANCHESTER SCHOOL STAFF v. ORDERLY ROOM STAFF.

Played at Menden as the result of a challenge. A spirited attack on the school left wing left the centre with a glorious opportunity to score, but a moment's hesitation saw the Orderly room left back neatly nip in and the ball was transferred to mid-field. The School Staff did all the attacking but could not score. On one occasion from one of their very rare breaks away, the Orderly Room should have notched the first point, but thanks to a magnificent save by W. Birkett, the School custodian, the attack fizzled out.

It was left to the Orderly room to obtain the first goal, but shortly afterwards, from a corner kick, well placed by Iredale, Lt. Farman was enabled to equalise. From then onwards, the game was well contested, and in the last minute from a centre from Watson on the School left wing, Iredale left the goalkeeper helpless, with a fine shot. The game ended with the score 2—1 in favour of the school.

DRAW TO MEET THE YANKS AT COBLENZ.

1/4 Royal Scots Fusiliers v. 5/6 Royal Scots Fusiliers at Ohligs.

Attendance very good—weather wretched. This match promised great excitement, as the teams met on Wednesday last, the game resulting in a draw after playing extra time. Good work by the half-backs enabled the forwards to get moving and when Lieut. Hamilton broke through, only an extraordinarily good save by the Royal Scots goalie saved the situation. Shortly after however, a nicely placed cross from Bell was turned to excellent advantage by Lieut Hamilton who scored with a "header." Royal Scots seemed to settle down, and their half-backs put in some good work. The Fusiliers backs were tested again and again but in most cases relieved the situation. On the restart the Royal Scots forwards got away, but were soon held up by the Fusiliers half backs. Shortly after Lieut. Hamilton broke right through the defence and sent in a "grounder" which the Royal Scots custodian could only partly stop. At this stage of the game the Royal Scots lost whatever hold they did have on the game, and it was difficult to recognise in them the team who, but a few days previously, forced a draw after extra time. The Fusiliers forwards seemed to do as they liked and only the opposing backs were still in the picture. Another raid by the Fusiliers forwards gave Lieut. Hamilton his opportunity, which he turned to good account and also completed the "Hat Trick" By this time most of the players were no doubt thinking of the final whistle as the ground was now practically unplayable. Towards the closing minutes the Fusiliers were awarded a penalty for handing in the penalty area, but this resulted in no increase of the score. Result:— R.S.F., 3, R.S., 0.

The only remaining hurdle is represented by the team of the 15th H.L.I. who drew a "Bye" and who will meet the "Fusil Jocks" at an early date. It is perhaps too early however to conjecture which team will receive the return tickets to Coblenz. With reference to the game played to-day. At times, one could see attempts at combination, but the efforts of the R.S. did not materialise. The centre half and left back alone seemed to retain their form. The Fusiliers team was one of the best turned out to date, and special mention must be made of the centre forward and centre half, as these two played an exceptionally good game. They kicked very surely, and together with the goalie easily disposed of the opposing side's best efforts. Whichever team wins the final of the draw, will, however, give the Yanks a very good exhibition of football and the game is sure to cause widespread interest.

SPORTS AT TROISDORF.

GOOD MEETING AND A FINE ATTENDANCE.

A very successful and amusing programme was arranged by Headquarters, 4th Bn. the Suffolk Regiment, for the sports which were held on Friday at Troisdorf.

Very keen competition prevailed throughout the afternoon and some first class running was witnessed.

The most keenly contested event was the quartermile Flat Race, which was won in splendid style by Lce. Cpl. Footman.

Great amusement was caused during the Boat Race, the Cox' of the Signallers' Team falling overboard and not being able "to swim 200 yards in still water" (see G.R.O. XYZ) was immediately disqualified.

The last man, as optimistic as ever, arrived home playing "We shan't be home till morning" in the Band Race, while the blindfold race was quite a success although one competitor could not "see through it."

The following is the list of prize winners:—

100 yds Flat Race: 1, Sgt. Edwarts; 2, Pte. Wilson.

Throwing Cricket Ball: 1, Pte. Humphrey; 2, Pte. Wilson.

Blindfold Race: 1, Pte. Packard; 2, Pte. Houghton.

3 Legged Race: 1, Pte. Norman and Pte. Whiting; 2, Lce. Cpl. Barber and Pte. Girling.

220 yds Flat Race: 1, Sgt. Edwards; 2, Pte. Eppy.

High Jump: Pte. Grove.

Wheelbarrow Race: 1, Pte. Norman and Pte. Death.

3 Mile Flat Race: 1, Pte. Ball; 2, Pte. Bird.

Long Jump: 1, Pte. Whiting; 2, Pte, Eppy.

Tug-of-War: Transport Team.

1 Mile Flat Race: 1, Pte. Bird; 2, Pte. Lord.

Reveille Race: 1, Pte. Norman; 2, Cpl. Beale.

¾ Mile Flat Race: 1, Lce. Cpl. Footman; 2, Pte. Boardman; 3, Pte. Loweth.

Boat Race: Winning Team: Transport:— Ptes. Norman, Brook, Pedingham, Bullock, Morley, Day, and Gissing.

Band Race: Pte. Lord.

MULHEIM LEAGUE.

No 6th Rly. Telegraph Coy v. 139 Field Amb. R.A.M.C.

The teams met in the first game of the newly-formed Mulheim League, on the ground of the Railway Telegraphs at Buchheim on Saturday.

The game resulted in a win for the home team by 3 goals to 1.

Unfortunately the rain during the match marred the play, but some good and clean football was seen.

TThe Ambulance was the first to score, but the R.T.C. equalised before half time when the score was 1—1.

The second half was more in favour of the R.T.C., who scored twice, while the Ambulance could not find the net again.

GERMAN PATENT RIGHTS AND PEACE.

The future of German patent rights in Great Britain is being considered by a special commitee of the Peace Conference in Paris. Mr. W. Temple Franks, Comptroller-General of the Patent Office, Southampton-buildings, W.C., has just returned from a visit to Paris in connection with the question.

During the war about 1,000 licences to use the German patents were granted by the Board of Trade. These will remain valid after Peace, as they were granted for the full period of the life of a patent —14 years— so that British firms holding them will continue to derive benefit from the use of the patents. How valuable these licences have proved is instanced by the fact that over 100 have been taken out in respect to German dye inventions, enabling British manufactures to capture an industry formerly almost exclusively German.

The enemy-owned patent rights in respect to which licences have been granted are, however, vested in the Public Trustee, and the points before the Peace Conference are whether they shall be returned to their owners or confiscated as part of the indemnity, and whether any compensation shall be paid to the owners for the use of the rights by British firms. These firms have paid a large sum in royalties to the Public Trustee in return for the licences.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

We are informed by the authorities that for all newspapers sent to the United Kingdom, and to all places outside zones of the Army of the Rhine and the British troops in France and Flanders, the postage must be prepaid at the rate of ½d. for two ounces. So when you "send it home," please affix a stamp to each copy of The Cologne Post.

WAR SAVINGS ASSOCIATION.

SPLENDID WORK OF DEVONS.

An excellent start has been made by the 51st Devons at Burscheid to encourage the spirit of thrift amongst the men. Since its inception on the 5th inst. the local association has collected over 22,000 Marks for the purchase of War Loan Certificates, and this speaks well for the energy displayed by the Education Staff who have the matter in hand. The "War Savings Thermometer," the "Company ladders," and all the war savings posters displayed outside the Education Centre are the subject of much discussion amongst the men. The Company spirit is undoubtedly a great incentive to thrift, and as officers and other ranks are giving a great helping hand, the association bids well to beating all records in Rhineland. Cinema film and lantern slides have been procured from the parent association, and a special appeal has been organised.

Other battalions might, with great benefit, follow the example set by the 51st, for not only are they helping their country but the men are providing for the time when they return to civilian life where, as one of the posters points out, money will be more urgently needed then in the army.

SYMPHONY CONCERTS AT BONN.

The second of the series of three concerts took place on Thursday evening at the Stadt Theater, Bonn. Capt. Godfrey is to be congratulated on the excellent work he is doing, and should be gratified by the appreciation shown to his efforts. His orchestra of fifty-five performers are settling down to good work under his able leadership, and it is to be hoped that we shall hear a great deal of them during the coming summer.

The orchestra was composed of soldiers and civilians, as also was the audience.

Little need be said of the actual programme. The, cello solo by Mr. Carl Schafer was very much appreciated.

The "Pathetic Symphony" of Tchaikowsky was the pièce de résistance of the evening. As the expositor said, it is curious how the British soldier, sturdy, virile, and optimistic as he is to the last degree, appreciates the melancholy in music. Certainly there was satisfaction in that respect on Thursday. The ovation given to the orchestra at the end of their rendering of this magnificent symphony was great, and well they deserved it. It may be that we are hungry for any good music after nearly five years in the "wilderness," but to the writer's mind it was the finest piece of work he has heard for a long time.

It is sincerely to be hoped that next Tuesday's symphony concert will not be the last.

May the writer suggest that the performance begins at 5.30. p.m. instead of 6, so that those from Siegburg and other outlying places may get back in reasonable time.

51st BEDFORDS EDUCATIONAL TOURS.

As part of their general Education scheme, the 51st Bedfords have been sending parties of men with guides of the Education Staff, round the Cathedral, Churches, Museums and other interesting places of Cologne. Many of the men may be too young or inexperienced to realize the benefits thus derived from properly "doing" a great continental city. Others, however, take great interest in these tours. With one and all, however, the "Zoo" is popular. After the tour the men write essays on the subject, some of which have shewn great merit, whilst others have points of interest which would not occur to ordinary mortals. This helps to enlighten and amuse.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

COUNTER-REVOLUTION.

Noske, a minister of the Berlin Cabinet, recently made an interesting declaration with regard to the possibility of counter-revolution in Germany, rumours of which have been just as varied as they have been numerous. He pointed out that such rumours were utter nonsense and ridiculous. It is true, he said, that there are still a few who might be called monarchists, and, naturally, officers are perfectly loyal and assist, in every way, the Republican Government.

He further declared that there is not the slightest danger of a political revolution, either from the officer-corps or the new German army.

"Bolshevism is vanquished."

In commenting on the interior policy Noske said that from a military standpoint Bolshevism is vanquished. The safety of Berlin is secured the levy of troops and, since the solution of the popular defence and marine division problems, the Spartacist leaders have given up all hopes of obtaining possession of the city. Surely, he said, the recent events in Munich represent the final earnest trial of the anarchists to override the Government.

Council of Unemployed.

The unemployed of Berlin have formed a council, the members of which, it is said, cannot be forced to accept work. Recently, a meeting was held at which they addressed an ultimatum to the Government. Amongst the demands, which by the way must be accepted before May 3rd, they state that every man above the age of eighteen must be given a daily sum of ten marks, every woman four marks, and for each child two marks, as a means to provide sustenance.

How many will they be?

The news from German sources as to the number of representatives that Germany is sending to Versailles is very conflicting. A fortnight ago it was mentioned that there would be only three. Shortly afterwards the number was increased to seventy-five, and the day following this announcement five more were added. Three days ago we were told that, with the various press representatives, experts, secretaries and interpreters, the total would be 125, whilst Sunday's issue of the Kölnische Zeitung states that there will be no less than 190 of a delegation staff.

On the other hand "Le Matin" states that Herr Dunker, who has charge of the arrangements for their reception, is making preparations for the reception of 300 compatriots.

PROMISED LAND.

SOLDIERS' DREAMS OF SMALL HOLDINGS FADING.

A Birmingham correspondent of the Daily News writes:—There is growing impatience among the soldiers who are being disbanded that their dreams of getting on to the land do not come true. At the headquarters of the Allotments and Small Holdings Association of England I was shown to-day piles of letters received from all over the country asking for aid in overcoming the difficulties with which applicants for land, from one to fifty acres, are beset.

Mr. Streetly, the association's organising secretary, said there was a very urgent need of the Facilities Bill being passed into law forthwith if trouble was to be averted. He had been set thinking by the temper which he found developing among soldiers during visits he had paid to camps in the South of England, as well as by the letters he had received from ex-service men, many of whom had organised themselves to get small holdings. Settling men on the land must be a tedious business at best, but what angered the men was the way in which they were "fobbed off" with technical disabilities. They suspected county authorities of using the Act of 1908 merely for obstructive purposes.

Facilities should be made freer, said Mr. Streetly, with as little loss of time as possible. The number of Small Holdings Commissioners should be increased, and the help of all the local authorities and private landowners should be commandeered. Profiteering in land had become a serious menace to the realisation of the promise held out to returning men, and in view of the inflation of values he was inclined to favour the plan of public authorities leasing suitable sites for a term of years, with option of purchase at the end.

In addition to the ex-soldiers, Mr. Streetly declared, there are a great many town men and rural dwellers who are clamouring for small holdings.

"PARSIFAL"

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—I was keenly interested in Miss Eastgate's letter in Friday's issue on the above opera, and I beg leave to disagree with her in regard to Wagner's aim in writing this great work. Major Bles told us in his excellent article many interesting points about the production of "Parsival" at Bayreuth, which, he said, inherited the true tradition of the master. That being so, there can be no doubt that it was Wagner's intention to introduce Christ into Act III, for the Major speaks of having sometimes felt that the performance (at Bayreuth) touched on the sacrilegious "through an undefinable feeling that Cosima Wagner was always there regulating every movement"

The question of the "convincingness" of the whole masterpiece, then, need not be dicussed

With regard to the "somewhat effeminate representations of Christ" of which Miss Eastgate speaks, we are all agreed that the Church to-day needs a more virile conception of our Lord, but as far as Easter Monday's "festival" is concerned Herr Schröder's performance was so masterly in its dignity and grace that he conveyed to any mind at least, all the hidden strength which characterized our Lord's outward humility upon which we are apt to lay too much stress in the Church to-day.

Tradition dies hard, especially when it is the tradition of a master like Leonardo da Vinci, and he is a bold man, but not an unwelcome one, who will undertake to picture for us this new conception of a strong and virile Christ, the longing for which is the outcome of the war. Meanwhile, I should be grateful for a stained-glass window that would recall to my mind that final scene in the Temple of the Holy Grail. In conclusion I venture to look forward to the day when "Parsival" will form a regular feature of our Easter Mondays in England!

P. S. I must apologise for writing at such length; my little experience in journalism tells me space is valuable. S. H. T.

BRINGING THE EX-KAISER TO TRIAL.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS COVENANT.

BOLSHEVIST PROPAGANDA ACADEMY.

COST OF GERMAN MINERS STRIKE.

BRINGING THE KAISER TO TRIAL.

COMMITTEE RECOMMENDATIONS

According to the Temps the Peace Conference examined to day recommendations of the Commission of Responsibility for incorporation in the Peace Treaty. The summary of the articles presented by the Commission of Responsibility is as follows:

1. The Allied and Associated Powers make public accusation against Wilhelm von Hohenzollern, Emperor of Germany, not for a crime according to penal laws but for a supreme offence against international moral and the sacred rights of treaties. A special tribunal will be constituted to judge him, securing to him the essential guarantees of the right of defence.

The tribunal will be composed of five judges, appointed by Great Britain, United States, France, Italy and Japan. This tribunal will be competent to state the penalty which they will think must be applied.

The Allied and Associated Powers will address a request to the Government of the Netherlands asking them to deliver the ex-Kaiser to the tribunal in order that he may be judged.

2. The German Government having failed to effect the punishment of the persons accused of having committed acts contrary to the laws and usages of war, these persons will be arraigned and tried by the Allied and Associated Powers before military tribunals and if necessary condemned to the penalties commonly provided by military laws. The German Government must deliver to the Allied and Associated Powers, or to one of them, all persons accused of having committed an act contrary to the laws and customs of war. Such persons would be designated either by name or by rank or by the function which was given to them by the German authorities.

3. The authors of acts against subjects of one of the Allied and Associated Powers will be put before the military tribunals of the interested power. In all cases the accused will be allowed to appoint his own advocate.

4. The German Government will be required to furnish documents and information of any kind, the production of which will be considered necessary for the complete knowledge of incriminatory facts, in order that the exacct degree of responsibility can be determined.—Haus.

BOLSHEVIST PROPAGANDA ACADEMY.

TWENTY SUBSIDIARY SCHOOLS.

Helsingfors. The new Soviet commissary for propaganda is a Jew named Arshevski, who is in charge of ten different departments of an academy for practical propaganda work, with two thousand pupils and twenty propagaada schools in the interior of Russia.

Very large amounts have been spent in financing, supporting and bribing newspapers with Bolshevist tendencies in Russia and abroad.—Reuter.

RAW MATERIAL FOR GERMANY.

According to a telegram from Berlin to the Kölnische Volkszeitung dated 28th April M. Clemenceau has sent a new note to the German Government in the name of the Allies, requesting Germany to appoint at once plenipotentiaries for new negotiations about the provision of raw material and food. The Entente proposes that the new representatives have their negotiations in common with the German financial commission which is already at St. Cloud.

The German Government sent an immediate acknowledgment and explained that the formation of a new German commission would not be necessary, as the representatives sent to Versailles have all the necessary powers.

PATRIOTIC EMPLOYERS WANTED.

The War Office states that large numbers of men now in India have voluntarily undertaken to remain during the continuance of the present unrest. There is, however, some anxiety among them lest their chances of employment, when they do return home, will be prejudiced by this action.

It is hoped that employers, realizing that these men are volunteering from purely patriotic motives, in the interests of the Empire, will see that they are not subject to this unemployment on their return.

The men have asked for their case to be put before their fellow countrymen, and the War Office does this with full confidence in the patriotism and sense of fair play of the men's employers.

MUNICH CORDON TIGHTER.

Latest news from Munich states that the Government troops are closing in on the city. The actual operations are expected to begin in four or five days time.

RULES OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

AMENDED COVENANT.

An important sitting of the Peace Conference was held yesterday afternoon at Versailles at which alterations in the Covenant of the League of Nations were discussed.

President Wilson enumerated sundry amendments to the text, the chief points being: — A nation can only resign from the League by giving two years notice of its intention to do so; all decisions must be unanimous; arbitration will be resorted to in the event of any disagreement over the interpretation of a treaty on points of International law; a nation cannot be compelled to adopt an administrative mandate without its consent; protection of labour; Red Cross organisation to be encouraged; members of the League may refuse to accept the new amendments but resignation would naturally follow.

All these principles were adopted.

The Hon. Sir James Eric Drummond, K.C.M.G., C.B., was nominated as General Secretary of the League.

On the Committee, in addition to the five great Powers, Belgium, Greece, Spain and Brazil will be represented.

Many points were raised in the discussion which followed President Wilson's outline of these proposals.

Baron Makino protested against the absence from the text of the Japanese proposal for recognising the principle of equality of nations.

"We demand," he said, "a treatment of justice and equality. We do not ask for an ideal equality. We only want acknowledgment of the principle, leaving the application to the care of the Governments," and concluded an energetic protest by expressing his deep regret at the omission of a proposal which the Japanese have so much at heart.

M. Hymans, Belgian Foreign Minister, expressed the sorrow of the Belgian nation that Brussels was not selected as the home of the League, and added "Nations so exposed as Belgium must always take care to assure their security, independently of the League, which, however, is a supplementary guarantee of great importance."

M. Bourgeois, for France, deplored the non-acceptance of two French amendments for the limitation of armaments and the creation of a permament organisation for forcible coercion of rebellious states, saying.

"Our creation must not appear one day as non-efficacious, supplementary guarantees are necessary. We speak in the name of France, which, according to Mr. Wilson, is the frontier of the civilised world; in the name of the devastated regions; in the name of Belgium Serbia and Italy, and in the name of the 1,700,000 dead French soldiers."

Proposals by Mr. Borden, Canada, supported by M. Vandervelde, were adopted. These affirmed the necessity of methods for the universal regulation of labour conditions. The underlying principles are that labour cannot be considered as merchandise; that the 8 hour day, and 48 hour week shall be universal; one rest day a week (Sunday wherever possible); suppression of child labour and limitation of hours for young people; equality of pay for the same work without distinction of sex.

CAMPAIGN IN EAST AFRICA.

GERMAN WHO FOUGHT CLEAN.

A despatch from Lt. General Sir J. L. Vandeventer, covering the operations in East Africa from September to the conclusion of hostilities, was published on Saturday.

General Vandeventer calls it a remarkable and in some ways an unique campaign. He says the theatre of war was perhaps the most difficult one in which any large body of troops ever fought, and that as a test of sheer human endurance the operations in East Africa must rank high among the campaigns of the world.

The General pays a tribute to the skill and courage of the German Commander von Lettow Vorbeck, and says his fighting on the whole was clean and sometimes even chivalrous.

GERMAN DELEGATES PASS THROUGH COLOGNE.

While Cologne slept yesterday morning a train arrived at the Hauptbahnhof, stayed there awhile and then departed on a mission fraught with the utmost consequence to Germany.

It carried the men, invested with one-sided plentipotentiary powers, who will be the first in all Germany to know the first part of the price which Germany has got to pay for failure to win the world war it started, and knowing, will have to sign an acceptance in the name of the German people.

Yet it is not the price of failure, it is the price foreordained from August 1914, a righteous reparation for a wrong hideously conceived.

There was no fuss at the station. No special precautions had been taken and save for the presence of a few French officers who took charge of the train, the delegates, to whom was entrusted the greatest mission of its kind in the history of the world, went on their way to Versailles.

SIGNING THE PEACE TREATY.

"Every reasonable German" says the Berliner Tageblatt "desires the signature of the treaty. Only when the last hope of a tolerable content is destroyed can the signature be refused."

DEFRAUDING THE WAR OFFICE.

FORGERY OF ARMY FORMS.

Charles Morris, printers' cutter, and Charles Bligh, compositor, were charged at Clerkenwell with being concerned in forging 500 Army Forms "Z 50," receipts representing valuable securiteis, with being concerned with others in cheating and defrauding the Secretary of State, and having in their possession documents which were a colourable representation of Army Form Z. 50.

The police went to Morris's rooms and told him it was believed he was engaged in printing forged Army Forms "Z 50," and that he would be arrested and his rooms searched on a warrant.

Prisoner said: 'I admit I had something to do with the printing of some of these forms." He made a statement which was taken down and signed by him. In the front room were found a quantity of printing materials.

The police went to the printing department at Whiteley's and saw Bligh. Prisoner said he did set the forme for Morris and made a statement also.

The police stated that the case would be connected with two young soldiers on remand, charged with obtaining money by false pretences at railway stations.

In that case detectives followed the soldiers from Waterloo to Euston and King's Cross. They visited Y.M.C.A. huts, etc., and came out with overcoats which they took to the stations.

When arrested, Leonard Wilkes, a demobilised man, said: "I have been nine days doing this," and produced several overcoat vouchers. He also had £14 in Treasury notes upon him.

The magistrate remanded Morris and Bligh to come up with the other men.

COST OF GERMAN MINERS STRIKE.

RUHR MINES IN DANGER.

The enormous loss caused by the strike of miners which has just ended in the Ruhr district is shown by a report just issued by the strike Committeee, The actual loss during this strike, the biggest ever known in the district, was 73,500,000 marks, a very big increase as compared with the loss of nineteen million marks in the strike of 1905 and of nearly eight million marks in 1912.

Since the beginning of the revolution the loss to the coal fields represents about 101 million marks. In April alone the loss of wages to the strikers was 5,159 000 mark.

These figures represent merely ascertained loss and are but a small part of the actual ravages of the strikes. It is impossible as yet to ascertain to what extent the mines themselves have suffered, The breaking down of many ditches and the flooding of some of the deeper mines; the deterioration and non-productivity of coke ovens, gas and by-product plants is so great that many mines are in serious danger of their existence. In addition to the figures given above there must be added the decreased haulage of coal amounting to 3,350,000 tons, representing a further loss of 140,700,000 marks.

FOR LIMITATION OF ARMAMENTS.

GERMAN WORKMEN'S PLAN.

The Kölnische Volkszeitung Düsseldorf correspondent states that in that town a movement is in progress amongst the workmen of the war-material manufacturers, to refuse to make any article for war purposes.

At a meeting of workmen yesterday a proposal was made to melt down every half-finished war instrument for peace articles.

The workmen hope by these means to bring about the end of militarism, as they intend to invite the workmen of all countries to follow their example.

NEUTRAL BLACK LIST WITHDRAWN.

The chief of the British mission at Spa addressed a note to the German Armistice Commission to the effect that the Allied and Associated Governments have decided to withdraw on midnight 28th April all the black lists of firms and persons which they had published or compiled and to cancel all prohibitions about commerce and commercial relations with firms or persons on such lists. The Allied and Associated Governments, however, retain the right to reintroduce all or any of these black lists in case of need.

THE RISKS OF PEACE.

Regimental Sergt.-Maj. F. J. Howell, R.A.M.C., of Guildford, after serving twenty-six years in the Army and all through the war—in France, Egypt, and Palestine—and the South African war, has died from injuries received through being thrown out of a runaway vehicle while on holiday.

BANK MANAGER FOUND DEAD.

The body of Thomas Charles Morgan, the manager of Lloyds Bank at Risca (Monmouth), who has been missing since Tuesday last, when he left home with a golf bag and clubs, was found in a wood near the links with his throat cut.

R. A. F. OFFICER FINED FOR DOG SMUGGLING.

PLEA OF IGNORANCE.

At Croydon Police Court Captain J. M. D'Arcy Levy, R. A. F., stationed at Wallington, was fined £10 and two guineas costs, for landing a fox terrier dog at Hull from Holland on 18th November last year without a licence from the Board of Agriculture.

Mr. E. B. Knight, prosecuting, said the arrival of this dog in the country came to the notice of the Board in January. They thought to trace the animal in case it should be doing mischief anywhere. Captain Levy was not found till March 4, having been in various parts of the country.

The Captain explained to the Board's Inspector that two valuable dogs were taken from England to Utrecht for breeding purposes, and in October, 1918, being then an interned person in Holland, he obtained a puppy, then about two months old. It never left him, and was not at any time exposed to the risk of infection from rabies. He refused £40 for the puppy, and brought it with him on the boat to England.

HOW IT WAS SMUGGLED.

At Hull he asked a soldier to carry it ashore in his kit bag for £5. This was done without detection. On February 5 Captain Levy came with the dog to Wallington, and five days later it disappeared, and he had not seen it since.

Its description had been circulated, and a reward offered. Mr. Knight added that people coming from abroad were apt to take the risk of smuggling because they always thought it could not be their dog, but must be other people's dogs, that were infected. No doubt rabies was brought into this country by someone with an infected dog, and who quite genuinely believed that the animal was all right.

Captain Surtees, an Inspector of the Board, bore out this statement, and added that the defendant told him that though he received the dog from the soldier, the man went away without being paid the £5.

OVERLAPPING DEPARTMENTS.

Mr. Cecil Hayes, for the defence, declared that the Board of Agriculture informed the Air Ministry that if they took disciplinary measures with the defendant the matter would be considered closed. This overlapping of two departments was a thousand pities, for, as a matter of fact, these measures were taken by the defendant's Colonel this week.

Mr. Hayes mentioned that the defendant had been out of Belgium since August 1914. When flying over Zeebrugge he was captured by the Germans, and was a prisoner for three years in Germany before being removed to Holland. The defendant therefore had been out of England during the whole time the Order had been in force, and knew nothing about it.

Counsel earnestly pressed the Bench not to inflict the indignity of a conviction upon a distinguished officer who had not a stain upon his war record. He also pointed to the difficulty of soldiers abroad in getting information about dog regulations.

The Chairman (Sir Arthur Spurgeon) said it was hard to register a conviction against a man holding the defendant's record, but much smuggling was difficult to detect, and it was only by proceedings and penalties that people could be made to realise what a dangerous practice it was.

TO STAMP OUT RABIES.

HOPEFUL SIGNS.

Reports to the Board of Agriculture from various parts of the country suggest that the energetic measures taken by the authorities to combat the spread of rabies are meeting with success. The number of suspected cases, although large, should not cause alarm because, as was officially explained, people are encouraged to report their dogs suspected on the first signs of anything unusual, but of the hundreds of cases so reported very few are regarded seriously after investigation by experts, although still kept under observation.

So far 151 confirmed cases have been dealt with in all, but of these 125 are from Devon, the county in which the outbreak first occurred, and the neighbouring county of Cornwall. Only two cases have been confirmed in London and the home counties.

It is understood that human beings bitten by dogs in the London area are being treated at St. Thomas's Hospital, where special arrangements have been made to deal with such cases.

TRAFFIC IN LEAVE PASSES.

WASTE PAPER.

A private in the Army Service Corps, named Harry Kesler, arrested as an absentee, was charged on remand at Westminster with being in the unlawful possession of military documents.

When prisoner was arrested he had on him six blank leave passes—War Office Form B. 295—all bearing the official rubber stamp of a depot. There were also other passes in which names had been filled in. There was no doubt that the prisoner and others trafficked in these passes, which were sold for half-a-crown a piece.

The magistrate asked how it was possible for a man to get official documents like this, of which such a scandalous use was made.

Prisoner: It is easy enough to get them. They have just cleared out the depot at Lee (Kent), and they have left the things lying all over the place.

Prisoner was again remanded.

BAD CITIZEN BUT A GOOD SOLDIER.

REVERTS TO CRIME.

Frank Percy Berry pleaded guilty at Tower Bridge yesterday to stealing £70 11s. petty cash belonging to his employers, the Astra Light Company, Ltd., Southwark Park-road.

It was stated that the prisoner had received a public school education, was well connected, and was a man of considerable attainments. Nevertheless, he had a very bad record, there being nine convictions recorded against him, dating from 1899. His sentences included one of fifteen months' hard labour for larceny and conspiracy.

Upon his release from prison in October 1916, he joined the Army, went to France, and did remarkably well, gaining the D.C.M. and the Military Medal. He left the Army last December. The view of his friends was that drink was the cause of his troubles.

The prisoner said he did not wish to advertise what he had done in the Army, but in mitigation he would like to mention that he was blown up twice and was buried once for four hours. He had not the slightest doubt that in consequence his mind was sometimes affected. When he joined the Army he determined to make good, and he had five recommendations within four days. He was offered a commission in 1917, but had to refuse it because of his past. He meant to go straight when he obtained the situation with the prosecutors after he left the Army, but somehow he had fallen. The safe key was missing one day and he took the petty cash home for safety, and that was the beginning of the embezzlement.

The prisoner was sentenced to six months' imprisonment.

ONLY CLOUD ON LABOUR HORIZON.

BREAD AND MILK.

Reuter learns from a general survey of the industrial situation that the only cloud on the horizon is that created by the opposition to conscription and to the intervention in Russia of the Triple Alliance. These points were the subject of a demand by the Parliamentary Committee of Trades Unions to the Congress for the National Conference.

Farmers in some parts of the country are threatening a "silent" strike over the question of summer milk prices, but it is unlikely that a serious position will arise.

The night baking controversy is to form the subject of a public inquiry next week.

A committee has been [illegible] by the Ministry of Labour, much on the lines of the Coal Commission.

LEGALLY FORBIDDEN.

NEED FOR REFORM.

A woman told the magistrate at Tottenham that she had not seen or heard any thing of her husband for sixteen years.

The Magistrate: You want us to find him for you. — Woman: No.

Magistrate: Then what? — Woman (blushing): I have an opportunity to marry. I want to know, as I have not seen nor heard anything of my husband for sixteen years, whether I can say yes to the man who wishes to marry me?

Magistrate: I am afraid you will have to say no, unless you can prove your husband is dead. Should you marry and it turns out that your husband is a live, you could be charged with bigamy.

The woman said she had made every effort to find her husband, but had failed. The Magistrate said he could not sanction her remarrying, and she left the court crying.

LIMERICK STRIKE OVER.

VERY IRISH.

The Limerick strike is over and the majority of the workers were glad to return to work. Many more will find employment when the bacon-curing factories reopen in the course of a few days. The statement by the Strike Committee was a great disappointment to those who were anxious to carry on the strike. It was regarded as an admission of defeat, and some of the transport workers tore up copies of it when they were circulated in the streets.

Mr. Thomas Johnson, who is acting as secretary of the Labour Conference at Dublin, issued the following statement:—

"The National Executive desire to congratulate the workers of Limerick on their spontaneous and unanimous protest against the tyrannical action of the military authorities in prohibiting by guns and bayonets the movement of the citizens from one part of their city to another. The protest has been characterized by resolution, courage, dignity, patience, and self-sacrifice, and commands the admiration of all onlookers." The executive wishes to express its high appreciation of the splendid organizing and administrative ability of the strike committee."

EIGHT HUNDRED DIVORCE CASES.

There are 1,625 new cases set down for hearing during the forthcoming Easter sittings of the Law Courts, which commenced yesterday. They are made up as follows: —

Court of Appeal, 92; Chancery Division, 154; King's Bench Divison, 616; and Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division, 822. There are 692 undefended divorce suits and 87 defended ones.

EXPECTANCY.

Charles Dickens created many delightful types of personality, and it is a joy to keep in touch with the men and women who flit to and fro across his stage. Few of these win more of our regard than the immortal Micawber. In David Copperfield we see him setting out time and again on the sure road to fortune only to be rebuffed by the unkindly strokes of an untoward fate. But he is never daunted. Hope springs eternally in his breast. As often as he is cast down, he rises again to some new scheme that captures his buoyant mind. He is not of the stuff that makes pessimists, for he believes that sooner or later something will "turn up" which will lead him to triumph over the obstacle of base circumstance. Wilkins Micawber is the apostle of a gospel; and it is the gospel of expectancy.

Expectancy is a virtue and an inspiration. Life would be drab and dreary were it not for the unquenchable hope that some day the wheel of fortune will turn happily in our favour. Routine is the mechanism of human existence. Each day seems to bring with it a task that differs little from the task of yesterday. Monotony in life's trivial round lays a heavy hand upon our souls and is all too apt to breed weariness and dejection. But we are saved by imagination, and imagination pictures the coming of strange good fortune. Like Micawber we expect a rosy dawn that shall shame the greyness of our horizon. Expectancy braces mankind and wins it for optimism. Fears give way to hope, and we look forward steadfastly to a morrow of radiant brightness. Something that is good will "turn up."

To-day the world is palpitating with expectancy. Even now the Peace Delegates of Germany are arriving at the gates of Versailles. History records many a conclave where Peace was brought to the birth after the travail of War, where the fates of nations were weighed on the balances, where political aspirations were blessed or doomed. Vienna and Berlin are great names in the story of international conference, but at Paris there is now sitting the greatest, most momentous Congress that our world has seen. For more than five months of armistice the representatives of the victorious Allies have pondered the plight of a stricken world, and we are at the eve of the day, when Terms of Peace shall be published broadcast to waiting humanity. Versailles has had its excursions and alarums, but these do not dismay us. The fitful fever of war cannot be assuaged without many a pang of patriotic fear and foreboding. Our expectancy is undespairing and the world throbs with high hope.

What are the hopes that expectancy shapes in our minds? It is not for us to give them realistic fulness of form and colour, but in outline they are plain and satisfying. We expect Peace, honourable and enduring. Gallant sons of our empire have fought the bitter fight for liberty and righteousness. Their sacrifice must not be vain, and so we would remember "the dead whom we to gain our peace have sent to peace." Their call is immortal; and it is for a new world where oppression shall be unknown, where righteousness shall take firm root, where liberty shall flourish. It is the strong, unalterable belief of Great Britain that she bared her arm of war reluctantly and sorrowfully. War is not loved by Englishmen; and only the claim of the downtrodden and the call of Allies brought her to that rescue of a world that stood in peril of dominion. The voice of our Empire demands that the sword shall be sheathed and that war shall be no more.

The demand that wars shall cease from the earth has a bearing upon the peace which we expect. There are peace terms which invite future strife and indeed nerve nations for the day when in new-born strength they will rise in revolt against the decisions of unjust and arrogant peace-making. Had the Allies lost this war there is evidence that the plans of our enemies would have so humiliated the vanquished that the future of the world would have been shrouded in never-ending warfare. Our expectancy bids us look for fairer hopes. we desire no terms that can be deemed vengeful; we desire that our brothers in arms shall be assured of peace and the right to live their lives without the dread spectre of militarism, naked and unashamed. The world must not again lie under the sword of Damocles.

A new and better Christendom — that is what our kinsfolk expect, and mankind must not be disappointed in its expectancy.

HAVE WE LOST OUR BATTLE POETS?

What songs have come down to us from the wars of former days, and have made themselves immortal? We shall be surprised to find, on consideration, how few these are.

"In our own country the great Napoleonic struggle gave us at least one song, of great words, though far less great in tune—" Ye Mariners of England."

The meteor flag of England
Shall yet terrific burn!

The lines stir the spirit like a trumpet-call. We can match it, and hardly match it, with one other—"Rule, Britannia!" —in which Arne's music is worthy of Thomson's verses. This great song, which was first performed in 1740, in the masque of "Alfred," sprang out of our war with Spain. And in the minds of most of us, the song is much more vivid than the war." So commences an article in Town & Country, the new London weekly. The writer laments the fact that very few can be added to the songs mentioned. True, the number of songs written during the war have included some was poems, but—of a class. Darewski, Nat D. Ayer, and other popular writers of musical comedy items have contributed a few to the list, but they cannot be included in such a list of war songs as the writer has in mind. There are very few indeed which can approach the stirring battle songs of old. More surprising still, though our country has been at war almost constantly in some parts of the world, the greatest of our poets have barely given the matter consideration. Tennyson is one exception. To the Crimea War we owe "The Charge of the Light Brigade," "Form, Rifleman, Form!" and the supreme lines which bring "Maud" to its conclusion in one "gorgeous storm of music."

The writer continues:— "During the Napoleonic wars we had in England the greatest group of poets who have ever existed together at one time—Shelley, Keats, Wordsworth, Byron, Coleridge, Scott—the proverbial "nest of nightingales." Of these—we are speaking only of such verses as stand out in memory from among their work—Shelley and Coleridge left each a noble ode, Byron the lines on the eve before Waterloo—"There was a sound of revelry by night," Wordsworth has left us some magnificent sonnets which have been quoted with fine effect during the Great War, but these are not poems of action, and their appeal is not to the multitude. As for Keats, the poet of supreme beauty, there is not a syllable in all his works to show that he was aware that a world-convulsion had just taken place all round him. Scott, it is true, wrote "The Battle of Waterloo," one of the weakest of his works—but at the very time when the cannon in the Peninsula were beginning to roar, he was writing a battle-poem on a fight with bows and bill-hooks on the field of Flodden!

"Nor is Scott a solitary example of the predilection of poets for "battles long ago." Homer wrote the greatest of battle-poems on a war which never took place—at least, as he describes it. Macaulay went back to the Armada; Sir Henry Newbolt recalled "Drake's Drum!" But where are all the songs that the event itself inspired—the songs that, beyond doubt, rang in the ears of Drake himself—the days that followed victory? Fallen dumb, in every line and note. And so, as we said at the beginning, when we regard the cataract of war-poems now fading from the press, we cannot be very optimistic. Will any one survive, like "La Marseillaise," a hundred years? And, if so, which? "Vimeiery"? "Keep the Home Fires Burning"? We cannot say?

THE QUESTION OF TONGUES.

No III.

BY WILLIAM R. PATTERSON, F.R.G.S., F.R.A.S., etc.

In my last article I dwelt upon the subject of fluency and suggested the use of modern plays as colloquial practice.

Now, there are two classes of language-student. (1) He who has sufficient patience to study a grammar from beginning to end, and (2) he who has not.

To the latter this article is addressed. He must not expect to be able to speak, read and write correctly any language, even his own, unless he studies its grammar.

By reading foreign works side by side with English translations one might, after years of diligent application, acquire a very fair knowledge of the new tongue with respect to reading but, unless one were an accomplished philogist, it is very doubtful if one could compose or converse. That is the principal point.

The beginner must learn —

(1) How to form the feminines and plurals of nouns and adjectives from the masculine form.

(2) How to distinguish between the form of an adjective used in conjunction with a noun or used alone.

(3) How to employ the regular and irregular verbs.

(4) How to give the proper form to a noun or adjective, or both, after the article, definite or indefinite.

(5) How best to arrange sentences, with their various adjectival and adverbial clauses. These are prevalent in the German tongue, especially.

Now, it is wise, in language-study, not to be impatient. If, however, you have the time and energy to work fast, I recommend you to the Bible. The book is written in the plain and simple language at its best. Read and study it, if you already know something of the grammar of the new idiom, with the assistance of your own version. Read certain passages aloud over and over again and, after a while, depending upon the time at your disposal and your capacity for acquiring knowledge, you will be able to employ, in ordinary conversation, several of the terms, phrases and sentences which you have read. Begin firstly with the parable of the prodigal son, then secondly turn to the first chapter of Genesis; thirdly read through the trial and crucifixion of Jesus Christ.

And do this in the right spirit!

Afterwards you may turn to other chapters of the new testament, especially these in which parables occur, and then whithersoever you may wish.

By such means you may acquire elementary conversational powers in a few months. Another excellent means towards a good knowledge of German is Grimm's and Anderson's fairy tales. These are also well written in simple language and encourage reading aloud. They can be had at any bookseller's for quite a moderate sum. There are fairy tales in all countries, and the Bible, too.

YOUR KING AND COUNTRY NEED YOU.

For once in history I was up before reveille. This being my first morning in the army, I suppose it can be pardonned. Really, it was fortunate my getting up early, as when I began to search for my belongings, I found most of them had disappeared. I at last found one shoe and was trying it on amongst a heap of feet, there being twenty-one sleeping in my tent, when a sleepy voice told me to try putting it on my own foot. Taking his advice, I at last succeeded, and, after treading on a row of faces, reached the outside wearing one shoe; I was hobbling around the tent and here found the missing one. I only wanted my straw hat to make me complete and after a thorough search in the vicinity I made a sad discovery — it was sitting on top of the tent pole, looking very out of place and dilapidated, with one hole, service pattern, in the centre. The Sergeant who first saw me as he came round with his melodious cry of "show a leg" declared that the appearance wasn't military. I sprang to attention as he addressed me, thinking he was an officer, gave him a rookie's salute and answered, "No Sir!" I shall never forget that salute; I've had to wear a wrist strap ever since!

After a fierce battle I managed to get a piece of bread and fat bacon, washed down with a drink of tea given me by a navvy friend of mine, who afterwards wanted to borrow a mere trifle of half a quid to get a drink. I then went towards the wash house to get a wash. I had a glorious do on my arrival there, with a tap and my handkerchief. In my wave of patriotism on the previous day, I left home in a hurry forgetting to ask my valet if I might borrow my towel which he wears as a chest protector. I strolled around the parade ground and espied a crowd gathered around a strange article on three legs, which I was afterwards informed was a rifle and tripod. The person in charge addressed me as "Archie" and asked me if I was the C.O., on my explaining that I had only joined the colours the previous day and wasn't quite sure of my rank, he informed me I was Pte. P., and would fall in with his squad daily. During the gyms, we were instructed how to kill and be killed. I remember remarking at the time how strange it was we always won; on second thoughts I don't think we were instructed in the how-to-be-killed part of the programme. Our instructor told us the bayonet was a useful article for making bad Germans good as the only time they were really good was when they were dead. I came to France with the intention of improving them if this was the case, but the first one I saw was in a cage and the sentry wouldn't let me go in.

This is but a brief outline of army life; had I but time to write of all my experiences, I could fill a book as large as an A.B 64. I am confident I have the ability to write great things. Even my souvenir hunting would fill a book; for instance I decided when I joined I would collect labels from different kind of food I came across in the army; so far I have Fray Bento's and Plum and Apple, but what can one expect in four and a half years. If I am by a stroke of luck demobilised in the near future and the army finds without my aid everything is at a standstill, they will always find me ready to don my armour by addressing their request to my private-secretary. Then I must mention in conclusion that since I left the army and joined the M.G.C. I have been much happier and now am a man of no mean position, holding that enviable rank Permanent Orderly Man. Since my promotion I always bear the words of my Mother in mind, "be kind to the men."

IDEALS.

Looking at life from the ordinary point of view, it does not appear that there is much room for idealism in the life of the average individual.

In the life of the army we think and act largely in numbers, and much of one's individuality is absorbed in the process.

In the commercial world a life is judged by its monetary worth, its value in L.s.d., rather than by its integrity and moral standard.

Even in the home life where ideals have the better opportunities of impressing themselves, the average person is far too intent on making income and expenditure balance themselves, in these days of high prices and cost of living.

However, in spite of such disadvantages, life is too great and comprehensive a thing to have its great purposes subdued and over-ruled by materialisms, and, as we think on the realities of that life, we must admit that in each life there are possibilities and even actualities of personal ideals.

The ideal is the natural inheritance of each particular life, and it is only in obedience to its commands that life obtains in its fullest and truest sense.

Since, then, idealism is linked to each one of our lives, it is well that we face the fact, and ask — "What is it?" and "What does it do?" — Is it a vain shadow that attracts but cannot satisfy, or does it point us to the real satisfactions of life? — Is it a 'will-o-wisp' that leads only to deceive and lure us into insecure places; or is it a messenger of light and guidance to the truth and value of the human heart? — Does it point us away to the unsubstantial realm of the mere dreamer, or does it guide us along the practical realities of life with an encouragement both sound and true?

These are practical questions, and in the answer to which we may find truest meaning and its safest and surest guidance.

The ideal is a compulsion. Unceasingly it attracts and compels us to itself by its own beauty and strength. It arrests us, issues its challenge, and points us to the glories of its own achievement. Unhesitatingly it comes to us at all times. It may be in an hour crowded with common duties, or when one beholds the beauties of nature. It may come in the hour of victory and the moment of defeat, or when one is held in wonderment by the glories of a glowing sunset. It quenches satisfaction and enhartens despair. It is a goad, a pressure, ever attracting and compelling. It urges us forward to the light of its own purpose, until the actual is guided into the presence of the ideal and its influence dominates the life.

The ideal, however, may be rejected, or become stunted and dwarfed. Its influences may cease to attract, and a life may become unillumined by even a spark; but he who is guided by its influence and answers to its call will find that the days will be full of high instincts and lawful purpose, and the dominating of the ideal will fill that life with usefulness.

The ideal is a criticism. Unerringly it judges, assesses and weighs. It takes the life and searches it, pointing out its deficiencies and produces before us life's highest possibilities. The best criticism of beauty is a comparison with ugliness, and a straight line will best illustrate the deflections of a crooked one. So with the ideal. It stands before us in all its brilliance, and by the transfusion of its light reveals our weaknesses and deflections. Its pure rays transmitted into our blinded and ofttimes stunted lives, illumines the high road of successful progress and accentuating the danger to which diversion leads.

The ideal is a revelation. It reveals to us the man strong and true. — As I look into the mirror, or at comrades around, that which I see is not the true man — the ideal. It is not the form of human flesh and blood, but the innermost life with all its capacities cleansed and its purposes exemplified.

The growing fruit on the tree is not the result altogether of environment. The elements may be an accomplice in giving the apple its shape, colour and size; but it is the life within that gives it its fragrance and taste, whereby the apple is judged.

So with the Ideal. — Every good purpose in life is the work of the ideal, and life's highest and best purposes are its products.

It is the ideal which has made for the advancement of the world since its inception.

It is she who has inspired the poets and filled the painters' soul with fire. She has touched the heart of the great philantrophists, and emblazoned the souls of our heroes with living fire.

Also, an ideal is not confined to a single life, but will live on. If a man has been enthused with an ideal and he imparts it to others, though he may not realise it in the course of his own life, the world is the better, because he has been inspired by it, and its benefits will be installed in the generations which follow after him.

Dream your dreams and realise your Ideals. Fight for them, live for them, and the world will be the better because you will have anticipated the ideal and endeavoured to live it in your own life.

In conclusion, does not the question of the Ideal run down to a simple alternative? — Shall we be governed of the actual and material things of life and fail to realise its great moral worth and intrinsic value, or shall we be actuated by our ideals and give to the world a life well lived and leave behind us a glorious inheritance?

ET EGO IN ARCADIA.

My delight in Robert Louis Stevenson grows greater day by day. His books have always been my favourites. "A Child's Garden of Verses" in my nursery fascinated me. Africa, India, Cattay — Ah! I would set my sails some day and head for foreign lands. And as the days of childhood slipped away my longing never lessened. To feel the scorch of the sun in tropic climes, to see strange peoples and hear strange tongues became an obsession; and, till the day came when I felt the fresh wind of the sea in my face and saw for the first time the shores of England fade away, I travelled in fancy.

To-day, in a country many miles from home, I am reading "An Inland Voyage." From Antwerp up the Schelde, and on the Willebroek Canal I have in spirit accompanied the writer to the "Grand Cerf" at Maubeuge. I like the driver of the hotel omnibus who had heard of the arrival of the great traveller — a man "with something human in his soul." How he longed to travel! How he longed to be somewhere else, and see the round world before he went into the grave! "Here I am," said he, "I drive to the station. Well, and then I drive back again to the hotel. And so on every day and all the week round. My God, is that life?"

I feel sorry for that man, for I, too, am a traveller. I have known the open ocean, scorched under hot suns and rested in the evening at cool oases, and like Robert Louis Stevenson arrived one day at Maubeuge — from Landrecies in a Four Wheeled Drive to change some dirty washing at Ordnance!

"THE PROBES" CONCERT PARTY.

TWO PERFORMANCES AT HERSEL.

By way of a change from the picture entertainments which have recently been provided by the 1/4th Cheshires, at Hersel, "The Probes," the 91st F.A. concert party paid a two-night visit to Mecanee cinema.

At each performance, an admirably balanced programme was submitted to a large and enthusiastic audience.

Lce. Cpl. Sharples proved himself to be a first rate female impersonator, and as "Stella" gave evidence of the possession of an agreeable falsetto voice and a stage presence that was utterly deceiving in its faithfulness to the mannerisms of the fair sex.

With a series of impersonations of various people singing that well-known melody "Who Were You With Last Night" he had the "house" rocking and his encore proved equally humourous. Further humour was dispensed by Pte. Hughes whose songs "went down" well. The efforts of Lce. Cpl. Davies, who rendered in great style several musical monologues also received thunderous applause, and it was not until he had given two encores that the audience allowed him to leave the stage. A further outstanding feature of the evening's entertainment was "Cosy Little Corner" sung by the troupe, the scenic and lighting effects contributing largely to its success.

A sketch, entitled "The New Major," written and produced by the "Probes," finally wound up an excellent evening's entertainment. The "What Nots," the concert party of the 1/4th will need re-organising owing to many of its members being "demob'd," but 2 Lt. Jacques, Entertainments Officer, expects to be able to present a good show in a few days.

3rd MACHINE GUNNERS.

OFFICERS v SERGEANTS: CORPORALS v PRIVATES.

May is being ushered in with all the signs of March. Cold winds sweep up the barrack stairs and snow alternates with rain. Corporals met privates and allowed six goals to be scored against them, retaliating with only one. Ram spoilt the play which at times was distinctly humourous. Twenty minutes after the kick-off the referee counted 13 corporals playing and lent one of them to the privates, reducing the unlucky figure to 12.

On Tuesday the Officers just managed to raise 10 men from their ranks. The sergeants full of spirit took full advantage of a weak side and won 4—1. One of their number who was too busy to change, (or was there any other reason?, became quite active and in a pair of army shoes scored a goal. "Gertie" came in for quite a lot of notice. At the other end a wonderful performance was put up by Lt. Duffy between the sticks. Miraculous saves were made at times, one of the most famous being from a scrimmage on the goal-line when the ball was over the line, except the lace. Twice the goalkeeper got entangled in the wire that marks the goal-line but balance was preserved, if not dignity. Quite a number of spectators spoke their mind as the game went on and the good humour of the crowd was largely a result of the form shown. Somewhere on the left for the officers a fair-haired player did wonderful runs combined with gymnastic performances, and a certain blonde who posed as an amateur at the game could earn money teaching the art.

The referee interpreted some rules of his own and it speaks well for the discipline of all ranks that he was allowed to retire for tea. Result: Sergeants 4; Officers 1. There will be a return match.

On Friday, the Second Boxing Tournament will be held and all ranks are expected to support their company entries.

THE 9th EAST SURREYS.

Whist Drive.

The Sergeants of the 9th Bn. East Surrey Regt. held a very successful Whist Drive in their mess at Hoffnungsthal on Friday 25th April. The occasion was the second of what is hoped to be many pleasant gatherings. The efforts of Staff Sergt. Minchin and Sergt. Holbrow who officiated as Whips met with a gratifying response and a large number put in an attendance. C.Q.M.S. Pond was the winner of the "Lady's" whilst Sergt. Holbrow scored the highest number of points for the "Gent's." The "Booby" fell to C.S.M. Swain and realised twenty marks, after very exciting bidding, under the hammer of R.S.M. Hyde who proved a very able auctioneer.

The musical programme which followed and in which featured a "Jazz Band" brought the evening to a successful termination.

IN FANCY COSTUME.

ARTILLERYMEN TRIP THE LIGHT FANTASTIC AT GEMUND.

A very successful fancy dress dance arranged by the 310th Brigade, R.F.A. took place at Gemund on Saturday evening. Sergt. Towers, pianist, and Gunner Ferris, instrumentalist, provided the music and were as untiring in their efforts as the dancers. During the interval prizes were awarded for the best costumes. Unfortunately there was a rumour that several officers had not conformed to the rules and the judges felt compelled to disqualify them. This was a pity because many of the officers were both original and fantastic in their garb, notably Captain Coull as the "Rajah of Bhong," Lieut. Beattie as "Italian Peasant Girl," Lieut. Mawken as "Texas Cowboy" and Captain Siddons as "Lord Nelson." After keen competition among the other ranks prizes were awarded as follows: — 1st, Trumpeter Dowling, as "Newsboy"; Bombardier Lewis as "Bookmaker" and Sergeant Butcher (0,312) as "Czech-Slovak."

BAT AND BALL.

NUMEROUS ENTRIES FOR "THE COLOGNE POST" CUP.

SEVERAL LEAGUES PROBABLY NECESSARY.

Entries for the Cologne Post Cricket Competition are arriving in large numbers by every mail. They are from teams stationed in all parts of occupied territory, but without exception so far, the entrants are accessible to Cologne, Bonn or Duren. The obvious inference, therefore is that the easiest way to overcome the question of long journeys is to run at least three leagues — one for the area covered by each of these towns, or possibly four, if the number of competitors on the other side of the Rhine are sufficiently numerous to justify an additional one in the neighbourhood of Siegburg.

The majority of the teams that intend to take part in "the great fite" are representative of battalions, but several are composed of members of detachments of inconsiderable strength. This is where a great difficulty confronts us.

It would clearly be very unfair to match a team in which the players could be selected from a matter of perhaps 500 men, against a detachment XI, the composition of which embraced practically every man (whether an accomplished cricketer or not) in the unit.

Various courses are open for the solution of this problem, but we shall welcome any ideas or suggestions our readers may have on this or any phase of the competition.

It will be fairly apparent to all that there is necessarily an enormous amount of preliminary work to be done before the games can actually be proceeded with, but we can assure our readers that no grass is growing under our feet, and the full details of the project will be launched at the earliest possible date.

Meanwhile, if you think you can muster together eleven players whose ability suggests that their combination might stand a sporting chance of carrying off our cup. (to say nothing of the dozen miniature cups that will be presented to the members of the winning team) give the eleven any old name you like and drop a line, as below, notifying your intention of competing.

You will be doing us a real service if you send in your entry AT ONCE. Address letters to:—

The Sports Editor, The Cologne Post, Cologne.

2/4th DUKE OF WELLINGTON'S.

A FEW NOTES FROM ERP.

Colonel Francis, D.S.O. (West Yorkshire Regt.) has assumed command of the Battalion, which has recently been reinforced by the arrival of the 53rd Battalion Duke of Wellington Regt, from England. Accommodation in Erp and the three surrounding villages barely suffices for the large number of troops now with the Battalion. The officers and men of the "Young Guards" have now completely settled down and should prove a great asset to the unit's sporting and entertaining proclivities, in addition to its regimental efficiency.

A strong officers hockey team is now in formation of which more is likely to be heard, as there are some very promising hockey players in the battalion. The Inter-Company Soccer League has concluded its winter season, "C" Company securing premier place and winning thereby the "Wilson Cup."

On the 24th inst. the battalion met "Q" Battery R.H.A. at a soccer match. Result: 2/4th Duke of Wellington 7 Goals; "Q" Battery 1 goal.

A new battalion competition has commenced for an association shield and, though little progress has yet been made "C" company are leading. Colours have recently arrived for the battalion and it is hoped they will shortly be presented by the G.O.C.

Owing to the unit being so scattered no battalion concert has been held, but it is hoped one will be organized shortly.

73rd ARMY BRIGADE R.G.A. v. IX CORPS TROOPS M.T. COMPANY.

544 (Household) Siege Battery R.G.A. represented 73rd Army Brigade R.G.A. in a IX Corps Troops "Six-a-side" soccer competition, and in the first round the Gunners defeated the R.A.S.C. by 6 points to 3. The match was played on Sunday on the battery's ground at Heide, and quite a fast game ensued with a stiff wind blowing practically across the field. Sergeant Smailes scored the first goal for the Gunners during the first five minutes, but the R.A.S.C. returned to the fray with great dash and Private Methven soon scored a corner for them. When the whistle blew for half time the Gunners were pressing once more and Sergeant Minshull had added one more point to the latter's total.

At the begining of the second half the R.A.S.C. seemed to buck up and after five minutes play Private Leach shot a good one. The R.A.S.C. goalie spent but little of his time near his own goal and it was whilst their goal was left unprotected at the mercy of the Gunners that Sergeant Smailes again scored after a clever run up the field. Until the whistle blew practically continuous pressure was kept up in the neighbourhood of the M.T. goal, and Sergeant Smailes distinguished himself again by obtaining another point for his side. Private Gammons refereed the game well and did not allow himself to be influenced by advice from the supporters of either side.

The R.A.S.C. put up a good fight for it during the first part of the game, but the Gunners undoubtedly had the better team and should do well in future matches.

RUNNING AT LIBLAR.

The last cross country race in the 5th K.O.Y.L.I. sports tournament was decided at Liblar on Thursday; of 200 starters, 77 finished the course, which was a little short of 3 miles, within 10 mins. 23 secs; that is, within five minutes of the first man home.

Lt. Taylor, M.C., M.M. ("C") was the first to finish and he was followed by Lt. Monks ("B"), Pte. Hughes ("C") and Pte. Bond ("B").

"B" Coy secured 1st and 3rd places in the Coy. teams' competition, ten arriving amongst the first 19. The winning team consisted of: Lt. Monks (2), Ptes Bond (4), W.H. Smith (9), Coupland (10), Blake (11), Shaw (12), Lce. Cpl. Holmes (14), Mc. Cauley (15), Lt. Waugh (16) and Pte. Ashton (19). No. ten platoon gained the premier position in the platoon competition (teams of four) and the 2nd, 3rd, and 4th places were respectively secured by 7, 5, and 8 platoons.

The names of the first two platoon teams are appended: No. 10 Pte. Hughes (3rd), Sgt. Charlton (5), Pte. Hughes (6th) Buckley (17th).

Nr. 7. — Ptes W.H. Smith, Coupland, Mc.Cowley and Ashton. The 76 men who finished the course in time came from the following Coys: "A", 6; "B" 33, "C" 22, "D" 9.

COLOGNE OPERA HOUSE.

On account of illness amongst the employed, there will be a performance of "Rigoletto," beginning 6.30, on Wednesday instead of "Orpheus and Eurydice."

INTERNATIONAL MATCH A DRAW. ENGLAND v. SCOTLAND.

About 40,000 spectators assembled to see this match played on the Everton ground on Saturday and were treated to some curious football. The wind was very dusty and once the ball was in the air anything might happen.

Scotland's attack in the first half was very systematic and at times made the English defence look very poor, but after the change over the English attack was allowed too much liberty and took advantage thereof.

Probably the wind accounted for the fact that the "stars" did not shine excessively, even O'Shea failing at times. Turnbull, the youngest of the English forwards, played a very good game.

Result: England 2; Scotland 2.

LEEDS CITY'S NEW MANAGER.

The position of secretary-manager of Leeds City F.C. says The Sportsman, rendered vacant by the resignation o Mr Herbert Chapman, who has taken up a commercial appointment, has been accepted by Robert Hewison, the right halfback of Newcastle United. Hewison, who is a product of North-Eastern football, had eight years' playing experience with Newcastle United, and joined Leeds City when the United suspended operations after the outbreak of war. He had his leg broken for the second time whilst playing with Leeds City last October, and has since announced his retirement as a player.

Mr William Paget, of Southfield, Loughborough, whose death is announced at the age of 84, was at one time joint Master, with the late Capt Warner, of the Quorn Hounds.

LONDON DIVISIONAL RACES.

SECOND DAY OF A SUCCESSFUL MEETING.

A dull sky and an icy cold atmosphere were conditions that made matters somewhat uncomfortable at Kalk, Cologne, yesterday on the occasion of the second day's programme of the London Divisional Race Meeting.

Nevertheless, as on the previous day, the going was excellent and a huge gathering of spectators enjoyed another afternoon's good sport in which there was no lack of thrill and excitement.

The arrangements in all departments were again admirable and all will agree that as a well conceived and ably organised event, the London Divisional Races must rank as one of the most British meetings held in Germany.

RESULTS.

Shrapnell Scurry: 1, Elsie (Lieut. Lamb, R.F.A.); 2, Little Sister (Major Bray, R.F.A.); 3, Tails Up (Major Rashleigh, R.F.A.).

LANCASHIRE DIVISIONAL LEAGUE.

15th LANCS. FUSILIERS v. 52nd KING'S (LIVERPOOL) REGT.

The 15th Lancs. Fusiliers met the 52nd King's Liverpool's in the second round of the Lancashire Division Association Competition on Saturday, at Bonn. The King's led off by scoring early in the first half but shortly afterwards the Fusiliers pulled even.

In the second half, the King's scored twice and although the Fusiliers pressed hard, they could not score, this being largely due to the excellent goal-keeping of Macey, the King's goalie.

The result was a win for the 52nd King's Liverpools of 3-1. Lce. Cpl. Jerry scored for the 15th Lancs. Fus. and Capt. Foss, Pte. Higgins and Pte. Spince for the 52nd King's.

4th SUFFOLKS v. 565 ARMY TROOPS COY R.E.

The match was played at Troisdorf on Saturday, in heavy rain. The Company had an unbeaten record and by winning 6-1 they maintained it.

The early stages of the game were very much in favour of the Suffolks and after ten minutes pressure their efforts were rewarded by a goal from Hickes. Then the Linnets asserted their superiority and before half time had three goals to their credit, Tryler, Sinnet and Cole each obliging with one. Rarely during this half did the Suffolks leave their own half. Their backs and goalie had a harrassing time and they strove manfully to keep out the nippy forwards they were facing. They were ably assisted by Evans, their right half, who, in attack and defence was the outstanding figure on a well beaten side. Sinnet, Covey and Cole each added a goal in the second half.

4th SUFFOLK v 92nd FIELD AMBULANCE.

The 4th Bn. Suffolk Regiment, met the 92nd Field Ambulance R.A.M.C. in a return football match on the former's ground at Troisdorf on Thursday. In the first half the Suffolks, with the wind in their favour had all the play. The valuable addition of Lieut. W.G. Bailey D.S.O., M.C., in the Battalion Team greatly strengthened their side.

The game throughout was very fast, and the Field Ambulance goalkeeper was kept very busy during the whole game, especially in the first half when Lieut. Bourne quickly scored two goals and these were added to by another goal from Lt. Bailey, also one from Lt. Morris.

In the second half, the Field Ambulance scored their first and only goal.

The Suffolks immediately scored again in return, and the game finished up with the result:- 4th Bn. Suffolk Regiment 5; 92nd Field Ambulance R.A.M.C. 1.

2nd COMPANY C. v. 4th COMPANY R. A. S. C. LANCASHIRE DIV. TRAIN.

These rival teams played at Beuel on Thursday and the game resulted in a win for 2nd Company by two goals to nil.

Play was very interesting throughout the game. 4 Company tried hard to score towards time, but the defence proved too strong. Sgt. Davis played a good games, scoring both goals.

Q. M. S. Swainbank gave a fine display, using sound judgement. Lce. Cpl. Griggs was the pick of 4 Company, playing a splendid tackling game at centre half.

INTERESTING FOOTBALL AT NEUNKIRCHEN.

Some very interesting matches have been played at Neunkirchen. On Monday afternoon a team from "I" Company came in from their outlying station to meet Headquarters team. A very fast and exciting game resulted. In the middle of the second half, during a scrimmage in front of the Headquarters goal, "Y" Company netted the ball. The home team failed to equalise, and the visitors scored again and ran out winners of a very closely contested game, by 2—0. On Tuesday the Regimental Transport challenged the Headquarters team and the battalion football experts predicted at least a five-nothing result in favour of H.Q. They were wrong. The teams met on Tuesday evening and the transport "wallahs" put up an excellent fight, their goalkeeper showing excellent form and making numerous "saves." H. Q. however continued pressing and scored just before the interval. On resuming, H. Q. still carried the ball into the Transport territory and kept it there, but no further score resulted and a pleasant game ended in a win for H. Q. by 1—0.

On Wednesday afternoon, H.Q. met "W" Company, the champion sports company of the Battalion. This was H.Q.'s third match in three days and they were obviously "stale" at the outset. "W" Company speedily took the offensive and as the result of the beautiful combined play, scored after about 10 minutes play, the ball coming from the foot of Lce. Cpl. Taylor. The play continued to be chiefly in the H.Q. half of the ground and Lce. Cpl. Taylor added three more goals in rapid succession. After resuming, H.Q. pressed vigorously and twice netted the ball, the scorer on each occasion being Lt. Argent, who throughout the game was very persistent, but got too little support from his partners. "W" Company then attacked again and just before the finish, added a fifth goal through Pte. Devan, and were winners of a good clean game by 5—2. The winners are to be congratulated on their excellent combination.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

Wednesday, April 30th, 1919.

Surface Wind Light between N. W. and N. but probably increasing during day. Sky Cloudy. Occasional showers are likely with brighter intervals of good visibility.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS

(With an Occasional Entertainments Note.)

A "Booster" of Boomerangs.

From time to time, letters have been received, and quoted in this column, from correspondents who have invented new games and sports or who are anxious to see the revival of some ancient and not very well-known pastime.

All manner of suggestions have rolled along, some of them very promising. The latest one of these to reach this office is from an individual who claims that the revival of boomerang throwing as an army sport would be immensely popular. Perhaps it would — and perhaps it wouldn't. I once heard of a "tenderfoot" in Australia who "tried his 'prentice" hand at throwing one of those missiles. After several unsuccessful attempts his efforts were finally rewarded with such full measure of succes that the wretched thing returned all too suddenly and cracked him on the head.

A Popular Conductor.

The efforts of Capt. Dan Godfrey, and his 55-strong orchestra, are meeting with the success they deserve

In the series of symphony concerts that are being given at the Staat Theatre, Bonn, crowded audiences have shown their appreciation of the excellent works submitted in no uncertain manner, the programmes being sufficiently varied to please all tastes.

The little sketch reproduced here might suggest that Capt. Godfrey is a bit "fireworky" in his method of conducting. Nothing could be further from the truth. He certainly "gets hold" of every member of his orchestra, but he contrives to do so in a quiet and unassuming manner that appeals to all.

And — by the way — what Capt Godfrey doesn't know about popular taste in matters musical is not worth knowing.

Officers' Sports Club.

That the inauguration of the Rhine Army Officers' Sports Club is likely to fill an important section of our summer sports programme is evidenced by the large number of prospective members who have informed the Secretary of their intention of participating in the many advantages the scheme offers. The club (about which an article appeared on this page in our issue of 26th inst.) is setting out to provide facilities for indulgence by officers in practically every conceivable phase of sport for the very nominal subscription of ten marks a month for Cologne residents and five marks a month for those outside the town. The inaugural gathering of members (and anyone else who is interested) will take place at the Tennis Club, Lindenthal, to-morrow (Thursday). Ladies are invited; the Army Commander will be there; tea is to be provided and a band and pipers will add a little additional brightness to what promises to be a thoroughly happy function.

Round the Town.

The ladies who are to guide the uninitiated round the sights worth seeing in Cologne, on behalf of the British Empire League, are busy with guide books and maps to refresh their already abundant knowledge of all that is interesting in the town. And I hear they have made some wonderful discoveries in the way of little-known and infrequently visited corners that absolutely exhude romance in chunks. These ladies have a positively uncanny knack of finding all there is to know of a place and in their conducted tours (to be started when the club opens) they will show you more in half a day than all the guide books published could enable you to discover in a week, unaided.

I also hear that Miss Decima Moore is to have a finger well in the pie in the Club's administration. That knowledge will be sufficient indication to the thousands of troops who have come under her sunny influence in Paris and elsewhere that the Cologne institution will be some club.

Billiards.

Lest those cheery billiardists, who are eagerly challenging people to games varying from a hundred to two thousand up through the office of this journal, fear I am neglecting their wishes, I would hasten to say that the interval that has elapsed since reference was last made to the subject in this column has been occupied by diligent search for an English billiard table without which it would be impossible to arrange the championship. And, having got to the end of this Gladstonian sentence let me still further hasten to add that I have run to earth no fewer than three tables available for other ranks; full size and complete with pockets. They are in the new British Empire League Clubs (about which there appears an article on another page) that is to be opened in a few days.

It would be rather a good plan if one of these tables could be reserved exclusively for handicaps and challenges in order that the cloth and cushions should not be in danger of getting damaged by the rough treatment that many raw novices would be apt to bestow upon it. There are bound to be many matches between expert cueists, and it would be a great pity if their exhibitions were interfered with by an indifferent table. However, it is time to get on with the arrangement of the matches that are now in hand.

A Sergeant started the ball rolling by asking of there was anyone, in or near Cologne, who could give him a start in 500 up. Quite a large number of people seem anxious to oblige and I am sending their acceptances of his invitation to him by letter. I shall be glad to hear if anything is fixed up.

THE RAMBLER.

LABOUR COMPANY FOOTBALL.

The match arranged between the 17th and 91st Labour Coys. started on Sunday last on the ground of the 17th. A very good show was being made by the team of the 17th when, owing to the wretched state of the weather, and the muddy ground, it was decided to postpone the game.

Why are
"SAPON" SOAPS
the favourites with British Soldiers and Sailors?

Because they have used MILLIONS OF TABLETS and find they get the best results. Free lather in any water. No scum which irritates the skin. Stops irritation from insect-bites and heals open wounds.

WHY waste your money on old-fashioned Soaps made from Boiled Fats, when you can get better Soap for less money in "SAPON" SOAPS?

ENTIRELY DIFFERENT from all other Soaps—

you have only to try a Tablet in hard water to convince yourself that no other Soap, no matter how widely advertised, or what price is paid for it, can compare with it in producing a feeling of cleanliness and freedom from skin-irritation.

Two kinds:
SWEET SCENTED IDEAL TOILET SOAP
ARCHANGEL (WOOD) TAR SOAP.

Disinfects and soothes the skin and destroys all insect life.

Sold at all British Army Canteens.

A sample box of three Tablets of Toilet, full size, either Sweet Scented or Archangel Tar, from the makers post free, for 1/- Postal Order.

You will never use old-fashioned Fat Soap once you have used "SAPON" SOAPS and given them a fair trial.

"TOMMY" IN WONDERLAND.

A LEAVE CLUB IN COLOGNE AT LAST.

MEALS, MUSIC AND MERRIMENT FOR "O.R's."

"Other ranks" who have visited Cologne for a few days, leave have usually discovered, to their disappointment that the privilege is rather a doubtful one.

Generally speaking, "Tommy," armed with his pass and a somewhat weighty pack, arrives at the cathedral town from some more or less distant village with the happy smile of pleasurable anticipation. Having got outside the station, however, he finds himself wandering aimlessly along without the foggiest idea of his destination.

He makes enquiries from other khaki men he meets as to the whereabouts of a decent meal to help him along. Eventually, the limited accomodation the "Y.M." people are able to provide in the way of "grub" is thankfully accepted by our heavy-hearted friend and at the end of three or four days' sight-seeing (in which very few of the really interesting sights are seen!) he returns to his battalion feeling that it is good to be back where meals are regular and ample, and companionship congenial.

THE BRITISH FUTURE.

In a few days' time such sad experiences will be nothing more than unpleasant memories. This is what the same "other rank" will find when next he pays a visit to Cologne. He will alight from the train with the same happy smile (and this time, it will be a "smile that won't come off") to be met by a guide from the British Empire League Club. In a very brief space of time he will find himself in a spacious hall, luxuriously furnished, that will bring back memories of fairy stories he had read.

If he has not already a ravenous appetite, the sight of daintily laid tables that he will percieve through the glass-panel of a door (as he hands his kit to a porter) will whet it for him. He will glance round his palatial surroundings and will probably pinch himself to provide the conviction that he is not dreaming when his eyes drop on neatly-printed cards announcing the location of the Billiard Room, Lounge, Bath Rooms, Tea Gardens, Library, Music Room, Bedrooms, Enquiry Office, Bowling Ally, and any number of other attractive departments.

A HOME FROM HOME.

Any readers who retain any recollection of the Empire League Leave Club at Paris (and any one who has been there will surely retain the happiest) will understand that this little article is no wild flight of fancy when it is announced that the Cologne Club is to be run under the same auspices.

When the Club starts its merry course, a leave ticket to Cologne will be a privilege worthy of the exercise of much "scrounging" effort.

The institution will be "Tommy's" home during his stay in Cologne and his "notel" expenses will make but a very small hole in his financial resources.

There will be 400 "comfy" beds and, in addition, there will be facilities for providing for the "inner man" of roughly 500 others who are non-resident members.

An excellent little orchestra will play all the latest ditties during meal times and in a spacious garden, there will be frequent performances by military bands.

Indoor amusements will be provided. There will be three English and three German Billiard tables a couple of bowling rooms, a lounge with umpteen easy chairs and settees in it, wherein to read the Cologne Post in comfort, card rooms, all the popular parlour games, and a well stocked library.

Up aloft, a dancing hall with an exceptionally good floor, will no doubt come in for a great deal of attention and, if plans material so as per programme, dancing lessons will be given there nightly.

In addition — but enough has already been written to convey a slight impression of some of the wonders of this institution, You must wait now, and have a look at the place for yourselves.

If you are interested, keep your eye on The Cologne Post for the next few days, and you will learn when the club is to be opened, wher it is situated, and who are the cheerful spirits who are to administer all these luxuries.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

We are informed by the authorities that for all newspapers sent to the United Kingdom, and to all places outside zones of the Army of the Rhine and the British troops in France and Flanders, the postage must be prepaid at the rate of ½d. for two ounces. So when you "send it home," please affix a stamp to each copy of The Cologne Post.

ART AND PHOTOGRAPHIC EXHIBITION.

TENTH CORPS PROJECT.

The executive committee formed to deal with the projected Art and Photographic Exhibition for the Tenth Corps has made the following arrangements.

It will be held on June 6th, 7th and 8th, in the Kunstmuseum on the Hofgarten, Bonn, unless this is unavailable. In that case another public building in the neighbourhood will be utilized. It will be open from 14.00 hrs. until 18.00 hrs. The military public will be admitted, officers at three marks and other ranks at one mark. Civilians will be admitted at five marks.

A branch of the Officers' Club will be open for the supply of refreshments in the Museum.

There are two sections provided for:

I—Art (a) Oil-paintings; (b) Water-colour and Pastel; (c) Black and White.

All exhibits must be the original work of exhibitors, and executed in a theatre of war or an occupied zone.

Exhibitor's fee, five marks for each picture.

II—Photographic.

(a) Views up to ¼-plate; (b) views over ¼-plate; (c) Portraits up to ¼-plate; (d) Portraits over ¼-plate.

All photographs must be certified taken, developed and printed by exhibitors in a theatre of war or occupied zone.

Exhibitor's fee 1 Mark for each photograph.

Intending exhibitors should forward their pictures with fees, not later than May 31st, enclosing full names and addresses, and addressed to Lt. A.P. Anderson, 10th Corps Cyclist Battalion H.Q., Bonn.

All ranks in the Tenth Corps are eligible, and prizes will be given in each class of the two sections.

Any profits will be sent to the Red Cross funds.

THE MAYOR OF AVESNES IN BONN.

A very interesting and historic ceremony took place on the Kaiser Platz in Bonn on the 24th April, when the Mayor of Avesnes, M. Monty, accompanied by the sous-prefet, M. Antoine, and M. Dupont, presented memorial banners from the town of Avesnes-Sur-Helpe. to Brigadier General T. S. Lambert, C.B., C.M.G., Commanding 1st Lancashire Infantry Brigade, and Lt. Colonel Sir George Armytage, Bart, C.M.G.,D. S.O., Commanding 13th K.R.R. In the last days of the great advance, it will be remembered that it was the 32nd Division, then commanded by Major-General Lambert, who freed the city from the Germans who had occupied it uninterruptedly for over four years, that it was the 97th Infantry Brigade under Brigadier General Sir George Armytage upon whom the honour fell actually to drive the beaten enemy beyond its gates, and that it was Lt. Colonel Sotheby, D.S.O., M.V.O., who was the first to enter into the town, riding at the head of his battalion, the 10th Argyll & Sutherland Highlanders, with his Second-in-Command, Major McQueen, D.S.O., at his side.

No fitter conclusion to this happy day — the 8th November 1918 — could have been imagined than that the gallant old French Mayor should have been able to present French honours to British Generals on Germain soil, beneath the statue of Kaiser Wilhelm I.

The troops on parade were drawn from the 15th and 16th Lancashire Fusiliers, the 1/5th Border Regt, the 32nd Bn. Machine Gun Corps, and the R.A., R.E., R.A.S.C., and R.A.M.C. of the old 32nd Division. The parade was under command of Major Alban, D.S.O. The drill was of a very high standard and did credit to the occasion. The "general salute" was given by the massed bands of the Lancashire Division. General Lambert began by inspecting the troops, accompanied by the French deputation and Col. Armytage, the band of the 1/5th Border Regt., and the massed pipers of the 5/6th Royal Scots and 15th and 16th Highland Light Infantry, and 10th Argyll & Sutherland Highlanders, playing during the inspection. General Lambert and Col. Armytage, standing in the centre of the square, were then addressed by the Mayor, who paid a tribute to the gallantry and devotion of the old 32nd Division, to the joy which filled the hearts of his townfolk when first they saw the kilted Highlanders swinging along their streets. He dwelt briefly on the hateful yoke which had lain so heavily on the people of Avesnes, and concluded by emphasising the gratitude which he and they would always feel in their hearts towards their deliverers.

The sous-prefet then spoke in glowing terms and with much power of the sense of joy which filled the little party of French men and women present there in honour, standing on the soil of their late oppressors, and among the remnants of the same troops who six months earlier had freed them at the point of the bayonet.

General Lambert responded in French, thanking the deputation for the honour they had conferred by coming such a distance to present the emblems in person, and expressing the satisfaction felt by all ranks of the 32nd Division in having been able to relieve the suffering of Avesnes.

The Mayor then presented the banners. On conclusion of this, the "General Salute" was given, followed by the Marseillaise. An escort preceded by the Scottish Pipers, marched off with the banners and the troops filed past at the salute and returned to quarters. A number of distinguished persons were present at the impressive ceremony, and were entertained to luncheon later by Brigadier-General Lambert and Lt.-Col. Armytage at the Konigshof Hotel. During luncheon the Pedlars' Orchestra of the Lancashire Division played a selection under Captain D.S. Godfrey, a violin solo being given by Lce. Cpl. S. Freedman, A.R.A.M.

In wishing prosperity and happiness to the Town of Avesnes, Brig.-General Lambert, speaking in French, reminded those present of the efforts which had been made during the long years of the War to bring liberty and peace once more to France. The 32nd Division existed no longer. It had been absorbed under the new organisation in the Lancashire Division. Those whom they had seen on parade to-day were true veterans of the old Division. They had fought their way across the Somme, they had broken through the Hindenburg lines at Le Tronquoy, they had forced the passage of the Canal at Ors, and they had reached Avesnes. The welcome they had received there on the 8th and 9th November, 1918, would never be forgotten. For four long years they had struggled side by side with the brave troops of France, and they had learnt, through war even more than in peace, to value the courage and the greatness of the French Nation.

Lieut-Colonel Armytage, speaking in French, thanked the Deputation for the honour conferred upon him and begged them to convey to the citizens of Avesnes his appreciation of their kindness especially to those whose handiwork was shown in the beautiful standard which had been presented to him.

The toast of "Our guests" was then given, all present standing, while the "Marseillaise" was played by the orchestra.

GENERAL MANGIN AND ANNIVERSARY OF ZEEBRUGGE.

On page two of yesterday's issue we gave a description of the recent celebrations on the occasion of the Zeebrugge anniversary, when General Mangin reviewed French and British M.L's. and later entertained the naval officers at Mainz. This sketch is a "perpetration" from the pen of a British Naval Officer who was present.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

LIFE IN BERLIN.

A correspondent recently returned from Berlin gives very bad impressions of life in the city. Though food is better, there are all the characteristic signs of a desperate population which has lost all hope in the future — low morals, heinous theatre plays, pornographic literature sold everywhere, money squandered recklessly.

There is much grumbling against Bavaria, but it is thought that the Prussian troops under the command of Noske will solve any difficulty. Bavarians residing in Berlin, however, think differently.

Experts on revolutionary matters say that a new revolution is imminent and that the revolution up to date has not been effective as there are still men of the old regime, like Dernburg and Erzberger in high authority.

Acts of Fraternization.

Strange fraternizing can be seen nowadays, the once-haughty aristocrats walking hand in hand with the most extreme spartacists, united in their hate against Capitalism.

Meanwhile the Berlin Government quivers. The Centre Party (Roman Catholics) has expressed its regret in having co-operated in the formation of that "Government of Compromise."

The German Plebiscitum.

The subject as to whether the peace terms will or will not be submitted to a plebiscitum has been discussed at length in recent issues of the German Press, and it is impossible to form any definite opinion of their true attitude. A correspondent of the Neue Berliner, commenting on the policy of a plebiscitum, says that "the mass of the population is already prepossessed. The conditions (the peace terms) will be very severe and with the least possible delay a decision must be made, as the Entente is not prepared to postpone the answer for an indefinite period merely for us to obtain a plebiscitum. To enlighten the population in these days is impossible, especially so to bring the 'pros and cons' to the knowledge of the people in the smaller villages by means of meetings and pamphlets."

"There is no doubt" says the correspondent, "that the people would vote according to the policy of their own particular newspaper, and the Press has so prepared a spirit of refusal that even if there was a desire, it would be impossible to bring about such a sudden change in so short a time."

"I understand," says the writer, "that the Government want to place the responsibility upon the National Assembly, and the Assembly, in turn, upon the people. But in my opinion this is not possible, and responsibility must be borne by those in authority, not by an anonymity. It may appear democratic, but in reality it is mere poltroonery.

A New Spirit in German Philosophy.

The other evening Prof. Scheler gave an interesting lecture on Philosophy at the new Cologne University before a crowded audience. The lecture was particularly instructive as the Professor opened out to his audience a new vista of thought on this time-worn subject, in that the study of philosophy demands, or ought to demand, the co-operation of all countries. He showed that in positive scientific research work one country might take the place of another, but not so in the study of philosophy. Making a comparison with the co-operation of the disciples of Socrates, he said that there must be an international community whose task must be the discernment of philosophical truth.

The Professor protested strongly against every effort to re-awaken the old German idealism of Fichte, Hegel and Kant. "Philosophy is not a national affair — nationalities and individualities must merge into co-operation in the research of eternal truth. We need to think rightly, truthfully — not Germanly." Remembering the fact that at one time Germany boasted of her pre-eminence in this important study, the above declaration is somewhat startling.

Monsieur le Sous-prefet Antoine, in reply, expressed the pleasure which it gave to him and to all the members of the deputation to visit Bonn and to see once again those members of the 32nd Division who had released Avesnes from the slavery they had suffered during the War. He thanked Gen. Lambert, Gen. Armytage and the officers and men of the 32nd Division for the welcome they had given to the deputation. Avesnes was once more free and would not forget those who had helped to liberate her.

In the evening the representatives of Avesnes, accompanied by Brig.-General Lambert and others attended the Lancashire Division Symphony Concert at the Stadt Theatre, Bonn, given by the orchestra of 55 performers conducted by Captain D. S. Godfrey.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

The Editor, in publishing letters from Correspondents, will use his own discretion, and if necessary, limit the publishing of correspondence on any subject whatever. It must be understood, however that he is not responsible for the views stated.

All communications for this column should be brief and to the point, and preference will be given to those which bear the writers' signatures for publication. No letter will be published unless accompanied by rank name, and unit of sender, which are needed for the purpose of reference.

Many letters of a perverse nature have reached the office, and the Editor wishes to point out that these only cause waste of time both to the writer and the Editor himself. Letters of this nature will not be published.

LIVERPOOL DOCK HORSES.

Our recent discussion on the subject of Liverpool Dock Horses has found its way to England, and we have been favoured with a reply from the General Secretary of the Liverpool and District Carters' and Motormen's Union. This must be taken as final and authoritative.— Ed.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.— I have been written to by one of our members at present in Bonn re a question which was answered in your correspondence column relating to the weight of load drawn by one horse in the City of Liverpool, and have been asked to send a reply to you for publication to settle what appears to be a rather interesting discussion. I think to quote a weight of 7½ tons with a vehicle of a further 2½ tons is rather exaggerating the position, but I think it can be safely stated that one horse in Liverpool often takes a load of anything from 3 to 6 tons with a vehicle weighing a further 30 cwts, making a gross total in some instances of 7½ tons, this being practically the heavist weight one horse is called upon to draw, except perhaps in cases where the shaft horse in a team has sometimes to set a load without the assistance of the chain horse, under which circumstances the weight of 7½ tons plus 2½ tons for vehicle would be correct.

It is the boast of this city, that there are at work the finest heavy draft horses in the world,

Trusting this will end the interesting and at the same time educational discussion which has taken place in your journal.

MERRY MOMENTS AT MECKENHEIM.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.—Under the above headline there appeared in your issue of "The Post" for the 23rd inst., a report of some doings of the 51st Welsh Regt., amongst them being the first performance of the Battalion Troupe known as "The Oo-jahs." So far, so good. But there also appears the statement that the words "Oo-jah" are Welsh for "Très Bon"—ye gods and little fishes! Is your correspondent serious, or is he having a sly dig at "The Welsh?" I am a Welshman (and proud of it, too) and a fairly accomplished Welsh scholar, but heaven forbid that I should include "Oo-jah" in my native vocabulary. The nearest Welsh equivalent to "Très Bon" I know of is "Da iawn," and that is nothing like "Oo-jah" is it? Trusting your Meckenheim correspondent will not "get the breeze up" over this friendly correction.

DRIVER, R.A.S.C.

THE SOLDIERS' CLUB.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.—I wish to draw attention to the deplorable arrangements as they at present exist, for catering for the great influx of Tommies who daily visit Cologne.

The food question is what I mainly refer to. The various Divisional Hostels are quite inadequate to cope with the numbers and the overflow has to seek accomodation through the Town Major's office.

Now, would it not be greatly appreciated by the men, if an institution on the same footing as the Union Jack Club, London, was commenced as soon as possible and continued throughout the period of the Occupation.

It may be argued that the cost to the men would beyond their means, but against that it must be remembered that the British Soldier is better off than ever before; and if he could patronise the Union Jack Club in London during the war, he is certainly better able to do so since his pay has been considerably increased.

In addition to the foregoing I would also suggest that the proposed club be fitted out with sleeping accomodation for 200 or 300 men, it would be a welcome change to those who are still compelled to use the Army blanket.

Thanking you for the valuable space you have allowed me.

A Tommy.

Answers to Correspondents.

[The flow of correspondence, since the Cologne Post was instituted, has been enormous, and the Editor would like to point out that only a certain number of the innumerable questions can be answered in each issue. Should any inquirer find that his question has not yet been answered, he can have the assurance that it will receive attention in due course, and the answer will appear accordingly. Many questions have been received which could be answered much easier by the Adjutant of the unit concerned, and all such cases which affect the unit commander must be taken to him and not sent here. — Ed.]

W.Y.—The area of Germany, about 211,000 square miles, is more than four times that of England, exclusive of Wales. The pre-war population was roughly 68,000,000.

Interested.—The quotation you give is from Keat's "Ode to Apollo."

A.A.—Yes, it is probably true that no Act on the Statute Book has ever had such sweeping and comprehensive powers as "Dora."

T.L.—It would take up a lot of space to answer you query fully. Sufficient it is to say that the Zecho-Slovaks are a very important branch of the great Slav family of natives which includes the Russians, Poles, Slovenes, Croats, and Serbs. Despite the fact that they have been hemmed in by German tribes, they still have retained their Slav nationality, patriotism, and love of independence.

"PLAY THE GAME" IN TRADE.

MR. J. R. CLYNES'S ADVICE TO MASTERS AND MEN.

Speaking at a dinner given by the Industrial League in London on Friday, Mr. J. R. Clynes said the action of certain men in the Labour movement in endeavouring to use industrial means for political ends was not only reprehensible but dangerous to labour. The industrial and trade union power of the workers ought never to allow itself to be harnessed to the chariot wheels of revolution. The workers had the ballot-box at their disposal.

Trade unionism was now a very great power both in influence and in ability to demand its just claims, claims that would be used to the full but never, he believed, unconsitutionally. But just as the rich had no right to rob the poor, so the poor had no right to rob the rich.

Let them in commerce try to be a little more sportsmanlike. If they did this, if they only introduced a little more of the racecourse and and the boxing ring into every-day business life, there would result a much better feeling between employers and employed. Industry could not expand by brawn and muscle alone. There must be brain and directing power. His complaint was that the men who supplied the muscle of our industries had not had their fair share of the return of the combined efforts of both.

FIELD MARSHAL FRENCH'S BOOK, "1914."

GERMANY AND LETTLAND.

RUMANIANS ADVANCING INTO HUNGARY.

AMERICAN CRITICISM OF PRESIDENT WILSON.

AT THE BEGINNING OF THE WAR.

FRENCH'S REVELATIONS.

It is certain that one of the most critically discussed books of the war will be "1914," which Field Marshal Viscount French has written. The book is being published serially in the Daily Telegraph, the first instalment appearing yesterday.

Lord French begins by referring to the forebodings he felt for many years and relates an incident which occurred late in July 1914 when he was the guest of Lichnowsky at a luncheon at which Lord Kitchener was also present. The German Ambassador told him that he feared all Europe would be ablaze before they were a fortnight older.

Referring to the doubts existing at the beginning of August as to whether this country would support France, French says he was perfectly sure that so long as Asquith, Haldane, Grey and Churchill continued in the Government we should remain true to our understanding with the Entente powers.

French then gives an account of a Council of War held at No. 10 Downing-street on the 5th August, when the composition of the expeditionary force and the point of concentration in France were considered, and says it was unanimously agreed that we should do all we could. Two divisions were to be kept at home for the moment and one cavalry division and four divisions of all arms sent out as speedily as possible. This meant a force of approximately one hundred thousand men.

As to the question of the point of concentration, the British and French General Staffs had for some years been in close consultation on this subject in view of the possibility of a sudden attack. Detraining stations were laid down between Maubeuge and Le Cateau with Headquarters at Le Cateau. The discussion at the Council of War took the turn of overhauling these decisions but was suspended pending the arrival of the French mission. Meanwhile the Headquarters of the British Expeditionary Force was established at the Hotel Metropole.

When the French mission arrived under Colonel Hugnet it was discussed wheter the original plan regarding the area of British Concentration was being adhered to;

Kitchener thought that our position on the left of the French line at Maubeuge would be too exposed and favoured concentration further back in the neighbourhood of Amiens.

Haig suggested postponing the landing until the campaign was actively opened and it would be possible to judge in which direction co-operation would be most effective.

French says that personally he was opposed to these ideas and was anxious to adhere to the original plans. Generals Murray, Wilson, Grierson and Hugnet concurred in his views and so it was settled.

French then recalls that the certainty of war was forced upon him about 1908. Haldane himself was even then alive to the possibility of war, He told French that if in power he would designate him for command of the Expeditionary Force and requested him to be ready.

In August 1914 the many possibilities and alternatives of action were thus quite familiar to him. Britain and France had an understanding for combined action if necessary, but Belgium could never be persuaded to decide upon her attitude in the event of war.

The author makes another digression to relate a conversation he had with the ex-Kaiser at the manoeuvres near Berlin in August 1911. The ex-Kaiser said "the sword of Germany is sharp and if you oppose Germany you will find how sharp it is.'

French admits he was unprepared for a war of position, but the French and German Generals were also unprepared for the complete transformation of all military ideas. He says that "if we had realised the true effect of modern war appliances in August 1914 there would have been no retreat from Mons and if in September 1914 the Germans had learnt their lesson, the Allies would never have driven them back to the Aisne. It was in the fighting on that river that the eyes of all began to be opened."

PRESIDENT WILSON'S HOME CRITICS.

Boston. Senator Lodge, who will lead the majority in the next Senate, gave an address on the 26th April on the subject of the Polish and Italian situations.

He declared that Americans should not meddle in European questions and asserted that President Wilson is inconsistent. "Our representative's attitude relative to Danzig" he said "does not square with his attitude relative to Fiume. I do not see why his arguments pertaining to Fiume do not apply to Danzig and Poland."

Senator Lodge urged the United States to cease interfering in European concerns, declaring that another matter of more consequence to the United States than either Fiume or Danzig is that the Japanese insist on taking Shantung.

"It is not in Europe, but in Asia, where our interests are as great as those of the Allies, that there is something which should be looked into by the Senate if it appears in the Treaty of Peace."—Reuter.

FALSE REPORTS FROM NORTH RUSSIA.

FAITHFUL KARELIANS.

The General Commanding at Murmansk reports that during the recent unrest in his area a Karelian Regiment remained firmly staunch to the Allies despite every effort made to seduce them from their allegiance. All Bolshevist attempts to persuade them to mutiny met with complete failure.— Reuter.

Reuter learns that the recent Bolshevist claims to have retaken Mosozero are without the slightest foundation. The Allies have had no set-back in the Murman district. They have only consolidated their recent gains there but have now occupied villages previously in possession of Bolshevists at the North West end of lake Setozero.

EUROPEAN EDITOR MUST LEAVE INDIA.

Bombay. 26th April. The Governor of Bombay, with the sanction of the Viceroy, has ordered Mr. B.G. Horniman, editor of the Bombay Chronicle, who was associated with Gandhi in the passive resistance movement, to leave India Englandward immediately. Reuter.

(Mr. Benjamin Guy Horniman is well known in London newspaperdom. He travelled East on several occasions as special correspondent and was the first journalist who ever conversed with the Dalai Lama on his flight from Lhassa in 1910. He is Vice-president of the Indian Home Rule League. One of his recreations is "loafing.")

GERMAN INTRIGUES IN LEITLAND.

ENGLAND GIVES WARNING.

Berlin. 29th April. — Britain has demanded restoration of the position at Libau as it existed before; the coup d'état. The German Government, replying to the Allied protests, declares that the revolution was the work of the Russians. The Zweitu rbout, however, represents it as a Pan-German reactionary intrigue and in the most emphatic terms condemns the coup d'état, saying that although Germany needs peace, yet the affair is a proof that the German policy of intrigues is still being played. — Reuter.

GUARDING AGAINST MASSACRE OF CHRISTIANS.

Reuter learns that as precaution against the possible massacres of Christians by Turks, British troops have occupied Samsun, Marziva, Amasia, Tokat and Sebastia on the Southern shore of the Black Sea together with all the hinter land.

RUMANIANS ADVANCING INTO HUNGARY.

Copenhagen. 27th April. The Buda-Pesth Soviet admits that the Rumanians, attacking with the Northern wing of their Eastern armies, reached Nagykallo, while from the South they are advancing towards Theiss Bend, near Csop. The South Slavs on the Southern front attacked from Battaszek in the direction of Szegszard and forced the Hungarians back some kilometres. — Reuter.

SOCIALIST EXCUSE FOR TRIP TO PARIS.

IS THE BIG FOUR IN, PLEASE?

Amsterdam. 28th April. The International Socialist Conference has resolved to oppose any peace conflicting with President Wilson's fourteen points and recommended the sending of a Committee comprising Messrs. Branting, Huysmans, Henderson and others, to remain in Paris until the peace preliminaries are signed, owing to uneasiness caused them by the decisions at the Paris Conference.

The Committee will be charged to demand an interview with the "Big Four."—Reuter.

ANTICIPATIONS OF THE NEW BUDGET.

NOTHING SENSATIONAL

Parliament reassembled on Tuesday after a brief Easter recess. Members were present in greater numbers than usual.

The outstanding feature of the week will be the Budget, introduced by Mr. Austin Chamberlain yesterday. On this occasion the Chancellor of the Exchequer has been unusually successful in keeping his proposals secret. It appears certain however that the Chancellor intends to impose higher duties on alcoholic liquors and the trade has for some time accepted this prospect as inevitable. In financial quarters there is a general belief that the excess profits duty will be continued, but a reduction in the amount from eighty to perhaps fifty per cent is considered highly probable.

There is a suggestion in usually well informed quarters that in view of the appointment of a Royal Commission to inquire into the whole working of the Income Tax Acts it is unlikely that any change will be proposed in the method of levying the impost.

In accordance with the Government pledge the Budget will give effect to the policy of Imperial Preference. No doubt this will be done by reducing the amount of the present duties on imports in the case of goods coming from overseas dominions or India.

The general expectation is that the Budget will not be of a sensational character.

MEN BEING RECALLED TO THE COLOURS.

VITAL NEEDS.

Mr. Winston Churchill, in reply to questions in the House of Commons, stated that only after very careful consideration had the Cabinet decided to recall to the army soldiers working on the land. Men were most urgently required for special military duties in France, on the Rhine and elsewhere. These men are ineligible for demobilization at present, but every effort will be made to meet any consequent inconvenience.

Ireland, Egypt, India, the Army of the Rhine, the Imperial War Graves Committee and the Department of Agriculture are all clamouring for men and the Cabinet is confronted with extreme difficulties in meeting the manifold needs of the public service, but certain vital needs must be met.

THE PRINCE OF WALES AND MANNERS.

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales paid his first visit to Tattersall's sale ring at Knightsbridge yesterday. There were standing ready to be put up to auction eighteen Pytchley Hunt horses from the stud of Colonel Walter Faber, who is giving up the mastership.

The Prince was in search of a good hack to ride until next hunting season when he hopes to join in the sport. Finally his choice fell on "Manners," a bay gelding, who has never been known to give his rider a fall. The whipper in, Will Bodington, said "he jumps like a flea and talks French" meaning that the animal is extraordinarily clever. This recommendation seemed both to amuse and to satisfy the Prince. When he went away it was understood that he had commissioned some one to bid on his behalf. The offers rose to four hundred guineas at which figure the hammer fell. The purchaser was announced as a veterinary surgeon, but it is understood that Manners will be ridden by the Prince.

MURDEROUS OUTRAGE BY A SOLDIER.

At Forest Gate, London, on Tuesday a soldier named Perry, of the Suffolk Regiment, is alleged to have murdered his aunt and her two children aged fifteen and six years. Later he attacked his uncle with an axe and a hammer. The uncle now lies in hospital terribly injured.

Perry is still at large. It is stated that he was about to be demobilized and that his wedding was to have taken place the morning after the tragedy.

HELPING GERMANY TO START AGAIN.

As far as Great Britain is concerned the food shortage is rapidly becoming a matter of past history. Mr. Roberts, the Food Controller, says that unfortunately this cannot be said of Europe generally. Until peace is definitely signed it is hardly possible to lift the blockade altogether, but a vast amount has been accomplished by the Allies in taking the sting out of the blockade.

Excluding German-Austria 11,780 tons of food were delivered daily by the Allies during the month of March. Arrangements for the relief of Germany were not completed until 14th March but already thousands of tons of foodstuffs have actually been delivered in the German territory.

Mr. Roberts declared that the mere lifting of the blockade would not save Europe. If Europe is to be saved from Bolshevism and anarchy far more than mere negative acts will be necessary and to an ever increasing degree we are lending our resources to help the overthrown countries to start again.

EXIT THE PRESS BUREAU.

The Official Press-Bureau at Whitehall ends its career to-night and the Royal United Services Institution will regain possession of the building. The Museum was not interfered with in any way and during the war was visited by thousands of army men.

DEMOBILISATION OF DERBY RECRUITS.

SURMOUNTING THE DIFFICULTY.

Lord Derby having called the attention of the Secretary of State for War to the unfavourable position of the Derby recruits regarding demobilisation owing to what is known as the 1916 rule, the War Office has sent Lord Derby a memorandum explaining that his suggested system, that men hitherto exempted should take the place of those now in the Army of Occupation, was impracticable.

The memorandum adds however that it is in contemplation to prescribe length of service in the Army as the future basis for release, instead of an age basis.

This method, if adopted, would of course go a considerable way towards meeting Lord Derby's suggestion, since the bulk of men who enlisted in 1915 under the group scheme and were not called up during that year were called up during the following January and February.

UNSATISFACTORY FOREIGN MEAT.

RETAILERS TAKE ACTION.

Complaints which have been made in Smithfield market with reference to the allocation to London retailers of Chilian, Brazilian, South African and Manchurian beef, all of which consignments are said to be of inferior quality, reached a climax on Monday. Salesmen in the market refused to handle over a thousand quarters of this meat, Following a meeting at the butchers hall in the morning a deputation from the Union of London Retail Meat Traders waited upon the Ministry for Food with the object of laying before the officials the resolution passed at the meeting to the effect that the retailers refused to handle inferior beef.

It was subsequently announced that retailers should have equal representation on the grading committee of Smithfield market in order to settle questions as to the allocation of imported meat.

This means that meat which is not considered suitable for sale will be graded out.

The new arrangement was at once put into force. Under this agreement four retail butchers have been added to the grading committee, this body now comprising four wholesalers and four retailers.

It is understood that in accordance with the promise made at the Ministry of Food by Mr. Proctor, Director of Meat Supplies, only eighty per cent of the beef objected to as inferior will be before the grading committee.

DEFENCE OF OUT-OF-WORK DONATIONS.

STRIKING STATISTICS.

The Minister for Labour yesterday in the House of Commons defended the payment of unemployment donations. He pointed out that the million recipients included 350,000 members of the forces, 108,000 ex-munitioners and 100,000 cotton operatives who were unemployed owing to the operation of the blockade. Abuses are inevitable, he said, but he is confident that at least half the complaints are without foundation. Any frauds discovered will be prosecuted relentlessly.

Continuing, he stated that since the armistice three million out of four million demobilized soldiers and civilians had been absorbed in industry. In itself this is a remarkable achievement, because it took years to get from war work to peace work. Other contributory causes of unemployment are that the central Empires and Russia, which used to take a quarter of our exports, are closed, and China, Japan and New Zealand, which used to absorb another quarter, are practically shut off owing to shipping difficulties. Therefore, he said, there is no need to despair of the future.

NATIONALIZATION OF MINES.

Further expert evidence on the Nationalization of Mines was heard by the Coal Commission yesterday.

Mr. Sidney Webb, who is well-known as the chief author of the Fabian Society scheme of nationalization, maintained that the root cause of the relative inefficiency of the British coal supply was its foundation of private profit making. He urged nationalization of the mines as affording the only adequate means of improving the position of miners, of dealing economically and efficiently with the nation's coal resources and of ensuring that coal is supplied to consumers with regularity at the lowest possible cost.

TWO FRESH CASES OF RABIES.

Only two fresh cases of rabies had been confirmed up to last night, at Newnham, Gloucestershire and Newport. Cases are also reported at Cardiff and Barry. Up to the present one hundred and sixty-one cases have been confirmed.

The War Office is causing posters to be displayed at the chief stations in France and at the ports of departure of cross-Channel boats, urging soldiers not to bring dogs home unless they are prepared to keep them in quarantine for six months. EXTRAORDINARY WEATHER IN ENGLAND.

FOUR FEET OF SNOW.

Sharp contrast to the burst of summer which marked Easter has been afforded in England during the last few days. Thunderstorms and falls of sleet, with a biting north wind, preceded so heavy a fall of snow that omnibus and tramway traffic became at first difficult and then impossible. In some districts snow ploughs were used to clear the tramway tracks.

Overhead telegraph and telephone wires suffered severely and communication between London and the provinces was partially suspended.

In London alone over ten thousand wires were affected, and out of 923 trunk telephone lines 200 were brought down by the storm.

The telegraph poles on the Southend line were broken off like match sticks.

Very serious damage has been done to crops and young lambs throughout the country.

In Hertfordshire the snowfall was the heaviest ever experienced and near Westerham lay over four feet deep, several motor cars being snowed up all night.

The storm and consequent flood in South Essex became most serious. The water was between two and three feet deep in places. Hundreds of allotments were submerged and seed beds washed away. The Ilford Golf Club course presented an extraordinary appearance, even the bunkers being covered.

TOO MUCH PUBLICITY.

OFFICER'S DIVORCE.

In the Divorce Court yesterday Capt. John Stubbs Harrison, on the Staff at the Horse Guards, obtained a decree nisi, with costs, on the ground of his wife's misconduct with Thomas Miller, who was one of his greatest friends, and whom he trusted implicitly.

The judge did not permit two letters to be read in Court because, he said, cases in which officers were concerned obtained great publicity.

OVERSEAS TROOPS LONDON MARCH.

Arrangements are now practically completed for the triumphal march of Dominions troops through London on Saturday next. Twelve thousand men, representing the forces of Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and Newfoundland will take part, and the pageant will thus be the largest that has been seen in the Metropolis since the Armistice.

The troops will assemble in Hyde Park near the Marble Arch at 11.45. Dinner will then be served in large marquees in the concentration area.

At 1.40, marching in double column of fours, the troops will proceed by a route upwards of five miles in length, as follows:— Constitution-hill, Buckingham Palace-road, Victoria-street, Strand, round Australia House, Kingsway, Oxford-street and the Marble Arch to the concentration ground at Hyde-Park.

H.M. the King will take the salute at Buckingham Palace.

Every overseas soldier or sailor who is on leave in London will have an unique opportunity of witnessing the march. Arrangements have been made by the Overseas Hospitality Fund so that several thousand of these overseas men will line the route.

EAST SURREYS AND BEDFORDS REACH HOME.

A public welcome was given last evening at Kingston on Thames the 2nd Battalion of the East Surreys on their return home. They were entertained to supper and afterwards visited the Kingston Empire.

Bedford was also en fête yesterday on the occasion of the return from France of the Cadre of the 1st Battalion of the Bedfordshire Regiment.

BISHOP CRITICISES PRIME MINISTER.

Concerned about the appointment of his successor, Dr. Ridgeway, the Bishop of Chichester, speaking at Brighton yesterday, referred to what he termed the unseemly delay.

It is not treating the Church properly, he said. As long as the Premier had the right of appointment to the higher offices of the church it ought to have his first and close attention in conjunction with other things. It should not be put on one side as an inferior matter that could wait while other things were being done.

RIFLE BRIGADE MEMORIAL.

The Duke of Connaught, wearing the uniform of Colonel-in-Chief of the Rifle Brigade, yesterday presided at a meeting held to consider a scheme for providing a permanent memorial to riflemen who fell during the war. He said that any memorial should be permanent and visible and should have the approval of the relatives of the fallen, whose number he estimated at about ten thousand.

BIDS FOR AN AEROPLANE.

For the first time in England an aeroplane has been offered for sale by auction, the event taking place at the Graham White auction rooms in London yesterday.

The machine was described in the catalogue as a Graham White "Bantam" and a first bid of one hundred pounds was quickly doubled. The bidding reached four hundred and fifty pounds, but since there was a reserve of five hundred pounds the machine was withdrawn.

Mr. Gompers, the American Labour Leader who visited Europe last year, was thrown out of his motor car on 27th April and sustained fractured ribs.

MAY DAY.

To-day Cologne and other cities of Germany celebrate the first of May as a day of festival and demonstration. The National Assembly gathered together at Weimar by a considerable majority decreed that the day should be set apart as a national holiday. There were some who thought that the times are not ripe for rejoicing and would have postponed the inauguration of a May Day, but they were over-ruled by an emancipated democracy which professes to find the day suitable for the heralding of Peace, and the blessing of a League of Nations which shall make wars to cease and ensure an international brotherhood of Labour. Thus although—the people of Cologne hold high festival. The schools are closed, the Opera House withholds its delights, and most of the shops cease from tempting the spendthrift. Procession claims the populace and its thoroughfares, and hearts are gladdened by the fancies that lightly turn to thoughts of Peace.

"Winter lingering chills the lap of May"

The festival of holiday is celebrated under the aegis of the British Army of the Rhine. A proclamation issued to the people of Cologne grants permission from our military authorities for the proper conduct of May Day demonstrations. Everything must be done in accordance with right precepts of law and order. An itinerary of procession is fixed; no flags save those of recognized corporations must be displayed; no part can be taken in the demonstration by our soldiers; a ban is placed upon holiday eloquence; and no feature is permitted which will in any way tend towards disturbance. Regulations such as these do not mar holiday rejoicings; they encourage them. It has always been the boast of our Empire that our great soldiers and statesmen have looked sympathetically on the customs and aspirations of other peoples. Our colonies and dependencies would not have clung to us so loyally had we laid heavy hands upon traditions that were cherished by them; and it is our glory that we have furthered and not hindered every worthy ideal in the countries that have looked to us for their welfare. So the people of Cologne may rejoice in peace.

May brings many hoary traditions and happy memories in its train. It is the month of growth and therefore the month of cheer. In days of ancient Rome young men and maidens spent the calends of May in open-air, wending their ways to the verdant fields where they danced and sang in honour of Flora, the goddess of flowers and fruit. May was not a mere tribute to the mother of Mercury; it had an older tradition for it commemorated the days when the fertile earth became young again and donned its beauteous garb of colour, refreshing and joyous and inspiring. It is true that even in Ovid's days the people held that it is unlucky to marry in the month of May, and curiously the tradition is still with us. But May reverenced the joys which early summer brings to hearts that are wearied by winter's cold and spring's sharp winds; and May leads on to June, the month of happy marriage.

Our England has its May Day. Who has not heard of Robin Hood and Maid Marian? The villagers in days that are gone set up their May-poles, and the village common resounded with the gladness of rejoicing. In archery and morris-dancing and many another joyous recreation our forbears celebrated the advent of summer. The antiquary tells us that the festivities of May Day are relics of a time when our ancestors worshipped the sun in the heavens, but we have given new meaning to the gladness of the month. Dancing round the May-pole, the choice of a damsel to be a May-queen, the glow of lighted bonfires — they lure us from the Rhine to the England that we love, and carry us back to days before war gripped our fair country with its gory hand.

The Calends of May. The name comes down from the time when the people were called together that they might be informed of their festivals and sacred days. In a later era the calendar was posted in public places that the people might read the publications of their civil rulers. To-day we have the Bekanntmachung of our Military Governor. The festival in Cologne is one of peace and happiness, for war must now be relegated to the Calends of the Greeks.

THE SPIRIT OF "SAN FAIRY ANN."

Much has been written, spoken, and sung about that indefinable elusive spirit of the British troops — "the spirit that won the war." Everyone put their own pet interpretation to it, widely different, one from the other, but all alike amusing to ourselves. Our theologians, true to their type, naturally treated it as a spiritual force, and of a Sunday our folks at home were regaled with discourses on the purifying virtue of fire, as exampled by "our brave fellows over in France," just as regularly as we had our "Red Hussars" and "Trumpeters" on the same day. Then there were obese public speakers, armchair strategists, and music-hall singers, in fact the big majority of those who were beyond the clutches of the Military Service act, who declaimed it to be that hereditary spirit of patriotism which was ever present, however dormant, in the noble breast of every Briton. These sentiments, as delivered from pulpit, platform and press in the good old days when the war was young, did take a trick or two myself for one; but in the present year of enlightenment anyone in khaki, producing artic es for Rhine consumption, must put another label on the "goods" he hands out, if it is going to be swallowed — hence the title of this article.

To look backwards — was there any expression more often on our lips in France or Belgium than "Ca ne fait rien" in more or less anglicised — and embellished — forms? Even when we were home on leave it would keep slipping out, to the profound mystification and admiration of our less-travelled relatives. Then again it has been immortalised in the song which compares the amenities of the different services: —

You're all right in the cavalree,
No (censored) bon in the infantree;
But if you're in the A.S.C. —
San fairy, san fairy ann!

Now, as to Germany. Myself a recent comer, I made my first step towards mastering that conglomeration of gutturals they call the German language through the medium of "The Epistles of Peter Birse, jr." in these columns. If the kellner asks me "hell oder dunkel?" I just tell him "es macht nicht," which, on Peter's authority, is the German version of my theme, and the phrase seems to be the backbone of all the Anglo-German conversations these days. But how to translate it into our mother tongue is a much more difficult question. Not a few French people have asked me, and I realised at the time that my "That doesn't matter" was a very insipid rendering—in fact, not nearly "san-fairy-ann" enough. The continual cropping up of these phrases shows how dominant is that state of mind which they alone can express. We used to couple "Ca ne fait rien" with "C'est la guerre, que voulez-vous—jam on it?" But here the German equivalent fails us. "Krieg ist Krieg" is too reminiscent of the Junker attempt to explain away their latest departures in the realms of Hunnishness. No, our old favourite is the nearest approach to a perfect expression of the spirit of fatalism, Hedonism, Khayyamism, call it what you will. "San fairy ann" what unpleasantness was the lot of the poor "swaddy," a particularly nasty "morning hate," a buckshee working party, or a short rum ration, the usual grouse had always the antidote in its tail—"san fairy ann!" That, now, was the real spirit of the British troops during the war and that also is going to do more to make a "brighter and better Britain" than all the speeches in Parliament. In the meantime perhaps a more serious outlook towards life must be prescribed in the case of the "Young Guards," but for us who are drawing our 10 6 bonus by virtue of an entry in our A.B.'s 64—"Machinery of Demobilization," well—San Fairy Ann.

EDUCATION.

A REPLY TO JUVENIS.

My dear Juvenis.— I have read your article in The Cologne Post of Thursday last with very great care. I have thought about it in my billet; I have sacrificed many pipes of most exquisite tobacco to it; alternately I have been gratified and angered. I will confess at once that I like your spirit, for undoubtedly you are keen, and as an officer of some years standing I have learnt to appreciate a keen man. But, Juvenis, how appallingly young you must be! Old schoolmasters, such as I am, like to form a mental concept of the fellow to whom we write, so let us begin with that.

As you admit, you are young. Not ridiculously young, but just delightfully. You are a keen boy, and your instincts are sound. You are in an A IV Battalion, and at times you have been chaffed by those older N.C.O.'s who are a godsend to your unit. They are old and grim, and, you know, they are much finer fellows than you would ever think. I saw their doubles in the line, in those days when you were still busy with pneues. Now at times those stout old fellows get weary in their messes and they turn for relief to a little leg-pulling in the cases of the younger sergeants. Juvenis, they pulled your leg. I go so far as to say they pulled it on the matter of musketry qualifications and neglected rifle slings! My boy, it grieves me to think now delightfully you fell the little twitch and at once sat up and took notice. You resent rightly any chaffing of the Education Staff. But for our sakes don't show it. Your friends just love to work off an old joke when they know will make you set your ears back. Bless me, I do it myself, and I only get tired when my friends just smile sympathetically and call me a poor little fellow. You call an old soldier a poor little fellow, and see him creep away with a dazed look. He won't trot out that joke about musketry qualifications and rifle slings any more.

Admitting your keenness, I am not surprised to see you re-cent guards and picquets. But I can hazard a guess to show you that you have done no more than your simple duty. I think your unit must have come out here very deficient in N.C.O.s. Many units did. You were detailed for these simple duties, were you not? During the war I had friends who volunteered for jobs much more difficult than their normal duties, and they did them without a solitary grouse. Now when your unit is hard up for N.C.O.s, it is up to you to do your share of the work, and more than your share. You should do it cheerfully, and should always find ways of doing even more. Those grim old veterans of yours will then begin to think that you are acquiring some "essential guts." They wont pull your leg quite so often. They'll stand you a drink. But not if you excitedly wave in front of them army orders which declare you to be exempt from all duties except meals and pay parades. The next time some old fellow has had a rough day of duties, and is being turfed out at night for something else, you just push him back into bed, and take it on for him. He'll curse you wholeheartedly, but never mind. I know his little ways, and when you in your turn get into a nasty corner, you'll find him there to help you out.

I think you said something about farm labourers and crossing-sweepers monopolising positions of authority. I, too, in my humble way, occupy a position of authority. I realise that farm-labourers and crossing sweepers are of immense value to the state, and that an expert crossing-sweeper is a greater national asset than a wealthy bar-lounger. But understand this. Give me a man who does his job thoroughly, and I say that he is of the finest type you will ever meet in your pre-heavenly career. To have acquired a position of authority that man must have been conscientious, reliable, and capable. May success attend him. As a writer other than you expressed it, he has "essential gut." Have you? Yes, but dont let the importance of your job spoil it.

You suggest a proficiency badge for Education Staffs. I, as a member of an Education Staff and a civilian schoolmaster, prefer to be still mistaken for a soldier. Soldiers won the war, just ordinary regimental soldiers. They preferred to be ordinary and even drab in their appearance. The glittering, resplendent officials we used to see at the railheads and backwards, fellows with devices, insignia, gorgeous hats coated heavily with brass, and futuristic designs on the collars of their tunic aroused not a speck of interest, except in that they made the scenery more pantomimic. What I suggest to you is that you work so infernally hard, that those wonderful old time-serving critics will acknowledge that there is something to be said for the "schoolmaster wallahs," after all. That is what others and I wish to hear. You, too, must wish to hear it, but you will have to work more and talk less, and do it without dramatic trapping.

Juvenis, I regret that I must accuse you of a grave mis-statement. No man ever gained his stripes by twelve years of bellowing on a parade ground. Your fellow sergeants gained theirs by merit in the field. I have recommended quite a few for this very reason, so I know. The pre-war sergeants, I imagine, took class III, then class II, then class I Army Certificate of Education, and by that time they had learnt not to carp or criticise their fellows. Wherefore they were acceptable. And as they had their faults even as I have, it is probable that they acquired many friends and but few enemies. Lastly, Juvenis, you propose single-handed to adopt such methods in dealing with your compeers as are alleged to be employed in the case of a refractory child. I admire your pluck. But don't try it. The whole German Army once tried even more stringent measures with your compeers, and they didn't "come off." Your compeers are good fellows, with heaps and heaps of faults. You are probably of the same variety and hue. I hope so, at any rate. So just go on with your job, do it well and leave the Army Council to attend to their own affairs. They don't know you any more than I do, but if they did, and if they realised you were doing your best at your own game, they would be everlasting grateful to you.

TRISTS.

A TRUE STORY.

A lady recently visiting one of our big battleships asked one of the Midshipmen who happened to be standing nearby if there was any truth in the story that the aeroplane was launched by being tied to a couple of shells which were then fired from the muzzle of the guns. The idea evidently had originated in her mind from a comic drawing which had appeared in one of the March issues of the Italia, under the heading of "Just passed by the Censor," depicting an aeroplane leaving a warship. The Midshipman was so overcome with laughter that he was unable to answer her and a sailor, who was showing some people over and who, apparently, had overheard her question, without a blush on his face remarked, to the amusement of several people round about, "Yes, Madam, that's quite true, and there are two men who stand on the bows with scissors in their hands ready to cut the string with which the aeroplane is fastened to the shells as they goes past.—C.W.W.

FAMOUS BUILDINGS.

THE ORDERLY ROOM.

An Orderly Room is a large building entirely surrounded by "wind." It is easily recognised by the fact that its portals are ornamented by a soldier with a "hype" with which he performs weird evolutions upon the approach of "Brass-hats" or other perils of war-fare. The Building is divided into a number of compartments, each of which bears a notice "Private" (This fact is somewhat strange in view of the building being peopled solely by officers and N.C.O.s) The compartment covering two-thirds of the total area is known as "The Seating Room" and here the unwary soldier is taught that the Army holds worse terrors than "Plum and Apple." Immediately opposite this compartment, one is faced by a door bearing the joyous tidings "Clerks, knock and wait," but upon entering this room it is evident that Messrs. Knock and Wait are not the only clerks. One is, for a moment, confused as to the exact number of N.C.O's who are so energetically rushing about doing nothing. The purpose of this department is to collect "returns" and the staff are insatiable in their search for these really valuable manuscripts and all is grist that goes to their mill. What eventually happens to the enormous mass of returns collected by it is indefatigable body of men is hard to surmise, but the popular belief is that when packed in strong boxes they are sent to form seats for Orderlies at H.Q. I once entered a "clerks'office" to discuss some trifling matter about my possible demobilization, and having served my three hours' general service on the door mat, I crawled in behind an Adjutant, and was thus able to see for myself way an Orderly Room Staff has no time to draw its pay. When my eyes had got somewhat used to the glare of stripes, they fell upon a pale and worried-looking youth who had before him a fearsome looking document (apparently a plan of the Rhine drainage system) upon which he would write at intervals and then scratch out. Leaving this unhappy wretch to his "Junkers," I turned to behold a cherubic sergeant of about eighteen summers with a large piece of paper of spotless purity before him, attempting to solve the problem of what to do with it. At this stage I became conscious of strange incantations in the left Sector and found they proceeded from a harrassed-looking Corporal who sat on a sugar box and translated "draft orders" for the benefit of another "two stripes" who transferred this priceless information to a typewriter (with obvious misgivings as to its accuracy). All these highly placed officials being too busily engaged to warrant my interrupting I turned in despair to "the one alone" (a gentleman with six stripes, two crowns, four wrinkles, poetic hair and a C. III moustache) and humbly stated my errand. The "Field Marshal, looking through my body and on towards the Drachenbergs, gave this cryptic reply "O.K.Z.C.O. Please render to Orderly Room by 0001 hours to-day nominal roll of all men in your company not on Parade or in employment, Policemen excepted." So feeling considerably uplifted by these tidings I left this scene and went on my way rejoicing.

After deep consideration it has occured to me that a little "something" is needed to make an Orderly Room a spot more hallowed than other prosaic buildings. There should be a scroll-work over the door bearing the inspiring inscription —

They toil not, neither do they spin,
Yet Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed as one of these.

E.M.F.

THE LORELEI.

How many who enter the Y.M.C.A. Central at the Loreley Hall know the legend attached to the name? Very few, we suspect. We are quite content to note the pleasant liquid sound of the word and not inquire further. Yet there is a fine legend attached to the name. Like Circe of old, the "Lorelei" was a most beautiful maiden, supernaturally beautiful, who lured sailors to their doom by that sweetest of sweet music, a maidens voice.

This wonderful creature inhabited the banks of the Rhine, which must be supposed to have raced to the sea with a much stronger current and to have been perturbed by much more violent storms than any that have disturbed its waters since the Armistice brought us here.

It was up past Coblenz, where the Rhine roars its way betwixt steep rocky walls, that this nymph, clothed in soft snow-white raiment that made her tenderly-shaped body appear as a cloud of light, held her Court of Dash. From the vine-clad hills there rises a steep precipitous rock, the Lurlei rock, and it was on the summit of this that the Rhineland Circe sat whilst crooning wonderful lullabies which made men, especially the young and ardent, forget all else, so enraptured were they by the supernatural music and the beautiful form from which it emanated. Lost to every other thought, careless of the world and of life, they drifted on until their craft was dashed to pieces against the rocky foot of the siren's throne. Woe betide the man who attempted to take a boat past the Lurlei Rock after dusk. No man had been known to resist the call, all had answered it, none had attained the maiden, all had found death.

Legend records the fate of one would-be lover of the name of Ronald, the noble warrior son of the Count famed in war, loved by the people. This crusader knight felt the attraction of the Lorelei ere he saw or heard her. Bribing an old boatman to row him out one evening he heard the siren's witching call and thought that never before had mortal been permitted so great a joy. Her eyes fixed on him seemed to draw his very soul; and, longing to possess the owner of the voice and eyes, he urged his boatman on faster and faster, yet still proceeded too slowly for his mad desire. Finally, overcome by the waves of his complex emotion, he dived overboard into the swirling stream, thus endeavouring vainly to reach more quickly his heart's desire. A battered corpse was subsequently washed up on the river bank, all that remained of the brave but bewitched Roland. His loss was mourned throughout the Palatinate of which his father was the Count.

A party of hardy warriors besought and were granted permission to destroy the enchantress for good, but ere they could approach her, while they were still dazzled by the glorious beauty of her outward form, she threw herself from the precipice into the arms of Father Rhine who, it is alleged, provided two huge, snow-white billows to carry away for ever from the knowledge of men the Circe who had been responsible for the death of so many head-strong, heart-lost youths.

The legend as such ends here, but the conditions still exist. The Rhine banks are alive with beauteous maidens and lusty youth. The song is still sung, the Circe-like attraction is as strong as ever. And those who list to the voice, who gaze upon the form, are just as surely doomed as was knight Roland and his bewitched predecessors. Victorious and honoured he met with death, but in these days dishonour also awaits the enchanted victim. Dishonour to himself, to his country, and, what is worse, dishonour to those who so bravely and freely spent their honoured lives in attaining Victory and Peace.

"JERRY" ON THE BALL.

THE GERMAN CONCEPTION OF "SOCCER"

To most of us, the notion that "Jerry" could do anything in the football line was ridiculous, but some little time ago I chanced across one of his Sunday afternoon displays; for like most of the Continental folks, Sunday after "Kirk" hours is rather a gay time. Naturally, their idea of the game is a bit queer to us, who are accustomed to teams like Rangers, Hearts, Everton or Chelsea to mention a few of the star turns; but what they lack in finesse is generally made up in vigour.

They go all out, but strangely enough, the game cannot be considered fast though the wing men have usually a good turn of speed. There is a lot of aimless work. Keeness is one of their strong points but the laws of the F.A. are sadly broken, it being evidently permissible to do anything except bite.

Pushing and obstruction are favourite methods, while the "Off side" rule is a "washout."

The lot of the "goalie" is not a happy one; he is more the object of attack, when the ball is bobbing round, than the sphere itself, and he is lucky to escape being bundled into the cage or as one "Jock" put it, the "Hen House" — the usual goal nets being supplanted by wire netting. The goalkeeper is certainly one of the star turns of a "Jerry" team, any I have seen being clever with their hands and quick on the ball besides showing good anticipation.

Why they have a referee, I can't say. He is more or ornamental than useful, being dressed to kill, with a spring outfit like a model in a window. He is AF and no mistake.

From what I have heard, football is a growing sport in the Fatherland and though one does not run up against a footballers' paradise like Hampden Park (in fact any of the pitches would disgrace a junior club) the organization of the game appears to be good, leagues being formed on similar lines to our own, while inter-league and Cup Ties competitions are not neglected.

Football has come to stay, and though their efforts may make us smile, the players are still new to the game and will no doubt learn.

Who knows! when the present ferment has cooled down, and the new Germany has emerged from the boiling pot of bolshevism and its kindred manifestations, sport (and foot ball in particular) may be one of the means of bringing "Jerry" back to some semblance of respectability.—NIKOLA.

A COMING MUSICAL EVENT.

'CELLO CONCERT ON MAY 5th.

What promises to be an excellent violoncello Concert is to be held in the Gurzenich Hall on May 5th; such concerts are not frequent in Germany and very rarely occur elsewhere. Among the compositions to be played are several for 1, 2, 4 and 8 violoncelli, many of them for the first time. One item is an hitherto unknown composition by Mozart, said to be the only one he ever wrote for the 'cello. It has been edited by Prof. Lemcki, of Dresden, and Prof. Klengel of Leipsic, who will play it. The latter is recognized as the grand master of the 'cello, and is to be supported by Herr Willy Lamping of Cologne, who, until the outbreak of war, was professor of music at the Columbia University, New York, Frl. Isabella v. Sodenberg of Vienna and Herr Alfred Vorster of Cologne. Tickets for this concert may be obtained at the usual advertised places and also at the office of The Cologne Post. The prices to members of H.M. Forces are 5, 4, 3 and 2 marks, respectively.

"THE IDDY UMPTIES."

A RUN ROUND THE VILLAGES.

The well known concert party, "The Iddy-Umpties" (2nd Army Signals Coy.) are this week touring the "smalls" for the benefit of the men in the isolated districts. On Monday night they gave a show at Miel to a large and most enthusiastic audience. Every member of the troupe is an artiste in the best sense of the word, and the programme is distinctly new and original.

During the week the party is to appear in the neighbouring villages of Ollheim, Ludendorf, Lutelberg and Rimershoven, and their great success at Miel, on the opening night of their short tour, augurs well for the remainder of the week. "The Iddy Umpties" are under the able direction of Lieut. Love.

3rd. MACHINE GUNNERS.

PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE EVENTS.

"A" v. "D" in the competition, was postponed by consent of all three parties owing to the races. The chief supporters were, of course, the Transport Sections at these latter.

Of forthcoming events the most interesting will be the Boxing Tournament to-morrow night at the popular hour 17.00 hrs. There will be boxing in seven classes, it is hoped; from bantam to heavies. The majority of fights will be three round contests, but several Novices will try their first round.

All being well, the Commanding Officer, Lt.Col. W.J. Cranston, D.S.O., will act as referee and a great crowd is expected. On the previous occasion only about a third of the battalion had settled the geographical position of the proposed dinning hall but now that the messing is an accomplished fact (and some say, some fact!) a large audience is assured. Only a fit man can enter the ring and it is up to every man in the battalion to support such men.

On Sunday next the officers have another trial of strength with the sergeants. The absolute collapse of the previous match must be atoned for by the officers. On the following Tuesday officers again play. They will be confronted by their servants. Officers had better beware such tricks as nails left in boots, missing football boots, etc. Then the corporals have their long-desired match with the sergeants on the 7th. The football season in the competitive sense will probably finish on that date, but doubtless on cool evenings throughout the summer the old passion to kick a football will lead to odd and quickly-arranged matches.

RHINELAND FOOTBALL.

52nd v. 53rd WELSH REGIMENT.

This match was played on Monday, on the ground of the 23 d Welsh Regt. at Alfter. The players were greatly handicapped by the pouring rain and strong wind, and during the first half the play was of a very nondescript variety. Although the 52nd Welsh had the better of matters, neither side succeeded in scoring. The rain stopped with the commencement of the second half and the quality of the game improved. The 52nd Welsh pressed strongly and were fortunate to score their first goal off one of the opposing backs. This reserve seemed to demoralize the defence of the 53rd and the play became very one-sided, the 52nd scoring three more goals in quick succession. The 53rd forwards rarely gave the opposing defence any trouble. The 52nd played good football in the second half, the combination of the forwards being particularly good. The goal scorers were: Pte. Inwood (2) Pte. O'Bierne and Pte. McGahey. Result: 52nd Welsh, 4; 53rd Welsh, 0.

5.h CAMERON HIGHLANDERS v. 52nd LEICESTERS.

Pressing from the start, the play was scrappy on account of the muddy ground and the trickiness of the wind, which sent the best meant efforts wide of the mark. The Camerons, after a scrimmage in the goalmouth, scraped the ball through, and shortly afterwards scored another of the same order. The wind falling slightly, some good football was seen in the second half, the "Tigers" getting plenty of encouragement. But the boys from Leicester would not be denied, and after some clever forward play, a slackening of the defence put the goalkeeper in a taugle, and in the ensuing melée the ball was breasted through.

Not long after, combined play by the "Tigers" put the centre in possession, and the ball, travelling away from the goalkeeper all the time, slithered over the line for number two.

The game after this was evenly contested. If anything, the Camerons had the bigger say in the game, though the young Leicesters put up a good show. Result: Camerons, 2; Leicester, 2.

DRAWN GAME AT BORNHEIM.

On Sunday 14 Platoon "D" Company 1/7 Cheshires played the Battalion Headquarters. Although playing a team much above their weight and experience, the Platoon were top dog throughout the 90 minutes, and were exceedingly unlucky not to win. From the kick-off the Platoon's forwards were continually aggressive and, barring two breakaways on the part of Headquarters, had all their own way. After half an hour, Bannaghan at centre-forward scored with a strong shot and later had hard lines with a shot which hit the cross-bar.

Headquarters then, by virtue of superior weight, carried the ball into their opponents' half. Following a corner, Sgt. Fandler scored with a shot which to all appearances was going outside, but suddenly swerved. Mellor and Stott, the Platoon backs, were as steady as rocks, and the few shots which came to Lever were dealt with in splendid style. For the Platoon, Terry and Green played well at half back, but unfortunately the forwards were on the light side. The outstanding Headquarters players were Sgts. Platt and Fandler, the latter playing a very energetic game. Result: Platoon, 1; Battalion H.Q. 1.

No. 8 VETERINARY HOSPITAL v. RHINE ARMY M.T.

Played on the ground of the former. Playing with the wind the "Vets" opened the scoring through R.S.M. Hayward with a nice placed shot. The home team should have added to their lead shortly afterwards, John Toae sending in a lovely centre which went begging. After a time, play was transferred to the other end through good work by the M.T. forwards and ended in their centre equalising. In the second half the M.T.'s commenced to press with the wind and played better football. They looked like scoring on more than one occasion and eventually they obtained number 2 through Sgt. Brown, the opposing captain putting the ball into his own goal. After some scrappy play which followed, the visitors obtained another goal, which ended the scoring, with the result M.T. 3; "Vets." 1.

185th v. 57th SIEGE BATTERY, R.G.A.

As a result of a challenge by 1 5th Siege Battery, who offered to play any unit up to 220 strong, this match was played at Kalk on Sunday. The fixture aroused a deal of interest, and the crowd numbered over a thousand. Right from the start play ran in the visitors half, and James put Chance through to score with a hard drive. Play ruled very even, Jule proving a host for 57, and midway through this half Clissold, to the joy of the homesters, put two up. 185 played up like fury, but McCornock and Jule defended splendidly. A terrific hail storm broke over the game in the opening of the second half.

After Moores had almost let a surprise shot roll through, Chance broke away and James scored 57th third goal. Then 185's centre beat Moores with a shot from fully 30 yards and this was followed by another goal. Result:— 57 S.B. 3; 185 S.B. 2.

A.S.C. BAKERS v. A.S.C. DRIVERS.

Played on the Drivers' ground, Kalk. The Bakers forards began in dramatic style from the kick-off and swept through the Drivers' defence, but the Bakers' centre forward spoilt a great chance by handing in the goalmouth. From the kick-off the Drivers' left wing man got away nicely and after beating several players put in a fine shot, but Swaly, the Bakers' goalkeeper, made a splendid save. After 10 minutes play, Aitkin got away on the left wing and centred nicely for Chapman to beat the goalkeeper with a fine shot. A few minutes from half-time, Chapman got away on the left wing and after beating the backs found the net for the Bakers once more. From the restart the Drivers went strong for goal, but they were sent back by Stebbing and Walsh, who played well for the Bakers. Shortly afterwards, the Drivers' right wing beat the Bakers' goalkeeper by a fine shot. The Drivers were now trying very hard to draw, but the Bakers' centre half, who was playing a fine game, kept them at bay until the finish. Result: Bakers 2; Drivers 1.

REVIVAL OF "THE CASUALS."

It was decided yesterday to revive the famous amateur association football team "The Casuals."

LONDON BETTING

The Derby: Four to one Panther, taken.

At Paris on Sunday, a boat race over 250 metres resulted:— 1st New Zealand; 2nd United States; 3rd France and Newfoundland.

1/6 WEST YORKSHIRE REGT.
Reds v. Blues. "D" Coy.

Fine weather prevailed when these teams met at Blucherpark, for the purpose of selecting a company team. The Blues kicked off against a strong wind but made little progress against the half back line of the Reds. Following a fine passing movement, the result of good play by Lieut. Murray, the Reds opened their account through Pte. Redhead finding the net. The Reds continued to press and further increased their lead, a beautiful shot from L/Cpl. Butterill doing the needful. Play was now taken to the Reds goal mouth only to see L/Cpl. Burton shoot over for the Blues. The Reds further increased their lead, L/Cpl. Butterill scoring from a pass by Pte. Mercer.

The second half was all in favour of the Reds, who had, on the whole, a very good team doing duty. There was no holding their forwards who had a field day. A great run down the field by L/Cpl. Butterill ended by the player shooting wide when well placed. The Blues by now were well beaten and further scoring was the rule of the day, L/Cpl. Butterill adding three more to his account, also Pte. Redhead (1), Lt. Murray (1). The Reds well deserved their win, the forwards combined so well together. Lt. Murray was a star on the side of the Blues.

Result: 8—0.

Referee: Pte. A. Wiever.

141st FIELD AMBULANCE v. 1st MACHINE GUNNERS.

Played on the ground of the first named on Sunday. The game was very even, but midway through this half the M.G.C. scored through Dodsworth, who lashed the ball from long range. The wind was responsible for the ball swerving and the Ambulance goalie was deceived. Play became very lively and Lieut. Chandler on the M.G.C. left wing put over some useful crosses, but no further score resulted.

Playing against the wind in the second half, the Ambulance showed signs of equalising. The ball was kept in the M.G.C. half and time after time the hopes of the R.A.M.C. men were raised, but bad finishing and a snowstorm kept the M.G.C. goal intact. Ten minutes from the end, hard work was rewarded, Cpl. Kirby snatching the equaliser from a scrimmage in front of goal, to the chagrin of the R.F.A. spectators. A very even game ended in a draw — 1 goal each.

20.h D.L.I's. BEAT THE 3rd BN. M.G.C.

On Saturday an interesting match was played at Riehl between the 20.h Bn. D.L.I. and the 3rd Bn. M.G.C., resulting in a win for the former by 3—1.

After an interchange of play, Mr. Dodds opened the score for the D.L.I. with a lovely cross drive, but the M.G.C. equalised very soon through their left wing. The D.L.I. then had most of the play, and galled the lead through Mr. Dodds and Mr. Eggleston. Half-time: 3—1.

A heavy down-pour of rain spoilt the play in the second half, and the score remained the same.

The outstanding players of the M.G.C. were the right half, and inside right.

23rd MIDDLESEX v. 11th ROYAL SCOTS.

After four successive victories elsewhere, the 23rd Middlesex fell to the 11th Royal Scots in a stiff encounter at Haan on Thursday.

First blood was drawn by the Middlesex, whose centre forward broke away, after ten minutes of very even play, and found the net.

Determined to equalise, the Scots put up a splendid show, a feature of which was the brilliant effort of Lce.-Cpl. Graham, who, getting possession of the ball in mid field, out-manoeuvered four opponents, and, thirty yards from the posts, sent in a stinging shot, which the goal keeper found himself unable to cope with. The Middlesex replied with two goals after fifty minutes hard work, and towards the end of the game looked like coming out victors.

In the last quarter of an hour however, the Royals wrought wonders. A pass from the centre-forward gave Henderson an opportunity, and, overcoming all opposition, he successfully netted the ball. This was improved shortly afterwards Taylor, who added the equalising goal for the Scots. With three minutes to play the excitement of the large crowd of supporters was at its highest. Lt. McGlynn, from a pass from the centre half, broke through the defence, but was brought down at the goal mouth. A fierce struggle followed in the vicinity of the posts, in the confusion Cooper got possession of the ball and scored the winning goal to the accompaniment of a tremendous outburst of cheering on the part of the Scots supporters. Result:— Royal Scots, 4, Middlesex, 3.

76th BRIGADE FOOTBALL COMPETITION.

51st D.L.I. v. 9th D.L.I.

About the middle of the first half, Sgt Foster of the 51st swept up the ball and scored. The second half produced a sturdy struggle and in turn each defence was tested to its utmost by energetic forwards. One of the tit-bits of the match was a clever individual effort just on time by McGreehen.

RUGBY FOOTBALL.

12th Battn. Royal Irish Rifles. v. 5th Battn. Royal Irish Regiment.

This match, played at Weiler on Monday, resulted in a win for the Rifles by two trys to nil.

A few minutes after the commencement of play a good rush by the Regiment pack almost produced a score, but the Rifles' defence was sound, and eventually a good kick by Wallis relieved the pressure. From a scrum in mid-field Cullen set his three-quarter backs going, but a "knock-on" spoiled a very promising run. Good work by the Rifles forwards, led by Connolly and Millar, brought play to the Regiments line, where Campbell crossed for a try, Gilmore failed to convert.

For the first fifteen minutes after the restart play was confined to mid field. From a line out Larkin made a good run for the Regiment, but was "tackled" by Gilmore, who was playing a fine game at three-quarter. Good footwork by the Rifles forwards again brought play to the Regiment's line, where Cantly carried the ball over at the corner for a try, which was not converted. Full time found the rival packs scrummaging in mid-field.

Result: 12th Bn. Royal Irish Rifles, 2 tries — 6 Points; 5th Bn. Royal Irish Regiment, Nil.

THEATRE OF WAR CHAMPIONSHIPS.

B.E.F.'s SUCCESS AT BOXING.

The Inter-Theatre of War Boxing Championship opened at Aldershot on Tuesday, when there were twenty-two competitors in the officers series and thirty three in the other ranks. The first day's results were: Heavy-weight (Officers): Lieut. Lang, 97th Indian Infantry, Egypt, beat 2nd Lieut. Fairclough, Royal North Lancs. India. Fairclough was knocked out in the second round.

Welter-weight (officers): Capt. Tweedie, R.A.M.C., Mesopotamia, beat 2nd Lieut. Spurrier, 3rd King's Dragoon Guards, India, on points. Lieut. Batham, Lancashire Fusiliers, Home Forces, knocked out Lieut. Stevenson, Gurka Rifles, Egypt, in the first round. Lieut. Sthoalie, 2nd Leinster, B.E.F., beat Capt Tweedie.

Light-weight, semi-final: Lieut. Armstrong, Royal Scots, B.E.F. beat Lieut. Platters, R.E., Home Forces. Lieut. Townsend, Hobson's Horse, India, beat Lieut. Cody, Specialist, Mesopotamia, the referee intervening in the second round.

Feather-weight, semi-final: 2nd Lieut. Nathan, Royal Welsh Fusiliers, India, beat Lieut. Tobin, Lincoln's, B.E.F. on points. Lieut. Wilson, Border Regt., Italy, beat Lieut. Sinclair, 30th Royal Fusiliers, Egypt.

THEATRE OF WAR RUGBY.

B.E.F., FRANCE, WIN THE CHAMPIONSHIP.

At Aldershot, on Tuesday, in connection with the Inter-Theatre of War Championship, B.E.F., France defeated Egypt, at rugby, by 5 points to three.

The match proved to be particularly keen struggle and either team might have won right to the end. Egypt were unfortunate in losing the services of Johnson, who had to retire after fifteen minutes. McNeil scored an unconverted try for Egypt, while for the B.E.F., Angus converted a try scored by Harrison.

B.E.F. France thus win the Championship.

CROSS COUNTRY RUNNING:

EGYPTIAN TEAM GETS FIRST PLACE.

In the cross country running section of the Inter-Theatre of War Championships at Windsor on Tuesday, the team placings were: 1, Egypt, 178 points; 2, Home Force, 225; 3, B.E.F., France, 333; 4, India 588; 5, Italy, 618. Five teams competed. The individual winners were: 1, Sepoy Bulwant Singh, 27th Punjab Infantry, Egyptian team; 2, Sergt. Massey, Home Forces; 3, Naik Duarion Singh, 92 Punjab, Egyptian team.

The finish was witnessed by the King and Queen and Prince George.

ALLIES v. BRITISH ARMY FOOTBALL MATCH.

SEVEN MORE DAYS.

HUSTLE ALONG WITH YOUR ENTRIES.

"THE COLOGNE POST" CRICKET CUP.

Entries for the magnificent cup (and twelve miniatures) which the Cologne Post is offering for the most successful Rhine Army cricket team this season, continue to be submitted in large numbers.

Meanwhile, the flight of time is carrying us along with customary rapidity and here we are in the merry month of May.

We hope that by the middle of the month we shall have got the competition well started and that the league tables will be beginning to take shape.

A few days will be necessary for the general sorting out process, after the last entry has been received, and we have therefore decided to make the last day for receiving entries. Intending teams will oblige us, however, if they will send in their notifictions witnout delay. By leaving matters until the closing date, our work will be made more difficult and it is obviously important that a start should be made as early as possible.

THURSDAY, 8TH MAY

The majority of teams have yet to complete their store of playing gear. There is just time, before the competition starts to get those requirements unobtainable locally, from England and it is hoped that when everything else is ready there will not be a further delay caused as a result of lack of equipment.

The 2nd Army Sports Officer, Lieut. Onions, at the Amusement Office, Cologne, will be pleased to put you on the right track for getting all manner of mat rials and anyone in doubt on any point of this kind should give him a call or drop him a line.

We are now awaiting your entry, and then we can get to business. Waste no farther time, therefore in writing out your entry (stating whether or not you have a ground) and sending it to:

The Sports Editor,

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

(With an Occasional Entertainments Note.)

Damage to Rhine Steamers.

It seems a great pity that circumstances should have made necessary the publication of a General Routine Order, under the same heading as this paragraph. The order points out that complaints have been received of damage caused to Rhine steamers by troops travelling on pleasure trips or on duty, and goes on to indicate that the continuance of such damage (which I am afraid is frequently within) will necessitate a reduction of the number of steamers available.

How many thousands of us have recollections of the terrible discomforts of going on leave, in the days of the fighting, as a result of having to travel in windowless carriages wherein, when one had the luck to find a cushioned seat at all, this was hacked to pieces. It does not require a very massive brain to realise that the more carefully we all look after the preservation of public conveyances, the more privileges and better comfort we shall enjoy generally. Therefore it is up to everyone who witnesses any such act of wilfulness to show no sympathy for the offender, but to report the matter to the right authorities at once.

Messrs Cox at Cologne.

Officers lucky enough to be stationed in the neighbourhood of Cologne will welcome the announcement that Messrs Cox & Co are to open a branch of their bank at 135 Hone Strasse to-day. This innovation should do much to relieve the congestion which invariably prevails during some of the day's busiest hours at the offices of Messrs Thomas Cook & Son and of the Field Cashier. The bankers charges to be imposed by Messrs Cox & Co are sufficiently reasonable to satisfy even the most economical. Cheques will be cashed at a charge of 20 Pfennig per pound, while postal orders and treasury notes will also be cashed at the same rate.

Where are the Ladies?

Everything is going well with the Amateur Dramatic Company at Cologne. Each day finds fresh applications for membership from all manner ranks in the Rhine Army. The ladies, however, are not showing that alacrity in coming forward that might have been expected. It is possible that some of the fair members who have joined our merry army recently are unaware that there is a golden opportunity for them to blossom forth into second Ellaline Terriss' by joining the Army of the Rhine Amateur Dramatic Company. If such be the case, and the said ladies have the slightest knowledge and experience of acting, I am sure Lieut Percy, in the 2nd Army Amusement Office, Cologne, (who, by the way, is himself a real live actor-r-r) would be delighted to explain the ambitions of the new Company to them.

The Deutsche Theatre.

To anybody who enjoys a really good variety show, a visit to the Deutsche Theatre this week can be safely recommended Mr. and Mrs. Hassan, and their excellent little party have undoubtedly the knowledge of the art of successful entertainment. Miss Kitty Franklin, at the piano, for instance, knows just the songs that appeal and — what is perhaps more important — she knows just how to sing them. Consequently she "gets" the audience whose members are not backward in signifying their appreciation.

Then there is Miss Catherine Wilkinson, who possesses a contralto voice of such purity and charm that by her efforts she established herself a warm favourite in the opinion of dozens of new acquaintances every night. Miss Doris Cloud plays the violin with wonderful tone and precision which stamps her as a past master (or should I say "mistress"?) of her art, while for something in the neighbourhood of half an hour Mr. and Mrs. Hassan occupy the stage and (with the assistance of a couple of embarassed-looking members of the audience) perform weird and wonderful illusions. Not much in the way of variety lacking in that show, is there?

THE RAMBLER.

The death is announced, at his residence at Lymington, of Mr. Arthur Forbes, C.S.I., late Indian Civil Service, who was coxswain of the Cambridge crews in the Boat Race in 1836 and 1837.

THE SOLDIER'S FOOD.

HOW INSPECTION IMPROVED MANUFACTURE.

The Times of Saturday gives the following article from a special correspondent with regard to the feeding of the British Army:— It would be too much to say that all through the war the British Army has always been adequately and properly fed; but no one can deny that the feeding has been better than in any previous war.

A good deal of the credit for this is due to Dr. A. W. J. MacFadden, the Chief Inspector of Foods of the Local Government Board, and his organization for the supervision of the manufacture and preparation of food for the Army.

The better organized and equipped works readily accepted any suggestions which were made to improve the conditions. Where manufacturers were not so amenable a threat to strike the offending firm off the War Office list of contractors—a threat which was actually carried out in a number of cases— proved effective.

At all works it was insisted upon that employees handling food should wear washable overalls and caps. In meat stores provision for hanging meat in a separate room was made the rule. The soldier joked about his "dog biscuits," but one of the conditions laid down was that no firm manufacturing Army biscuits should manufacture dog biscuits in the same room or with the same machinery. Meat and vegetable rations were examined before they were placed in tins in order to prevent carelessness in weighing which might result in an excess of vegetable or fat. Jam gave the inspecting staff much trouble. A great deal of it was made from pulp—that is, fresh fruit boiled without sugar and kept in casks or jars till required for manufacturing purposes. Fermentation and the growth of moulds during the storage of this pulp called for constant vigilance.

A great deal of inspection work was done by the Local Government Board on the food supplied to the Army by tradesmen in the locality in which units were situated and through canteens. This work was of great importance, for in many centres the sudden increase in the local population due to the establishment of a military base taxed the food production resources of the district to the utmost and led to unsatisfactory conditions. Constant supervision was exercised until the control of Army canteens was taken over by the Navy and Army Canteen Board. In some cases meat products were prepared in dirty underground cellars into which the street dust penetrated, and the floors of which were in a filthy condition. Jam was made in small factories which had never previously been heard of by the local authorities, and in some of them the conditions were absolutely appalling. Much of the inspection was done in many districts by the local medical officers of health, with the help of inspectors of the Local Government Board. Every firm given an Army contract was visited at once, and the number of subsequent visits paid depended to a very large extent upon what the first visit disclosed.

I am told that a young officer at present serving, and of the type that cannot bear anything in the nature of "scent," burst into a first-class "smoker" the other day where a young demobilised one who had unwisely used his sister's soap for washing that morning was sitting. Said the serving officer: "Phew, what an aroma!" (or words to that effect). As he was too evidently the culprit, and the heating apparatus had multiplied the said aroma by 4, the demobilised one spoke up snappily: It's soap! Ever near of it where you are stationed?" — Ex-service Man.

GERMANY SINCE 1860.

MASTERMAN SMITH AT SOLINGEN.

In the Kaisersaal, Solingen, Mr. Masterman-Smith recently gave a lecture on "Germany since 1860." A naturalised British subject, born in Alsace during the war of 1870, Mr. Smith spoke under the auspices of the French Government.

A short history of Germany and the Germans was given. Bismarck, of the "blood and iron" motto was literally torn to pieces by the fiery speaker. The forging of the telegram to make France declare War, the treachery of the man, his hatred against France and England and threat to strike the latter at a later date — all this was given in detail by a man who had suffered and been driven from his native country by the work of the Prussian Chancellor.

He spoke of the confiscating of Alsace and Lorraine, and the placing of a large army on that soil. Everything became German, the French language had to be neither spoken nor written. The provinces were made "a dumping ground" for Prussian Militarism. The Prussian Armies committed rape and robbery and even received condemnation from their own country. Now, the cleansing process was being carried out, swiftly and surely, the provinces were being cleared of German families.

Mr. Smith dealt with the coming Peace. He spoke in high praise of Mr. Clemenceau's speech at the conference. The "Tiger" had said that the British Navy had not only saved Britain, but France and Europe also — therefore the supremacy of the seas should belong to Great Britain always.

The Bolshevist trouble was next brought forward. The Germans had started the campaign in Russia, now they wanted to get Bolshevism working in our country.

He would have us remember that before 1870 the Germans had nothing, but since the war in 1870 they had become rich. Rich at the expense of his native place Alsace and Lorraine. France could now have the Potash and Steel from her returned provinces. Figures brought forward showed that out of 25 million tons of steel produced by Germany, 21 million tons came from Alsace and Lorraine.

In concluding, Mr. Smith said we must always remember the legacy that had been placed in our hands. It was a fine thing, and when we took off our uniform, we could hand over this legacy to others who would be proud of what had been, and who would remember the thousands of men lying under the soil of France and Belgium. After lantern slides of Alsace and Lorraine had been shown, there was loud applause. The lecture was highly appreciated and well attended.

COURTESY IN TRAMS.

WHO SHOULD STAND UP?

We have had many communications from British military men stating that frequently they have had to make the awkward choice of standing throughout long tram journeys or permitting German womenfolk to stand, while German men calmly sat at their ease. We must ever remember, under all circumstances, that we are in a foreign country where manners may, and do, differ considerably from ours, and ever trust that a hint will remedy the above complaint. We have ourselves seen the hint administered in various forms, and generally it has been successful. An inbred sense of courteousness to the opposite sex makes it difficult to sit while they stand. On the other hand a fatigued soldier should see to it, where possible, that the difficulty is shared by those who should have a greater feeling of responsibility in this, as in any similar matter.

THE CANTEEN SMILE.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

THE SMALLER OF TWO EVILS.

The Frankfurter Zeitung, in an article dealing with the Peace terms, lays emphasis on the fact that, the "threat of the Allies to occupy other territories and to stop the provision of food in case of a German refusal must not be taken too lightly." That is the attidude we like to see. The threats, if such is an appropriate term, were not given in any mood of levity, neither will the carrying out of those statements be treated by us in any light degree. Thus it is pleasing to note that at least one of the German papers has interpreted our meaning aright. "The questions are," the paper further remarks, "will not Peace bring with it a worse form of slavery? and will not a refusal of signature to the terms be the committance of the lesser of the two evils?" The destiny of Germany lies within the people's own power to make or mar according to their attitude during the next few days. But perhaps we can offer a little solace by replying with the Asquithian reputed aphorism—"Wait and see."

Germany's Defence.

The same paper further remarks that "The behaviour of France in the occupied area clearly shows her intention of annexation. In spite of the League of Nations, there still remain powerful political alliances with aims directed against us. Germany must not remain undefended against such threats. She is defending her right at Versailles in striving for a peace of right, which, to-day, is threatened only by Paris.

German Socialist's and the War.

Eduard Bernstein, the socialist who, in all probability will be the new German Ambassador in London, recently made an attempt in the Rheinische Zeitung to explain the behaviour of the socialists at the beginning of the war. The whole attitude of this party is explained, says Bernstein, in the fact that the socialists were not given the true facts. False news of bombing from the air, of invasion of the French troops in Belgium—these were given to the Socialists. But then, the latter party might have known it was false. History is useless if we do not learn therefrom. English people knew that these statements were false, for do we not remember similar incidents at the outset of the 1870 affair, when Bismarck caused a forged telegram to be sent in order to plunge the nations into conflict?

"The Socialist Party," says Bernstein, "had not the slightest knowledge of the true developments. The press news given to us was all in favour of Bethmann-Hollweg's statements, and the violation of the frontiers, though already effected, was unknown to us and undreamt of. Can anyone blame the Socialists for not having seen at once through the affair, and not shouting to the Chanceller, 'it is a lie'?

"When the true knowledge of the violation of Belgium came to the Socialists, a strong protest was made, and this must not be forgotten to-day as it is a moral credit to the Party.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

The Editor, in publishing letters from Correspondents, will use his own discretion, and if necessary, limit the publishing of correspondence on any subject whatever. It must be understood, however that he is not responsible for the views stated.

All communications for this column should be brief and to the point, and preference will be given to those which bear the writers' signatures for publication. No letter will be published unless accompanied by rank name, and unit of sender, which are needed for the purpose of reference.

Many letters of a perverse nature have reached the office, and the Editor wishes to point out that these only cause waste of time both to the writer and the Editor himself. Letters of this nature will not be published.

"THE PARSIFAL."

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—May I protest in the strongest terms possible against one of Major Bles's statements in a letter to yourself last Sunday? He speaks of the "outstanding features of Christ being His infinite pity, mercy, and goodness, and emphatically not His strength." As a padre I am horrified at this, I fear, very popular misconception of the New Testament, most certainly derived from the "representations of Christ which we are accustomed to connect with stained glass windows," and which in these days is rarely corrected by any reference to the original text, most of which is known by hearsay only. If Christ is perfect man, his character must be absolutely equally balanced. His strength, his heroic defence of the eternal right, his absolute fearlessness, and moral and physical courage are at least as outstanding as his pity and mercy, as illustrated in Mark 10.32, John 2.15, and countless other sidelights. It is exactly these wretchedly effeminate representations of the Christ that are responsible for the humbug and namby-pambyism too often talked on Good Friday, that has discredited to so large an extent His Manhood in the eyes of manly men.

ERIC. E. YELVERTON, C. F.
Dragoon Brigade Chaplain.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir, — Perhaps Miss C. A. Eastgate erred a little in her estimate of Parsifal in his being only "a human being like ourselves."

Major Bles certainly erred more in allowing himself to be carried away by the physical likeness of this particular Parsifal to our idea of Christ, and jumping to the conclusion that Wagner meant Parsifal to be Christ.

In the first two acts Parsifal is obviously only "a human being like ourselves," but between the second and third acts many years pass — years which Parsifal had spent in searching for the home of the Grail.

Religious persons of all denominations go into periods of retreat so as to gain spiritual strength (Christ spent forty days in the desert) — surely this search of Parsifal was his retreat from which he emerged strengthened spiritually a thousand-fold. Wagner did not mean us to understand that Parsifal the man had become Parsifal the Christ, but he did mean us to realise that these years of privation had wrought a "substantial" spiritual change (if I may be excused the term), that something very substantial of the spirit of Christ had entered into him, changing him from a human "man" into a human "saint."

No doubt some people will think I am only splitting hairs. This letter is not meant for them.

Answers to Correspondents.

[The flow of correspondence, since the Cologne Post was instituted, has been enormous, and the Editor would like to point out that only a certain number of the innumerable questions can be answered in each issue. Should any inquirer find that his question has not yet been answered, he can have the assurance that it will receive attention in due course, and the answer will appear accordingly. Many questions have been received which could be answered much easier by the Adjutant of the unit concerned, and all such cases which affect the unit commander must be taken to him and not sent here. — Ed.]

THE OUT-OF-WORK DOLE.

Mr. J. R. Clynes, M. P., speaking at Birmingham on Saturday night, while making every allowance for the temporary dislocations of work created by the war, contended that in the intervening months between November and now the Government should have been capable of doing something better than paying out of the public purse more than a million pounds a week for doing nothing at all, in place of having used their brains, in order that the men and women receiving unemployment pay should be engaged in useful, productive services and earning their living under conditions of dignity, instead of marching to the exchanges week by week to receive their public dole.

There was nothing more scandalous, he added, nothing of which the country should be more heartily ashamed, than the enormous sums of money which had been amassed automatically by certain sections of the people through what was almost inevitable profiteering during a war which left one section impoverished to the point of being destitute and in need of Government aid.

ITALIAN PREMIER'S VOTE OF CONFIDENCE.

GERMAN RAILWAY UNREST.

ABROGATION OF LUXEMBURG TREATY.

MERELY BOLSHEVIST ECCENTRICITIES.

ITALIAN PREMIER'S SPEECH AT ROME.

BLOOD OF OUR BLOOD.

After his arrival at Rome Signor Orlando lost no time in addressing the Italian Parliament. He first gave a resume of the work of the Italian delegates to the Peace Conference from the middle of March to the 13th April.

"On that day" he continued, "the convocation of the German delegates was decided. On the 14th I had long conversations with President Wilson in the course of which the whole Italian territorial question was very thoroughly discussed. As a result of these conversations President Wilson gave me a memorandum which represented, he said, the opinion of the American Government. I was not only empowered to communicate this memorandum to the Italian Parliament but was asked to do so, this request being repeated at the last meeting, which took place on Thursday, the 24th April. However, as this memorandum refused to Italy every right in Dalmatia and the islands, gave to Fiume an incomplete freedom and precluded the unity of Istria, I could not hesitate for a moment, and I expressed to President Wilson the absolute impossibility of accepting a Peace on the basis of conditions which gave us no satisfaction on these essential points.

"Great Britain and France have always recognized with perfect loyalty the engagement of honour they have undertaken by the Treaty of Alliance between the three countries, an engagement which they intend faithfully to observe.

"As the treaty does not contain Fiume in the Italian claims, they do not agree with the Italian point of view and would only consent to make Fiume a free port, and then only as a compromise and not as a supplement to the full execution of the terms of the treaty.

"Italy thinks that her claims are based on such high and solemn reasons of right and justice that they should be accepted without any treaty or international engagement.

"The accusation of Imperialism afflicts us and offends us. The Italian people have not been greedy in the discussion of milliards claimed as reparation. Their demands will not be excessive when the rich and vast territories of Asia and Africa are distributed among the belligerent nations. They will show that they are swayed more by sentiment than by interest. They have shown this spirit in the highest degree by evoking all their passion, all their energy, all their will, when it is a question not of milliards, not of colonies, not of rich territories, but of the yearning cry of their brothers. We appreciate and love the generous people and the Governments of Great Britain and France too much to doubt that they will understand that beyond the obligations of the Treaty by which their honour is bound they must also consider what sentiment means in the relations between friends."

Signor Orlando added that Italy did not measure her sacrifices by the letter of the Treaty and did not ask for special help when she had to sustain the shock, not of one part of the Austrian army, as was foreseen by the Treaty, but of the whole army. Italy only did her duty by multiplying, as did her allies, her sacrifices for the war.

Italy did not create the question of Fiume. It was created by the town itself by a free act which began by the declaration made on the 16th October by a legitimate representative of Fiume at the Hungarian Parliament. This act was confirmed on the 30th October when in the "right of self-determination," as proclaimed by President Wilson himself, Fiume declared itself an Italian city. Italy cannot now remain inert and impassive at the desperate appeal of the people who are blood of her blood. Italy is not putting forward a thesis of obligation. She only asks that the will of this Italian city shall not be violated.

The chamber voted, by 380 against 40 (the Socialist group), an order of the day, approving the declarations of the Prime Minister and of confidence in the Government.

A great demonstration followed the announcement of the figures.

Subsequently Signor Orlando and the American Ambassador, Mr. Nelson Page, held a long conversation and it is considered probable that the latter will go to Paris to prepare a way out of the impasse.

MERELY ECCENTRICITIES.

IDYLLIC MUNICH.

According to the notorious Wolff Agency all the details of the revolutions in Munich and other parts of Bavaria have been the vain imaginings of hysterical journalists. For several weeks, says Wolff, the newspapers have been full of tragic and comic details of the Communist regime and of the minute preparations for the attack on the capital and now, disillusioned, the newspapers are compelled to make the "painful avowal" that there is not a word of truth in any of it. One journal sent a reporter from Augsburg to Munich. He had to walk, as (doubtless a comic detail) no trains were running. This keen observer noted that the middle class had not suffered at the hands of the Bolshevists, and were so content that they looked on with ironic smiles at the eccentricities of the Communist chiefs.

Nobody is deceived.

FRENCH CONTINUES HIS STORY.

POINCARE'S OPTIMISM.

In a further instalment of Field Marshal French's book, the Daily Telegraph prints a description of a visit to President Poincaré on the 15th August 1914. Lord French found the President in high hope of a fullest victorious advance of the Allies. Poincaré discoursed playfully on the possibility of the British fighting another battle of Waterloo. French, who says that history will rank Joffre as one of our supremely great leaders, says he asked Joffre on the 16th August, as the British Army was posted on the left or exposed flank, to place a French Cavalry Division and two Reserve Divisions under his (French's) orders. Joffre was unable to concede this.

French says he was not surprised when General Laurezac turned out to be one of the most complete examples of the Staff College pedant, whose "superior education" had given him little idea of how to conduct war. French discloses that he asked for Plumer to succeed Grierson (who died suddenly) on the command of the 2nd Corps, but Smith Dorrien was sent out without reference to French.

HINDENBURG RETIRING.

DIFFERENT LINE OF BUSINESS.

It is announced from Berlin that Field-Marshal von Hindenburg is to retire during the month of May, when the headquarters at Kolberg are broken up. Hindenburg is to retire to his estate in Hannover, and resume the country life which he was leading when the war broke out. It is said that he does not contemplate publishing his memoirs. His successor will be General Groener, who succeeded Ludendorff as Quarter-Master-General.

OMINOUSLY QUIET IN BERLIN.

In Berlin all is quiet but there is something dangerous in this quietude. The street in which Noske's house is situated has wire entanglements at either end through which no one can go without a pass but in other parts people go about unmolested and there is no hint of serious trouble as yet. But no one believes that this quiet will last. The soldiers of the Government receive high rates of pay and the "Arbeitslose" unemployed get as high, and after all, what is money when you can pour out and pass off with impunity thousands of forged notes which do quite as well as the state currency for the purpose of paying gambling debts?

The attitude of the middle class inhabitants towards the Entente is civil, almost servile; to their own officers it is anti-militarist; but both attitudes are calculated, just a little, for the benefit of the visitor.

Enormous prices can be paid for food but scarcity of food is only one, and even that not the chief, of the agencies which is slowly but surely affecting the demeanour of the people. It is disillusionment, want of occupation, want of ideals, restlessness — war's offspring, all of them.

The trains which carried the peace delegates drew out of the station without any demonstration, almost unobserved.

GERMAN RAILWAY SERVANTS ASK FOR MORE.

The German Association of Railway Workers has addressed an ultimatum to the Government which states that unless their claims for increased pay are not granted by the 7th May a general strike will be declared.

An increase of one mark per hour is demanded, which will impose an additional two milliard marks on the Budget.

LUXEMBURG RAILWAY SYSTEM

According to the Temps the Council of Three has approved the article of the Peace Treaty by which Germany must renounce all the rights which she had acquired in Luxemburg. It is known that after the war of 1870—71 Germany had seized the Luxemburg railways and was exploiting them according to the Treaty concluded between Germany and Luxemburg on 11th June 1872. This treaty has been abrogated.

ONE MAN BUSINESSES.

Mr. Winston Churchill, answering a question in the House of Commons stated that business considerations were taken into account in deciding upon applications for the release of soldiers. In the cases of men eligible for demobilization those who had employment waiting for them or business of their own were entitled to priority over those with none.

New regulations are in course of preparation and will shortly be issued.

According to Havas the text of the Preliminary Peace Treaty cannot be presented to the German delegates before next Monday.

FIRST AFTER-WAR BUDGET PROPOSALS.

WHAT OUR ALLIES OWE.

While the war was in progress Budget after Budget dealt with such masses of figures that the word "staggering" ceased to denote the extreme of astonishment. The nation knew it had to find money, not only for the British share of the expenses but for every one of the Allies, and the money was found cheerfully. But the mere circulation of money does not create money and the time has come for the realization of the fact that although the Nation possesses the wealth wherewith to foot the bills, such wealth must, to a very large extent, be translated into terms of money.

The State has poured out money like water, and it is a truth that but for the solvency of the nation, the war would have ended long ago in overwhelming disaster for everybody. Now the money has to be returned to the State, consequently the Chancellor of the Exchequer had a most unenviable task in framing the first post-war budget. Future Chancellors will experience even greater difficulties, as no man can yet foresee what trade hardships the next twelve months will bring.

INCREASED INLAND REVENUE.

In introducing his Budget to the House of Commons on Wednesday, Mr. Austen Chamberlain emphasised the stupendous difficulties of his task. Now that the war is over, he said, people are refusing to save as they did or to lend money to the Government as readily as during the war. At the 31st. March 1919 the national debt was 7,980,000,000 and 645,000,000 at the outbreak of the war. The Exchequer issues last year were less than was estimated by 333,000,000. Last year the estimated revenue was 842 millions and the actual revenue 889 millions. There had been an increase under every heading of Inland Revenue. Customs and excise duties alone showed a surplus over the estimates of 14,520,000 sterling.

The estimated expenditure for the current year is 1,434,910,000 and the estimated revenue 1,159,650,000, exclusive of proposed new taxes, being an estimated increase of 270 millions over last year's actual receipts. (Cheers).

Referring to the total expenditure for 1918—919 Mr Chamberlain said that 34·7 per cent was provided from Revenue and 65·3 per cent by borrowing — a record which no other belligerent could equal. The estimated deficit for the current year would be 275,260,000.

WHAT OUR ALLIES OWE US.

On the asset side the obligations of our Allies and Dominions amounted on the 31st March this year to 1,739 millions, of which 171 millions are owing by the Dominions, and 1,583 million by the Allies. Russia owes us 568,103,000 pounds, France 434,490,000, Italy 412,520,000 Belgium 86,799,000, Serbia 18,643,000 and other Allies 47,915,000.

275,260,000 POUNDS DEFICIT.

Describing his proposals to meet the estimated deficit of 275,260,000, the Chancellor said that the land taxes and petrol taxes would remain unchanged pending a detailed review. The excise duty on benzol would be withdrawn, however, in order to encourage the production of petrol on which the licence duty would also be withdrawn.

The Government being pledged to a policy of Imperial preference, Mr. Chamberlain proposed to limit the extent of such preference to one-third of the duty on such imported articles as clocks, watches and musical instruments, and a preference of one-sixth on consumable commodities with the exception of alcohol. Preference to the Empire would be given by a reduction of the excise duty, not by any surcaurge on foreign goods.

The luxury tax would be dropped, but the duty on spirits would be increased from thirty to fifty shillings per proof gallon.

An increased supply of better quality beer will be allowed. At present prices will remain unaltered, but the duty will be raised from fifty to seventy shillings per standard barrel.

The excess profits duty will be reduced to forty per cent and removed altogether as soon as possible.

Income tax will remain unchanged pending the report of the Royal Commission.

In considering the estimated expenditure with regard to the Army and Navy, Mr. Chamberlain had set aside 110 millions, which represented an increase of forty per cent on the pre-war figures.

He hoped however, as a result of the Peace Conference, that it might be possible to reduce the numbers both of the Army and the Navy.

HARRY LAUDER KNIGHTED.

Among the New Year honours, the list of which was only issued yesterday, appear the names of Mr. Harry Lauder, who is knighted for services rendered to the Empire, and Mr. Oswald Stoll.

Other recipients of honours include Lord Burnham, who is made a Viscount, Sir Thomas Dewar, a Baron, and the following, who receive Baronetcies:— Mr. J.H.Cory, M.P. (Cardiff), Mr. Davison Dalziel M.P., (Brixton), Mr. Edward Hulton (Manchester), Mr. W. T. Madge of the People.

WHO REALLY DID WIN THE WAR?

Preaching at All Saints', Margaret-street, the Rev. R, J. Campbell said a few weeks ago, on the Riviera, he learned that the U.S. had won the war. Coming through Paris he learned that France did not seem to think we had done so much as France.

On Saturday there was a suggestion in London that Australia had won the war, and now he was hearing from across the Channel that the war was really won on the Italian front.

The war was won, he added, by Britain by the great moral reserves generated and built up by 1,000 years of Christianity, which had carried us successfully through. But a great danger still existed from without and not from within, from wrongheadedness or selfish indulgence and by not taking large views.

It was stated at the unveiling of a memorial window at Portsmouth Naval Barracks Church that in the battle of Jutland nine Chaplains lost their lives and only six captains.

BY-ELECTION AT CENTRAL ABERDEEN.

ANOTHER LIBERAL GAIN.

The result of the by-election at Central Aberdeen was announced yesterday. The consituency has followed the lead of Hull and "turned over" to the Liberals. The figures are:—

Major Wood, Liberal	4950,
Mr. L. Davidson, Coalition Unionist	4764,
Mr. J. F. Duncan, Labour	3482,
Liberal Majority	186.

At the general election in December the Coalition Unionist, Lt. Col. Gordon, had a majority of 638. It was owing to his death that the seat fell vacant.

CIVILIAN CLOTHES ARE SCARCE.

STAY IN THE ARMY.

The demobilization of two and a half million men from the Army has brought an enormous volume of business to all traders in articles for men's wear. Tailors, clothiers, hatters, hosiers, and outfitters have never known such a demand. Stocks have been very seriously depleted, and retailers are clamouring for further supplies, but manufacturers are unable to meet their requirements in time. They could easily dispose of twice their present production if only they had the material and the labour to convert it into clothing. Many retailers as a result have sold right out of good quality ready-made suits, and have no idea when they will be able to obtain a fresh supply.

MARRIAGE OF MISS ASQUITH.

TRIPLE SERVICE.

The marriage of Miss Elizabeth Asquith daughter of the ex-Prime Minister and Prince Antoine Bibesco of the Rumanian legation, grandson of the former ruling prince of Rumania took place in London yesterday. There were actually three ceremonies, one according to the rites of the Greek church, one Anglican and one Civil. A great congregation assembled at the Greek church at Bayswater, including Prince and Princess George Bibesco cousins of the bridegroom, Mr. and Mrs. Asquith the Rumanian Minister and the Legation Staff.

SECOND BATTLE OF YPRES.

CANADIAN MEMORIAL SERVICE.

At Ottawa a memorial service to the Canadians who fell in the second battle of Ypres, organised under the auspices of the War Veterans Association, which it was intended to hold in Parliament Square, had to be transferred to church owing to the inclement weather. There was a large attendance, the music being supplied by massed bands and church choirs. Colonel Beattie, the director chaplain to the Canadian services, officiated and gave an eloquent address. Reuter.

DRAGOONS REACH HOME.

FIRST SHOT OF THE WAR.

The 4th Dragoon Guards, the cadre of which regiment arrived at Tilbury on Tuesday and proceeded to Newbridge, has suffered more casualties than any other cavalry regiment.

The first shot of the war from the British side is stated to have been fired by Trooper Thomas, of "C" Squadron, at St. Denis, on the Saturday previous to the Mons retreat. On the same day the squadron charged a party of Uhlans, and Major Hornby, D.S.O., who was then in command of the squadron, was the first to draw German blood with the sword.

REMOVAL OF TRAVEL RESTRICTIONS.

The Secretary of the War Office makes the following announcement:

On and after May British subjects will no longer be required to obtain a British permit from the Military Permit Office, Bedford-square, for journeys to Belgium or France (with the exception of Paris, for which a permit must still be obtained).

It should be noted that the French and Belgian authorities still require their visa to be obtained by persons untertaking a journey to any part of France or Belgium.

In future British permits from the Military Permit Office, Bedford-square, will be necessary for the following persons only:

(a) British subjects going to Paris.

(b) All persons going to Turkey, Egypt, Palestine, Syria, Mesopotamia, and those parts of Germany occupied by British troops.

(c) All persons going to the zones of British military operations in North and South Russia

(d) Until peace is signed, British subjects going to enemy territory.

CARE OF DEMOBILIZED HORSES.

The Blue Cross Society states that it will continue its efforts to obtain for ex-army horses the considerate treatment they deserve in civilian life. The Society deplores the sale abroad of British war horses, but after careful consideration of the facts placed at his disposal, the chairman of the Committee has come to the conclusion that no exception can be taken to the War Office arrangements.

DEPENDS ON THE QUANTITY.

Rhode Island legislature has passed a bill declaring that beer containing under four per cent of alcohol is non-intoxicating.— Reuter.

FLYING THE ATLANTIC OCEAN.

STILL WAITING.

St. John's. Hawker and Grieve are still waiting for a favourable opportunity of starting the trans-Atlantic flight.

Hawker expects the new wireless equipment which is being sent from England to arrive in time for installation before his start.

Describing the precautions taken to ward off sparking plug difficulties, Hawker said he had had magnetos set in series, but independent of each other. Each magneto gives a spark to the twelve cylinders so that should one or two go wrong he will still be well protected. The idea of effecting repairs in mid air has been abandoned as impracticable. "Once we leave the ground we must fly or fall."

Washington. It is estimated that twenty hours will be necessary for the three American Naval aeroplanes to make the trans-Atlantic flight from Newfoundland to Ireland if the direct route be finally chosen. The machines have a probable cruising speed of seventy miles per hour. It is stated that the advance guard of the destroyers which have been assigned to patrol and guide duties in the Atlantic are now en route to their appointed stations in mid-ocean. In the course of the next few days other destroyers are expected to proceed to sea and by the end of the week the Dreadnoughts and Cruisers will be on their way.— Reuter.

Rockaway, Long Island.—The Naval Seaplane N.C.3, which has completed a successful trial, may jump off at any moment for Newfoundland on the first stage of the overseas flight. Reuter.

AVIATION REGULATIONS FOR CIVILIANS.

PAINS AND PENALTIES.

Supplementary air navigation directions were published yesterday for control of civilian and commercial aviation. A note by the Air Ministry points out that the list of areas over which civil flying is prohibited was drawn up to meet the needs of the war period and will remain in force pending the conclusion of peace, when the list will be entirely reconsidered and a further announcement made.

The regulations cover fourteen subjects, including general conditions of flying, aerodromes, the general safety and the provision of penalties.

All aircraft must be registered and must carry registration and nationality marks. All personnel must be licensed. Aerodromes must also be licensed and must exhibit tariff charges approved by the Secretary of State.

Aircraft flying over towns must keep to such an altitude as will enable landings to be effected outside the town in case of breakdown and there must be no track flying over towns or populous districts. Any one contravening, or failing to comply with, the regulations, will be liable to six months imprisonment or a fine of two hundred pounds sterling, or both.

As precautions against smuggling, no person importing goods in aircraft shall bring goods to any place other than the appointed aerodrome or unload goods except at an examination station unless in the presence of a Customs officer.

The air navigation directions contain details of medical and technical examination of personnel, methods of approval of workmanship and materials used in aircraft, and instructions for the use of logbooks.

THREATS WITH A "DUD" BOMB.

The exciting chase of a man who threatened the lady box-office clerk at Brixton Theatre with a bomb was described at Lambeth Police Court when Bert Cackett, 22, a cycle fitter, of Camberwell New-road, was charged with demanding money with menaces from Theresa Bridgland.

Miss Bridgland said that Cackett entered the box-office carrying a bomb. He said, "If you don't give me 40 quid quick I will throw it at you." Just then someone approached, and the man dashed out and jumped on a bicycle.

He was chased through several streets by Police Constable Hutchings, who had jumped into a passing motor-car. During the chase Cackett was seen to take the bomb from his pocket and throw it away. Eventually the policeman captured him.

It was stated by Detective Sergeant Napthine that the bomb had been examined and found to be harmless. Defendant, in answer to the charge, denied that he was the man who entered the theatre. He was committed for trial.

BANK MANAGER'S SUICIDE.

At the inquest on Thomas Charles Morgan, the Risca bank manager, who was found with his throat cut after being missing for several days, it was stated that death was in no way due to any trouble at the bank, everything there being in perfect order.

LONDON STOCK EXCHANGE.

The general tone of the House yesterday was favourable, though Gilt edges were still dull. The tax-compounded four per cents have lost their recent improvement on the realisation that it is generally considered that the Chancellor's proposals regarding income tax will not be drastic. Oil shares continue to make headway. West African tin minings show revival of interest. Rubber shares are firmer, especially Linggi plantation, on talk of capitalisation of reserve and issue of Bonus shares. The improvement in French Loans made further progress. The Russian group remained in favour and Brazilians also were a good feature, buying being induced by a further rise in the rate of exchange.

Applications for National War Bonds (Bank of England issue) last week numbered 4,022, for £3,877,261 making a total for the fourth series of 47,530 for £48,853,373.

EGOTISM.

It is often said that the days of individualism have passed, that we are within the portals of an epoch marked by community of interest and service. Henceforth, man will not be proud of the lone furrow, but will find his best in fellowship. We do not feel confident that this popular belief is surely founded. Without a doubt we have left behind us much that is unworthy in an inadequate conception of life. A system of thought which satisfied the exponents of the "glorious revolution," a system which magnified the rights more than the duties of men, which expressed horror at the mere mention of state interference, is not appropriate to these days of democracy. But it is doubtful whether we are not still under the glamour of individualism. In some ways we have actually gone backwards, for essayists and dramatists delight in picturing for us the virtues of super-men, whilst yesterday we were well content with the simpler category of men.

Our historians have not been free from blame in the matter. Was it not Carlyle who defined history as the essence of innumerable biographies? The story of the world has been told by many who have seen in it little but a galaxy of great men who have marched across the stage of life. History for them has been the tale of Personality. They have fastened their gaze upon great soldiers or great statesmen or great sovereigns, and real history has suffered — for, after all, real history is an account of ordinary men and women who joy and suffer, live and die, keeping a national tradition secure and handing it on somewhat more dignified to the race that follows them. It may be true, as Bolingbroke reminds us, that history is philosophy teaching by examples, but what is one result of the "example" or Carlylean view of history? It is simply this — strength of character is taken as the criterion of great character, and before long Might is confused with Right. That is why Carlyle saw so much to admire in Frederick the Great, and why he himself has of late fallen into some disrepute as an historian. Men like Frederick the Great or Napoleon Bonaparte are a danger to the world, for their stoutness of character is far in advance of their spiritual vision; and men who worship at their shrines are a danger to the State.

The present age too often reflects this faulty perspective of life. Many of us yearn for the strong man who shall with rough hand brush aside every convention and tradition that stand in the way of national efficiency, and we shall forgive him much if his rough hand is sure and ever ready. Even our novelists delight to portray "the strong silent man," for they know the appeal of such stalwarts to their public. We grant that there are many times in our history when we stand in need of men who are head and shoulders above their fellows. But too often we place in the seats of the mighty heroes who soon lose their silence and with it much of the stature with which we credited them. They shrink into quite ordinary dimensions when we gallantly raise them to their pedestals. Worthy dictators come from a select class of human beings, and it is only a very great and a very good man who can rule the destiny of his country. Even then he succeeds not by his own strong hand but by the willing support of many good and loyal-hearted men and women who are never known to fame. It is a sure proof of weakness when the strong man forgets his fellow-workers.

The weakness of strong men is pathetic. They cannot trust in their power, and so they "smite the chord of self." Then enters egotism, and the handmaiden of egotism is advertisement. This is an era of advertisement, and whether it be ashamed or blatant it is ugly and ominous. The work of the soldier saves him from its perils but the statesman, the churchman, and the propagandist are too often easy victims. "Measures, not men, have always been my mark," says Goldsmith, and despite the classic commentary on the words they express an ideal. Why should not great men be great enough to pay less heed to their own achievements? The glory that is theirs a dispassionate world will in due time grant to them. There are two kinds of egotism — one is a virtue and the other is a vice. Let a man have virtuous egotism and he will believe in his work and in his strength to accomplish it. Let a man have vicious egotism and he will so prate about himself that his work is futile and unworthy. In every sphere of life the only safe motto is: "to thine own self be true."

THE OPERA.

"RIGOLETTO."

Verdi's "Rigoletto," which was played on Wednesday night, is always welcome hearing. The unsavoury nature of the Duke of Mantua's amorous adventures is so transformed by the character of the music that one imagines one is listening to a tale about fanciful people, not creatures of flesh and blood like ourselves. This is all to the good, one trembles to think what would be the result where the subject set to music by the elephantine kultured thought of some modern composers such as Richard Strauss.

In listening to a German rendering of an Opera hailing from the sunny land of Italy, one must realize that he is not hearing the Germans at their best. Here in Germany everything has to be Germanised. This was quite evident in "Rigoletto." There was an entire absence of sparkle and the tempi throughout were inclined to be too slow, notably in "La Donna é mobile" the orchestral introduction to which was quite dirge-like. Fortunately Herr Krauss's interpretation did not quite follow their lead and his singing throughout the opera was good, marred only by the "German" hardness of his upper notes.

He and Gilda also did not err in the matter of intonation which was a painful weakness of some others both amongst the singers and orchestral players. The orchestra really never rose above the level of a good theatre band, the strings being especially ragged. The wood wind, however, was excellent. There was on the whole a lack of unanimity between the conductor and the performers generally.

"Herr Liszewsky," who took the part of Rigoletto, has a fine voice and acted well according to the standard of opera. Fr. Herwig as Gilda sang with conviction, and has a fine voice of pure quality, but her German rendering of the Italian conventions of vocalization was not very satisfactory. Her acting at the end of the second act with the kind of "Rock of Ages" curtain was also somewhat overdone.

Of the concerted numbers the quartette in the last act was the best rendered. The continuity of the last act is very spoilt by the clock-striking incident, where Rigoletto (and every member of the audience) counts the stroke of a sort of kitchen clock striking twelve. There is no need for this. Rigoletto must know perfectly well that it is twelve o'clock when it begins to strike, and could make his announcement of midnight then.

The music which follows is especially written to harmonize with the note of the clock, which could then strike in a more dignified way.

The performance of the opera on the whole was not very inspiring. One longed for a little Italian sunshine to peep through the Teutonic clouds. However, the Germans are naturally more at home in their own operas, and can be more fairly judged in the performance of their own works. I should like, however, to say a word to those who are perhaps hearing grand opera for the first time.

There is rather a tendency for them to think that now at last they have come to the home of good opera productions, with which we in England cannot compete.

This is a fallacy. Opera productions in England are usually better than those that can be heard here. The trouble is that to hear an opera in London entails either great expense or great discomfort. This is not the fault either of singers or producers but the fault of having a government of lawyers—with a recent addition of business cranks—which looks upon art in all its branches as a superfluity, and will not authorize the payment of subsidies, without which opera in Germany would be difficult to run. It is however, doubtful whether the general British public will ever really appreciate grand opera, and it is more than doubtful whether such an accomplishment is really desirable, as it tends to vitiate the taste for the higher branches of musical art.

CHAPTER I.

(Editor's Note.— We publish this contribution because it is interesting and gives utterance to a sound idea. The writer, however, must not think that the military authorities, "the powers that be," have not been alive to this state of affairs, and we believe he will find that he is intelligently anticipating schemes which have been thought out in detail and will soon be put in execution).

There have recently been a great number of articles and letters in the Home Press regarding the amount of venereal disease in the Army of occupation, the risks of infection for the lads of the "New Guard," etc., ad lib. The subject is undoubtedly one of more than passing interest and the danger cannot be too strongly remarked upon.

The military authorities have issued orders to the effect that fraternization is a grave offence, and those whose duty it is to enforce all orders issued are doing all they can to see that the order is carried out. Going by the result of dozens of conversations with soldiers of all ranks, and from personal observation, one arrives at the opinion that there will be an enormous amount of fraternization, in spite of all efforts on the part of the Military Police and others, until something really useful is done in the way of counteracting it.

With all due respect to the "Powers That Be" and to those whose duty it is to keep law and order, it is assuredly correct that the mere publication of a Routine Order forbidding the practice of fraternization is not by any means sufficient. We all know the old adage about "stolen fruit" and its enhanced sweetness! Further — as so splendidly put in one of the leading articles in the issue of the Cologne Post for April 3rd, — it is our English custom to make ourselves "at home" wherever we may be; also, one of the finest traits in the Englishman's character is to fight a man, give him a good hiding, and then shake hands with him!

There is no gainsaying the fact that drink has the greatest possible bearing on the sex question. This has been proved, not thousands, but millions of times, in the world's history; and there is no doubt that there is a great deal of "dope" being served up to the troops in the area occupied by the British Army of the Rhine. A great deal of the wine which is sold in the bars and wirtschafts is what the old soldier would term "ex-bayonets" stuff, and the sirens trade on this knowledge. Recently five women who were always seen amongst the troops in a certain village "Somewhere on the right bank of the Rhine" came under suspicion.

They were watched for a day or two, and their modus operandi was as follows: One of these women would establish herself in one of the local public bars much frequented by British Tommies, wait for one of the lads to get "heady" with wine, and then establish herself by his side, pretending to drink with him. Eventually Tommy would leave the house in her company — the inevitable result. Tommy, dazed with a drink to which he was not accustomed, and practically unconscious of what he was doing, had fallen into the net! Worst point of all was that Tommy was liable to be "strafed" for fraternization!

On enquiries being made at the local Rathaus, and an inspection of the files of the Kriminal Büro, these women were found to be listed as "Bekanntenbeziente"! Needless to remark their activities were soon nipped in the bud, and within three days they had completely vanished from the locality.

Would it not be possible for the authorities to adopt a scheme on the following lines? There is no doubt whatever that the benefits would be very quickly apparent, and Tommy would have a drink after his liking, at the same time being protected from danger.

Throughout the area occupied by the British Army of Occupation, commandeer, hire or by other means procure a sufficient number of hotels and wirtschafts, put them under British control in each case, and serve only British drinks. It is a wager of two month's War bonus to a tenpfennig piece that the average Tommy would prefer a bottle of Bass or a pint of good English beer to all the Rheinwein ever made! There are plenty of experienced members of the Licensed Victuallers business amongst us who would make the scheme a success.

Virtually turn these German houses into British "pubs." Re-name them, if necessary, and run them on the same lines as our own particular houses at home. There is no need to remove orchestras, etc., from these houses. Maintain these, and establish a good staff of waitresses, thereby putting in the female element which is so necessary. Tommy likes his drink served to him by a pretty girl: this was always the case in France or Belgium. The estaminet with the prettiest mademoiselle got most of Tommy's custom. But have them under a Britisher in supreme charge in every case.

Get sufficient houses: not one in each quarter of the town (as was attempted when the British Army first came into the area) but one in each street if possible. To make a better thing of it, adopt the style of the Aldershot Canteens, and have concerts with British talent.

These houses would naturally be out of bounds to all civilians, and this would put a complete damper on the harpies who are making such a good living out of Tommy at present.

It is needless to remark on the financial benefits accruing to a scheme of this kind. But the point so much worthy of note is, that at the present time a very large percentage of Tommy's pay is going into German pockets. Verily, the Army of Occupation is putting thousands of marks per day into Germany, and the inhabitants have the laugh of us in consequence. If a scheme similar to that suggested were adopted, no matter how attendant profits were disposed of, we should be happy in the knowledge that the German "Boniface" was not getting them — in exchange for "dope."

Having obtained plenty of houses and having made them worth going into for a good drink after his fancy, leave the rest to Tommy. Then, if considered necessary, put all German houses out of bounds to the Troops. We have numbers of theatres, cinemas, Y.M.C.A. and Church Army Huts, etc., but nothing has been done for the drinking man — an undoubted majority.

A further suggestion is to either have special houses for W.O.s & Sergeants, or to have a room apart in each house for this purpose, so that there will be no breach of discipline or good feeling. The question of hours of opening is another point. A great deal of drunkennes has been caused by giving a man only a limited time for his drink. Result being that he swallows as much as he can in the short time allowed him, and suffers in consequence.

WILLIAM ROBERT PATTERSON. F.R.G.S., etc.

With a cheap camera the exposure of a plate or film is a comparatively simple process, but with a really good apparatus one needs to consider many things. It has come to my notice that — the expensive camera, having more screws and knobs, christened "gadgets" by our army, to be manipulated than the cheaper one — the new purchaser is sometimes forgetful of them. Common faults are:—

(1) Omitting to set the shutter at suitable speed.

(2) Leaving the lens-hood (or cap) over the lens.

(3) Omitting to withdraw the slide that protects the plate or film in its sheath, or forgetting to replace it afterwards.

(4) Omitting to open or close the diaphragm according to the strength of the light and speed of the shutter. Both shutter and diaphragm should work in accord.

(5) Working either too rapidly or too slowly.

It is essential that the operator should study the power of direct, diffused, and reflected light.

Your own eyes can assist you in this. If you glance at the sky on a sunny day, your eyes will soon tire of its brilliancy. Then expose at high speed. Sometimes the sky is vapoury — the vapours, actually clouds, present no clear outline and are white and so bright that they also fatigue the eyes after a while. Here, too, you may work fast, but naturally not so rapidly as if the sun were directly illuminating the object to be photographed.

You really must learn to judge the strength of light from all sides, for the exposure of your film or plate is the most important point in the whole process.

In a short street you have only light from above, that is from one side. At sea, you have light from six sides — that is, behind, above, in front, below, and from right and left. In this case the light from below is, of course, reflected light.

In a country lane bordered by leafy trees you must not expose too rapidly, even in the height of summer. If the trees in the lane are spaced and not too burdened with foliage, you will have filtered light and probably, patches of light and shade upon the ground. The effect is pretty, but be careful that no such patches fall upon any person within focus.

I append a brief list of words which may prove of useful service to those who deal with German photographers.

FOR HONOUR AND FOR HER.

Somewhere a woman, thrusting fear away,
Faces the future bravely, for your sake;
Toils on from dawn till dark, from day to day,
Fights back her tears, nor heeds the bitter ache;
She loves you, trusts you, breathes in prayer your [name:
Soil not her faith in you, by sin or shame.

Somewhere a woman — mother, sweetheart, wife
Waits 'tween hopes and fears for your return;
Her kiss, her words, will cheer you in the strife
When death itself confronts you, grim and stern.
But let her image all your reference claim,
When base temptations scorch you with their [flame.

Somewhere a woman watches, thrilled with pride,
Shrined in her heart, you share a place with none;
She toils, she waits, she prays, till side by side,
You stand together when the battle's done;
Oh! keep for her dear sake a stainless name,
Take back to her a manhood free from shame.

C. C.

When a soldier goes into Cologne and other towns for the day, either on pass or on duty, he cannot obtain a good meal. Only a day or so ago, the servant of an officer told the latter that he could get nothing worth having in the eating line, although he was in Cologne the best part of a day. He said that he would not have objected to a liberal portion of bread and cheese, washed down by a "pint" — if such had been obtainable. The Y.M.C.A.s etc., have a plentiful stock of biscuits, cakes etc., but a man usually likes at least one square meal a day.

If the British "pubs" were introduced, a species of quick lunch counters could be run, dispensing cold meats, fish, bread, cheese etc. to their customers.

In discussing this matter with others, the writer was reminded of the difficulty of getting sufficient British beer over here. Give the enterprising brewers at home a chance to open up branch breweries out here, and they will soon avail themselves of it. Bass & Co. were not long in establishing breweries in France in '15. Further, they would be on the spot to snap up German trade when Peace was signed.

Undoubtedly there would be a number of difficulties put in the way of such a scheme, but what are obstacles made for? To be surmounted, of course!

A DERBY SWEEPSTAKE.

POPULARITY OF A RECENT SUGGESTION.

A note, in our "Sports Reflection" column, recently contained a suggestion that somebody ought to organise a Derby Sweepstake with an entrance fee of, say, ten marks.

That little paragraph has been productive of dozens of letters, received at this office, acclaiming the suggestion as the germ of an enormously popular institution.

It would, indeed, be difficulty to discover a rank in the Army not represented in our correspondence on this popular subject and in no single instance is the proposal criticised adversely.

An officer of high rank signing himself "Punter" writes, "I think a Derby Sweepstake would prove to be very popular among all ranks on the Rhine; I hope you will be able to get it going."

Then there comes this letter from a Private in the M.G.C.: "I have been reading the paragraph by "The Rambler" on the subject of organising a sweepstake for the Derby. I think the idea a good one. I am sure there are thousands of boys who would be only too pleased to be able to invest in a ticket for this."

The Price of Tickets.

A Sergeant-Major expresses his views thus: "With reference to your paragraph "A Derby Sweepstake," I am quite in agreement with your correspondent and feel sure there are many who would welcome a sweepstake. I think the issue of tickets at ten marks each would be within the scope of everybody's pocket."

Writing from Euskirchen, an R.A.M.C. warrant officer considers that "the running of a Derby Sweepstake on lines similar to those in operation in Calcutta would I feel sure be very popular with all ranks, and would at least form a counter-attraction to the German lotteries which, I am sorry to see, are so eagerly patronized by the troops. Such money is better in our hands than in the hands of our enemy; therefore let some of our people make a good start, advertise well, and success will surely follow."

What about Regulations?

An A.S.C. Major anticipates difficulties. He writes: "No scheme would be hailed with more genuine and widespread satisfaction than the adoption of the suggestion made in your bright little paper some days ago, i.e. the organisation of a Derby Sweepstake. I am not quite sure whether or not regulations would absolutely prohibit such an undertaking but I consider, in any case that special permission might be granted in this matter.

Why doesn't "The Rambler" tackle the thing himself. He has the facilities for publicity, a central office from which tickets could be purchased and a wide circle of followers. At all events he could find out how the land lays with regard to the matter and publish the result of his enquiries."

And so, we could go on, filling several columns with letters in similar terms form all quarters.

The Sporting Chance.

The extraordinary response merely provides further evidence of that remarkable trait in the character of the Britisaer that produces a delight in taking sporting chances.

The aviator, the motorist, the horseman and, in fact, the participater in every class of sport loves nothing so much as the little thrill provided by the element of uncertainty in his pursuit. The man, who places his modest stake on a gee-gee at the races (provided the stake is within the limits of his purse) extracts full value for his money even supposing the animal of his choice is well out of the running when the winning post is reached. To the average Englishman, such little gambles with Fate provide the spice of life.

We shall most certainly take the advice of our Major correspondent and ascertain the lay of the land. The result of our investigations will be published in due course.

OFFICERS SPORTS CLUB.

OPENING POSTPONED OWING TO RAIN.

The formal opening of the Army of the Rhine Officers Sports Club which was to have taken place yesterday at the Stadtwald, Lindenthal, has been postponed until Wednesday next owing to the inclement weather which prevailed throughout the day.

CAMBRIDGE ROWING.

For the forthcoming Henley Regatta practice on the river has commenced in real earnest, says a writer in the Observer, and the Light Blue president, Mr. C.E.V. Buxton, has already got two crews at work in view of the competition against two similar eights from Oxford at the forthcoming Henley Regatta.

The composition is at present tentative, and there will doubtless be a number of changes before finality is decided upon. It is proposed to keep these crews in daily practice for three weeks, after which the men will be able to devote their attentions to their own college eights in view of the May races, but during this time there will be occasional outings, perhaps twice or three times a week.

At the conclusion of the bumping races on June 7 the men selected for the two representative crews at Henley will have a week's rest, and will then carry on for the remaining three weeks in strict training for the regatta on the Thames.

The bumping races in June will be on pre-war lines, and the crews will start in the positions in which they were left at the conclusion of the races in 1914, but it is at present uncertain whether there will be quite as many eights competing, although with the naval officers and American army officers in residence it is hoped to make up the crews with their assistance.

There will be a meeting of college boat captains to-morrow to discuss details for the future, and to arrange any additional fixtures for the term.

Cambridge hopes to be represented at Henley by a number of college crews, but much will depend upon the form displayed during the next few weeks, whilst the matter of expense is one which always has to be very carefully considered.

RHINELAND FOOTBALL REPORTS.

SUMMER FOOTBALL!

INTERESTING KNOCK-OUT COMPETITION.

At a football meeting held at the Artillery Barracks, Kalk, on Monday it was decided to form a "knock-out" competition. The conclusion was come to that the 93rd Brigade R.G.A. XI would be too strong for the competition, and the offer of this Brigade to enter Battery teams against Battalions should make the competition quite open. Eight teams entered and the draw was as follows:

FIRST ROUND:

A. 26th Royal Fusiliers v. 23rd Royal Fusiliers.
B. 140th F.A., R.A.M.C. v. 159 (H) Battery R.G.A.
C. 17th Royal Fusiliers v. 57th (S) Battery R.G.A.
D. 124th (S) Battery R.G.A. v. 150 (H) Battery R.G.A.

SEMI-FINAL: — D. v. A. C. v. B.

Matches to be played on the ground of the first named.

51st GORDON EDUCATIONISTS DEFEAT TRANSPORT TEAM.

At Düren, on Monday, a team from the Education Staff of 51st Gordon Highlanders, fielded by Capt. Loewe, defeated the Battalion Transport eleven by a goal to nil. Lawrie shone in goal for the teachers during the first period, saving some difficult shots with confidence. Sergt. Cunningham at right back also saved the same side frequently when the defence was sorely tried. White and Aitchison were the dangerous men in the transport attack. Sergt. Petrie, who was the best forward afield, despite the fact he was up against a strong back in Dowrie, had one notably good try. Lieut. Mather was a strenuous worker for the education team. Grand was given a good chance to score when a free kick was awarded for a foul by the education goalkeeper, but he shot over. Just on time, Henderson scored from a corner concede by Whyte. Riddell on the teachers' side, was conspicuous throughout for sound work in the half back line.

HALLAMSHIRES INTER-COMPANY MATCHES.

"A" and "C" Coys of the 1/4th (H) York and Lancasters tried conclusions at Bucher Park. Both teams turned out very strong. "C" Company threatened their opponents, goal, but a score was averted by "A" Coys, good defence. Another run, headed by C.S.M. Stone, seemed like resulting a goal, but the ball was kicked wide.

An attack by "C" resulted in Roberts scoring. Stone then carried the leather well up the field but lacked support. More by good luck than good management did "A" Coy save a more severe defeat. Result: "C" Coy, 1; "A" Coy, 0.

51st v. 53rd MANCHESTER REGT.

At Mendow, on Sunday, a strong wind caused very scrappy football. Five minutes from the start, Cpl. Downs shot a lovely goal. The 53rd goalkeeper was very sure, and it was due to him and his backs that the score was only 1—0 in favour of the 51st at half time.

On resuming, the 53rd did a lot of pressing, the right wing getting away time after time and giving the 51st defence an anxious time, but Lieut. Henson was a glutton for work, also Sgt. Prince, and it was though no fault of theirs that a goal came to the 53rd about 15 minutes from the end.

From a mix up near goal Lieut. Penswick accidentally handled and a penalty was awarded. Sgt. Early had no chance whatever with the resulting shot, which made the final score. 1—1.

No. 1 COMPANY WESTERN DIV. TRAIN. v. No. 2. FIELD AMBULANCE.

At Dunstekoven on Tuesday. Grundy scored after two minutes play, and brilliant work by Howarth, on the left, enabled Burrel to score two goals in quick succession.

During the remainder of the first half a violent snowstorm raged and Burrel with a brilliant run completed the "hat trick." Just before half time Grundy worked his way down the left wing and put in a well timed centre which Howarth converted.

The second half was a little more evenly contested. After half an hour's play, Howarth made a run half the length of the field, and tricking three opponents, scored the best goal of the match. Result: 6—0 in favur of the Ambulance.

5th LABOUR COY. v 63 C.C.S.

This match was played in the Volksgarten ground on Wednesday. A break-away by Cpl. Swan enabled Oddie to score a beautiful goal. After several rushes by the 5th Labour Coy forwards Lce. Cpl. Pace got away and added another.

The second half started with the 5th Labour Coy kicking uphill. Several R.A.M.C. rushes were unsuccessful, the opposing defence being excellent. From a beautiful pass by Cpl. Swan, Oddie scored with a thrilling drive. Result: 5th Labour Coy 3; 63 C.C.S., R.A.M.C. nil.

NESBET AT EFFEREN.

SIEGE BATTERIES OPPOSED.

The return match between 70 and 263 Siege Batteries was played on the ground of the first named at Efferen on Wednesday and resulted in a win for 263 by the only goal scored. The game was interesting if only for the fact that Nesbit, the "Ayr—United" custodian, was on view, but owing to the weak display of the 70's forwards he did not have much opportunity to display his abilities. The defence on either side was good and in a fairly even opening half Gould dispossessed Monson and scored the only point at close range. McKinley made a couple of fine attempts to score with long range shots and on changing ends the home forwards, well served by their halves, brought quite a lot of pressure to bear on the visitors' defence. The front line, however, proved lamentably weak when near the uprights, and Nesbit only had one difficult shot to negotiate. Pulton played finely at left half or the winners; Rothwell and Cray forming a smart left wing. Howarth worked hard at centre half for the losers. The teams were: 70 Siege: Gunby; Manson, Sudworth; Clayton, Howarth, McKinley; Meyeroft, "A.N.Other," Swan, Bomb. Dent, and Jones J.E.

263 Siege: Nesbit; Whitehouse, Silcock; Goodridge, Simpson, Poulton; Smith, Harrison, Gould, Cray, and Rothwell.

TO PLAY THE "YANKS."

1/4th ROYAL SCOTS FUSILIERS TO GO TO COBLENZ.

The final tie in the preliminary competition to decide whether the 1/4th Royal Scots Fusiliers, 5/6th Royal Scots or 15th. Highland Light Inf. should journey to Coblenz to meet a crack American team, took place at Wald on Wednesday. The Fusiliers and the Highlanders were the finalists, and in a closely contested game the former were slightly superior. By winning by 3—2, the R.S.F's qualified to meet the American team. The match will take place on Saturday next.

THE RUGBY GAME.

12th (S) BATTN. ROYAL IRISH RIFLES v. 2nd M. G. BATTALION.

This match, played on Thursday, on the Machine Gunner's ground, showed considerable improvement in the combination of the Rifles team. The Machine Gunners were greatly handicapped by the absence from their three-quarter line of Major Wood.

Play for the first fifteen minutes remained in mid-field, but good forward work by the Irish pack eventually brought play to the Machine Gunner's twenty-five. From a "line-out" here, the Rifles' backs got going, and a fine run by Gilmore was responsible for putting Lynn across for the opening try, which Fennell converted. Play remained very even from this to half-time.

From a five-yards scrum, Mason obtained possession and crossed over for a nice try; converted by McMahon.

With both sides equal play was now fast and furious, and a succession of good rushes by the Irish pack, followed by clever footwork, holding play in the M.G. twenty-five, where from a scrum Fennell crossed, between the posts, afterwards converting.

From now to the long whistle, play was very keen on both sides, but no further scoring took place. Result: 12th R. I. Rifles, 2 goals — 10 points; 2nd M. G. Battn. 1 goal — 5 points.

For the Machine Gunners, McMahon was easily the best back, his brilliant kicking helping his side considerably, while Murray and Nolan did good work for the forwards.

51st v. 52nd WELSH REGIMENT.

The above teams met on the ground of the 52nd Welsh at Duisdorf on Saturday, and after an interesting and evenly contested match the homesters ran out victors by 12 points to 3.

From the kick off the ball was carried to the home backs. Lieut. Harper dropped a beautiful goal. Keen and even play was kept up and the forwards on both sides played sterling football. It was from a forward rush of the homesters the ball was carried to the visitors line and from the ensuing scrum it came out cleanly to the back. Sergt. Beyron, gathering the ball in magnificent fashion, cut his way through the visitors defence and scored a great try. Lt Haifer had no difficulty in adding the major points.

The visitors were now on their mettle and they carried the play to the home 25 where a miss-kick by one of the home backs was well followed by the visiting forwards and a try resulted which was not converted. Rain fell heavily on resumption, which made the ground very slippery, so that the second half was confined to forward play. Early on, the homesters had the misfortune to lose their inside half, Lt. H. A. Davies, who had to be carried off the field with a damaged knee, but their seven forwards played well. From a rush Capt. Gilbert (one of the home forwards) scored a try which was not converted. A few minutes later the whistle blew with the score 12 points to 3 in avour of the 52nd.

52nd NORTHUMBERLAND FUSILIERS v. 1st ROYAL SCOTS FUSILIERS.

This match took place yesterday on the former team's ground. There was no score in the first half, but Sergt. Heap secured a goal soon after the resumption.

BOXING AND OTHER THINGS.

3rd BATTALION MACHINE GUN CORPS.

To-night the second Boxing Tournament since the move to Riehl Barracks, takes place. There are plenty of entries and a successful show is assured.

Lt. Col. Cranston, D.S.O., once more acts as referee. The first boxers enter the ring about 17.50 hours, and it is up to every reader of these lines, who will be within reach of the venue, to make a point of being there. When the Tournament finishes, the evening will be still young. Prizes will take the form of vouchers redeemable in the Canteen. An interesting game of hockey took place between "B" and a combined team of "C" and "D" on Wednesday. Result not yet to hand.

Cricket will be played in two places. A matting wicket will be laid on the parade ground and a grass pitch is being prepared near the barracks. Intending cricketers should have their names with their Company sports' officer.

We have been permitted a private glimpse of the Battalion Magazine. This will be worth the 80pf. asked for it and may be looked for about the end of May.

INTER-PLATOON CROSS COUNTRY CHAMPIONSHIP.

5th CAMERON HIGHLANDERS, "A" COY.

This took place under unsettled weather condition at Geich on Sunday. Despite the weather, the enthusiasm was so high that each platoon had a large pack—52 runners from a sadly depleted Company.

The course was by no means easy, but was run in very good time, the special feature being the closeness with which the first sixteen competitors arrived home.

No. 3 and 4 Platoons tied for first place with eighty-five points each, No. 1 being third and No. 2 fourth.

The first four men home were: 1, Pte. McDougall, No. 4 Platoon, Silver Medal; (2) Pte. Duncan, No. 3; (3), Pte. McMaster, No. 4; and 4, Pte. Hunter, No. 3, bronze medals.

Col. R. Campbell, D.S.O. presented the prizes and congratulated the runners on their enthusiasm and prowess.

Sergt. W. Rautenbush, who won the American Army golf tournament at Nice last week, was champion of Chicago in 1913 and 1916.

SPORT IN ENGLAND.

EPSOM AND PONTEFRACT RACES.

THE CITY AND SUBURBAN.

A very large crowd, at Epsom on Wednesday, witnessed Royal Bucks win the City and Suburban. The returns for that day's card were:

Copthorne Plate:—1, Ambre II (5—4 on); 2, Rich Gift (9—2); 3, Patlander (8—1) Six ran.

Birchworth Plate: High and Mighty (2—1) and Another Saint (4—1) dead heat for first place; Hibernia (6—1) was third. Seven ran.

Tatworth Plate: 1, Twincat (6—1); 2, Pretty Milly (9—4); 3, Win the War (7—1). Eight ran.

City and Suburban: 1, Royal Bucks (6—1); 2, Aerion (100—7); 3, Dansellon (5—2). Also ran:—Polascope, Scatwell, Sandmole, Galloper Light, Silver Bullet, Knight of Blythe, Helion, Mintleaf and Matruh. Royal Bucks made all the running and won a fine race by one and a half lenghts There were four lenghts between second and third. Silver Bullet was fourth.

Hyde Park Plate: 1, Mount Royal 6—4); 2, Lady Meave (5—2); 3, Envoy (3—1). Eight ran.

INMAN'S BILLIARD "CHALLENGE."

£1,000 A SIDE FOR MATCH OF 18,000 POINTS.

A "Sporting Life" representative had an interview with Stevenson recently in the course of which the ex-champion unfolded quite an interesting story, relative to a challenge made by Inman in the presence of several sportsmen at Hurst Park on Monday.

Inman is said to have remarked that he could concede 3,000 in 18,000 to any of his fellow professionals, and the purport of the interview yesterday was to accept the challenge thus issued by the champion. Stevenson informed our representative that he was prepared to accept the champion's challenge on the following conditions:

He will accept 3,000 in 18,000 from Inman if the latter will make the stakes £1,000 a side, contingent that in the event of Stevenson winning by one point, ten, a hundred, or ten thousand, Inman will play a second match over the same course, conceding a thousand points less (i. e., 2,000), for another £1,000, making the second match £2,000 of nothing for the winner. And, further, that if the second match also goes in favour of Stevenson, Inman must consent to play a third match, in which the concession could be 1,000 in 13,000, Stevenson playing up his winnings of £2,000, and thus make the third match for £4,000 or nothing.

M.C.C. ANNUAL MEETING.

HONOURS FOR OUR FIGHTING LEADERS.

At the annual meeting of the M.C.C. to be held at Lords on the 7th inst. the committee will bring forward a recommendation that the honorary membership of the club shall be offered to Admirals Jellicoe and Beatty and Field Marshals Haig and French. The meeting will be followed by the annual dinner.

Owing to the fact that the Lords ground was not vacated by the Royal Artillery Cadet School until January, it may not be possible to restore the ground and buildings to the status quo ante bellum this year, but every effort is being, and will be, made to do so.

EMPIRE MATCHES.

Both Australia and New Zealand have issued invitations asking for the visit of an English team to those countries next autumn, but the matter has had to be postponed for the moment to see if it is possible to meet their wishes.

The question of the bowling staff is complicated by the eternal question of "demobilization," but with any luck it is hoped to have forty-six players available. Mr. Kemp has now completed the fixture list.

The cricket season will open at Harrow with the school playing the Household Brigade on the 24th inst.

REVISED REGATTA DATES.

An alteration in the list of dates for first-class regattas on the Thames has been found necessary.

As there will be racing at Hurst Park on July 26, it will not be possible to hold the Molesey Regatta on that date, and an arrangement has been made between Molesey and Staines to exchange dates. The revised list will therefore be as follows:—

Saturday, June 21.—Marlow Regatta.
Saturday, June 28.—Walton-on-Thames Regatta.
Friday and Saturday, July 4 and 5.—Royal Henley Peace Regatta.
Saturday, July 12.—Kingston-on-Thames Regatta.
Monday, July 14.—Metropolitan Regatta (at Putney).
Saturday, July, 19.—Molesey Regatta.
Saturday, July. 26.—Staines Regatta.
Saturday, August 2.—Goring and Streatley Regatta.
Monday, August 4.—Reading Regatta.

CLUB SWINGING.

A Hull marine fireman, D. J. Lynch, lately a prisoner of war in Germany, claims to have set up a world's "record" for continuous club swinging. He swung the clubs for 12 consecutive hours, the number of revolutions being recorded as 125,260, averaging 73 per minute. This, it is stated, breaks the world's "record" by 30 revolutions a minute. Lynch claims to have swung the clubs for 30 hours while a prisoner of war, the German doctors describing him as a machine.

BOXING AT LIBLAR.

The final bout in the 5th K.O.Y.L.I boxing competition was fought at Liblar on Monday between Sgt. Wood "C" Coy., and Pte. Smith "B" Coy. These welter weights were rather unevenly matched, for Wood had considerable advantage in weight. Nevertheless his opponent made a very good show, and the winner could only have got the decision by a narrow margin of points.

During the afternoon, exhibition bouts were given by Lce.Cpl. Gregory ("A") and Pte Hopkinson ("C"); Pte Shaw ("A") and Pte Dickinson ("A"); Pte Embleton ("C") and Pte Lovesay ("B"); Lce.Cpl. Gaifaith ("C") and Pte Davies ("A"); and Sgt. Ife ("A") and Pte Bean ("B").

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

Friday, May 2nd, 1919.

Surface wind between S.W. and West, increasing to 20 to 25 mph., squally a times. Mainly overcast skies with occasional rain. Visibility ordinary. Rather milder than of late.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

(With an Occasional Entertainments Note.)

Sport in Mesopotamia.

According to a letter recently received from Mesopotamia, the troops there are evidently having just as big a boom in sport as we are in Germany. When the letter was written, a sports tournament, of a week's duration, was being looked forward to with keen interest. The programme included horse and athletic races, polo, tennis, cricket and many other interesting items.

The Apollo Theatre.

Variety now holds sway at the cosy Apollo Theatre and the attractions are particularly strong. Johnny Latham, of the "Crumps" is still as entertaining as ever and his numbers with "Miss Perkis" are fresh and amusing. Our old friend Rogers is also on the bill and works his "Demobilization" sketch to delighted audiences each night. The "Tabs" orchestra, augmented, and now 19 strong, add to the success of the show in no small degree, while others who make up the programme are without exception powerful "draws."

Who will beat the Yanks?

The Americans in Coblenz are anxious to meet a crack football team and ever ready to oblige, the "Jocks" with customary modesty (?) have hit upon rather a happy plan to gratify that anxiety. A preliminary competition has been arranged in which the 1/4th Royal Scots Fusiliers, 5th Royal Scots and a team representative of the K.O. S.B. are to have several pitched battles among themselves to decide which of the three is the most likely to succeed in the match at Coblenz. The Fusiliers and the Royal Scots met as per the result of the draw on Wednesday and although extra time was played, the game resulted in a draw of two goals each. The re-play on Sunday had a more decisive result, the R.S.F.'s winning easily by three goals to nil. The winners of this little competition are promised a thoroughly good trip to the Yank Headquarters.

The Challenge Night.

The great "Challenge Night" which I mentioned a few days ago is taking shape rapidly and in all probability the contests will be in the Y.M.C.A. Central Hall, Cologne, somewhere about 20th May. The Matches have not yet been fixed definitely, but among those taking part will be S.M. Jenkins 51st Welsh the present Rhine Army Champion wrestler; S.S.M. Thorpe, 28th Field Ambulance, and Sgt. Maw, R.A.S.C. (wrestling); Driver Birdwhistle (who is asked to send his name and address to the 2nd Army Sports Officer, Cologne, and Pte. Jack Morris, both light weight boxers. I hear, unofficially, that someone is about to issue a ju-jitsu challenge, in which event he will probably have plenty ready to oppose him.

THE RAMBLER.

SIX DAYS MORE.

Have you entered your team for "The Cologne Post" Cricket Cup yet? Entries must be received by Thursday 8th May. Address: Sports Editor, "The Cologne Post," Cologne.

R.A.O.C. BOXING IN FRANCE.

ENJOYABLE TOURNEY AT VENDROUX CAMP.

A tournament promoted by the Royal Army Ordnance Corps at Vendroux Camp, France, recently attracted a crowd of some 2,000 representatives of all the various units in the area, says Sporting Life. Major-Generdl Smyth, V.C., C.B., commanding the 59th Division, presided over the attendance and addressed the troops on the value of sport. Lieut-Col. L. L. Hoare, D.S.O., O.C., and O.O. Vendroux, and a large number of officers of the promoting unit were present. Capt. W. J. Gould, R.A.O.C., was chairman of the committee, and Cpl. H. J. Wray secretary, but the success of the show was mainly due to the experienced efforts of Cpl. Tom Springate and Pte. A. G. Brown. C-S-M-I Whelan, S.G.S., coached many of the lads in his official capacity in the area. A feature of the sport was its genuineness and open fighting, not a single caution or order being necessary. The band of the R.A.O.C. played selections. Details:—

BANTAM-WEIGHT CONTESTS.

The programme opened with a 4round contest betwen Pte. G.E. Tilly (Somerset L.I.) (113th Prisoners of War Co.) and Pte. Montgomery (R.A.O.C.). Tilly was the aggressor, but his opponent was beginning to improve with two rounds to go when he received a blow from below in the wind, and was forced to retire. It was a perfectly fair blow, though some of those not in a position to see had doubts regarding it.

Sapper Phillpots (R.E. Docks) and Pte. C. Montgomery (R.A.O.C., Vendroux) had a merry set-to over 4 rounds. Montgomery, a coloured boy and no relation to the previous loser, has an abnormal reach for one so short in stature, but Phillpots was the cleverer at close quarters, and scored a narrow win on points.

FEATHER-WEIGHTS.

Fast but wild and crude work marked the opening of the 4-round bout between Sapper Bethel (R.E., R.O.D.) and Pte. Souter (R.A.O.C.), but in the second round they settled down to good boxing. Using both hands well, however, Bethel punched his man to a standstill, and Souter retired before the end of the fourth round.

Sapper Cooper (R.E., Docks) and Cpl. Brankston (R.A.O.C.) were scheduled to box six rounds, but Brankston cut up badly, and was down and out inside half a round.

LIGHT-WEIGHTS.

Pte. Singer (Anti-Aircraft C.) soon put paid to Pte. Smith (113th Prisoners of War Co.), who was silently counted out in 40 seconds.

WELTER-WEIGHTS.

In a six round contest Pte. Charlwood (R.A.O.C., Vendroux) proved too good for Pte. Nye (R.A.O.C., Beaumarais), who was badly rocked early on with a right short jab to the jaw, and a few hits with both hands forced him to take the count during the first round.

MIDDLE-WEIGHTS.

Cpl. Ayres (R.A.O.C., Beaumarais) beat Pte. Gurnett (97th Prisoners of War Co.) in the second round, without ever being called upon to open out his best.

Officials.—Referee, C-S-M-I Whelan (A.G.S.); Judges, Major B. L. Humphries and Lieut. Morgan, M.C., S-Cdr Cheshire.

OUR ARMY MAPS.

SPLENDID WORK OF ROYAL GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.

The Times recently published an interesting account of the work done by the Royal Geographical Society in connection with the maps used during the war, and which even yet are proving of valuable assistance at the Peace Conference.

It says that by far the most important work was a provisional compilation of a 1-1,000,000 map, such as had been started as an international enterprise, shortly before the war. The Society first undertook to compile six sheets of Central Europe, to be reproduced, with the permission of the Board of Agriculture, by the Ordnance Survey for the General Staff. Before the original six sheets were complete, others were required, and that experience was maintained throughout—a gratifying testimony to their usefulness. In four-and-a-half years the Society was able, under the efficient direction of the Secretary, Mr. Arthur Hinks, and with the help of an additional staff, gradually gathered together, to compile about 90 sheets, covering Europe with the exception of its western extremities, and extending through Asia Minor, a long way south in Arabia, and across Mesopotamia into Persia.

Both in extent and in success this map has vastly exceeded the anticipations with which it was begun. For all general questions of communications, supply, strategy, and politics it has proved how valuable was the original conception of the international map. The map was not treated as confidential, but was put on sale, and has thus been of service to the general public. Its chief use has been in staff work, while its final and most gratifying success has been at the Peace Conference. At a meeting of the geographical representatives of the Powers at the Service Geographique on February 6, 1919, under the presidency of General Bourgeois, it was decided to use this map by all nations for the preliminary definitions of new boundaries.

GENERAL MAP OF AFRICA.

When the 1—1,000,000 map was well under way, it became necessary to think of a general map of Africa, and later of Asia. It would have required too many sheets to cover Africa on the scale of 1—1,000,000, nor was the material in most parts sufficiently good, so a 1—2,000,000 map was undertaken. This had made such considerable progress by Christmas last that, with the aid of a field survey detachment working in the house, for the first three months of the year, to make the fair drawings, 14 sheets have been finished covering Central Africa and will soon be available.

More recently still, the general map of Asia on the scale of 1—5,000,000 was begun, but of this only one sheet, Manchuria, fair drawn by one of the Society's draughtsmen, was completed when work came to an end, and all unfinished sheets were taken over by the Geographical Section, General Staff.

The compilation of these series of general maps was the chief part of the Society's war work; but from time to time it was active in other directions. Indexes were prepared to various series of topographical maps: experimental work was done in the preparation of special maps for flying; and the value of the Society's library and map collection was severely tested and abundantly proved by the continual demands made upon it by almost every Department of State, especially by the Air Ministry in the last six months of the war.

ARMY COUNCIL'S THANKS.

At the conclusion of its work, the Army Council addressed a letter to the Society thanking it for the valuable work performed, which had made it possible to work the Geographical Section of the General Staff with a minimum of officers. The letter particularly mentioned the 1—1,000,000 map, as not only of great use during the war, but also indispensable for the work of the Peace Congress.

NELSON HEIRLOOM.

WORK OF LLOYD'S PATRIOTIC FUND

The report of Lloyd's Patriotic Fund for 1918 shows that during the past twelve months £ 7,644 has been distributed to widows of R.N. officers for the maintenance and education of their children. Assistance has also been given to the dependents of those connected with Lloyd's who have fallen in the war, and to disabled men who have been unable to return to their work at Lloyd's. The total grants made since this branch of the Fund was inaugurated in September, 1915, by a subscription from the underwriters at Lloyd's, amounts to £ 17,935.

Grants are still made to men disabled in the Transvaal War, and the General Fund started in 1893 continues its work of assisting those disabled in the service, as well as their dependent relatives.

The report also contains an interesting account of the honorary awards made by the Fund during the Napoleonic Wars. The recipients were given the choice of a vase, a sword, or an equivalent sum of money. Sixty-six vases were awarded and 153 swords. For these awards and other purposes nearly £ 500,000 was raised between 1803 and 1812.

A photograph shows the vase presented by the trustees of the original Fund to Lord Nelson's brother after Trafalgar and another illustration the vase voted to Captain Rotherham—one of Nelson's captains at Trafalgar—which has recently been presented as a memento to the corporation of Lloyd's by the well-known underwriter, Mr. Cuthbert Heath, who is also a trustee of the Fund.

NATURALIZATION OF ALIENS.

572 ON THE LIST.

A return has been published as a White Paper [74] giving particulars of all aliens to whom certificates of naturalization have been issued, and whose oaths of allegiance have been registered at the Home Office during 1918.

Re-admissions to British nationality total 301, composed of 10 males and 291 females, many of the latter being presumably women who have married aliens and are still resident in this country. Two certificates have also been issued to a man and a woman already naturalized in British Dominions.

A total of 236 new certificates have been issued to people from continental countries; 131 males and 11 females come from Russia, but of these 100 men have served in his Majesty's forces. In all 133 men out of 211 males in this section have been in British uniform. The only enemy country to appear in the list is the Ottoman Empire with one woman. Foreign countries apart from European account for 25 males and eight females, including 11 men who have been in the forces. The full totals are 247 males and 325 females, with a grand total of 572.

The certificates of naturalization of 17 male persons were revoked, their nationality being:—Austrian, 1; German, 12; Russian, 2; Swiss, 1; and no nationality, 1. The Austrian is Ignatius Timothy Tribich-Lincoln.

AUTHORS OF WAR COMMISSION

CATEGORIES OF CRIME

The Commission ov the Responsibility of the Authors of the War and on the Enforcement of Penalties have submitted their report at a plenary sitting of the Peace Conference. This report is a lengthy one, dealing with:

(1) The responsibility of the authors of the war.

(2) The facts as to breaches of the laws and customs of war committed by the forces of the German Empire and their Allies on land, on sea, and in the air during the present war.

(3) The degree of responsibility for those offences attaching to particular members of the enemy forces, including members of the general staffs and other individuals, however highly placed.

(4) The constitution and procedure of a tribunal appropriate for the trial of those offences.

(5) Any other matters cognate or ancillary to the above which may arise in the course of the inquiry and which the Commission finds it useful and relevant to take into consideration.

ORIGIN OF THE WAR.

The first chapter of the report deals with the responsibility of the authors of the war. The Commission, having examined a number of official documents relating to the origin of the world war and to the violations of neutrality and of frontier which accompanied its inception, "has determined that the responsibility for it lies wholly upon the Powers which declared war in pursuance of a policy of aggression, the concealment of which gives to the origin of this war a character of a dark conspiracy against the peace of Europe. This responsibility rests, first upon Germany and Austria; secondly, on Turkey and Bulgaria. The responsibility is made all the graver by reason of the violation of the neutrality of Belgium and Luxemburg, which Prussia had herself guaranteed. It is increased with regard to both France and Serbia by the violation of their frontiers before the declaration of war."

CRIMINAL ACTS OF ENEMY.

The Commission has drawn up a list of 32 different categories of crime perpetrated by enemy belligerents and it comments thus upon that list:—

It constitutes the most striking list of crimes that has ever been drawn up, to the eternal shame of those who committed them. The facts are established. They are numerous and so vouched for that they admit of no doubt and they cry for justice.

The list is as follows:—

(1) Murders and massacres; systematic terrorism.
(2) Putting hostages to death.
(3) Torture of civilians.
(4) Deliberate starvation of civilians.
(5) Rape.
(6) Abduction of girls and women for the purpose of enforced prostitution.
(7) Deportation of civilians.
(8) Internment of civilians under inhuman conditions.
(9) Forced labour of civilians in connexion with the military operations of the enemy.
(10) Usurpation of sovereignty during military occupation.
(11) Compulsory enlistment of soldiers among the inhabitants of occupied territory.
(12) Attempts to denationalize the inhabitants of occupied territory.
(13) Pillage.
(14) Confiscation of property.
(15) Exaction of illegitimate or of exorbitant contributions and requisitions.
(16) Debasement of the currency, and issue of spurious currency.
(17) Imposition of collective penalties.
(18) Wanton devastation and destruction of property.
(19) Deliberate bombardment of undefended places.
(20) Wanton destruction of religious, charitable, educational, and historic buildings and monuments.
(21) Destruction of merchant ships and passenger vessels without warning and without provision for the safety of passengers or crew.
(22) Destruction of fishing boats and of relief ships.
(23) Deliberate bombardment of hospitals.
(24) Attack on and destruction of hospitals ships.
(25) Breach of other rules relating to the Red Cross.
(26) Use of deleterious and asphyxiating gases.
(27) Use of explosive or expanding bullets, and other inhuman appliances.
(28) Directions to give no quarter.
(29) Ill-treatment of wounded and prisoners of war.
(30) Employment of prisoners of war on unauthorized works.
(31) Misuse of flags of truce.
(32) Poisoning of wells.

The conclusions of the Commission on the criminal acts of the enemy are:—

(1) The war was carried on by the Central Empires, together with their allies, Turkey and Bulgaria, by barbarous or illegitimate methods in violation of the established laws and customs of war and the elementary laws of humanity.

(2) A Commission should be created for the purpose of collecting and classifying systematically all the information already had or to be obtained, in order to prepare as complete a list of facts as possible concerning the violations of the laws and customs of war committed by the forces of the German Empire and its allies, on land, on sea, and in the air in the course of the present war.

CANON OF WESTMINSTER AND OBJECTORS.

About 200 members of the Royal Society of St. George attended the afternoon service recently held at Westminster Abbey, where seats had been specially reserved for them in Poets' Corner. They were distinguishable from the other members of the congregation by the buttonholes of red and white roses which they wore.

The preacher was Dr. E. W. Barnes, Canon of Westminster and Master of the Temple. They ought, he said, to study the unsatisfactory public conditions which had arisen during the war. Two examples of what he meant were provided by our treatment of conscientious objectors and the position in Egypt. Among the conscientious objectors were true patriots whom they ought not to punish for having the courage to act according to their consciences. With regard to Egypt we ought not to think of methods of repression.

During the recent strike of railwaymen in Danzig, the citizens of that town awoke one morning to find the following poster displayed in large type at various conspicuous positions:—

"Wives, although your husbands have gone mad, you are sane, at any rate. If we do not work we shall have no thing to eat, so if your husbands, instead of working, collect together in the house or on the streets, take a wet mop and hit them over the head with it!

"One who has had a touch of the mop."

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

TO SIGN, OR NOT TO SIGN?

Who can account for the attitude of the German Press in connection with the issues of Peace Conference? All newspapers infer that the terms will be very severe, many of them stating that they will be far too violent to accept, and in consequence, their valuable space is being utilised in idle dissertations upon the developments which must inevitably accrue from any obstinacy. It is merely a confession of guilt, for nobody can doubt that the terms will be indeed strict, as perforce they must be, if justice is to be done to those who have made such sacrifices during the past four years.

These dissertations might have proved far more valuable in July, 1914, had they been made coolly and thoughtfully. But this was not the case. Instead, they preferred to rush headlong into the conflict with the hopes that sheer might, or blood and iron as they themselves term it, would solve the problem in the surest and speediest manner. Sure it certainly has been, if not speedy; but the surety is neither of their making nor is it in accordance with their desires.

For them, it is now too late. Their fate, whatever form it may take, has already been settled by others, and consent is, more or less, useless and unnecessary. Signatures are to a great extent mere ornaments, and must be treated as such and carefully guarded against any possibility of breaking.

Light-minded Cavaliers.

The Vorwärts says: "We want to sign an honest peace and not be compelled to put a signature to a sham one, a contract which cannot be fulfilled. Neither have we any desire to act as light-minded cavaliers who promise everything and maintain nothing.

"The value and durability of the contract will depend, not upon what is written at the end, but upon what is written in the contract itself. Contracts which are contrary to reason and possibility will be overthrown by the power of reality. Signatures by which a people pledge their own destruction will be effaced by history. To search for the shortest and most painless means of obtaining a real peace—which must come because humanity cannot live without it—is the task of the German Peace Delegation and of the German Government in the coming days so pregnant with possibility."

A Confession of Guilt.

In yesterday's issue we gave the impressions of one of the newspapers which advocates, more or less, a refusal of the Peace terms on the ground that these will be too violent to accept. A recent Berlin newspaper gives a somewhat different outlook, and gives vent to caustic comment on the attitude of the German Government. "The Government" it says, "has not made the confession of guilt which would have cleared the whole atmosphere. Instead, it has formed a Peace delegation with utter indifference to the fact that the Allies would prefer to make a peace of understanding with blank pacifists and socialists rather than with the people who voted the war credits. The interior has been conducted more or less according to the recipes of the old militarism, so much so that the Allies cannot credit the existence of a new spirit in Germany."

Free disposal of the Entente.

In conclusion the writer lays emphasis on the fact that the terms must be signed, because a refusal would merely result in "theoretically, the reappearance of war, and practically, as we are not able to make war, the surrender of Germany to the free disposal of the Entente. Imports would be stopped at once, and ports would be garrisoned by troops of the Entente. In the west the troops would advance about thirty kilometres and seize our best coal and iron districts, and in the course of another two months we should be compelled to beseech for the peace which we had refused, in order to save the country from complete starvation."

Refusal and Revolution.

"Some people" the writer says "think that if we were to refuse, revolution in the Allied countries would be the inevitable result. That is nonsense! The victorious countries, for the present, at least, are immune from Bolshevism.

"No truer word was ever spoken," to use words from one of our English Comedies. Not only are we immune from Bolshevism, but the lads who have recently left us are still possessed of that same glorious spirit of self-sacrifice which brought us victory, and would be only too eager to come to our aid should refusal on the part of Germany prove a reality.

Sound Spirit of Anglo-Saxons.

"In signing we shall at the same time make an appeal to the people," he remarks, "to the proletariats and pacifists of all countries, and also to the sound business spirit of the Anglo-Saxons. We shall begin a campaign, not of revanche, but of enlightenment for a true League of Nations and a real democracy.

"A wave of socialist-pacifist renewal is passing over the world and it will carry us along. It will help us to discharge again, the unbearable load now thrust upon us."

ANOTHER FORM OF EDUCATION.

1/4 CHESHIRE'S SCHEME.

We read in The Cologne Post that as part of their general education scheme, the 51st Bedfords have adopted the plan of sending parties of men with guides of the Education Staff, round the Cathedral, Churches, Museums, and other places of interest in Cologne. This indeed is an excellent plan, but we feel that some attention ought to be given to the cinema as a method of teaching. Of course, as the 51st Bedfords say, it is always the best to show the men the real thing, but it is very often impossible to do this. Take for example a visit to the Zoo. Here you simply see the animals, birds and reptiles, but you learn little of anything of their habits or natural surroundings. It is in such cases that the cinema proves itself to be such a valuable asset, for to-day there are thousands of films showing practically every specimen of bird and animal life in its natural element. Then again, a touring party only see the parts where they actually visit, whereas the cinema brings the whole world before you like a picture book.

For several weeks a scheme of education by cinema has been in operation with the 1/4th Bn. Cheshire Regt. at Hersel and has proved itself a great success from every point of view. Arrangements are made so that each company has at least three hours education per week in the cinema, where special education films are shown. It is hoped that in a short time each company will have six hours per week in the cinema, this being impossible at present owing to the scarcity of suitable films.

Among the films which have been shown lately at the 1/4th Cheshire's cinema are "The Power of Electricity," "Chemistry," "Birds of Prey," "Horticultural," "Pests," and "What the Eye does not see." It only requires a glance at the titles and the educational value can be immediately perceived. 2/Lt. Jacques, the Education Officer, will be pleased to hear from any persons who possess films of any educational value.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

The Editor, in publishing letters from Correspondents, will use his own discretion, and if necessary, limit the publishing of correspondence on any subject whatever. It must be understood, however that he is not responsible for the views stated.

All communications for this column should be brief and to the point, and preference will be given to those which bear the writers' signatures for publication. No letter will be published unless accompanied by rank name, and unit of sender, which are needed for the purpose of reference.

Many letters of a perverse nature have reached the office, and the Editor wishes to point out that these only cause waste of time both to the writer and the Editor himself. Letters of this nature will not be published.

PARADE GROUND INDIVIDUALS.

AND "PAMPERED PEKINGESE DOGS."

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

When I entered the mess this evening — Before going any further I'd better explain that, as the only Englishman in a Scottish Mess, I have been christened "Harry Lauder," and am the final Court of Appeal in all disputes on the respective merits of Aberdeen, Edinburgh, and Glasgow. (May I trespass on your space, Mr. Editor, to point out that I have put these three names in alphabetical order, and not necessarily in the order of merit.)

To resume, — When I entered the mess this evening the R.S.M. put down his copy of the "Cologne Post" and fixed me with a baleful glare, as I took off my belt and bayonet and hung them on a peg. The other three inmates paused in an animated comparison of the drainage systems of Hilden and Gourock to watch me as I picked up a letter from home, and sat down in a chair. In a silence that was deafening, as cotton wool in the ears, I opened the letter, and perused its contents. Before I finished I became conscious of an extreme chilliness in the atmosphere, and chancing to look towards the billiard table I noted that its green baize was covered over with hoar frost. They waited patiently till, having finished the letter, I folded it and put it in my pocket, then the R.S.M. in a deliberately casual voice — the kind of voice that the counsel for the prosecution adopts when about to extract a fatal admission from a witness in a murder trial, said:— "Ye'll be havin' mair'n one name aae doot?" Wondering whether I had been recommended for the M.M., or whether my demobilization papers had come through, I answered by giving him my full name, offering in addition details of birth, religion, social position, number of times inoculated, and so on. Ignoring my generous offer, he picked up the "Cologne Post" once more, and glancing first at the heading of one of its columns he went on "Ye dinna ca' yersel Juvenis be onny chaunce?" On receiving my assurance that I considered the selection of names allotted me by my parents ample for purposes of nomenclature, he handed me the paper, bidding me, "Read yon," pointing to an article headed "Education, by Juvenis."

All that happened early this evening, and now in the stillness that follows the nightly curfew, while the air vibrates dully to the nose-music of the 'Herr' and his 'Gnadige Frau' in the next room as their twin souls seek those dreamland realms where tame sausages abound and sauerkraut grows wild, I sit down to express something of the pathetic mystification and surprise of my messmates over that unfortunate column of vituperative verbosity that appeared in to-day's Post, April 24th.

It happens that I, too, am an Educational N.C.O., yet in spite of this, I get on well enough with what Juvenis calls my 'compeers' in the Battalion. Why not? It is an understood thing that I have received my stripes for a branch of work that concerns them not at all. I do not attempt to interfere with their affairs, and they leave me to conduct my own, uninterrupted. In the Mess all differences of duty are ignored, and a man is accepted at his exact personal and social worth.

Juvenis is probably very young. It is the fashion of youth to exaggerate the petty annoyances of life. Like Don Quixote, they imagine each windmill on the way-side is flinging out its arms in wild derision at them, so that they must needs charge furiously, brandishing the toy sword of their childish wrath, and mouthing futile threats. They find a bitter sweetness in the attitude of Henley's "Prometheus" and face each days adventures with "My head is bloody, but unbowed" ringing a wild slogan in their adolescent minds.

This may explain the weird and wonderful outpourings of Sergeant Juvenis. Be that as it may, I cannot refrain from suggesting that, if our friend of the open mouth and friction-heated tongue will revert to simpler language and a less aggressive attitude, he will not find his bed so full of nettles.

While I am flattered by the inclusion of myself in the class he labels "People of Intelligence" I cannot willingly consent to be called a "Pampered Pekinese Dog," nor have I yet taken to referring to the other N.C.O.'s as "Parade Ground Individuals." I do not rate my own intelligence as of an essentially higher type than that of the R.S.M.; but rather shall we say, of a different type. He is satisfied—and so am I.

With regard to the proposition that we should wear badges of merit indicating the branch of work on which we are engaged, I suggest that with "People of Intelligence" the face should surely be a sufficient sign.

SERGEANT INSTRUCTOR.

LEARNING OF LANGUAGES.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.—Your article on "How to learn German" in the edition of April 23rd was very suggestive. The importance of repetition, in language learning, cannot be overestimated. Reading aloud, once one has mastered the correct pronunciation, is invaluable, as it trains at the same time both tongue and ear. Of great assistance, too, is to have someone else (preferably a native) read aloud to one—slowly at first, then more and more rapidly as one's power to understand increases. My belief is that, for this purpose, a woman is much better than a man, for a woman, as a rule, has more patience than a man, and has a clearer enunciation. Another excellent device is to write from dictation, as the practice trains the ear, teaches spelling, and tends to promote rapid and unconscious assimilation, since the attention is fixed, to a certain degree, on the writing. Every attempt should be made, when learning a language, to bring into operation as many senses as possible that the word and the idea may be connected without the medium of the corresponding English word. Not only ought one to visualize but, as far as possible, manipulate—take the object (if practicable) in one's hands, repeat the name while looking at it, simulate the movements, emotions, etc., implied in verbs (turning the head, walking, running, singing, etc.), for even when all these aids to perception and retention are used one will still have plenty of opportunity to exercise all the patience, persistance and pertinacity that one is likely to possess before one has quite mastered a language. As the writer of the article in your paper has said, those of us to-day in Germany have an excellent chance to acquire the language. It would be a case of almost criminal negligence if such a chance were not utilized.

LONDON BECOMING ITSELF AGAIN.

RACING AT EPSOM ONCE MORE.

Although there are still a large number of families in mourning, there are plentiful indications that the coming London "Society season," which opened up this week, will be far brighter and gayer than its three immediate predecessors.

People are returning from their Easter holidays, West-End blinds are being raised and the streets of Mayfair and Kensington are looking much fresher and brighter for the long-delayed spring cleaning and re-decoration which the outsides of their houses have undergone. The social programme for the week is full to overflowing, while the fact that the famous Derby Course re-opened on Tuesday, for the first time since 1915, promises great things to those people and functions which are connected with the great Sport.

MARCHED 1,000 MILES IN THREE MONTHS.

FEATS OF ENDURANCE.

The following is taken from the Daily Mail:—In a final despatch on the East African campaign, Lieut.-Gen. Sir J. L. Van Deventer describes how Gen. Von Lettow-Vorbeck, with 320 Germans and 2,500 black troops evaded pursuit until the armistice.

The chase was unique. Never before had operations on a large scale, with modern weapons, taken place within a few degrees of the Equator.

Seldom, perhaps, has one consecutive series of operations been conducted over such a vast area, extending from the Uganda Railway to the Zambesi, and from Lakes Kivu, Tanganyika, and Nyassa to the Indian Ocean.

In a civilised country, with good communications, the flighting life of von Lettow's force would have been short; but with the extraordinary advantages of evasion that the East African terrain gave to a commander of a compact and mobile force, independent of lines of communication and adept at living on the country, it is possible that the operations might have been prolonged.

To the troops that achieved and maintained the conquest of German East Africa unstinted praise is due. Not only were they opposed to an enemy composed of first-class fighting material, and specially trained to the peculiar conditions of African bush warfare, but they had also to contend with Nature in some of her most difficult aspects.

The vastness of the theatre of operations, the difficulties of supply, and the deadliness of many parts of the country to all but the native African greatly enhanced the hardships inseparable from any form of campaigning in the tropics.

The distances covered by the troops—one battalion marched 1,000 miles in 97 days—carried out in the heart of Africa, under a blazing sun or in torrential rain, were wonderful feats of endurance.

There are, perhaps, few fields of operation more trying than the bush, which in variably produces in time a feeling of depression in those who have been accustomed to more open warfare, while the sensation of continually groping in the dark tries the moral and physical courage of the bravest.

BOLSHEVISTS MURDER HOSTAGES AT MUNICH.

CITY RECAPTURED.

MAY DAY DEMONSTRATIONS AT COLOGNE.

ENGLISH PRISONERS IN RUSSIA.

MUNICH STORMED BY GERMAN TROOPS.

BOLSHEVISTS MURDER HOSTAGES.

In contrast to the cry of Wolff which we printed yesterday, describing Munich as a city of ironic smiles and Communist eccentricities, comes the news, also from Augsburg, that severe fighting is going on and that Prussian troops have entered the town from the North. The Red Army is rapidly disappearing, partly by desertion and partly by the action of the middle classes, who shoot at them from the houses.

It is announced that the Soviet Communist has carried out its threat to execute the hostages they held unless the Government troops were withdrawn. Among those murdered are Privy Councillor Doderlein, Professor Stuch, Prince Wrede, Prince and Princess Albert von Thurn and Taxis, etc.

The Soviet made one last attempt to forestall the inevitable. On the the 30th April they wireless ed the Government "The Soviet of Munich want to begin negotiations. Will stop fighting at once if the Government troops of Hoffmann do not enter the town." Hoffmann answered:— "Conditions unacceptable. Put down your arms. Every resistance useless."

Government troops have regained possession of the city.

BOLSHEVISTS NEARING THEIR DESERTS.

THE WRITING ON THE WALL.

Reuter learns authoritatively that the Russian peasants are in ever increasing numbers revolting against the Bolshevist Government, especially in the districts near the Volga and in central Russia.

In Saratoff martial law has been proclaimed in twenty-two districts. Large numbers of Soviet agents have been killed in Saratoff itself and in Smolensk. The Soviet Government at Moscow is seriously alarmed and is frantically appealing to the Proletariat to resist Koltschak's advance.

The strikes at Petrograd during March were most acute and were suppressed with the utmost brutality. In one instance jets of boiling water and steam were turned on to a body of congregated workmen.

29th April. — The Bolshevists are evacuating Petrograd and the Finlanders expect the fall of the capital will be accomplished within the next few weeks. — Reuter.

In North Russia local Finnish bands have crossed the frontier and cut the railway from Petrograd to Petrozavodsk.

The moral of the Allied contingents is greatly enhaced by the promise of speedy reinforcements. The Dwina has thawed all along its course South of our lines.

In Lithuania the Polish offensive continues successfully and there is an extensive ri ing in the interior of the country against the Bolshevist Government.

It is reported from Ukrainian sources on the Eastern front that the offensive at the Northern end of the line has been halted orwing to the thaw. Farther South the advance is continuing successfully, the Siberians being within one hundred miles of the Volga, approaching Orenburg, and the railway from there to Samara, Reuter.

NO PRISONERS IN GERMAN SALT MINES.

TRACING MISSING MEN.

In yesterday's Parliamentary Debate Mr. Winston Churchill stated that all inquiries which have been made into alleged cases of prisoners of war being hidden in salt mines in Germany have so far proved that such statements are unfounded.

If definite information is forthcoming, said the Secretary of War, he will be glad to have any cases carefully investigated.

It was also stated that a list containing the names of all British prisoners of war not accounted for has been sent to our military representatives at Spa and Berlin for communication to the German authorities. Accompanying the list is a demand that every man mentioned must be accounted for.

The list originally sent in February contained approximately 2,500 names. This had been reduced to 1,062 names by 23rd April.

ENGLISH BOLSHEVIST PRISONERS.

Negotiations are being conducted for the exchange of all British military and civilian prisoners at present in the hands of the Russian Bolshevists.

WEST INDIAN EARTHQUAKE.

A Severe earthquake is reported as having occurred on the 28th April at San Salvador. No details are yet to hand.

THE FIRST MAY THE FIRST IN COLOGNE.

LABOUR DAY.

History was made in Cologne on May Day. Never before has there been such a complete cessation of work. The town was absolutely at a standstill, yet the change from the normal to the abnormal was made without any fuss and throughout the day there was no disturbance of any kind, thanks to the simple regulations prescribed by the Military Governor, accepted in a spirit of common sense by the workers.

The feature of the day, which unfortunately was characterized by incessant rain, was the procession of workers, most of whom wore a red flower.

As a spectacle it was unimpressive, the thousands of umbrellas giving it a dismal aspect. But under the umbrellas one caught sight of stern set faces of men and women and noticed the dejected demeanour of girls and children. The words on the few banners carried afforded some clue to their thoughts. "Peace and bread," "Remember the sacrifices of the war," "Have confidence in the future," were some of the inscriptions, indicative of the motives which actuated the pedestrians.

Twe ve months ago such a procession would have been impossible in Cologne. The Rheinisch Zeitung, the socialist newspaper, draws a sharp contrast. "Political demonstrations," it says, "are for Cologne something unusual. The Prussian police regime, of disgraceful memory, used all street demonstrations as attack practice for its horsemen, charging with drawn swords and revolvers. And now, a street procession is allowed, granted by the British."

The manner in which the procession was protected by the English soldiers, was a matter of universal praise. No one was allowed to break through the ranks and the utmost endeavour was made to smooth the passage of the procession, which numbered perhaps between twenty and thirty thousand people.

"La Marseilleise" was sung en route.

PARIS.

In Paris things were somewhat more lively. In spite of the prohibition, demonstrators made an attempt to reach the Place de la Concorde, and in spite of a strong guard, succeeded. Two policemen were injured, as were four others in the Quartier Latin. Disturbances also took place on the Place de la Republique and the Place de l'Opera, numerous casualties being sustained and many arrests made.

AMERICA.

In America demonstrations held in various cities resulted in several minor encounters with the authorities. A number of soldiers and sailors in New York threatened to storm a meeting in Madison Square but were dissuaded by the police.

A riot started in Boston, when the police tried to lower a red flag carried by the demonstrators. Over a hundred arrests were made and several persons injured by stray shots.

At Chicago the police broke up a procession which had been prohibited and arrested the ring leaders.

ENGLAND.

In England Sylvia Pankhurst was the only disturber of the peace.

MAKING THE BEST OF IT.

Leipzig says that its annual fair was a great success. Seven thousand firms exhibited and in spite of traffic difficulties visitors attended from all parts of Germany and surrounding countries.

On account of labour conditions, however, the exhibitors, though anxious to take orders, offered no guarantee in the rather important matters of price and delivery.

No English orders were booked.

CANADA DECLINES TITLES.

Ottawa. 30th April. — A special Committee of the Dominion House of Commons decided to-day to report against the conferring of further knighthoods on Canadians resident in Canada. DELVILLE WOOD MONUMENT TO SOUTH AFRICANS.

A Royal Commission has been appointed to enquire into the economic position of agriculture, to ascertain how best it can be encouraged and enable the payment of reasonable wages to labourers to be made.

WAR TIME MARRIAGES AND DIVORCE.

TREMENDOUS LIST.

Referring to the frequency with which wartime marriages are followed by divorce proceedings, Mr. Justice Coleridge, in the Divorce Court yesterday stated that he had tried some thousand cases since December last. There still remained a tremendous list unheard and additions were constantly pouring in.

In the Divorce Court yesterday Captain Geoffrey H. Miller was granted a decree nisi against his wife, the co-respondent being Mr. Eugene Goossen, Jr., connected with the Beecham Opera Company.

Mr. Charles George Trigg, the well-known jockey, also obtained a decree, the co-respondent in this case being Captain Percy Walter Kippax.

BOMBS IN THE POST.

GHASTLY SCHEME.

Washington post office officials report the discovery in the mails of seventeen infernal machines addressed to prominent officials, including two Cabinet Ministers. The Mayor of New York, Mr. J. D. Rockfeller and Pierpont Morgan.

The discovery was accidentally made, the packages containing the bombs being detained because they were insufficiently stamped, enabling the postal inspectors to discover their true character. It is feared that many similar packages have been delivered to the addressees.

It is known that some have been delivered to officials at San Francisco and elsewhere, fortunately without injuring anybody, but one package consigned to Ex-Senator Hardwick exploded injuring his wife and maid. The bombs were sent from New York, the packages bearing forged labels of well-known department stores.

GOVERNMENT OFFICIAL SENT TO PRISON.

A man who had been in prison and afterwards became an official in the Ministry of Munitions, was sentenced at the Old Bailey yesterday to three years' penal servitude.

Well dressed, and giving the name Paul Bruce Clayton, he pleaded guilty to charges of embezzlement.

Sir Archibald Bodkin, prosecuting, said that since June of last year the prisoner had been employed in the aircraft production department of the Ministry of Munitions, at York House, Kingsway. His salary was £312 a year, rising to £400, and he dealt with the disposal of aero engines.

After arranging for the sale of a Rolls-Royce aero engine for £1,210, he obtained possession of the cheque which was sent in payment for the engine, and appropriated the money.

On his arrest the prisoner was recognised by a detective as Eric Octavius Giney, a man who had several previous convictions against him for various offences, and who was a fugitive offender from South Africa. Counsel said he understood the prisoner had served in the French Foreign Legion from July 1916 to January 1917.

MORE BUDGET PROPOSALS.

Mr. Austen Chamberlain in his Budget speech announced new taxation to the amount of 114 million pounds.

He said he considered Imperial preference to be the most important part of the Budget and hoped that the small beginning he is making will lead to Imperial trade developments of the utmost importance. The Preference on tobacco will be one-sixth; on wine, sixpence on the 1s. 3d. rate and one shilling on the 3s. 6d. rate, with an extra shilling per gallon on still wine and ninepence on the 2s.6d. or sparkling wine. The spirits rate on foreign spirits is to be increased by 2s.6d. per gallon.

Important changes in the death rates were announced. They are estimated to produce ten millions in the full year. There will be no change on estates valued at under fifteen thousand sterling, but graduated increases would be imposed ranging from five to six per cent on estates valued under twenty thousand pounds to forty per cent on estates of over two millions.

Wound Pensions and Demobilization Gratuities are exempted from Income Tax.

MINIMUM WAGES TO BE FIXED BY LAW.

The Prime Minister, in a letter to the Industrial Council, accepts the suggestion that Government should set up a commission with wide terms of reference to consider the proposal that minimum rates of wages in all industries should be made applicable by law. Mr. Lloyd George also says that he accepts the principle of recommendation as regards unemployment and expresses the hope that this is the first question to which the National Industrial Council will address itself.

He welcomes the proposal to set up a National Council, believing it will be of great value in assisting the Government to improve industrial conditions.

MISSING R.A.F. OFFICER SAFE.

The missing airman, Lieut. W. S. Mars R.A.F., whom it was thought had fallen into the Channel, had in point of fact turned back when in mid-Channel and endeavoured to return to Nivelles, but he was forced to land in a remote country district. He is alive and well.

PROSECUTED FOR STUNTING.

Flight Cadet Harry Willoughby Kay was charged before a District Court Martial yesterday with flying at Chester at a low altitude, contrary to standing orders, and causing damage to fourteen telegraph wires. Sentence will be promulgated.

At the Guards Chapel yesterday Capt. Ivan Cobbold, Scots Guards, was married to Lady Blanche Cavendish, daughter of the Duke of Devonshire.

PRIVATE SOLDIER SUES HIS COMMANDING OFFICER.

COMPLAINT AND COURT MARTIAL.

A case presenting many interesting features to all ranks is being heard in London. Circumstances alter cases and what is relevant to one case does not necessarily apply to all.

Is it right that a private soldier who makes a complaint against an officer should be regarded as a military delinquent for making that complaint?

That was the question that arose on Tuesday in a suit for slander brought against his late commanding officer by a private in the R.A.S.C., in civil life a solicitor, continued before Mr. Justice McCardie in the King's Bench Division after being begun at York Assizes.

The plaintiff was Mr. C. H. Heddon, solicitor, of Ripon and Harrogate, and the defendant Major G. C. Evans, from whom the plaintiff sought to recover damages for alleged false imprisonment, malicious prosecution, and slander. The slander was alleged to have had relation to Mr. Heddon's profession, the words complained of being:—

"I always knew you were a knave. Now I know you are a damned fool." On another occasion, it was alleged, Major Evans said to Mr. Heddon: "Will you never tell the truth?"

According to Mr. Heddon's case, he wrote to Major Evans complaining that Second-Lieut. Heylon had adopted a course of persecution towards him. He was arrested and charged with making a frivolous complaint to his commanding officer, and with conduct prejudical to good order and military discipline. He was summarily ordered 14 days' C.B. He received no reply to a letter he sent to Lieut.-Gen. Sir John Maxwell, in charge of the Northern Command. He issued a writ against Major Evans, who then had the charge altered from that of making a frivolous complaint to that of making a false accusation against an officer. This alteration was made, according to Major Evan's counsel, by the Northern Command Headquarters. On November 25 last, following a letter to the Treasury Solicitor making charges against Lieut. Haydon, Mr. Heddon was put under close arrest for 18 days.

Sir John Maxwell gave evidence at York Assizes that he did not receive the letter which Mr. Heddon declared he had sent to him.

Mr. Heddon, continuing his evidence yesterday, said that on November 6 the district registrar struck out the present action on the ground that it was impossible for a soldier to sue an officer. When he returned to barracks he was locked up on a charge of issuing a writ against his commanding officer and for making false accusations against an officer in a letter to the G.O.C. He was kept in close arrest until November 9, when he was placed under "open" arrest.

On November 21 he was given leave to come to London to appeal against the action being struck out. The appeal was succesful. When he returned to York he was locked up in the Fulford Detention Barracks, where he remained for 18 days in a cell.

Mr. Justice Mc Cardie said the warrant only provided for Mr. Heddon to be kept in the detention barracks for seven days unless a further order was made. "I must have some explanation from the governor of the prison, if necessary, why this man was detained for 18 days."

Mr. Tindal Atkinson said he proposed to show that Mr. Heddon was properly under arrest, not by virtue of the warrant but because trial by court-martial was pending.

In consequence of a letter which he wrote to the Secretary for War, said witness, he was released from prison on December 12 and sent to Bulford. He was demobilized on January 24. He admitted having taken French leave about six times, but on each occasion, witness said, he went to see his wife and child, of whom he was very fond. It was untrue that his wife objected to his visits. She died in February of this year.

Mr. Atkinson (to the plaintiff): Do you put it that from first to last Major Evans was actuated by malice against you? Plaintiff: Yes; he had no grudge against me, but he first punished me in his desire to shield Second-Lieutenant Heylon.

Mr. Justice McCardie remarked later: "The plaintiff's position as I understand it is this: that if a soldier makes a complaint against a commanding officer he ipso facto puts himself in the position of a man who might be treated as a quasi-criminal, because before the investigation is made he is put under close arrest in a prison cell. What becomes of the private soldier's right to complain if this procedure is recognised as permissible?"

Mr. Atkinson: It was thought that the most satisfactory way of dealing with this matter was to hold a court-martial.

Mr. Justice McCardie: Yes, but not against the soldier who makes the complaint. Is the man who makes a complaint to be forthwith taken into custody in order that an inquiry may be held to see whether the charge he makes is correct?

Mr. Atkinson said the court-martial was ordered by Brig.-Gen. Atkinson.

His Lordship: Was the court-martial to try the plaintiff for having sent in the letter?

Mr. Atkinson: That was one of the charges.

His Lordship: Is a man who makes a charge against a commanding officer always court-martialled?

Mr. Atkinson: I suppose the authorities have a right to decide which person is to be court-martialled.

His Lordship: Then there must be an investigation before the court-martial, and meanwhile the soldier remains in custody under close arrest?

Mr. Atkinson: I am not here to criticise or defend all that can be done under the King's Regulations or the Army Act. It may appear to many of us civilians to be a curious course of procedure, but it is quite another thing to say an action lies against a commanding officer because headquarters chooses to order a court-martial.

His Lordship: It does not seem consistent with what ordinary men would regard as justice that a private soldier who makes a complaint against an officer is forthwith taken into custody for having made the complaint.

No evidence being adduced by the plaintiff in support of his claim for slander, the issue was restricted to allegations of false imprisonment and malicious prosecution.

The hearing was adjourned.

NATIONAL AIR ROUTES.

FIRST CIVILIAN FLIGHT.

The first flight along one of the new National air routes was completed yesterday morning. Lieut. Ewins was the pilot and he took Mr. H. J. J. Thomas as a passenger, on the route from Filton, Bristol, to Hounslow.

Heavy fog delayed the start until about 10.30 a.m., and the journey was completed in fifty-eight minutes. The time taken was somewhat longer than had been anticipated, but this is explained by the fact that a violent storm was encountered which rendered it advisable to make a detour via Aylesbury and approach Hounslow from the North. The machine used was a Bristol Coupé.

VESSEL SINKS ON GOODWINS.

ALL HANDS LOST.

During a continuance of the gales the Deal life boat was called out last night to the assistance of a vessel burning distress signals in the Downs, but although the seas were searched no trace could be found of any vessel.

As the life boat was returning it was hailed by the Master of a ketch and rendered him assistance. The Master said that he also had seen the flares and actually heard the shouts of the crew, but could render no assistance. It is feared that the vessel has foundered with all hands.

SYLVIA BREAKS OUT AGAIN.

In connection with the May-day demonstrations in London, Sylvia Pankhurst, accompanied by twenty supporters, mostly women, marched from Hyde Park to Westminster. Being refused admittance they endeavoured forcibly to enter the House of Commons.

After a brief struggle Miss Pankhurst was marched off the police station. Several women attempted to effect her release, one of the being taken along, doubtless for company's sake, Sylvia being in disfavour with her mother.

NO MORE ARMY MULES TO BE SOLD.

By order of the War Office the sale of surplus Army horses and mules in the United Kingdom was directed to cease for the time being at the end of last week. No resumption of selling is likely to be made until the new census of animals in possession of the Army has been made and military requirements have been ascertained.

Between the signing of the Armistice and the 26th April, 88,772 horses have passed from military to civilian ownership in Great Britain for 3,320,028 pounds sterling.

Native prejudice against mules is shown by the fact that only 2,220 have been sold, realising 42,555 pounds sterling.

AGRICULTURAL SOLDIERS STANDING BY.

Orders have been issued to all commands in England suspending for a fortnight the recall of agricultural workers to the colours, pending consideration of the whole subject.

WHY THE PAPERS WERE LATE.

Yesterday morning an aeroplane carrying papers from London to Bournemouth crashed on the Portsdown Hills. The machine was badly damaged and the aviators, Capt. Saint and Capt. Greig, were severely shaken.

LANCASHIRE'S MILKLESS DAY.

There was no milk supply in Lancashire yesterday owing to the action of the milk producers. They struck in protest against the continuation of controlled prices.

A number of Liverpool hospitals were milkless.

ST. CECILIA FOR EMPIRE DAY.

Empire Day is to be celebrated in Hyde Park by a gigantic Imperial choir formed of members from all the Choral Societies in Greater London. It will comprise over ten thousand voices. The accompaniments will be played by the massed bands o the Guards.

IS IT PEACE?

The German delegates have passed through Cologne on their road to peace or war. The alternatives will be in their hands. The Allies are prepared for either.

The terms of peace must be drastic. After such a war as has been waged by land and sea it cannot be otherwise. Take only a few heads out of the many which suggest themselves to those who have conned over the history of the war, and the necessity of imposing a striking penalty upon the nations who provoked the struggle is as apparent as their identity.

What was the pretext for war? A demand by a great nation like Austria was made against a little state, Serbia, so stringent and humiliating that to the mouths of all men leapt the instant surmise "Austria wants war." By the counsels of England and of Russia, Serbia acceded to all these demands except in so far as they plainly infringed upon her right of self government, and endangered her existence. Russia, by acceding to this course, immolated her prestige on the altar of Peace. The sacrifice was vain. It is needless to follow the subsequent course of events. The world knew and knows that Austria would no more have dared to flout the conscience of civilized communities and the might of Russia without Germany at her back in this instance than she did in the case of Bosnia and Herzegovinia. Why she was instigated to do so is also apparent. Long years attributed to preparation, above and below ground, had brought to perfection the machinery with which the struggle was to be carried on by the central powers. The proofs of preparation have not ceased to come to hand to-day. They had strained their economic resources and tuned their people to a pitch at which they must vibrate with war, or break. Relax the strain — they could not. Russia was reorganizing, the longer service system of France was coming into play. England by all reports — not Lichnowsky's only — had domestic troubles which would keep her quiet.

Germany judged her opportunity, and miscalculated. She fell upon countries unprepared for war, it is true, but resolved to fight.

The war thus engineered and wrapped around with tissue pretexts, which the first breath of truth dissipated from the wicked form of outrage, began with the violation of Belgian territory. Another pretext — "Not kennt kein Gebot" ("Necessity knows no law") — there was no necessity and they knew it — with a promise "the injustice which we thereby do will we later make good' ("das Unrecht, das wir damit tun, werden wir wieder gut machen" — accompanied the violation. They acted up to the letter of the proverb by perpetrating on that stout little country, whose only offence was its patriotism, a series of crimes to which succeeded a vigorous exploitation and a long, oppressive occupation. The promise waits for fulfilment. They passed from Belgium to the devastation of France. They violated, on sea and by land, principles and conventions of International Law to which they had solemnly agreed. They forced peaceful England to sacrifice millions of useful lives for the vindication of her honour, her self protection and the cause of freedom. They proclaimed principles and countenanced practices which were repugnant to civilization. Shutting, against the growing illumination from the New World on the doings of their government, eyes which did not wish to see so long as any chance of a successful exit from the predicament of their own creation existed, they protracted the misery of war for four long years in countries other than their own. Then when America forsook admonition for drastic action, and the French and British, and then the Belgian, armies set to work to stab and to strike, and finally flung into irrevocable defeat Hindenburg's disillusioned battalions, the long-delayed repentance came or seemed to come. No longer on foreign soil, but on the Rhine and over it, would the havoc of war be let loose. "Give me my ducats," they said with Shylock, "and let me go." Well, they got the armistice November the 14th 1918, and fortunate they were to get back with that, and now it is a question of the ducats.

They cannot give us back our dead, they cannot heal our wounded, they cannot restore the commercial prosperity and thriving industries they have disrupted — they cannot put back the clock to 1914. All they can do is to pay damages, and even then they cannot, by any possibility, pay the whole bill. To refuse to pay the mere tithe which is to be imposed upon them, and threaten, if they deem the terms too severe, to take refuge in the anarchy which their refusal will cause, is, in view of the facts, little short of an impertinence, and an act which will recoil most heavily upon the people whose interests the peace delegates bear in charge. What is the course in civil law when a defendant refuses to pay the damages to which he is condemned? The plaintiff takes in execution his assets and proceeds to make the best use of them he can to liquidate the debt, and, in so doing, he pays little heed to the ultimate consequences to the man who has refused to pay. Do the Germans wish these consequences to follow?

The Allies are not the hard taskmasters which, to judge from its utterances and its arts, victorious Germany would have been. Contrast the treatment of the inhabitants of Belguim and Northern France with the regime which obtains to-day in Cologne, if you doubt it. The Allies do not wish for the ruin of Germany. It is their object and their interest to prevent it. But they have a duty to exact reparation from the wrongdoers for the injured, and to take, as far as it is possible, securities for the future. For this reason the penalties exacted must be exemplary, but they will not be vindictive.

SHELL-SHOCK IN____

All night they crooned high overhead
As the skies are over men:
I lay and smiled in my cellar bed,
And went to sleep again.

All day they whistled like a lash
That cracked in the trembling town:
I stood and listened for the crash
Of houses thundering down.

In, in they came, three nights and days,
All night and all day long:
It made us learned in their ways
And experts on their song.

Like a noisy clock, or a steamer's screw,
Their beat debauched the ear,
And left it dead to a deafening few
That burst who cared how near?

We only laughed when the flimsy floor
Heaved on the shuddering sod:
But when some idiot slammed a door —
My God!

THE DOM — ONCE MORE.

It is the fate of very big people to attract attention and provoke comment as to their make and appearance, and the Dom of Cologne is certainly a very large person whatever you may think of him. He has not the sort of build which brings delight; but as the Irish say "he is a grand fat gentleman," and he has his points. Some of these have been noted in the very temperate article in the Kölnische Zeitung replying to various criticisms of the great structure.

Some one writing in The Cologne Post complained that the cathedral had not been built to "one unique plan." No, but it fulfils this somewhat pleonastic demand as much as most churches. If you study the history of ecclesiastical buildings, whether in England, France or Germany, you find that the greater number of them, and even those in which there reigns a real unity, so far from being built to a unique plan, have in some points deviated largely from their original aim or been in part destroyed and consequently rebuilt in another style. Others have never achieved at all the form which their beginnings demanded, and yet are beautiful. On the other hand of the few which have been built d'un seul jet by no means all have reached the goal of beauty. Consider in this light Beauvais and the Church of Bron.

Indeed the long drawn history of the Dom furnishes an example of a building which has proceeded slowly, and, through long gaps of time, persistently towards the completion of a consistent design. The present structure was begun in 1248. Cologne the old oppidum Ubiorum, a "colony" of the Romans, had then for long been a centre for artificers and craftsmen and possessed many churches, some of which are standing to-day and are in many ways more interesting than the Domkirche. It however constituted a new departure — a break from the Roman tradition and a frank acceptance of the French Gothic architecture. The most earnest observer must notice that the style of the Cathedral is absolutely different from the old churches which are scattered around it through the town. The men to whom this innovation was due was one Gerhard von Rile, a well-known master-builder of the day, who is said to have worked upon the cathedral of Amiens. He it was who planned and worked out in stone the main lines of the choir, the ambulatory, and the seven apsidal chapels. How far he carried up the actual building I do not know, but from the unity of the whole eastern scheme, the similarity of the cutting and laying of the stones, and the careful limitation throughout of the ornament in a age which had at its command a rich variety of decoration and mouldings, it is apparent that his mind, if not his personal presence, dominated the construction of all the edifice to the east of the transepts.

A large number of churches, it is rumoured in this world — it may be merely propaganda — owe their existence to the Devil, who apparently with an eye on the ostentation and pride which inflate the breasts of priest and prelate when they view the aspiring splendour of the piles wherein they officiate, thinks it a good bargain to sell plans and models of great buildings for a mere architect's soul. Most assuredly did the Prince of Darkness twice offer a model of the Dom to Master Gerhard, and had the second time rather a scurvy trick played on him by that worthy, who, having grabbed the plans took out a cross and dared the disgruntled demon to come on. Satan accepted defeat and slunk away, but ever since has played a mean game for low stakes, hindering work and inciting critics.

To Master Gerhard succeeded Master Arnold, and his son Johannes, who built the upper portions of the choir and that intricate and well-designed net-work of buttresses which has held in place for some 600 years the great mass of masonry and the slender shafts which at wide intervals spring to support the heavy stonework of the vaults great builders these who carried to triumphant heights the principles of the pointed arch and poising counter-thrust which came to them from France. No mean architect was Michael who about 1350 took up the task. In his time the southern transept was begun and the northern was well in hand. In the middle of the 14th century the foundations of the northern tower were laid and before that century closed the side aisles of the nave had been carried up to their present height and roofed in. The south tower was in 1437 so far advanced that the bells could be hung in it. The northern tower about the same time or a little later reached the level of the walls of the nave.

Then came a long pause. The Empire was poor and religious enthusiasm sought other outlets than in buildings. The crane which had been erected on the south tower in the 16th century stretched its gaunt arm for some 200 years in unheeded supplication for new loads of stone in order that it might carry out its mission. An observer standing on the S.E. side of the present cathedral square in the first quarter of the 19th century would have seen the fretted pile of the choir rising conspicuously, and perhaps some indication of the southern transept. Some 200 yards from the choir isolated as it were and stunted to one-third of its present height stood the southern tower, its untrimmed top occupied by the melancholy symbol of the inert protesting crane. Between the tower and the choir could here and there be discovered, between the row of low houses now cleared away, the southern wall of the nave neither of sufficient height nor continuity to link together the two forlorn masses of masonry.

The people of Cologne could not for ever tolerate such a derelict in their midst, and in 1842 after some years of preparation the first stone of the new construction was laid — and in August 1880 the magnum opus was accomplished.

The original design for the whole cathedral was probably Master Gerhard's and that only contemplated, it is said, the erection of three bays for the nave and lower towers for the western front. It is however to the time of the Arnolds and of Michael that the final plans must be attributed. These definitely broke with the horizontal scheme of the French school of the 13th and early 14th century and threw the emphasis of the structure into vertical lines. It was those plans of the early 14th century which controlled the building down to its completion. It would have been a pity had the dead hand of the 14th century guided the living effort of the XIXth too closely, given that there was genius among the architects of the later date, and that the determination to continue did not coincide with the hard rigidity of the Gothic revival. That latter condition, however, ensured the adherence to the original plans. Zweiner who had the most prolonged association with and the greatest influence upon the completion of the cathedral, was deeply erudite in Gothic forms, but was a purist without great powers of selection or imagination. This accounts for the stereotyped character of this work, but it had the effect of securing unity.

THE TALE OF A SNAIL.

Once upon a time there was a little boy, big-eyed and not too good, who learnt quite a lot of useful things, even at the youthful age of four.

Of course, like all children, he also learnt nursery rhymes and quaint fables dear to the hearts of all little ones, and he, like the rest, being born with Faith, could at times have been seen running after the birds with a handful of salt, or chanting in pretty baby tones to a ladybird to "Fly away home."

Again he would stand in front of a dirty, grimy old snail on a wall and adjure it to put out it's horns or in modern terms, "get a move on" to the command of "Peppercorn, Peppercorn," and if by chance the snail obeyed, his joy knew no bounds.

Time passed, our little boy grew to manhood and even took to himself a wife, and prospered.

Then suddenly a great calamity happened. A big war broke out and our little boy, though now a man, was still inquisitive, and never having seen a war, wanted to join in it. But his Country said "Wait a little." And so he waited, until one day his country came to him and said: "If you are still of the same mind, come along." So he said good-bye to his wife and family and went away cheerily and became a soldier.

He didn't mind soldiering. It wasn't nearly as exciting as he expected, and he saw a lot more mud than he thought the earth contained. Still, he was lucky, and when one fine day fighting stopped — though Peace was not yet — he was little the worse for his war experience.

A few days after this, he was walking quietly in an old-world garden, not entirely destroyed by the war, and — is it surprising — he thought of home.

Suddenly, in a shady corner of the garden, he espied a whole cluster of grimy old snails, and in a flash his mind reverted instantly to the days of his childhood, and unconsciousl he murmured "Peppercorn, Peppercorn."

To his surprise one of the snails put out it's horns.

Could it be true? Was this pretty fable of his childhood real? Or — No, his grown-up brain refused to credit it. Yet faith is hard to kill, and so, twixt faith and unbelief, our soldier man picked the snail off the wall and decided to try an experiment.

That night he fixed it up comfortably amongst the ivy outside his window, and then went to bed.

But he couldn't sleep. He was thinking: "Can a snail hear, and if it can hear, can it tell one sound or one word from another?"

It was late when he fell asleep. In the morning, after breakfast, he looked at the snail. There it was, as he had placed it, and looking quite contented.

He decided to try his test at once, and putting his lips close to the grimy shell, he uttered "Demobilisation." Not a move. He tried again and again, but without success.

For weeks he persevered, until one bright day, over two months later, what was his delight to see the snail push one of its horns a little way out of the shell. Breathlessly he waited, and then again pronounced the magic word, whereupon the snail withdrew at once into it's shell.

Still, he felt it was something — a beginning at any rate — and he persevered for days and weeks, but without further success.

Then one morning, as he sat in front of the window, his eyes fell on the photograph of his child and he began dreaming of home, and of his own childhood.

Catching sight of the snail above his head, he instinctively uttered the words "Peppercorn, Peppercorn," and, wonder of wonders, what do you think happened?

Why, the old snail above him shot both it's horns out with such a jerk that it nearly shook itself off the wall.

The surprise recalled our soldier man to his present surroundings and, remembering his test, he hastily uttered the word "Demobilisation."

And then what do you think the old snail did?

Why, it actually winked twice at our soldier man, and, with a quiet chuckle, went back in it's shell.

A. O.

AN ENGLISHMAN.

There is a name I bear, and prize it still Above the choicest honours kings can give;
Nor knew that it could mean so much until
Drawn by the War on foreign soil to live.

Call it our insularity and pride of race —
Yes, and 'tis true, for pride of race we own —
But pride like this will never bring disgrace
On what our great forefathers handed down.

What words, then, will describe an Englishman?
Courteous and gentle, tender towards the weak;
Strong against cruelty; who both will and can
Strike in a righteous cause as well as speak.

One to be trusted women to protect;
One whom the children love to join their play;
Yet 'neath whose careless manner men detect
A bull-dog grip that naught on earth can sway.

This is an Englishman! aye, all this and more—
You of the greatest race the earth has known,
So mindful of the heroes gone before,
Hand down your title stainless to your son.

E.F.F.

She was much interested in prison reform, and was visiting a large prison one day. "Don't any of your friends come to see you on visiting days?" she asked of a big burly ruffian. "Nom," responded the former burglar. "They're all here with me."

The choir is of course with its extreme elegance (hateful but necessary word) and great variety of local plant forms — one of our critics was a little as astray as to that — by far the finest part and is indeed worthy to rank near the greatest of Gothic structures. But a word of praise is due to the restraint and faithfulness as well as perseverance which brought to a fitting close in the XIXth century a building which thus finished is a striking contribution to the completed beautiful things of the world.

A word or two more. The spires are correct German Gothic elaborations, but if they were not there irritating the sky with their fussiness the exterior of the Dom would to some of our minds not suffer. A feature which should be remarked is the prolongation of the nave into the spaces below the towers — part of the old plans and an architectural achievement which adds immensely to the effect of the interior. As to the windows there are some on the north side of the nave which are good, and some in the choir, especially two in the middle, which have some beautiful bits of glass. Anyone who has a desire for exercise, colour, and a true view of the proportions and structure of the cathedral should climb to the galleries.

"YE MERRIE MUFFINS."

LARGE DUREN AUDIENCES DELIGHTED.

The "Merrie Muffins" Concert Party, who recently performed at the Queen's Hall before Prince Albert and afterwards at Croydon, and who appeared with striking success at Abbeville and Aix la-Chateau, are at present at Duren and will shortly be seen at Cologne.

By their visit, the opportunity is presented to the troops on the Rhine of enjoying a splendid entertainment such as can rarely be found outside the leading music halls.

The chief performers of the troupe belong to the 51st Brigade quota of the 17th Division Concert Party.

In the first part of the opening programme submitted at Duren, there were solo items, choruses, amusing little skits, and concerted numbers. "Muffins" Coutes revealed a fine bass voice in his singing of "Glorious Devon"; "Muffins" Wilson and Rae the baritone and tenor vocalists respectively gave capable renderings of "Cavalier" and "Bachelor Gay" and Muffin Lonsdale took the leading part of the concerted items.

An outstanding feature of this part of the programme was the work of "Muffins" Teddie and Davy two female impersonators. The singing of "Annie Laurie," by the latter, was a particularly fine effort. In a short sketch "The Boy" Lieut. Reg. C. Matthew, the leading "Muffins" performer, gave a glimpse of his prowess as an actor, which revealed itself in striking manner in the three act farce "Fair and Warmer," submitted later.

The audience was afforded a feast of fun during the latter part of the evening. "Fair and Warmer" provides as good a tonic for the audience as do the cocktails administered to the retiring and innocent, but immensely humorous Mr. Bartlett, in whose flat the play is enacted. In the part of Mr. Bartlett, Lieut. Matthew excelled. His work is that of a real artiste who has nothing to learn in the histrionic art. The Blanche ("Blanny") of "Muffin" Teddie was a wonderful impersonation of a vivacious young lady, a little gidy, whose efforts to be "compromised" evoked much laughter. "Muffin" Davy also assumed a female role, and as Laura Bartlett contributed in great measure to the successful production of the sketch. "Muffin" Runacres was distinctly amusing as "Tessie" while "Muffins" Rae and Lonsdale as Phil Evans and Jack Wheeler respectively were other members of the caste who both played their parts admirably.

The "Muffins" will be in Duren for another week or more with performances of "The Naughty Wife" and "As you Were." A fine orchestra under "Muffin" Runacres assists the party, "Muffin" Matthison taking the place at the piano.

Much of the success of the entertainment was due to the efforts of Lieut. Keeley, of the 51st Gordons, who was in charge of the booking arrangements.

JAZZ AT BRUHL.

"THE FANCIES" CONCERT PARTY.

By way of a change, the "Fancies" gave an amusing "Jazz-Band" performance on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, in their Theatre in Burgerstrasse, Bruhl. This was organised by their "Rag-time" Artiste, Pete Davis. The Band consisted of bass, drum, cymbals, piano, petrol tins and other things. It proved a great success and was an excellent finale. As a result of the tremendous success, they are producing another on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. The programme also includes the name of Pte. Tures and other excellent artistes.

SUCCESS FOLLOWS SUCCESS.

The "Iddy Umpties" are following up their success at Meil on Monday night. On Tuesday and Wednesday they gave two splendid performances at Ollheim and Ludendor to the men of the 104 Brigade R.F.A. and Flying Corps. At each place they had a most enthusiastic reception and they were well repaid for coming out into the "desolate regions" by the cordial appreciation with which their show was received. Every item was excellent; but the concerted pieces "The three Tars," "Bells" and "The musical Orderly-Room" touched high watermark.

BOXING AT RIEHL.

3rd. MACHINE GUNNERS—MEDALS PRESENTED.

Last night the second Boxing Tournament since the move to Riehl, took place before a packed house. A full account will appear to-morrow. Medals for the Inter-Half-Company Football Competition were presented by Lt. Col. Cranston, D.S.O. "D" Company were the victors.

Rain made impossible the Competition game fixed for Thursday, between "C" and "D" but it brought prosperity to the Battalion game of "Housey-housey" in the evening when 25 marks were added to the Sports' and Messing fund. One unlucky man thought his card must have been bombed as there wasn't a "house" on it. His language was much more eloquent than our simple words, and I imagine he came from London.

The Corporals' Mess and Recreation room is an accomplished fact. The white table cloths have been followed by the hat-racks and demobilization is not nearly so popular now.

The sergeants' team for Sunday versus Officers reads:— Hould; Smith and Wheeler; Ellis, Gibson and Harris; Rowe, Labpsley, Webb, Lewiss and Ralphs. Officers leave their selection till to-day.

AUSTRALIA v. ENGLAND.

TENNIS TEST TO-MORROW.

An interesting lawn tennis match will be played to-morrow at Purley Bury, when the Australian Imperial Forces Team will meet a strong six representing the Purley Bury Club. The visiting side will be selected from S. N. Doust, R. W. Heath, P. O'Hara Wood. A. B. Jones, R. Lycett, G. L. Patterson, and R. V. Thomas; while the Surrey club will select a team from A. D. Prebble, W. A. Ingram, C. P. Dixon, F. White, P. J. Oakley, C. A. Sedgwick, and P. Holt. The match will begin at 2.30 p.m., and the ground is close to Purley railway station.

"THE COLOGNE POST" CRICKET CUP: ENTER NOW.

PETER CHALLENGE CUP.

"B" COMPANY, "KOYLIES" AN EASY FIRST.

The first series of sports competitions for the Peter Challenge Cup has been concluded at Liblar by the 5th K.O.Y.L.I., "C" Coy being the first to gain the trophy, with a margin of 29½ points over the runners-up. As will be seen from the analysis below, the tournament comprised football (both codes) cross country running, boxing, and tug of war, and points were also awarded to the company providing the best Guard.

The presentation of the Cup was made by the donor in the Theatre at Liblar.

The Sporting Spirit.

At the outset, Capt. T.A.H. Oliphant, M.C., after a reference to the regret which was felt by all ranks at the departure of Lt. Col F.H. Peter, D.S.O., M.C., who recently handed over the Bn. to Col. H.E. Trevor C.M.G., D.S.O., explained that the cup had been given to encourage within the Battalion that spirit of sportmanship which had played no small part in the building of the Empire and which, after all, had enabled us to win the war.

Lt. Col. Peter, who was warmly received, congratulated "C" Coy. very heartily in winning the cup, which, he hoped, would always be an incentive to all to strive their utmost for the good of their companies. He referred regretfully to his parting with them, and expressed the conviction that the good name the "Blue Diamonds" now had would never be forfeited. He had very great pleasure in presenting the cup to the O.C. of the winning company.

Where Credit is due.

Lieut. G.H. Taylor M.C., M.M., as O.C. company, accepted the cup and expressed his gratitude to his officers, W. O's, N.C.O's and men for the zealousness with which they had applied themselves to the task of winning the cup. He also voiced his appreciation of the sportsmanlike way in which the competition had been fought, and paid a special tribute to "B" Coy for the splendid fight they put up. He could not conclude without saying that although he had the honour of accepting that cup, yet it was to Capt Oliphant, who commanded the Coy. until recently, that much of the credit for its success was due.

In conclusion, he declared that "C" Coy., having won the cup, meant to stick to it, and the Coy. which took it from them would have to fight hard for it.

The proceedings terminated with cheers to Lt. Col. Peter.

Analysis of Points.

Appended is the analyis of the points gained:-

	A Coy.	B Coy.	C Coy.	D Coy.

MULHEIM LEAGUE.

6th RAILWAY TELEGRAPH COMPANY v. 37th. MACHINE GUNNERS.

The above game was played on Wednesday, resulting after a hard and fast game in a win for the Machine Gunners by 3—1. At the start the play was mostly in the "Wires" half, Capt. Guyton finding the net after some excellent work by Capt. Kitchen. Play ruled even up to the interval, Capt. Nicholls the M.'s centre forward scoring the "deuce" with a fine shot.

The Wires started off the second half well, and after a good run down, their outside left opened up the scoring for them. Not to be outdone by the opposition, Lieut. Lovesay, the M.G's outside left, was responsible for registering their third goal ten minutes before time.

The play on both sides was good, among these most noticeable being Capt. Laing, the M.G's centre half, who showed up conspicuously throughout, not only for his play, but, as one spectator naively remarked, for his hair!

1st MACHINE GUNNERS v. 17th CHESHIRES.

Played at Florzheim on Wednesday. A fast and interesting game was witnessed, both sides showing clever footwork. After Lieut. Chandler hit the cross-bar, good headwork by Mc Culium placed Sergt. Tasher in possesion, who tricked both backs, finally beating the goalkeeper, giving the M.G. the lead prior to the interval. On resuming, play continued to be keen yet clean, and Lieut. Chandler increased the M.G. score, while Allen, for the Cheshires, reduced the lead after a bombardment of the M.G. goal. Before the close Cpl. Matthias and Jackson added to the M.G. total from corners, well placed by Lieut. Chandler and Scott respectively. Result:— 1st Bn. M.G.C. 4; 1/7th Cheshires 1.

AMATEUR OR PROFESSIONAL?

AMATEUR ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION'S DECISIONS.

"Any member of the Forces who competes for a money prize after Thursday last, will forfeit his amateur status." Such is a decision arrived at by the Amateur Athletic Association.

The same body also announces that members of the Forces who have previously competed in purely military events are automatically reinstated as from Thursday. Re-qualifications must be applied for, however, by any soldier who has competed for a money prize in any sporting events not exclusively confined to the Forces.

BOXING.

INTER-THEATRE OF WAR CHAMPIONSHIPS.

At Aldershot, on Thursday, the Inter-Theatre of War Boxing Championships were continued: The results are appended:

Middle-weight. (Officers) Final. Lieut. E.M. Richards, M.G.C., B.E.F. beat Lieut. L.T. Ricquette, 39th Mountain Battery, Egypt, on points.

Heavy-weight: Capt. V.A.D. Mc Lagan, 1 10 MiddlesexRegt., Mesopotamia, beat Lieut. J.T. Lang, 97th Infantry, Indian Army, Egypt. Welter-weight. Other ranks: Driver F. Housego, R.F.A., India, beat Pte. W. Bradley, K.O.Y.L.I., B.E.F. on points.

Middle-weight: Pte. W. Scroggins, Borderers, B.E.F., beat subconductor A. Begg, Supply Transport, Egypt.

Heavy-weight: Sergt. W. Flynn, Transport, A.S.C. (M.T.), Mesopotamia, scratched to Sapper H. Hardwick, R. E., Egypt.

BILLIARDS.

In the course of his 16,000 up match against Inman, Newman, who receives 2,000 start, on Thursday, made a break of 521. The closing scores were.

Newman, 12,380.
Inman, 11,604.

H.R.H. Prince Albert will distribute the prizes in connection with the Y.M.C.A. Sports Carnival at Stamford Bridge, on the 24th inst.

AIRMEN AT FOOTBALL.

OVERSEAS R.A.F. EASILY BEAT HOME R.A.F.

The R.A.F., Overseas defeated the R.A.F. England at Fulham, on Thursday, by 6—1. The expeditionary men were superior from the start to the finish. They threatened their opponents' goal frequently, although it was not until nearly half time that the first goal was scored.

Morris scored three of the goals, Monday two, and Bliss one. For the home team Pick was the scorer.

Early in the second half, the home defence went to pieces, and the overseas men were able to do practically what they liked.

LAWN TENNIS.

2nd ARMY AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIPS.

In the second round of the Amateur tennis championships at Queen's Club, on Thursday, Mr. Baerlin beat Capt. Nigel Haig three sets to nil.

RUGBY FOOTBALL RESULT.

Plymouth 11 pts.; New Zealand R. Naval Depot, 0.

ROYAL NAVAL, MILITARY AND AIR FORCE TOURNEY.

ALLIES TO TAKE PART.

The Peace Year Tournament, which opens at Olympia on 23th June, will be fully representative of the Navy, Army, and Air Force. In addition, arrangements are being made for our Allies to appear in some form in the programme.

Visitors to the Tournament will therefore have the opportunity of extending a welcome to detachments of other armies beside our own, who have borne a share in arriving at a righteous peace.

The reputation of the Tournament as a great military show is well known in most navies and armies, and it is peculiarly satisfactory that Allied Forces should wish to share in raising funds for British Service Charities, and to appear in London for that purpose.

GOHR GARRISON SPORTS.

"OLD BILL," "BERT" and "ALF" PRESENT.

Gohr was the scene of a splendid sports meeting organised by the 52nd Light Infantry and R.A.S.C. on Wednesday afternoon. The clerk of the weather being in agreeable mood, everything went with a swing. Just before the start, everyone was surprised to see the "Bystander" heroes, Old Bill and his pals Bert and Alf, walk across the field. They calmly took charge of the side shows and also went in for some of the events, Alf putting up a fine show in the ½ mile, he ran in his "get up" and came in second, deserving the spectators' cheers. The characters were taken by Sergt. A. E. Hazell, "Old Bill". Sergt A. W. Hazell, "Bert"; and Sergt. Pounds "Alf." The meeting was organised by Capt. Whitfield, Capt. Horley and the R.S.M. who did their work well.

The winners were as under:

100 yds: 1, Lce. Cpl. Connell; 2, Bgr. Jeffries; 3, Lce. Cpl. Jenson.

Three-quarter Mile: 1, Lce. Cpl. Connell; 2, Bgr. Jeffries; 3, Lce. Cpl. Humphries.

Half Mile: 1, Lce. Cpl. Humphries; 2, Sergt. Pounds; 3, Cpl. Charles.

Relay Race: "A." Coy.

High Jump: Lce. Cpl. Jenson.

Throwing the cricket ball: Sig. Doncer, (97 yds 8 inches).

Sack fighting, (on pole): Dr. Hales (R.A.S.C.); 2, Lce. Cpl. Looslace; 3, Cpl. Chantry.

Pot to Race: 1, Cpl. Busby; 2, Dr. Kirkland (R.A.S.C.); 3, Lce. Cpl. ("Major") Green.

Wrestling on Horseback: "D" Coy.

The prizes were given to the winners by the Colonel of the 52nd, Col. R. B. Grosse, D.S.O., who was a spectator at the sports.

The committee of the Leander Club has invited Mr. Higgins, the President of the O.U.B.C. in 1914, to raise a service crew to compete for the King's Cup for Allied Forces eight at Henley Regatta. The Royal Air Force may also enter a crew.

THE SPORTSMAN.

THE SPORTS OFFICER: Yes, Jones and what's your favourite game?
JONES: Crown and Anchor, Sir.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

Saturday, May 3rd, 1919.

Surface wind between S.W. and West 20 to 25 m.p.h. Squally at times. Mainly overcast with occasional rain or drizzle and some mist. Visibility indifferent. Moderate temperature.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

(With an Occasional Entertainments Note.)

A Prolific Race Winner.

Lt. B. Campbell Russell, who rode "Paddy," the winner of the London Chase at the recent London Divisional Race meeting at Kalk, Cologne, is the well-known gentlemen rider and trainer of horses. He had a big string of horses in training at Wigston, Leicestershire before the war. He is now with the London Divisional Train, having been posted from the 17th Division in which he had an extraordinary percentage of winning mounts, viz: 30 winners out of 57 rides. At the farewell meeting of the 17th Division races he did the extraordinary performance of riding eight winners out of nine races in one day.

Opera House Etiquette.

From time to time contributors to this journal have had occasion to remind Opera House patrons that the whistling of the air of a popular bit of music by a member of the audience does not add in any way to the attractiveness of the real performance; nor does the beating of time with the foot on the back of someone else's chair fill that unfortunate individual with sensations of delight. It is only with the greatest reluctance, however, that I venture to chide lady members of the audience of being guilty of behaviour irritating to other members. But a friend of mine tells me that the performance of "Die Walkure" a few nights ago was robbed of a great deal of enjoyment for a number of people because two English ladies persisted in carrying on a long conversation during its progress. They were particularly voluble during the delightful introduction to the second act, declares my informant, and although these ladies were subjected to the most malign glances of their neighbours, the thrusts slithered off the backs of their objectives like water off a duck's back. I make no excuses for my friend's mixed metaphor!

About Cricket Gear.

At a meeting of the British Army of the Rhine and Troops Sports Executive Committee (Why will these people have such lengthy designations?) it was announced that many units had not yet applied for an allotment of cricket gear. This will never do. Here we are advacing well into the summer season, with a handsome cup to encourage us to go all out for cricket and some units have apparently not started practising yet. The delinquents should apply for kit without delay to the Assistant Amusement Officer, Cologne.

The "Challenge Night."

So far, there are not sufficient would-be champions of boxing and wrestling forthcoming to indicate that the great "Challenge Night," which is being organised by the 2nd Army Amusement Office people, will be so full of interest as it promised to be at first. So far, the competitors include one heavy weight boxer; one light weight and one feather weight, two wrestlers and a ju-jitsu expert. All those men throw out challenges to meet anyone in the Army of Occupation and unless some ambitious sportsmen take up the challenges, the great night at the "Y.M." Central, Cologne, is likely to be rather a "dud" affair. But there is not much doubt there will be plenty of men ready for a scrap by the time the 20th comes along.

Amateur Dramatics.

Why, oh! why has the new Dramatic Society been christened with a title that is such a large mouthful? The British Rhine Army Amateur Dramatic Company does not only make it difficult to include the designation in our headlines, when we have occasion to refer to this admirable combination of talent in The Cologne Post but it savours of G.R.O's. or Parliamentary acts and verbose and uninteresting literary effusions of that sort. The first objection, of course, is very serious, because, if we use a condensed title in our headlines, we shall probably be accused of flippancy, or something even worse. Imagine the Harmony Four, the Welsh Glee Party or the Varsity Girls or other parties of professional entertainers adopting a title of seven words, they would never reach that exalted position at the top of the bill for the simple reason that their announcement would not be sufficiently succinct to attract anybody to see the show. I will offer a prize of fifty pounds for a real live crisp title — but no, on second thoughts, perhaps I had better not.

Rowing on the Rhine.

Much has recently been written in this and other columns of The Cologne Post on the subject of rowing on the Rhine. I have now a document before me which lays down that the condition to be fulfilled before a boat will be hired to any soldier is that the intending "rowist" must satisfy the authorities that his swimming attainments are sufficient to enable him to negotiate 200 Yards in still water. That is something like business, and it is safe to assume that many rowing enthusiasts will overcome the little difficulty and make things pretty busy on the river when the weather gets a little warmer.

THE RAMBLER.

Lieut. A. W. Carr, who has just been appointed captain of the Notts County Cricket Club, will lead the side in a trial match to be played next Monday and Tuesday, when John Gunn takes charge of the opposing team. This will be Carr's first season as captain, although he has occasionally acted as deputy.

Mr Harry Fordham, of Therfield, the gentleman steeple-chaser, has been elected joint hon. sec. of the Puckeridge Hunt, with Mr F. B. Debenham, in succession to the late Maj. Anderson, of Aspenden.

Arrangements have been made to start polo at Wellington, Berks, to-morrow. Mr Guy Hargreaves, who recently took over the Mastership of the South Berks Hunt, will act as captain of the club.

CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATION.

SCIENCE AND MODERN LANGUAGES TO BE INCLUDED.

New regulations have been issued and approved by the Treasury for Clerkships Class I) in the Home Civil Service, says the Times of Wednesday. Only candidates whose fathers are British subjects are eligible for the Admiralty, Colonial Office, and War Office, save by special permission of the head of the Department. The regulations detail a very large number of subjects in which candidates with be examined, and are distinguishable from those under the reconstruction scheme which reserve certain Civil Service posts for those who have served in the war. There are sixty-five subjects (instead of thirty-eight, as heretofore) to chose from, including several more modern languages, and such scientific studies as physical anthropology and experimental psychology. Candidates must be over 22, and under 24, on August 1st of the year in which the examination is held.

The following subjects are included in the examination:—

Section A.—To be taken by all Candidates.

(1) Essay, (2) English, (3) Present Day.—Questions on contemporary subjects, social, economic, and political, (4) Science.—Questions on general principles, methods, and applications of science, including geography, and (5) Translation.—Translation from one of the following languages not taken in Section B, viz., French, German, Italian, Spanish, Portuguese, Dutch, Norwegian, Swedish, Danish, Russian; Latin being also an option for those who take two modern languages in Section B, 100 marks each; and (6) A viva voce examination, 300 marks.

Total for Section A, 800 marks.

SECTION B.—Optional subjects.

Candidates are allowed to take up subjects in this section up to a total of 1,000 marks.

Languages with History and Literature.

(7) Latin, translation, and prose or verse composition, (8) Roman history and Latin literature, (9) Greek translation, and prose or verse composition, (10) Greek history and literature, (11) French, translation, free composition, set composition, and conversation, (12) French history and literature, (13) German, translation, free composition, set composition, and conversation, (14) German history and literature, (15) Spanish or Italian, translation, free composition, set composition, and conversation, (16) Spanish or Italian history and literature, (17) Russian, translation, free composition, set composition, and conversation, (18) Russian history and literature, (19) Arabic, translation, free composition, set composition, and conversation, (20) Arabic history and literature, (21) Persian, translation, free composition, set composition, and conversation, and (22) Persian history and literature, 200 marks each.

In subjects 7-22 the history and literature subjects associated with a language can only be taken by candidates who also offer themselves for examination in the language itself.

(23) English literature, Period 1, from 1350 to 1700, and (24) English literature, Period 2, from 1660 to 1919, 200 marks each.

History.

(25) English history to 1660, social, economic, political, constitutional, (26) British history, 1660-1914, social, economic, political, constitutional, Period 1, (27) European history, either Period 1, from 400 to 1494, or Period 2, from 1494 to 1763, and (28) European history, Period 3, from 1763 to 1914, 200 marks each.

Economics, Politics, Law, and Philosophy.

(29) General economics, 200 marks; (30) economic history, (31) public economics, including public finance, (32) political theory, (33) political organisation, and (34) the constitutional law of the United Kingdom and of the British Empire, and the law of English local government, 100 marks each; (35) English private law, 200 marks; (36) Roman law, (37) public international law and international relations, (38) moral philosophy, (39) metaphysical philosophy, (40) logic, and (41) psychology, 100 marks each.

Mathematics and Science.

(42) Pure mathematics, lower, (43) pure mathematics, higher, (44) applied mathematics, lower, (45) applied mathematics, higher, and (46) astronomy, 200 marks each; (47) statistics, 100 marks; (48) chemistry, lower, (49) chemistry, higher, (50) physics, higher, (52) botany, lower, (53) botany, lower, (51) higher, (54) geology, lower, (55) geology, higher, (56) physiology, lower, (57) physiology, higher, (58) zoology, lower, (59) zoology, higher 200 marks each; (60) engineering and (61) geography, 400 marks each; (62) physical anthropology, prehistoric archaeology, and technology, and (63), social anthropology, 100 marks each; (64) agriculture, 200 marks; and (65) experimental psychology, 100 marks.

A candidate desiring to offer any of the subjects 48—60 or subject 65 must produce evidence satisfactory to the Commissioners of laboratory training in an institution of University rank. For (46) astronomy, (47) statistics, (61) geography, (62) physical anthropology, &c., and (64) agriculture, other equivalent training will be required. There will be no laboratory test as a part of the examination.

Extra Numerum Subject.—Candidates may take, in addition to the above, one of the translation papers of Section A, in a language not already taken by them in either section, not more than one of the Scandinavian languages, nor more than one of the three, Spanish, Italian, Portuguese, being offered by the same candidate, either in Section A or extra numerum; for this 100 marks will be awarded not included in the 800 of Section A or the 1,000 of Section B.

Such vacancies as exist in Class I. which are not filled by the Reconstruction Scheme under the Order in Council of December 18. 1918, will be filled from the list resulting from these examinations. No undertaking is given as to the proportion of vacancies that may be filled under these regulations and under the Reconstruction Scheme respectively.

No person actually serving in the Army or Navy will be eligible unless he can produce the permission of his commanding officer to attend the examination.

In reckoning age for competition persons who have served or are serving in the British Forces may deduct from their actual age any time during which they have served.

OLD HARROVIANS.

The dinner to be held on Thursday at the VI Corps Club promises to be not only unique but a great success. It is expected that a representative of present-day Harrow will be there. In order to sit down at 4.30 p.m. it is hoped that all intending to be present will reach the Club no later than 4.15 p.m.

VISIT OF THE BISHOP OF LICHFIELD.

The Rt. Rev. Dr. Kemthorne, Bishop of Lichfield, is on a visit to Cologne and will preach at the Military Church (57 Schildergasse) on Sunday evening (May 4th) next at 6 p.m.

3rd BATT. M.G. CORPS.

A VISIT TO THE DINING HALL.

It was my pleasure, the other day, to witness a Battalion of men, the 3rd Battn. M.G. Corps, sit down to a really enjoyable meal. There was plenty of food, and the method of serving, though still under service conditions, was almost ideal, whilst all the men were fully appreciative of the efforts made by those in charge.

The hundreds of men were streaming across the parade ground converging on to a raised platform leading to the hall. Inside, the tables were filling rapidly and food was being served as fast as the men sat down, by clean waiters, who seemed interested in their work. Neatly-made salt boxes of white wood lay alongside cups of freshly made mustard and in the centre were water jugs and cups. Those who wanted minerals had previously purchased them at a bar arranged near the entrance.

In another room I found a Corporals' Mess. White paper covered the tables and the portion of room occupied was cosily screened off with blankets. China plates for the first course and enamel plates for the second were noticed on quite a number of tables.

The noise and confusion occasioned by the entrance of the men, died down, until by the time the Orderly Officer was seen making his way round there was nothing but the music of knives and forks playing on the plates. Everyone occupied. With what? Look at the Menu: Breakfast: Cold Bully, Boiled Potatoes, Pickles, Bread, Tea. Dinner: Roast Mutton, Suet pudding and gravy, Potatoes, Beans, Rice, Sugar. Tea: Bread, Butter, Cheese, Jam, Tea. Supper: Biscuit and Cheese, Soup. Surely this is worthy of commendation, and, incidentally, imitation by other units.

BUDDING BRONCHO BUSTERS.

There is always a slack period at the end of one season and the beginning of another. But does this trouble the merry "Linseed Lancers" of Blessem? Not a bit. They are always ready with some new scheme or other to while away the time after the daily round of duty is completed. Amongst the many schemes devised by that progressive unit, the 18th Field Ambulance, as a means of relieving the monotony of life whilst awaiting "Demob" is one, our latest, a class of equitation. Though there is no "Rough" provided by War Establishement, S.S.M. Marshall is doing his best in that capacity. The class says this is bad enough especially when "quit stirrups" is the order. Considering that the class is composed of men inexperienced in horsemanship, the horses untrained and unversed in the "aids" to be applied by whip, leg spur or music as laid down in Cavalry Training, progress on the whole is very good. The "seat" developed by some of the class gives promise of possible competitors in open events at mounted sports in the near future, provided the "meds" are not ruled out by orders with which it is impossible to comply — e. g., competitors must ride their own horses. S.M. Rothwell showed a distinct fondness for "Queenie," but evidently the affection was not mutual, for when the "quit stirrups" came along she evinced a desire to return to the stable. He has now excused himself, pleading a strained thigh muscle. Q.M.S. Barlow is nearly a qualified rider. He also had "Queenie" the other day and indulged in a few acrobatics on his own acount, which was not in the schedule. He has been "off" five times, but has not yet bought the beer as is customary. Sgt. Douglas is very fond of a "cushy" mount, but cries off if detailed for one with the reputation of being a bit frolicsome. Cpl. Berry has evidently suffered from shell shock and tried to "loop the loop" with but little success. Pte. Crossdale is apparently not particular where the horse goes so long as he remains on its back and consequently the horse goes where it likes. Pte. Webster finds it difficult to sit down and is probably more used to "Dobby" horses. Pte. Billingham used to ride in a circus and thus finds the saddle troublesome to sit upon. But an elephant is not so frisky as a horse. There are others, but this will suffice to show the progress we are making. One thing is sure. There is not much chance of getting "glum," but we are waiting patiently for that "Demob."

THE SUBMARINE IN THE WAR.

COMMANDER CRUAND LECTURES TO DEVONS.

A very interesting and highly instructive lecture was given to the men of 51st Devons at Burg and 52nd at Burscheid by Commander Cruand R.N. on Tuesday the 29th ult.

As is well known, the Commander is entitled to a hearing on the above subject for, as he humourously put it to one of his questioners, "I was privileged to eat two Christmas dinners on the floor of the North Sea." The lecturer divided his subject under three headings: (1) British Submarines, before and during the war; (2) German Submarine warfare; (3) British methods of counteracting German high sea piracy.

The Commander explained how the British submarine was originally built for coast defence in the event of an attempted enemy landing, but that the exigencies of modern naval warfare necessitated the construction of over-seas submarines carrying twelve guns. He then proceeded to give a vivid account of the work of British submarines from their first vigil at Heligoland, during the landing of our original expeditionary force in France, to the final capitulation at Harwich.

Under the second heading the lecturer gave a detailed account of the cunning devices adopted by the Germans to destroy our merchant service, and proved conclusively to his audience that the German submarine menace was a colossal problem beyond the comprehension of the civilian "growlers" at home who were, and still are, wont to ask "What is the Navy doing?"

In his description of British methods of counteracting enemy piracy the lecturer held his audience spellbound. He guided his hearers through the intricacies of the floating mine, the smoke screen, camouflage, indicator nets, the depth charge, the paravane, the directional trydiophone, and the convoy system, and finally introduced a delightful "touch of nature," in his vivid description of the famous "Mystery Ships."

In his concluding remarks, Commander Cruand paid a warm tribute to our merchant seamen and contended that it was their doggedness and bravery which finally broke the "morale" of the German pirates.

Questions were invited at the close of the lecture, and the number and nature of those offered to the lecturer proved conclusively that his audience was highly attentive and an appreciative one.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

HINDENBURG RETIRES.

In yesterday's issue the news of the prospected retirement of General von Hindenburg was given. The following is the letter which he sent to Ebert, President of the German Republic.

"Herr President. — The beginning of Peace negotiations induces me to bring the following to the knowledge of the Government. I have remained, amidst the many recent changes, at the head of the Army because I considered it my duty to continue to serve my Fatherland in its greatest distress. But I consider my duty will be fulfilled as soon as the preliminary peace has been concluded. My wish to return to private life again will be generally understood when one considers my age and especially so when it is remembered how difficult has been the task of maintaining my post through the past great crisis. On account of my opinions, my personality and my past."

Ebert's Reply.

The President of the German Republic, in acknowledging this letter and in giving assent, took the opportunity of expressing to the General "the undying gratitude of the German people," for the services he has rendered with the greatest self-sacrifice, during the war and later, whilst the revolution held sway. "The German people will never forget," wrote Ebert, "that you stuck faithfully to your post during the times of distress, and that you placed your services entirely at the disposal of the Fatherland."

The Italian Crisis.

It is apparent that not the whole of the German Press has taken up the attitude of finding excuses and denunciations in the recent crisis at the Conference. Many papers, as one might naturally expect, did so, examples of which were given last week. The Westdeutsche Wochenschrift, a new periodical, in its second issue, remarked to the contrary, finding in this crisis extraordinary importance in the fact that the discussion is merely the means to an end, the introduction of brighter relationships and clearer understanding between the contracting parties, and a sure sign that the conditions will be all the more sincere.

At the same time, emphasis is laid on the fact that this disagreement must not be used as a means of stirring up any further dissension amongst the contracting parties, which is precisely just what many of the other papers have tried to do.

"At the moment, when Wilson commenced to explain to the Italian people the old programme," says the paper, "the curtain was raised on the world-historical scene which hitherto had been enacted behind the wings. The clearness exhibited at the beginning of the armistice, but which since had been darkened by the language of the military powers, is now shining in all its glory. The negotiations can now begin without any distrust between the various statesmen."

The attitude of this paper is optimistic throughout, the true facts having been weighed very carefully in the balance of practicability.

In conclusion, it states that the best part of a durable peace would be lost if the Germans were to support and exploit the small and petty differences in the "camp of the Entente," and that it is their duty "to bring the opponents of the other side into the great common line."

How annoying!

A peculiar incident happened in one of the streets of Cologne just prior to the National Festival. It will be remembered that the Independent Socialists had placed red posters on the walls at certain prominent parts, giving announcements as to the nature of the festivities.

Two young Germans, apparently nationalists, were very much annoyed at these placards, and, after having glanced round to make sure that nobody was watching, they tore off one of the posters. To their astonishment, and probably to their dismay also, the following was once more displayed to view.

BRITISH EMPIRE LEAVE CLUB.

Miss Decima Moore, C.B.E. the originator of the new Empire Leave Club which will shortly be opened at 6 Langgasse, has favoured us with a few more particulars. It was the result, she says, of many expressions and letters from men on leave in Paris, that she decided to visit Cologne in the early part of this year, and after having found the highly suitable building in the Langgasse she obtained the necessary consent from the Army authorities and then formed an influential Committee of Trustees, which is as under:-

Baron Emil Beaumont d'Erlanger, Chairman; Col. The Hon. Sir Arthur Lawley, G.C.S.I., British Red. Cross Commissioner for France; Gordon Campbell, Esq., Chairman, Headquarters Collection Committee British Red Cross Society & Order of St. John; Herbert Brown Esq., Chairman, British Farmers' Red Cross Fund; Henry Obré, Esq. Chairman, Baltic and Corn Exchange Red Cross Hospital Fund; Lance Hannen, Esq., C.B.E.; Miss Decima Moore, C.B.E.; Hon. Organizer; all names well known in big work connected with the war.

The club contains a theatre to hold over 1,100, dining room to seat over 300, garden, skittle allies, billiard tables, writing, music and reading rooms, there will be a canteen, shop, barber, bootblack, women guides, entertainments, etc., a daily cinema, an nightly amusements, dances e.c.,

The club will be under the personal direction of Miss Decima Moore, C.B.E.

Lt.-Col. Levey, D.S.O., Gordon Highlanders, will also assist, and the "Controllers of Guides," "Controller of Entertainments," "Vol. Workers' Unit," etc., will all be ladies connected with various well-known war organisations such as W.R.E.N.S., Q.M.A.A.C.S., B.R.X., Scottish Women's Hospital etc., to whose fine work our Empire owes so much.

NEWS IN BRIEF.

The New York Merchants' Association guarantees every soldier a job.

The number of War Savings Certificates sold during the week ended April 19 was 1,637,578.

The Prince of Wales has accepted the presidency of the Royal National Lifeboat Institution.

Local housing schemes at present submitted provide for 140,000 dwellings, Dr. Addison states.

The British light cruiser Diomede was launched on Tuesday at Messrs. Vickers's works at Barrow.

The Government expect that next week decisions as to increases of Navy pay will be announced, Mr. Macnamara said on Tuesday.

Believing there will be no national electricity supply for at least five years, Croydon will spend £122,000 on its electricity works.

The Hungarian Government has decreed that any persons found guilty of insulting foreigners will be sentenced to death.

A communiqué issued in Cairo on April 24 reported a general resumption of work in the provinces and a return to more normal conditions.

The London Labour Party has asked Dr. Addison, President of the Local Government Board, to receive a deputation on the question of members of the London County Council.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

The Editor, in publishing letters from Correspondents, will use his own discretion, and if necessary, limit the publishing of correspondence on any subject whatever. It must be understood, however that he is not responsible for the views stated.

All communications for this column should be brief and to the point, and preference will be given to those which bear the writers' signatures for publication. No letter will be published unless accompanied by rank name, and unit of sender, which are needed for the purpose of reference.

Many letters of a perverse nature have reached the office, and the Editor wishes to point out that these only cause waste of time both to the writer and the Editor himself. Letters of this nature will not be published.

FIRST JAZZ BAND.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post

Sir.—Ref. the claim in your issue of the 23rd inst., to the effect that the "Five-ems" Concert Party were first in the field in the "Jazz Band" line, I would like to state that A Coy. 1st Bn. Gordon Highlanders formed a similar band consisting of eleven performers and fifteen instruments, as long ago as December of last year.

I think my statement completely disposes of the claim of the "Five-ems" Concert Party.

GILES.

We have received several letters from Parties claiming the honour of having the first Jazz Band in the Rhineland. Needless to say we cannot publish all the letters. The one below is selected as being the earliest of all disputants.

EDUCATION.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,— It has been brought to my knowledge that certain passages in my article on "Education" published in your issue of the 24th inst. have been taken by a good many as insulting to N.C.O.'s in general.

That was far from my intention, and that erroneous idea has arisen through the misreading of those portions. The passages in question were inserted for the benefit of the solitary few, if any, ill-mannered people who seem to take a delight in hurling depreciative remarks at the members of the junior specialist staff. Otherwise my article was a purely general one on Education.

ARMY AND PEACE CELEBRATIONS.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.—Having noticed sundry suggestions in your most sought-after paper, may I trespass upon your time and kindness to consider this:

There is great talk of celebrations at peace time but absolutely nothing has been said re. the British Army—I should have said arms of the British fighting forces. Could it not be arranged throughout the whole of the services to blow the "Last Post," it being a very fitting conclusion of warfare. I am sure there are thousands that will agree with this suggestion. Again it would be a last tribute to the gallant fellows who have paid the price and have made the sacrifice for their country.

"EPIDEMIC OF EASTER CONFERENCES."

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.— I noticed in yesterday's issue under the heading of "Epidemic of Easter Conferences" you state that the majority of votes against Mr. Snowden at the December election was 46,160. I think on looking up the returns you will find it was something like one third of that number. While not exactly in cordial agreement with Mr. Snowden in his speeches, I submit that his or any other public man's utterances cannot be gauged by the results of the election of 1918. The By-elections to date prove this.

MERRY MOMENTS AT MECKENHEIM.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.—In reply to Driver R.A.S.C. I wish to state that I am surprised at the way in which he writes.

I don't think it requires a very brainy person to come to the conclusion that the definition of "Oo—jah" was invented by a comrade who possesses a sense of humour.

I, too, am a Welshman, and also proud of it, but I fail to see where the Welsh are being subjected to a "sly dig."

As a matter of fact I was very amused with the unique translation of "Oo—jah." I trust Driver will not feel nettled, and hope that he will accept it as a bit of fun.

Should any inquirer find that his question has not yet been answered, he can have the assurance that it will receive attention in due course, and the answer will appear accordingly. Many questions have been received which could be answered much easier by the Adjutant of the unit concerned, and all such cases which affect the unit commander must be taken to him and not sent here. — Ed.*]

C.J.L.—Your previous communication was neither lost nor forgotten. Some of your inferences were quite unjustifiable and the question is too large to raise here. Howevers the matter is one to which many people are paying attention and should there be any indulgence granted you must realize by now that "clas distinction" will not be one of the stones on which it is built.

THE ANALYSED SAUSAGE.

SCIENTISTS AND THE MYSTERIOUS MIXTURE

The sausage, for which the Ministry of Food is anxious to have a scientific standard defined, has been the subject of two learned papers read before, and discussed by the Society of Public Analysts recently. They are now published in the Analyst.

One, dealing with "the estimation of the approximate quantity of meat," states that "sausages and meat pastes generally consist of a mixture of minced meat and 'filler,' with salt, preservatives, and seasoning substances. Bread was at one time almost the only filling substance used, but, in addition to bread, cooked rice, potatoes, or maize meal are now frequently employed, and and in some cases cooked soya meal has been found to occur."

In the second paper the analysis of sausages is handled.

"The main constituents of sausages are meat, bread, and water. A little salt and spice are usually added. While the meat may be derived from any part of the animal, it is in most cases impossible to determine either the animal or the part used."

The paper describes a highly scientific method of analysis to which 60 samples were subjected. One sample, which contained 23.7 per cent. excess of water, was found under microscopical examination to consist largely of tripe.

In the discussion Dr. Voelker suggested that the Ministry of Food should consult analysts generally before making their orders and putting out regulations as to how mixed foods should be compounded.

"It seems to me that the authors of the papers . . . relied mainly upon the amount of nitrogen shown in the analysis and reckoned this as representing the meat present. I would like to ask what would happen if I sprinkled a little sulphate of ammonia over a sausage or mixed some leather powder with it—would this be reckoned as 'meat'?"

FIGHTING STILL IN PROGRESS AT MUNICH.

TEN HOSTAGES KILLED.

BOLSHEVIST MINISTERS LEAVING HUNGARY.

HOW THE MONS RETREAT COMMENCED.

LEAVING HUNGARY TO ITS FATE.

BOLSHEVIST DESERTIONS.

Berlin. It is reported from Vienna that the Hungarian Soviet has been overthrown. The people's commissaries for Food, War and Foreign affairs have arrived at Vienna with their families, indicating that a flight from Buda-Pesth is in progress. Reuter.

FIGHTING STILL CONTINUES AT MUNICH.

Heavy fighting is still in progress between the Communists and Government troops at Munich, being chiefly confined to the railway station and the tribunal. Both sides are using artillery and mine throwers. The number of dead is more than two hundred. The newspaper hall on the Stachus is in flames.

Altogether ten hostages have been murdered in most brutal fashion.

DERNBURG ON GERMAN FINANCES.

At the Berlin chamber of commerce, Dr. Dernburg, the new Minister, gave an address on German finances.

He stated that the war has cost Germany 185 milliards of marks (185,000,000,000) and concluded his address by saying that an indemnity of 125 milliards of francs, or even an annuity of four milliards of francs is quite impossible. "We can pay only with work," he said.

"I WANT TO GO HO-O-OME."

The ex-Kaiser is either singing it or muttering it in his newly-grown beard. Doubtless he has read those two lines in the Cologne Post which recorded the fact that the Dutch Government is to be asked to deliver him up to justice.

So he has applied to the German Government for permission to return to Germany. He wants to go home to his estate at Kadinen.

Other than the ex-Kaiser, ex-Kaiserin and that Royal thief the ex-Crown Prince, the entire Hohenzollern family is in Germany.

Mrs. Little Willie is living with her five children in the Palace at Potsdam.

Eitel and his wife are at the Villa Ingenheid.

Adalbert has left the Navy (or the Navy left him behind when it went to Scapa Flow) but remains at Kiel.

August is living with a friend, his palace having been confiscated. Oscar stays with his mother-in-law at Mecklenburg. Joachim has his private house at Potsdam. Louisa and her husband, the Duke of Brunswick, stay at Gmunden. Heinrich lives near Kiel.

Tally!

I DON'T WANT TO GO HOME.

According to the Kölnische Volkszeitung, a great flow of emigration to Europe is about to begin. The majority of applicants are Italians and Slavs. No Germans have applied.

GERMAN-POLISH ARMISTICE.

Berlin. Erzberger has sent a note to Marshal Foch stating that if the Poles attack German territory the German Government cannot guarantee that the German-Polish armistice will be maintained and the further passage of General Hallers' troops could not be permitted. Reuter.

LISBON REVOLUTION FORESTALLED.

OTHER ITALIAN DELEGATES TO PARIS.

There will be some changes in the Italian delegates to the Peace Conference when they return to Paris. According to the Matin, Signor Salandra and Brazilai wish to remain in Italy. Signor Luzotti is spoken of as one of the probable new members.

MORE BROKEN PLEDGES.

Although the German General von der Goltz promised to release the Lettish officers and soldiers whom he recently arrested at Libau, the capital of the new Baltic state of Lettland, he has not done so. He also undertook to restore the Lettish Ministry of M. Ulmanis, which he overthrew.

German troops are still occupying the public buildings. A Cabinet has been formed of four Germans and five Letts.

British and French warships are off Libau.

FIELD MARSHAL FRENCH AND MONS.

HIS DISILLUSIONMENT.

In a further instalment of his book, appearing in the Daily Telegraph, Field Marshal Lord French describes the battle of Mons. He says that on the night of the 21st August, 1914, the British Army went to sleep in the highest spirits and hopes. Its mobilisation, transport and concentration had been effected without a hitch and the preliminary arrangements foreshadowed a moral superiority over the Germans which afterwards was completely established.

French says that he awoke on the morning of the twenty-second in high hopes, but before many hours had passed disillusionment began. He describes how he started out to visit General Lanrezac in the neighbourhood of Philippeville, but was constantly delayed by columns of most depressed looking men all moving southward. Suddenly he met Capt. Spier, Liaison officer, who reported that the Germans were advancing, adding "an offensive action is contrary to Lanrezac's plans." In consequence of the difficulty in finding Lanrezac, French returned to Le Cateau, where, late in the evening, he experienced the climax of disillusionment when he received a request from Lanrezac to attack the flank of the German columns which were pressing him (Lanrezac) back. French says it was difficult for him to realise what was in Lanrezac's mind when he made such a request and he replied that such operation was quite impracticable.

Describing the events of the 23rd August French says he left Smith-Dorrien full of confidence as regarded his position but that when he returned to the Headquarters in the afternoon he found that reports had been received that Smith-Dorrien was abandoning the salient at Mons, although he need not have feared that a turning movement was imminent and his front was nowhere greatly threatened.

In consequence of the arrival of further disquieting reports during the evening French decided upon an immediate retreat, as the situation was strategically untenable. He pays splendid tributes to the support rendered by Allenby and Drummond in taking the severe pressure off the Fifth Division and to the steadfastness and skill of Haig's First Corps. He also gives a graphic picture of the worn out staff and says "it makes my blood boil to hear and read the calumnies often heaped upon the heads of the unfortunate staff."

AUSTRALIANS FOR ARCHANGEL.

The 201st (Russian Relief) Machine Gun Battalion will be composed in part of Australian gunners trained in the use of the Vickers machine gun.

Only men without dependents in Australia will be eligible to join, as discharge from the Australian Imperial Forces in the United Kingdom is necessary. Two months' furlough will be granted at the end of service (which will not in any case be prolonged beyond a year), followed by a passage back to Australia.

Men wishing to join the battalion should apply to Sergeant Oliver, 201st Machine Gun Battalion (late R.S.M., 6th Battalion Australian Imperial Force), at the Chief Recruiting Office, Old Scotland Yard, Whitehall, S.W.

COURT-MARTIAL FOR THE "SPORTING PARSON."

The Rev. Everard Digby, vicar of St. Agatha's, Finsbury, and an Army chaplain, will be tried by court-martial at Westminster on Friday next. Sir Archibald Bodkin will represent the military authorities.

Mr. Digby, who is known as the "sporting parson," was detained for some days in the Tower of London recently after being stopped near Regent-street by an officer of the Provost-Marshal's Department.

ARMY ENTRANCE EXAM.

An Army entrance examination for commissions in the Regular Army will be held on June 3, when sixty cadetships in the R. E. and R. A. and 145 cadetships for the various branches of the British service and Indian Army will be open to competition.

A paragraph in the order states: "As the rate of pay of the 'after war' Army is not yet definitely settled, it cannot be assumed that the present rate of pay of the Army will become permanent or that an initial outfit allowance of £50, or any other sum, will be given on commission."

SOUTH AFRICAN BOLSHEVISTS TO BE DEPORTED.

Capetown. In the House of Assembly the recent disturbances at Johannesburg between International Socialists advocating Bolshevism and returned soldiers were the subject of a long discussion.

PRIVATE'S ACTION AGAINST HIS C.O.

THE RIGHT TO COMPLAIN.

The hearing was resumed before Mr. Justice McCardie of the action in which Mr. Christopher Henry Heddon, lately a private in the R.A.S.C., claims damages against his commanding officer, Major G. C. Evans, for alleged slander, false imprisonment, and malicious prosecution.

According to Mr. Heddon's case, he wrote to Major Evans complaining that Second-Lieut. Haydon had adopted a course of persecution towards him. He was arrested and charged with making a frivolous complaint to his commanding officer and with conduct prejudicial to good order and military discipline, and was summarily ordered 14 days' C.B. On November 25 last, following a letter to the Treasury Solicitor making charges against Lieut. Haydon, Mr. Heddon was put under close arrest in a detention barracks for 18 days.

The plaintiff, re-examined, said that when he saw his wife at Harrogate she was depressed and she knew that he was visiting her without leave. She was anxious on his account, but she never intimated that she did not wish him to visit her. Every statement in his letter of July 25 was true. When he was paraded before the defendant there were present Sergeant Richmond and two military policemen. The interview lasted about 10 minutes. He was not asked to give evidence in support of his allegations. As a private soldier he had no right to do anything but answer questions. When applying for leave he did not always state the reasons why he wanted leave. It was not usual in his unit for a private to state his reasons for leave, and several of the men whom he knew had every week-end off. There were really no duties to perform.

HEAVY FATIGUE DUTY.

His Lordship: But you previously told me that you had to strike a match every morning. (Laughter).

The plaintiff further said that he belonged to the Transport Drivers' section. He was told by his section sergeant that, by Lieutenant Haydon's orders, he was to go on fatigue duty in the workshop, but it was not the duty of anyone in his section to do fatigue duty in the workshop. When he went home on leave on October 23th defendant telephoned to the Harrogate police about him. He was placed under close arrest on November 6 after having been under open arrest. When he was paraded before Brigadier-General Atkinson he was immediately discharged.

Miss Dorothy Wright, the sister of plaintiff's late wife, said that she stayed with Mrs. Heddon the whole time she was ill in Harrogate. Mrs. Heddon was irritable and depressed, but she never suggested that she did not wish her husband to visit her. They were on quite affectionate terms. Mrs. Steddon knew that her husband visited her without leave and it worried her. She thought that an escort would come to fetch him.

DEFENDANT'S CASE OPENED.

Mr. Tindal Atkinson, K.C., opening the defence, submitted that the charge of slander had gone, no corroborative evidence having been given. The main factor was whether or not Major Evans could be found liable for damages for false imprisonment. The only matter for which he was responsible was the order awarding Mr. Heddon 14 days' C.B. on July 24, 1918. Mr. Heddon's subsequent detention and confinement to barracks was not the result of any action by Major Evans.

Counsel submitted that a statement in Mr. Heddon's letter to Major Evans justified the latter in viewing it as an act prejudicial to good order and discipline.

His Lordship: Even if the facts were true?

Mr. Atkinson: Yes, every soldier has a right to complain individually of any hardship, and he has the right to have it properly investigated. If the charges are unfounded nobody can question that the making of false charges would be against good order and discipline. The letter states:

"I am compelled to lay the facts shortly before you for my own protection, and also for the protection of all the men under your Comand. And I may say that I have their unanimous and unsought support."

THE RIGHT TO COMPLAIN.

Counsel submitted that that was bordering on the line of mutiny.

His Lordship: Suppose a man complains about the food, and adds that it was not only his complaint, but of every man in the company?

Mr. Atkinson: He has no right to do that. I say it is on the border-line of mutiny and partakes of the nature of mutiny. Each man has a right to make individual complaints, but there is no right to act in combination for the purpose of making a charge against an officer.

Major Evans said that he was a major in the Army Service Corps and was appointed commanding officer of the 12th Company at the beginning of the war. The plaintiff was posted to his depôt on June 22 and reported on June 24. He should have reported on June 22. In consequence he was deprived of four days' pay and forfeited two days' pay under Royal warrant. The plaintiff a few days later was charged with threatening to lose his equipment. He was charged by Lieutenant Haydon, but there was a conflict of evidence and he dismissed the charge. The plaintiff sent him a letter, dated July 22, complaining of the conduct towards him of Lieutenant Haydon, the quartermaster. He interviewed Lieutenant Haydon about the matter, and he came to the conclusion that there was no truth in any of the charges made by the plaintiff. Next morning the plaintiff was ordered to be placed under arrest on a charge of making a frivolous complaint against an officer and of conduct prejudicial to military discipline.

On the morning of July 24 the plaintiff was brought before him in the orderly room. There were present Captain Wilkie, Sergeant Richmond, and two military policemen. He read the letter to the plaintiff and asked him whether he realised that that paragraph practically amounted to mutiny. The plaintiff replied that he did not realize it. He then asked him whether it was written through ignorance of the seriousness of the contents, and the plaintiff replied that it was not. The plaintiff's general attitude was antagonistic to good discipline and he was very stubborn. Having considered the matter, he found him guilty of conduct prejudicial to military discipline, and sentenced him to 14 days' confinement to barracks. It was not part of his sentence that he should be deprived of any pay. He was, in fact, deprived of 14s. corps pay. That was technical pay, and when a man was confined to barracks it ceased. He altered the charge-sheet himself in December under written orders from Headquarters.

When the plaintiff served the writ in this action he did say to him: "I always thought you were a rogue, now I know you are a fool as well." He was not sure that he said "a damned fool," but he might have used those words. On November 25 the plaintiff was placed under arrest and sent to Fulford Barracks on a warrant signed by him. This was done on instructions from the Northern Command. There was no truth in the statement that he had subjected the plaintiff to constand persecution.

Mr. Tebbs: Did you know at that time Mr. Heddon was a solicitor? I think I did, but I cannot remember. It has been well drilled into me since. (Laughter.) He certainly did not look like one.

A SOLICITOR'S LOOKS.

Mr. Justice McCardie: What is the general appearance of a solicitor?

Major Evans: I do not know, but he was dirty and generally unshaven; he never had is buttons polished and his boots were dirty. (Laughter.)

Mr. Justice McCardie: You expected that if he was a solicitor he would have a well-shaven face and brightly polished buttons. I think we know what you mean.

Major Evans: It would have made no difference if I had known. He was in the Army; a private soldier.

Mr. Justice McCardie (to Major Evans): Why did you make this first charge, charging him with making a frivolous complaint?

Major Evans: I did it because I did not want to put him up to court-martial. I thought if I gave him a chance he would probably become a decent soldier. I have done it hundreds of times before and it has generally been appreciated, except in this case.

Mr. Watson (cross-examining): You never gave Mr. Heddon any statement that Lieut. Haydon might have made behind his back?

Major Evans: No.

Or asked him if he wished to call any evidence to support his case?

Major Evans: No.

Major Evans strongly denied a suggestion that his unit did practically no work. There were over 1,000 motor vehicles to keep in order, and his district extended over a very wide area.

The hearing was adjourned.

BLOWN OUT OF AN AEROPLANE.

Charged at Kingston (Surrey) with motor-car offences, Major Colin Cooper, R.A.F., did not appear, but sent a letter saying:

"I much regret and apologise for not writing to excuse my not attending, but the policeman delivered the summons to me while in an aeroplane. I took it up, and as it blew out I did not know the date on which to appear."

The case had been twice adjourned.

The warrant officer explained that the summons was served on the major at Stonehenge by the Dorchester police.

A fine of £3 was imposed for exceeding the speed limit and £1 for not producing his licence.

ARMY MEDICAL RESEARCH.

Treasury Sanction has just been given to a scheme proposed by the Director General of the Army Medical Service which has in view the linking up of the activities of the different departments and individuals hitherto concerned with various problems of preventive medicine, pathology and tropical diseases bearing upon the health of the Army in peace and war.

The principal object aimed at is the utilisation to the fullest extent of the benefits of new knowledge as it become available, and to raise the standard of sanitary and pathological work in the Army.

Under the scheme which is now approved two new directorates have been created under the Director General of Army Medical Services as part of the War Office Organisation of the Army Medical Department, with an advisory Committee, composed of both military and civilian members.

OUT-OF-WORK DONATION ABUSES

An illustration of some of the frauds which are being perpetrated over the unemployment donation occured at Shoreditch on Thursday.

Four men drove up to the Labour Bureau in a taxicab. Going to the head of the waiting queue they gave the four leading men a shilling apiece to yield their places, went in to the Bureau and signed on as being out of work.

When they came out again they jumped into the taxi, and went off to Epsom races.

ARMY CHAPLAINS DEMOBILIZED.

The numbers of Army Chaplains demobilized from the date of the armistice to 31st April were as follows:—Church of England, 820; Roman Catholic, 158; Presbyterian, 113; Wesleyan Methodist, 62; United Board (Congregational, Baptist, and United Methodist), 85; other denominations, 11—total, 1,289.

FREE PASSAGES TO THE COLONIES.

The Under Secretary for the Colonies, replying to Sir G. Kinloch Cooke, said that the free passages to the Empire Dominions which the Government is willing to provide for ex-service men and their dependents will be extended to to widows and children of ex-service men, provided they are entitled to pensions from Imperial funds under the terms of the Royal Pension warrant.

ONE YEAR'S STREET ACCIDENTS.

A Home Office return shows that in the United Kingdom in 1918 there were 37,926 street accidents caused by vehicles, compared with 45,520 in 1917. Of the 2,193 fatal accidents, 476 were caused by horse-drawn vehicles, 1,591 by mechanically propelled vehicles, and 126 by pedal bicycles.

London had 626 fatal accidents and 15,600 non-fatal.

CAPTURE OF SOLDIER MURDERER.

FOURTH VICTIM SUCCUMBS.

Mr. Walter Cornish, the father and husband of the victims of the triple murder at Forest Gate on Tuesday, after lingering in agony for many hours, died from his injuries in Queen Mary's Hospital. The soldier, Henry Beckett, is thus responsible for killing the entire family—father, mother, and two children.

Beckett, the man wanted by the police in connection with the Forest-gate murders, was arrested on Friday at East Ham. Standing outside the Cock Hotel, High-street, East Ham, a quarter of an hour before "opening time," mid-day, he was wearing corduroy trousers, a "civilian" jacket and vest, a cap and muffler. Passing by was the wife of a special constable, who, noticing his resemblance to the published photograph and attracted by the man's smallness of build, called the attention of a constable to him. The officer at once approached the man, and noticing that the wore a gold ring—the description of which had been circulated as that stolen from the hand of the dead woman, told him that he must go to the police station. Beckett, who, it is said, made no answer, then walked quietly with the officer to East Ham Police-station, and when placed in the charge-room assumed a very sullen demeanour.

Beckett made no denial as to his being the man wanted, and when searched not only was property stolen from the deceased woman found upon him but a quantity of coppers. These might be the proceeds of the robberies from the children's money-boxes.

It is asserted that he has been sleeping in the parish churchyard, in the close vicinity of the police station where he is at present lodged.

CAVALRY MEMORIAL SERVICE.

FAMOUS GENERALS PRESENT.

H.M. the King and Queen, with the Prince of Wales, travelled specially from Windsor to London to attend the service at St. Paul's Cathedral in memory of the officers and men of the Cavalry and the Yeomanry who fell during the war. The congregation also included Queen Alexandra, the Duke of Connaught and other members of the Royal family, Field Marshal Haig, Generals Byrd, Gough, Kavanagh, Mahon, Delisle and Bethune with many other distinguished officers. Lord French was unavoidably absent.

The losses of the regular cavalry were over 420 officers and 4,700 men. The preacher said the fallen were not dead, but merely promoted

HOUSE AT ETON COLLEGE FOR CHILDREN OF N.C.O.'s.

The Manchester Guardian prints a statement to the effect that the Council of Eton War Memorial Fund has considerably more money at its disposal than will meet the main aim of enabling old Etonians to send their sons to the school. They are thinking of devoting the surplus to founding a new House at Eton for the sons of non-commissioned officers and men who have fallen in the war.

The super dreadnought "Tennessee," of thirty-two thousand tons, has just been launched. The total cost is estimated at fifteen million dollars. She carries 12 fourteen-inch guns and burns oil exclusively. Her speed is twenty-one knots.

LADY GODIVA TO BE DRESSED.

The question as to whether or no Lady Godiva should dress the character as near as is reasonably consistent with the Coventry tradition has been greatly discussed this year in connection with the forthcoming Peace celebrations pageant. In deference to the wishes of the Bishop of Coventry the local committee has decided that Lady Godiva shall be fully and magnificently clothed.

HARD LABOUR FOR BIGAMISTS.

At the Old Bailey yesterday, James Thomson, 27, engineer, was sentenced to 9 months hard labour, and Jane Emily Suggett, 34, to 6 month's hard labour, for bigamy.

Sir Forrest Fulton said bigamy cases were now so prevalent that it was necessary to pass terms of imprisonment.

COST OF HOUSING.

The Local Government Board estimates that the probable capital expenditure, under the Housing Bill, on five hundred thousand houses at five hundred pounds each will be 250,000,000 pounds. This amount will be spread over three years.

WATCH FOR SHOOTING STARS.

If the weather is clear to-night Jupiter will be seen close to the new moon.

Between now and next Thursday a shower of bright meteors—shooting stars—is expected to occur. They are probably connected with Halley's comet.

In order to observe this phenomenon one must rise early, the shower being due before sunrise.

ALCOHOL.

In The Cologne Post of May 2nd a contributed article appeared under the somewhat enigmatic title of "Why Not?" It was an earnest and intimate discussion of a matter in which the British Army of the Rhine is seriously interested and in our opinion it was a discussion that merited publication in our pages. The scheme outlined by our correspondent may not commend itself to all of our soldiers; but is it worthy of careful attention, for it is the outcome of a close study of an undoubted problem of our military occupation. We cannot enter into all the questions that are raised in this article, for the virtue of restraint is rightly expected, though not always present, in a reputable daily newspaper. But it is within our province to make comments from time to time on all matters that affect the public morals of our fellows. Surely it is opportune to speak on the question that has been raised, the question of Alcohol and the Army.

The subject has been reckoned important by the Peace delegates at Paris, and a representative conference was held under their auspices. Various resolutions have been adopted and presented to the larger conference as well as to the League of Nations Commission. It is now almost certain that there will be in the future no sinister traffic in "trade spirits" with native races, and that each nation will have the power to deal with alcohol and alcoholism within its own boundaries. Self-determination is a modern synonym for liberty, and it is to be the watch-word of trade in strong liquors. But the chief interest of the conference lies in its attempt to draw lessons from the war. Lord D'Abernon, who has done notable work in England in the cause of healthy temperance, delivered a "Peace Programme of Drink Reform." He is a firm believer in the policy of dilution of alcoholic liquors, and he has at his command a mass of figures supporting the scientific system of control with which his name has been associated in these years of war. The principle of dilution is undoubtedly sound. Many and diverse views can be taken of alcohol, but there are really only two comments worth making — alcohol as a drug must be classed in the list of poisons. and alcohol as a drug makes an enduring appeal to most human beings. If our facts are correct then it follows that alcohol should be taken in the form in which its poison is least harmful.

Here it is that we come into contact with our contributor and his scheme. He sees that all is not as well as all should be in Cologne, and he points out that many of the evils of alcoholism can be laid at the doors of the cafes. The attractions and temptations of such places he would lessen by instituting British houses, on the basis of the Aldershot Canteens, where English beer and ale could be bought. His picture is well painted and alluring. Refreshment is to be had, while the sweet strains of music fill the air, and it is to be handed to us by Hebes with wreathed smiles, far removed from harpies of ill intent who whisper base counsels into our ears. If it were possible for such houses to provide substantial food their attractions and their safeguards would be greater. Now there is much to be said for this scheme. English beer of good quality and with a specific gravity not too high would be less injurious to our soldiers than the high-priced and not always innocuous wines of the Rhineland. Lord D'Abernon's principle of dilution for which he claims so much could be retained, and the stronger spirits that have often despoiled the word "Scotch" of its good name would not be lamented. Yes, the scheme is wise and commendable. We would point out that shortly the British Empire League Club will in the most auspicious circumstances attempt to do much that our contributor suggests, and we await the experiment with some eagerness and not a little hope.

We have said that the virtue of restraint is expected in a leading article of a daily newspaper. Is that the only place where it should be expected? Let us be frank with ourselves. No scheme however worthy can ever succeed in Cologne or any other part of our area unless it has the loyal support of every rank in the army. The quality of alcoholic liquor is vastly important, but surely not more so than the quantity. There are many men who would repudiate the charge of fanaticism who yet feel that the sane solution of the problem of liquor will place as much emphasis on the quantity consumed as the quality offered for consumption. Every officer, non-commissioned officer, and private in the British Army of the Rhine has it in his power to make or mar the good name of our country.

HINDENBURG.

In The Cologne Post of two day's ago we read that Field Marshal von Hindenburg will in May retire to his estate in Hannover and resume the country life which he was leading when war broke out. The news takes us back to the tasks of schooldays. Who has not in his mind memories of the Junior Latin class? It was there we read of Cincinnatus who ploughed his fields and scattered the good seed on the land, proud of his work, content with its simple joys. One day as he ambled behind his oxen he was hailed Dictator by a deputation of Roman citizens who saw in the gentle farmer a leader of men. Cincinnatus obeyed the call and brought victory to the Roman arms in a stern struggle against the Volsci. But when he had saved his people he shunned his high office and its rewards and retired forthwith to the quiet and labour of his farm. We have heard George Washington described as the Cincinnatus of the Americans, and there may still be modest warriors who after the fitful frenzy of the battlefild will gladly seek the joys of country life. But what of Hindenburg? Like Cincinnatus he goes back to his farm, but not with the deep joy of the old Roman dictator, for his skill did not save the country who looked to him for triumph. Yet he is fortunate withal, for the ploughshare is worthier than the sword — and Hannover is not St. Helena.

TO THE PHANTOM LADY.

Written on the Western Front, to the beautiful lady who always speaks to me in Dreamland.

I have love, dear, every day,
Contented, live our hours anew;
Slip care and sadness on their way,
And leave me joys—and you.

Insistent thoughts make me so glad,
That life's highway I happy find;
Disturbing fears I one time had,
Move past me on the wind.

Unspoken is my soul's desire,
Living I love thee day by day;
Gaily I play the amorous lyre,
So glide my hours away.

Perchance these dreams are but the spell
Whose silken tune threads hold me fast;
What magic thine; ah! who can tell
If joys supreme will last?

E'en so beyond terrestrial night
Somehow I may expected be;
My joy e'en there, celestial, bright,
To love, always with thee.

BELIEF AND CONDUCT.

"Does it matter what a man believes?"

It was in the Ypres Salient in December, 1916, that the question was forcefully put to me by a dying subaltern. Clearly conscious, he had hurriedly scanned the record of his short life, and evidently failing to arrive at a definite conviction with regard to the efficacy of certain orthodox religious practices and beliefs, he sought satisfaction in the appeal "Does it matter what a man believes, so long as he lives straight?"

It is both an appeal and a challenge ever recurring in the minds of men as they come in contact with the persistency by which religious beliefs are offered for their acceptance. Almost invariably, the average man readily answers the above question in the negative, mainly because he has not given it much thought. He does not necessarily deny the value of beliefs, though he gives to some the impression that, in his opinion, belief does not matter. He really wishes to avoid the mental bewilderment caused by the conflict of beliefs which he can only imperfectly understand.

He readily accepts a simple philosophy of life, and what appears to be a commonsense rule by which he can regulate his life. "To live straight" appeals to most men as a simple rule that demands not a great amount of subtle thought and reasoning in its application. What constitutes a "straight life" of course varies according to the development of conscience, unless an universally accepted pattern or ideal is available for reference. Without such a pattern of "straightness" on which a man can rely for guidance and inspiration, his life is robbed of much of its purposeful usefulness and attainment. It is accepted that every effect has a cause, and cause produces effect. In the same way belief produces conduct, and a man becomes what his beliefs make him. A man may rightly or wrongly believe he has a weak heart, and such a belief affects his mode of living in the restraints he imposes upon himself and in the matter of physical exertion. The principle of cause and effect is likewise operative when a man believes in God as his Father, in Jesus Christ as his Redeemer, and in the Holy Spirit as his Sanctifier.

The Christian believer hopes that he has in such beliefs an equipment for the whole of life, a key to its trials and sorrows, a basis of action for any and every circumstance, a view of God and man which can be trusted at every turn and vindicated upon every trial. Religious beliefs find their meaning and expression in the common acts of daily life. In the classic phrase of the Epistle of St. James "Pure religion and undefiled before God our Father is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction and to keep himself unspotted from the world." This is the life of kindliness and scrupulous honour in the rough and tumble of life. It is only maintained in purity by those who go through its routine in the quiet certainty that God as Father watches over all His children. Religion is here a thing pertaining to life itself, in contact wiht its most ordinary situations, giving its own value to all conduct. He who "lives straight" must believe in "keeping himself unspotted from the world" and in the life of Jesus Christ he has the Pattern, the Ideal, by which he may be guided and inspired in his efforts. The impartial witness of Mr. Lecky, the historian, may prove of value in support of the effect of Christian beliefs. He writes as follows: "It was reserved for Christianity to present to the world an ideal character, which through all the changes of eighteen centuries has filled the hearts of men with an impassioned love; and has shown itself capable of acting on all ages, nations, temperaments and conditions; and has not only been the highest pattern of virtue, but the highest incentive to its practice; and has exerted so deep an influence that it may be truly said that the simple record of three short years of active life has done more to regenerate and soften mankind, than all the disquisitions of philosophers, and than all the exhortations of moralists."

THE SPRUCER.

BY ALFRED E. WARD.

You find him in every mess. If you are lucky there may be more than one and thus the mess is better off. Usually when he is in evidence the sun waxes fast and on some occasions furious. He is usually a prevaricator. This he must be, but the end invariably justifies his existence. He has usually travelled a good deal, and of course knows everything worth knowing about every suoject discussed. He can tell you of the conquests he has made amongst dusky maidens. He continues with yarns of heroic deeds in which he modestly asserts he was the principal but adds that the other chap got the medal. He has won all manner of championships at swimming, but usually manages to keep out of the water. He is a champion tennis player in the football season. He is also a fine cricketer in the football season. There is nothing in the shape of sport in which he is not competent to take a leading part. He is always ready to make up the set at a hand of cards and when the members tire he gives them a hair-raising account of how he was torpedoed. In fact, we all wonder how he has managed to survive at all. If he had received justice his breast would be covered with decorations, but he has been unlucky. But does he care? Oh! dear, no! He simply keeps on carrying on, possibly qualifying — if all we are told be correct — for a very warm place. He is really a jolly good fellow and doesn't care a rap about the possible destination of his soul. At least so he will tell you. We do not contradict him.

* * *

It was a wet and cheerless evening. The mess sat in comparative silence. Beyond an occasional word or two from one member to another one heard little but "I'll try the lot." What had happened to this assembly where usually laughter reigned supreme. Why, "he" was on leave and the others had long ago exhausted all they had to talk about and were tired of talking of one another. You see they had been together for over four and a half years of war.

* * *

Convulsive laughter and then a stillness that could be felt. And suddenly a burst of more laughing and a medley of noise such as is only heard when a number of people are talking at the same time with raised voices to make themselves heard. Still another silence. And then was borne to the ear the sound of a single person talking, "shall we have a 'wet' night gentlemen?" "I've no money though, but I've no doubt some of you can oblige." Another roar of laughter and then "drink up, gentlemen.' The Sprucer has returned.

THE COMING PEACE.

During the latter period of the War, when victory was assured, people of all the Allied Nations were warned not to fail in their effort to win the Peace, and now that we are within sight of it, the necessity of remembering this advice becomes of great importance, but of greater importance in maintaining it. The question arises, how can this best be accomplished. Probably without force. What then in lieu of that. Educational work properly applied, more especially among the Central Powers, will have the effect of counteracting the mischievous teaching of brutality and of force — of blood and iron instead of the law of love. It is common knowledge that in the German schools the children have been instilled into accepting as a power of strength and protection the sword and not the intelligence.

This will require a great effort, but to maintain Peace and to derive a more perfect understanding we must ourselves first set a better example and further its effect for the benefit of the younger generation.

Facts sometimes make unpleasant reading, but they must predominate unless one has a callous regard for the truth. It is necessary then to refer to the dark days when this war commenced. It is believed the reason for the outbreak was the assassination of the Archduke of Austria. That was not the reason, that was the excuse.

This I think is the reason, and must figure in the education to enable reflection to form its own opinion. There is a book called "The Soul of Germany" written by a Professor of the University of Erlangen, in Bavaria. He makes a comparison between the amount of certain kinds of crime which came before the courts in England and in Germany in a period of ten years. It is understood, in making a comparision between the relative size of the two countries, that the population of Great Britain is about forty million, while that of Germany is over seventy million so that at least 75% must be added to the English numbers for the purpose of comparison. There occurred in Britain cases of maliciously wounding 1,262, in Germany 1,2, 53. In Britain 97 murders are recorded while in Germany the figure is 350. Almost double what might be expected, especially if one remembers the claim that "Germany is the home of Kultur." It must also be borne in mind the difference between what we ourselves technically term murder and the German standpoint. Of rapes there were in Britain 216, in Germany 9,381. The number of illegitimate children was with ourselves 37,641, in Germany 176,115. Of malicious damage to property we had in Britain 338 cases, in Germany no less than 25,753. So much then for facts, and so the student will extract the moral from the appalling disproportion and the growing children will begin to realize that their beloved Fatherland was a bad egg and nothing but a complete reformation in the ideals and morals will establish a nation that has a right to be accepted and acknowledged as a people of Kultur and Truth.

Having dismissed the parable of the Serbian outrage and all political intrigue, we have a clear field to carry on with facts so necessary for this education. One must accept these facts bearing on the German national character as being responsible for the marvellously unscrupulous preparation for the war — the unequaled execution of it, embracing deliberate brutality with cruelty never before approached. It is a strong view to express, but evidence is sufficient to defeat contradiction.

So much, then, for the worst, and now to enlighten the vanquished. We must not think, if we can help it, that all who fought for the German Empire are bad, that would be as unreasonable as it is stupid. There are many the victims of bad education, so that it behoves us to introduce pity into our desire to establish reform. In any case we must dismiss hatred from our hearts; to fondle hatred is to encourage war which we are supposed to abhor. If we recognize in Germany tremendous possibilities for the future and endeavour to foster the inclination to embrace what is good — in addition an effort to introduce our national love for sport into their lives — to prove by our mannerism our respect for the weaker sex and our desire for fair play — our strong leaning for peace and disinclination for militarism; to avoid extremes by disabusing our elves that we have a right to set ourselves up to be self-righteous; to give the impression that although accepting the victory as a blessing we would shrink from turning the fruits of it into fiendish glee — our attitude must be one of unselfishness and of loyal attention to our duty to ourselves and to the people with whom perhaps the British soldier for years to come may have to live. This attitude will help to maintain the coming Peace.

And finally amongst ourselves we must defeat impossible insinuations so often brought forward in argument — such as: the capitalist was responsible for the war. Nothing of the kind. Again, royalty brought about the war. Nothing of the kind. The desire for democracy was responsible for the war — nothing of the kind; and to encourage such thougats must help to encourage the continuation of what we all thank God for now is finished. The clergy have had no alternative but to proclaim to their people that the war will cleanse the world, and after calm reflection and a general study of facts we must conclude they have hit the nail on the head. So it behoves us to further this notion — accept the theory and study to accomplish it. By so doing, perhaps in the distant future when we come to look back upon it all, we shall be satisfied that the good has outweighed all the frightful evil and torture, and that the sacrifice has not been made in vain. G.A.H.

QUESTION TIME.

OR UNCLE ARTHUR'S LETTER BOX.
PART V.

CURIOUS. — Q. What is camouflage?
A. For technical detail apply to camouflage school; but to put it simply, camouflage is the art of making a thing that is seem as if it isn't and something else is, in such a way that the thing that is is not but the thing that isn't is when it really isn't.

QUARTER. — Q. What is the best way to keep blankets clean?
A. The blankets should be well beaten and hung in the sun, then sponged over lightly with sulphuric acid. This should be done every other day.

ADJUTANT. — Q. Can you give me a few tips as to the best method of dealing tactfully with my colonel?
A. Yes. (i) Avoid being in the office while he is there. (ii) Avoid walking over his feet. Go round, even if it takes longer. (iii) Buy a Liver Barometer.

CAPTAIN. — Q. Many people say that German cigars are no good, but I don't agree with them and want your opinion on the matter. For trial, I enclose a "Cubona Havana" which is really something like a cigar.
A. Yes, it is rather; what is it?

LONDON. — Q. What is the best way to while away a dull afternoon?
A. Have blackberry jam for lunch and take a fork out with you. "UBIQUE."

"THE RHINEDROPS."

OPENING CONCERT AT DOISDORF.

The 52nd Battalion, Welsh Regt. concert party opened on Wednesday at Doisdorf to a large and enthusiastic audience.

The opening chorus "Come to the show" was brightly rewarded and served to whet the appetite of the audience. Lt. Sidney L. Needham, M.C., followed with "Sing up an English song" and in reponse to vigorous demands for an encore submitted "Helen of Troy."

The first number of Capt. A.W. Fish M.C., was an excellent rendering of "On the Staff" and as an encore "N'Everything" proved very popular. "Mate of mine" and "It is a tiny garden" were sung by Lieut K.F.C. McIver, who possesses a voice of rare quality, while Lieut F.W. Moorsom sang "When the sun goes down in Dixie" with plenty of "go." "Finnigans Ball" preceded by humorous topical cross-talk was rendered in real Irish style by Capt. Fish and Lieut. Needham, while "Heart of a Rose" was sung by 2nd Lieut. J. Postlethwaite, whose full baritone voice showed all the finish of his continental training. "Ideas of a Perfect Day" by the Troupe proved a very popular item and closed the first half of the programme.

The second half opened with "Something Oriental" by Lieut. McIvor in Eastern costume and with stage setting, and was followed by "Omar Khayyam" as an encore. The songs were rendered in excellent style and voice. Capt. Fish followed with "Drake is going to sea" and in reponse to demands for "encore" the same artiste sang "Norman the Mormon" which almost brought the house down.

"Green hills of Somerset" and "Jane" were Lieut. Needham's numbers and were sung excellently. "Busy little Bee" and "Some Sunday morning" proved to be Lieut. Moorsom's most popular numbers.

"Marie my girl" and "Keep on hoping" were very effectively rendered by Lieut. McIver.

"A perfect Lady," a sketch by Capt. Fish, Lieut. Needham and Lieut. Moorsom, was very amusing, and the programme closed with "The wild, wild Women" by Lieut. Needham and Troupe.

Altogether the concert was a great success. The artistes showed talent of a high order; the costumes and make up were very good and the music up-to-date.

BAND OF THE 12th LANCERS.

Y.M.C.A. CENTRAL CONCERT.

A most enjoyable concert was given at the Y.M.C.A. Central Hall on Friday evening by the Band of the XI (Prince of Wales) Royal Lancers, and the hall was filled with an audience of some two thousand men.

Conductor Joodered and his band are to be congratulated on the consistently fine renderings of the varied items which made up the programme, the excellent ensemble and rhythmic precision being most refreshing.

The band consists almost entirely of young blood, but there was certainly no evidence of immaturity in its playing.

Only two of the items were of the so-called popular type, and it was noticeable that they shared no undue proportion of the applause.

Corporal Waters, who contributed vocal items, won well-deserved applause for his singing of "Drake goes West" and "Shipmates o' Mine."

Despite the counter attraction of this concert Mr. E. W. Hornung in the neighbouring Loreley Hall, drew a large audience to listen to his discoure on Kipling, one of his delightful series of "Talks on short stories and their Writers."

A MESS OF POTTAGE.

"FISH AND CHIP" DEPARTMENT AT THE "Y.M."

There are many of us who have been carrying the "soldiers birthright" of grousing to rather great extremes, and though I refuse to vouch for its effectiveness or otherwise in reference to various social efforts in our midst, it's a fair bet that we in Cologne will soon prefer the "mess of pottage" which the central Y.M.C.A. is preparing for us to the so-called birthright in social affairs.

One of the excellent ingredients in this mess of pottage is a ramblers' club, with a photographic section for the salt. Rhineland is perhaps the photographer's paradise in at least two respects — that of scenery and in the matter of obtaining good photographic apparatus. It is almost needless to say, therefore, that there are already very good prospects that a Ramblers Club will soon figure as one of the most important in the many activities of the Red Triangle fraternity.

RICE PUDDING AND SCOTCH PORRIDGE.

Another ingredient which may be regarded as a real appetiser is the result of the arrival on the Y.M.C.A. staff of several English ladies who are endeavouring to turn the "Wy Ems" into a club instead of something which may have been called a shop. These ladies, in preparing dishes of delicious rice pudding and scotch porridge, are making the place more like a home from home or good club.

We learn from Dr. Francis that these "Englisher ladies" have an eye to the fact that there are many lads from Lancashire and Yorkshire in our midst and in consequence are seeking to secure the means for providing fish and chip suppers so popular with people from those counties. So there is to be less of the queueing business for chocolate, cigarettes and biscuits at the Y.M.C.A., at least.

LAWN TENNIS.

The semi-finals in the amateur Tennis Championships were played at Queen's Club on Thursday. The present holder, Mr. Baerlin, beat Mr. A. C. Druce 6—4, 6—2, 6—0. Capt. V. H. Pinnell beat Mr. J. F. Marshall 6—3, 6—1, 6—3.

SURREY WICKET-KEEPER DEAD.

The death is announced of Harry Wood, the famous Surrey wicket-keeper. He appeared for England at the Oval in 1888 in a test match against Australia.

EVERTON FORWARD AT DOISDORF.

52nd. BEAT 51st. WELSH.

The above match took place on the ground of the 52nd Battalion at Doisdorf and resulted in a win for the home team by 3—0. The 52nd at once forced the attack and for some time pressed heavily, the forwards, especially Sergt. Kay, played very tricky football against their much heavier opponents.

The visitors then broke away, the attack being led by Sergt. Roberts, whose football was remarkably good. Indeed, the work of this old Welsh International and Everton forward was the outstanding feature of the game.

A little later, Maude, on the right wing, centred neatly and enabled Segt. Kay to score a pretty goal.

After the interval, the visitors rallied and Sergt. Kay broke away after Corpl. Wort, the home back, had retrieved the position, and scored again.

Play then became rather nondescript, marked only by the unerring play of Sergt. Roberts, who had gone back for the visitors. His kicking was remarkable.

Later, O'Bierne scored again from a centre from Parry on the left and a good game ended in a well earned victory for the 52nd.

The home team were without their left wing. McGahey and Inwood (who is in hospital), which made the performance the more creditable.

LANCS. DIVISION FOOTBALL SEMI-FINAL.

DIVISIONAL R.E. v 52nd KING'S LIVERPOOL REGT.

This match was played on "D" Ground, Richard Wagner Str, Bonn, on Wednesday April 30th, resulting in a win for the Engineers by 3 goals to 1, after playing an extra 15 minutes each way.

Very even play was experienced during the first half, the King's opening the scoring from a penalty. After half time the R.E's with scored 1—0 against them played with wonderful energy and had much the better of the game; the King's forwards made several attacks but found great difficulty in passing, Howard, who played an excellent game. The score was made even by Holdness scoring from a penalty, after which the Engineers pressed even harder, until the whistle went for time with the score still one all. It was then decided to play 15 minutes extra each way. At first play was even until Holdness put the ball well up in the goal mouth while Morton in his usual form rushed it through. During the second 15 minutes Gowe added to the score by an excellent shot in the corner of the goal. The following represented the Divisional R.E.:—Spr. Allaw; Spr. Joy, Howard; Sp. Farrington, Spr. Holdness, Dr. Howlay; Dr. Morton, Dr. Sanas, Spr. Gowe, Wilkins, Pte. Bell.

LANCASHIRE DIVISION COMPETITION.

BORDER REGT. ENTER THE FINAL.

The semi-final of the Lancashire Division Association Competition resulted in 1/5 Border Regt. defeating 161st Brigade Royal Field Artillery by 3—1. Both sides were strongly represented as follows: Border Regt.: goal, Shones; backs: Hastie and Elliott; half-backs: Discon, Lieut. Jones and Potterson; forwards: Walker, Ellis, Baxter, Corfe and Rudge.

Royal Field Artillery: goal: Nicholls; backs: Butler and C.W. Cooke; halfbacks: Beale, Noblett, and Waldron; forwards: Barkley, Baker, Hooper, Lieut. Allen, and J. Cooke. Referee: Lieut. Hayford, Kings Liverpool Regt.

The Borders took the lead after 35 minutes, Corfe rushing forward to the Artillery goalmouth and netting after Nicholls had effected a partial clearance. Snow then began to fall and up to the interval the score was unchanged.

The teams contested matters in spirited fashion on the resumption, Shones, the Border custodian, having an anxious time. The pressure on the Border defence was maintained and Waldron brought the scores level five minutes after the restart. He beat Shones with a very strong shot. A corner at the Artillery end brought no advantage.

The Borders again secured the lead twenty minutes before "time," Baxter netting from a penalty.

The weather conditions continued to be unfavourable for the remainder of the game, and Ellis further increased the Border lead by netting after Nicholls had left his citadel in an attempt to clear.

"THE COLOGNE POST" CRICKET CUP.

The complete rules in connection with "The Cologne Post" Cricket Cup will be published on Thursday next. In the meantime send in YOUR entry addressed to the Sports Editor, "The Cologne Post," Cologne. Remember the closing date is THURSDAY, 8th MAY.

KEEN GAME AT RIEHL BARRACKS.

51st DURHAM L. I.

On Wednesday afternoon, before some hundreds of spectators, the Battalion team of the 51st D.L.I. played "Y" Coy of the same regiment.

The game started in speculative fashion. The Battalion broke away and a surprise shot from C.S.M. Joyce completely beat the custodian. The company then made a raid on the Battalion goal and from a smart pass by the outside right, Pte Toos, Sergt. Shepherd scored the equalising point. C.M.S. Barnes, the Bn. goalkeeper, was in grand form, but had to give way before the onslaughts of the Coy. forwards. Later Lce. Cpl Widdowson, centre forward, took possession of the ball and, making a position for himself, crashed the ball into the net.

Lce. Cpl Widdowson scored again early in the second half and shortly after a doubtful foul by the Coy. Skipper resulted in a penalty being awarded. Taken by Sergt. Wilkinson, the goalie had no chance with the shot.

Some good play between the Coy. outside left, C.Q.M.S. Colquhoun and his partner, C.S.M. Kelly, resulted in the latter arousing the spectators to enthusiasm, by scoring a neat goal. Shortly afterwards, Lce/Cpl Widdowson notched his third and the Coy.'s fifth goal.

This ended a most enjoyable game, Capt. Andrews M.C., the Coy. skipper, having earned the thanks of all for arranging the fixture.

Keen Match at Euskirchen.

A fast and exciting game was played at Euskirchen barracks on Thursday between 175 Siege Battery R.G.A. and 51st Battalion Leicester Regt.

In the first half each team scored one goal, but after the interval the Battery maintained the pace better and added two more goals to their score.

INTER-THEATRE OF WAR CHAMPIONSHIP.

ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL FINAL.

B.E.F. (FRANCE), 1; E.E.F. (EGYPT) 0.

At Stamford Bridge on Friday B.E.F. (France) won the Inter-Theatre of War Championship (association football phase) by defeating E.E.F. (Egypt) by one goal to nil. The winners owed their success chiefly to the excellence of their defence, both backs and the goalkeeper playing a superbly safe game.

The half backs of the B.E.F. also rendered good service to their side by sure tackling, accurate kicking and sound judgment.

Only twice did Egypt attack with anything like strength, the remainder of the time being necessarily devoted to defensive tactics.

The winning goal was scored in the second half by Sergt Lee. The teams were:

Egypt.—C.S.M. Whattey (Wiltshire Regt.); Sgt. Stile (Essex Regt.), Corpl. Detlow (London Regt.); Pte. Ritenie (London Regt.), Pte. Downs (London Regt.), Pte. Brewer (London Regt.); Corpl. Bradshaw (London Regt.) Gnr. Sams (R.F.A.), Driver Johnston (7th D.A.C.), Pte. Olliard (London Regt.), Lce. Corpl. Iliffe (London Regt.).

After the match, medals were presented by the Prince of Wales to members of the winning team as well as to successful competitors in cross country running, boxing, rugby football and other events in connection with the championships. His Royal Highness shook hands with each recipient.

SANDOWN RACES.

On Friday, winners at Sandown were:

Walton Plate: 1, Ho Ho (4—1); 2, Look Ahead (100—8); 3, Cry Help (100—8).

Claygate Plate: 1, Clapgate (7—4); 2, Digby (4—1); 3, Cyleneus (100—30).

Park Stakes: 1, Saffrain (6—4 on); 2, Star of Hope (11—2); 3, Aiglon (100—8).

Fairmile Plate: 1, White Heat (20—1); 2, Berseuse (5—4); 3, Tomatina (5—1).

Prince Albert Handicap: 1, Pretty Girl (10—1); 2, Pourboire (20—1); 3, Magic Prince (20—1).

Guilford Handicap: 1, Sky Rocket (6—1); 2, Gloomy Dean (10—1); 3, New Guinea (11—4).

DERBY FAVOURITE BEATEN.

The Derby favourite, the Panther, was on Thursday badly beaten in a trial over one mile at Newmarket. The result was: 1 Jack Rose (Toon); 2, Cygnus (Cooper); 3, The Panther (Childs). Won by three lengths, the same between second and third.

BILLIARDS.

Yesterday afternoon's stage of the match between Inman and Newman, at Leicester-square, went in favour of Inman, but he was still 1,000 points behind at the interval. Newman, after advancing his 83 to 102, did not again compile three figures, 95 and 91 being the highest of his subsequent breaks. Inman was responsible for runs of 221, 186, and 123. At the interval the scores were: Newman (rec 2,000) (in play), 14,109; Inman, 13,001.

Closing score:

NEWMAN (in play)	14,835
INMAN	13,843

DULWICH C.C.

The Dulwich Cricket Club has arranged a strong programme for 1919. Matches have been fixed with the Lois, Hampstead, Richmond, Beddington, Beckenham, Catford, Bickley, Wanderers, Spencer, L.C. and W. Bank, Private Banks, Bromley, Sutton, Dulwich College, Old Carlton, Commercial Union, Cyphers, Forest Hill, Mitcham, Ealing and Thames Ditton clubs.

BULL DOG CUP FINAL.

The final tie for the Bull Dog Club Cup will be played at Fulham on Saturday, May 17, kick-off 3.30. The sides are R.A.F., Roehampton (holders) and the Scots Guards.

Bands will be in attendance, and during the interval C.S.M.W. H. Wright will give a display of swordsmanship.

POLICE FOOTBALL CUP.

The net profit from the final tie in the Metropolitan Police Charity Cup, played between H and A Divisions of police at Chelsea last Thursday is £47. This is an excellent result considering the bad weather that attended the game.

BURNHAM YACHTING CLUB.

The anual general meeting of the Burnham Y.C. was held last evening at the Imperial Hotel, Regentst, under the presidency of Mr. Hartley F. Straker, the commodore. The balance-sheet submitted showed that despite the fact that there was no yachting last year the club had made a small profit on the twelfe months' trading. The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: Commodore, Mr. Hartley F. Straker; vice-commodore, Lt.-Col. S. Ofenholme, L. Bradley, D.S.O., M.C., D.C.M.: rear-commodore, Mr. F. B. Pitcher; hon treasurer, Mr. A. L. Ramage; hon sec, Lt. Rutland S. Ely, R.N.V.R.; hon sailing sec, Mr. J. W. Patterson; committee, Lt-Commander H. T. Holloway, R.N.V.R., Lt. Oswald B. Coles, R.N.V.R., Capt. T. D. Mr. Meekin, R.A.F., and Mr. P. Deane Ann, H. A. Covington, H. Griffin, F. F. Grimes, S. Herming, R. K. Mooney, G.H. Truefitt, H. E. Warner, and F. R. Wooeter. It was reported that the prospects for racing during the coming season, especially in the ex-24-footer limited handicap class, were of the brightest.

SWIMMING ASSOCIATION.

The S.C.A.S.A. have decided to hold their swimming and water polo championships this season.

The Amateur Swimming Association have allocated the ladies' championships over 100 yards and 200 yards to the Garston Ladies' Club (Liverpool) and Notts Ladies' Club respectively. The former event will be decided on July 29 and the latter on September 15. The English schoolboys' team championship will take place at Weston-super-Mare.

NEW INDOOR MILE FIGURES.

Joie Ray, National A.A.U. mile champion, has established a new world's indoor mile record. It was made in the Central A.A.U. championships held in Chicago. The old indoor record was 4mins. 1-8secs. Ray's time was 4mins 14 3-5secs.

The famous Yale athlete, Johnny Overton, who held the previous record, was killed at Chateau Thierry.

WITH BAT AND BALL.

IMPROMPTU CRICKET MATCH AT NEUKIRCHEN.

DEMON BOWLER DISCOVERED.

On Thursday the 17th Brigade R.F.A. played a very successful impromptu cricket match at Bergisch, Neukirchen. The talent which was yearning to shine was perhaps a trifle cramped by a wicket which might be termed a shade risky and a ball which was not so much spherical as three cornered.

The H.Q. and D. Battery team won the toss with an ersatz 10 pfennig piece and elected to produce the first casualties. The opposing side drawn from the 13th and 92nd Batteries R.F.A. were strengthened by a demon bowler in Lieut. F. M. Bricket who captured two wickets just after the start.

Capt. Stewart with a running fire of comment (or perhaps it was profanity!) looked good for runs, but using a bat condemned by D.A.D.O.S. in the morning he was caught at square leg from a misfire. Capt. Bradshaw after stopping most of Dvr. Wilson's faster deliveries with his anatomy raised a score of 34 before he fell a victim to Dvr. Rigby, who bowls the slow sticky sort accompanied by vast frightfulness. The R.S.M. and Mr. Extras finally raised the total to 68. The bowling of Capt. Stewart and Dvr. Gardiner at the "pavilion" end, with the slip theory touch, proved too much for the opposition, sharing the wickets between them. Dvr. Wilson and Lieut. Brickett, the latter coming in too late to save the game, were the only batsmen who looked like scoring. The following are the scores.

H.Q. & D. BATTERY.

Capt. Stewart. c Brickett b Wilson, 8; Lt. Wright. b Brickett, 0; Lt. Gordon. b Brickett, 0; Lt. Bradshaw c Wye b Rigby, 34; Cpl. Dunn. b Wilson, 0; Dvr. Gardiner. low b Wilson, 2; Dvr. SPORT AND SUNSHINE.

51st SUSSEX ATHLETIC MEETING.

"W" COMPANY WINNERS OF THE BATT. CUP.

On Wednesday "W" Company of the 51st Royal Sussex Regt finished their Athletic Sports meeting at Neunkirchen in brilliant weather and amid cheerfully beflagged surroundings. This variable hotbed of athletics, trained by platoon cross-country runs and company paper chases, turned out in full force and provided some excellent sport, particularly in the case of the obstacle Race which was run over an exciting and arduous course, strategically arranged by Lieut O'Brien; the walking race also provided a vast amount of amusement owing to the unnatural postures assumed in certain quarters by the competitors.

The meeting was arranged on the inter-section plan, the two sections who drew for first place being Nos. 4 and 12.

The prizes and medals were distributed to the individual winners and the winning sections on Thursday by the Commanding Officer, Lieut-Col. V.T.R. Ford D.S.O., who is also President of the Company Sports Committee; and the whole company by its sporting turn-out lived up to the high reputation it gained through winning the Battalion Athletic Sports Cup. The prize winners were as follows:—

100 yards: L/Cpl. Taylor, 11 sec; putting the shot, L/Cpl. Taylor.

220 yards: Sergt. Wilson, 27 sec; Throwing the Cricket Ball, Pte Duffel.

440 yards: Pte Ford, 53 secs; High Jump: L/Cpl. Chesson; Inter-section relay race, No. 12 section.

Half mile: Lieut O'Brien;

Long Jump: Pte Ridgeway;

Four-legged race: L/Cpl. Buss, Ptes Griss and Hancock.

Mounted Race: L/Cpl. Taylor and Pte Ford;

Tug of War: No. 12 Section;

Inter-platoon Relay Race: No. 3 Platoon.

Walking Race: Pte Northcott

Obstacle Race: Pte Jellos.

Winning sections: Nos. 4 and 12—18 points and 3rd Section, No. 14—9 points.

WELSH FOOTBALL BOOM.

Touring teams have been the salvation of the Llanelly Rugby Club says the Daily Express. Last Christmas the club was over £1,000 in debt, but matches with the New Zealanders, the Maoris, R.A.F., and the R.N.D. altered all this, and next season there will be a balance in hand.

There have been more touring sides at Llanelly since the armistice than have visited any other town in the Principality. It has, in fact, become almost a weekly affair.

Preparations for the 1919-20 season are being actively pushed forward in Wales. The Newport club have arranged thirty-seven matches—nineteen at home and eighteen away. Cardiff and Swansea will each be played four times, and the list includes such famous English teams as the Barbarians, Blackheath, London Harlequins, Devonport, Leicester, Gloucester, Bristol, and the Universities.

Both Swansea and Neath hope to have strong sides, and the former will have a couple of attractive tours. The position of Aberavon is, however, some what uncertain.

Swansea will have stronger opposition than usual from the Association game, for "the Town" are now in the first division of the Southern League.

The competition for the West of England golf challenge cup will take place on the Burnham and Berrow course, Somerset, on September 16 and following days.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

(With an Occasional Entertainments Note.)

Rhine Officiers Sports Club.

A correspondent, writing from Flerzheim — a little place situated the other side of Bonn, — complains that officers in and about that part will find it impossible to extract any amusement from the newly formed Rhine Officers Sports Club on account of the distance which separates them from Cologne and the inadequacy of the train services. He goes on to quote extracts from the railway time-table which provide conviction that the officers so situated time-table which provide conviction that the officers so situated would find it impossible to squeeze into a day's trip to Cologne anything like a reasonable amount of time to indulge in one of the forms of sport for which the club caters.

He suggests that the same committee that controls the affairs of the club in Cologne should extend its activities to Bonn and provide facilities in that town for the benefit of the large number of officers stationed there and in its environs.

The suggestion seems to be a good one and the idea of one committee controlling both departments would certainly simplify the administration of them.

Do it Now.

A dayor two ago our mail bag produced a couple of well-written reports of football matches. They were about a quarter of a column in length and described the games in detail. So far, so good. But now to the point. One of the reports was of a match played ten days previously and the other described an exciting tussle that "happened" four days before that. Correspondents are very generous in the liberal quantity of news they send for insertion in the Cologne Post and we are greatly obliged to them for the trouble they take in this respect.

To be attractive, news must be up to date, however, and at the end of a few days a sporting event has lost its interest. Contributors should please remember that this is a daily new paper, but by inserting reports of ancient happenings in the great quantities in which it is received, the Cologne Post would quickly become "parish-magazinified." Consequently if something happens in your unit to-day, post us a few notes about it by to-nights post, get through to us on the phone, or send us a wire.

Where to Fish.

Those readers in Germany who are keen on fishing have plenty of opportunity to indulge in the popular pastime. Although the Rhine is not an ideal river for fishing, its tributaries in the vicinity of Cologne are productive of some good sport. The Aar is mentioned in particular and the Loreley Rock, the subject of a popular German legend, is mentioned as an ideal place from which to ply the rod and line. Other streams in special favour are the Sieg the Agger, and the Rhur, with railway facilities within easy reach of each of them. The varieties of fish to be found in the river and streams include pike, eels and ray fish (a kind of salmon). Spinnow, flies and worms are the most common kinds of bait used.

In pre-war days there was fine fishing at Honnef, where anglers were only allowed to fish on production of special permit, and in the annals of the Honnef Club, as is usual in such things, are several tall stories of the catches made, with Englishmen, then resident in this district, as the "heroes."

A special article on when, where and how to fish will be published in a few days.

Music and Education.

The lead taken by the London Division in including music in the subjects taught in connection with the Army Education Scheme is likely to be extensively followed, in view of the great success that attended the three symphony concerts given at Bonn recently. The selection of suitable works is an important matter in such a scheme. In this connection, "Musicus" in the Daily Telegraph criticises the programme of concerts on the grounds that they were not sufficiently English, "especially since the concerts are avowedly educational." It was precisely for that reason that there was little English music included, since to demonstrate to the troops the beauty of music it was necessary only to play the best and most easily understood. Just as, if the Educational Scheme were to include a tour of Art Galleries, it would be the most beautiful and celebrated pictures that would attract the greatest attention irrespective of nationality of the artist. The programme in this case was carefully thought out beforehand, and the reception was the measure of its success.

The Boxing Spirit.

A writer in No. 1 of the Tank Corps Journal, writing on the subject of boxing says:

"There is no sport in the British Army more popular than the splendid art of self-defence. Wherever there are officers and men stationed, there you will find boxing-gloves and boxers, and wherever there is a soldier boxer there you will find a soldier audience. It is only necessary to witness any Army boxing match to realise the splendid sportsmanship of contestants and audience. We don't care where a man may come from if he is a boxer, for in Army boxing everybody receives fair play.

Our battalion contests in France were a great success and in practically every section of the corps we had volunteers eager and willing to give their services. I saw officers and men put on the gloves for the first time and enter the ring a few days later, and many of them knew very well that they "hadn't an earthly."

ADDRESS: I. DOMHOF

OPPOSITE THE CATHEDRAL

A BLIND BILLIARDIST.

The "Ex-Service Man" recently published an article by Mr. S. A. Mussabini, the official referee of the Inman-Stevenson match, in which the zeal of the blind ex-soldier is magnificently portrayed.

In this article, the writer tells how Sergeant-Major Shawl, a Yorkshireman, was with Princess Patricia's Canadians in the second battle of Ypres. He sustained a severe head wound, which severed the leading optical nerve, and for him, like so many others, unfortunately, it seemed to mean giving up all hobbies in which sight played a part.

But returning to England and reaching the period of convalescence, he came to be acquainted with the proprietor of a Maida Vale (London) hotel, where billiards was a feature. Now, Shawl had been a pretty good player and a keen lover of the game. All his old tondnes came back to him when he heard the mellow click of the ivories, the call of the scores and the several and distinctive incidentals of a match in progress.

At the close of this game he felt impelled to to try whether it were possible for him to make some reasonable attempt at scoring a shot. Hopeless as it all appeared, he managed to gain an approximate idea of the placings of the balls by touching them with the hands. Taking his bearings from the sides of the table he bore pathetic testimony to the truth of the adage that "the way of the pioneer is hard."

Infinitely resourceful is human nature! From having had to touch the balls to properly locate them—and failed very completely on that day—Shawl has since trained his fingers to 'sense' their positions without actual contact. He has highly developed a 'sixth sense' so that he can now realise just how and where the balls stand on the table. It is much the same as the ordinary person in a dark room seems instinctively to know the approximate whereabouts of the walls and door. But what most of us foretell by instinct Shawl has now come to do by scientific method.

He says that as he nears the balls the air becomes colder. It furnishes a circle of displaced atmosphere which is of lower temperature, owing to the presence of a foreign substance (the ball). He has trained his supersensitized finger tips to guage the centre point of the circle and thereby to quite reasonably well find the edges and various divisions of the ball he plays with as well as those he has to fire it at.

In this manner, Shawl satisfies himself as to the stand-points of the three balls and of any pocket he may be playing to. His fingers work round about the balls, seldom touching or getting within less than an inch of them. The accuracy of his striking the cue ball and its correctness of running to the first object-ball is, in the extreme circumstances, quite remarkable. Frequently, the ex-Sergeant Major makes a succession of four, five and six scoring strokes—which is quite equal to the performances of the ordinary two-eyed players.

With the gain in sense of touch has come an uncanny training of the hearing. Shawl can follow the course of any game by listening to the running of the balls on the cloth, their clinking meetings and the differing sounds they send forth according to the character of the stroke, or the duller effects produced by pocket shots. He knows them all "by heart." But the most wonderful, to my mind, among all his presentations is his ability to distinguish the red ball from the two whites. This is a tiny secret he keeps to himself!

The first blind man to play billiards—and play it quite well as ordinary 100-uppers go—Sergt.-Major Shawl's enterprise has been watched with much curious interest by the experts of that pattern home of industry and good-will, the St. Dunstan's Hostel for the Blind, Regent's Park, N. W.

TRANSPORT REDUCTION.

Consequent upon the break-up of the armies, and the demobilisation of the greater part of the troops, the Transport Organisation at the War Office has been reduced to much smaller proportions than were necessary during hostilities.

Sir Sam Fay, Director-General of Movements and Railways, and a member of the Army Council, retires to-day. Mr. Oliver Bury, Director of Inland Waterways and Docks, late general manager of the Great Northern Railway, also gives up his appointment; and Sir George McLaren Brown, European manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway, Assistant Director-General, has already left.

GERMAN CAMERAS, LENSES etc.

A recent G.R.O. states that complaints have been received by the War office from manufacturers at home, stating that German lenses, cameras, binoculars, etc., have been sold by British officers and other ranks who had purchased them here in the occupied territory. While there is no legal objection to the purchase of such articles for personal use only, it is distinctly unfair to the makers at home for the goods to be re-sold on arriving in England. Moreover, it is a distinct breach of the regulations affecting the importation without license of goods made by the enemy, and as such is subject to the penalties prescribed by the Prohibition of Import-Regulations.

CLOSING THE WAR CHARITIES.

Preparations for closing the war funds must come with the close of the war. The amount raised in all is estimated at £125,000,000. Some details of sums raised in great provincial and Scottish cities are given below:

Hull.

About £150,000 has been subscribed. Of this, £75,000 was for distinctively local needs; £30,800 went to the Prince of Wales' Fund, £9,150 to the Red Cross, £4,200 to Christmas gifts for the troops, and £3,000 to the purchase of a motor ambulance.

Leeds.

Grand total of £132,210. The Belgian Refugee Fund benefited to the amount of £20,000, and the Lord Mayor's Fund for the assistance of soldiers' and sailors' dependents to the amount of £5,000.

Manchester.

Nearly £1,500,000 has been subscribed by Manchester, of which all but £200,000 has gone to what are specifically described as "war charities."

Bradford.

It is estimated that nearly a million sterling has been raised; £180,000 went to the Lord Mayor's Fund for supplementing separation allowances and pensions, £56,000 to the Y.M.C.A., £25,000 to Belgian refugees, and £50,000 to soldiers' comforts. The total amount raised by municipal effort has been £450,000.

Birmingham.

Over £100,000 was subscribed to the Lady Mayoress's Fund for comforts for the troops and prisoners of war. £35,000 has been sent to the Red Cross, £30,000 to help blinded soldiers, and over £35,000 to Belgian and other relief funds. The prince of Wales' Fund benefited early in the war to the amount of £190,000.

Newcastle.

Total probably in excess of £1,000,000. The Lord Mayor's Fund approached £300,000, and among other large sums have been £50,000 for a local orthopaedic centre and £47,000 for soldier's dependents.

Glasgow.

The magnificent total of £4,450,000 has been collected in cash and kind by funds with headquarters in the city, of which £3,350,000 was contributed by Glasgow citizens. Some of the larger amounts were as follows: Red Cross, £1,620,000; Prince of Wales' Fund, £270,000, Belgian Relief Funds, £203,000; Hospital for Limbless Sailors and Soldiers, £290,000; Scottish Women's Hospitals, £180,000; Lord Provost's Fund for sailors' and soldiers' dependents, £118,000.

Liverpool.

Some £600,000 at least has been contributed, including £140,000 to the Prince of Wales' Fund, £82,000 to the Red Cross, £75,000 to funds for the dependents of fighting men, £75,000 to the Y.M.C.A., and £100,000 to funds for the assistance of prisoners of war.

Nottingham.

The total for Nottingham is believed to be about a quarter of a million sterling, divided as follows: Flag days for various war charities, £20,000; two patriotic fairs, £50,000; Belgian Relief Funds, £20,000; Prince of Wales' Fund, £50,000; comforts for the troops, £60,000; miscellaneous funds, £50,000.

CHINESE VISITORS AT COURT.

The Daily News gives the following account of an interview with ten Chinese interpreters whom they received at Windsor Castle this week:

What the King and Queen thought of the interpreters is not on record. What the Chinese interpreters thought of the King and Queen was that they were the nicest and most affable rulers any country could have.

The ten who exchanged smiling salutations with the King and Queen make up the thirteenth party which has come over from the battlefields of France on a fortnight's leave, under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A. and with the approval of the War Office. Being interpreters, they are all men of some education.

"Disappointed?" repeated Mr. Henry Ming Chow, in reply to a question as to the effect of the absence of ceremonial at Windsor Castle had upon their eastern minds. "Quite the opposite. If we had been in China under the old dynasty nobody would have been allowed to stand in the presence of the ruler; and here were the great King and Queen of England and walking about and laughing and talking just like any other lady and gentleman. We thought it was fine. It impressed us very much indeed."

They were the guests at Windsor Castle of Princess Alice, and the King and Queen came specially to see them. "Japanese?" the Queen was heard to remark to the King, and all the racial pride of these cheerful yellow men swelled up against the misunderstanding. "Ah, no, no, no. Chinese," they protested. The Queen laughed and bowed, and the interpreters smiled back at her. They chuckled heartily as they recalled their protest.

The painted ceilings at Windsor won their special admiration. "I think the most wonderful thing in London," said Mr. Wing Fu Chang, "is your transport. But it is all wonderful."

"Even the architecture?" they were asked.

"Oh, yes," came the chorussed response. They appeared almost pained by the idea that anyone could doubt it.

"We cannot say too much in praise of your people," said Mr. Wang Wei Ping. "We think they are very smart, very honest, very polite, and very kind indeed to the Chinese. Especially the ladies," said Mr. Chow.

These interpreters have been doing very important work with the Chinese labour corps just behind the lines in France. Whilst in this country their welfare is superintended by the Rev. W.E. Soothill, formerly president of the Imperial University, Shansi, China.

"SHORT STORIES AND THEIR WRITERS."

On Friday of last week Mr. E.W. Hornung gave the third of his "Arm-Chair Talks," and he discoursed on the short stories of Rudyard Kipling. The Loreley Hall was once more well filled by an interested audience. Mr. Hornung claimed Kipling as the best short-story writer in English up to his own time, and he discussed his methods and characteristics of writing in a most illuminating fashion. If there were any present who had not known the glamour of Kipling, they must have had awakened in them a desire to read the stories of a master writer. Mr. Hornung's selections from "Only a Subaltern" and "The Glansbys" were much appreciated.

Full sets of the works of Dickens, Thackerey, Harrison Ainsworth, and Charles Lever, all first editions, yesterday at Hodgson's fetched £365, £350, £300, and £195. Another set of Dickens's works realised £200, and a lock of his hair with an autograph £37.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

FORCED ONLY BY REVOLUTION.

To uphold and praise the work and traditions of an army which, though having fought well and honourably, has suffered defeat, is merely the application of justice. To boast of an army which has used every illegal means possible to secure victory and which has totally ignored conventions of war in part framed and wholly pledged by its leaders, is as ignominous as the army itself.

The one is chivalry: the other, hypocrisy.

That is our English standard of thought—vastly different from that of Germany, if the Berlin weekly paper, "Die Wahrheit," can be cited as truly expressive of German opinion.

"Germany was forced only by the Revolution" says the paper, to accept the most ignominous conditions of armistice ever dictated to a nation We could not be victorious any more, but the enemy could not force upon us those conditions, for they lacked the necessary power and weight on the front, which was only broken in parts. As a whole, our army was still an adversary which the enemy could not underestimate. But revolution destroyed every possibility of resistance."

That is their excuse for a defeat which was inevitable. There is little need to discuss the question of the badly broken front, for it is obvious that it was so broken as to cause a revolution which brought with it defeat. This is more than the Germans effected in the March "push" so loudly acclaimed by them as the beginning of our downfall.

It was not given to us, as soldiers, to dictate any terms, but there can be no doubt that had we been given the opportunity of carrying on with that glorious advance we should have inflicted a far greater punishment (and not undeserving) than any which can be prepared behind the lines. It was the humane instinct of Joffre which prevented us, and them, from such a realization.

Clemenceau-Lloyd George Peace.

The paper further states that "Clemenceau has apparently gained the victory over Wilson. The punishment is already very hard with the Wilson peace conditions, but a Clemenceau-Lloyd George Peace would result in Germany's ruin."

The origin of this pessimism on the part of the Germans would be difficult to fathom unless, as was recently stated, it lies in their own conviction of the atrocities that have been committed during the war, and the knowledge they undoubtedly must possess that for these hideous crimes due punishment will be inflicted.

So far as the Allies are concerned there is no proof whatever of any undue violence in the terms, and it is far from the intention of our representatives at Versailles to crush Germany. Vindictiveness can never be claimed as an asset to any form of peace, and no one knows this better than those framing the terms. There is a vast difference between vengeance and terms of reparation, and fference which, it would appear, the Germans are unwilling to admit. Yet this distinction between the two is of the greatest importance if one is to interpret the terms aright for, though the spirit of revenge will be entirely absent, the terms of reparation will be scrupulously exact.

"KULTURED CRIMINALS."

THE GERMAN BLACK LIST.

A book recently issued by a French author, M. Martel, gives a list of 573 Germans he considers should be punished for evil deeds, which he cites. Among them are:

Hindenburg: At Roisel, on the Somme, in March 1917, gave orders that everything should be destroyed, burnt, and pillaged in the regions the Germans were about to evacuate.

Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria: Responsible for the deportations from Lille, Roubaix, Tourcoing, and other places, which were carried out with the help of von Grävenitz, the Military Governor of Lille.

Mackensen: Charged with thefts, incendiarism, and executions in Rumania, and alleged to have ordered some hundreds of Rumanian children to be shot on the grounds that they had conspired gainst him.

Gen. Bulow: Posted the following notice at Andennes on August 22, 1914:— "It is with my consent that the whole place has been burnt and about 100 people have been shot."

Stenger: Issued the following order of the day:— "All prisoners, even it taken in large numbers, are to be put to death. No living man is to be left behind us."

Von Manteuffel: Ordered the burning of Louvain and the expulsion of 10,000 civilians from the town.

Krauss: Responsible for the massacre of 60 civilians at Gerpevillers and others at Frambois. One of them is said to have been soaked in petroleum and burnt alive.

Von Drecht: Ordered the execution of 117 hostages at Arlon.

Von Schubert: Under his orders a number of old men, women, and children collected in a hospital at Borinage were shelled on the ground that they were "useless mouths."

Eberlein: Declared in an article in the Munich Neueste Nachrichten that he had compelled civilians to march in front of his men as a screen against enemy fire.

NEWS IN BRIEF.

Sir A. Boscawen says the area under wheat on April 1 was about 10 per cent less than last year.

In response to the Duke of Connaught's appeal, India has given £26,221 to King George's Fund for Sailors.

The limit of deposits in the Post Office Savings Bank has been removed for the period of the war and six months thereafter.

The King of Denmark has bestowed a knighthood of the Order of the Dannebrog on Lieut. J. P. Muller, the Danish physical culture expert.

Egham (Surrey) Council have refused six acres of Crown land at Englefield Green offered at £225 an acre. About £330 an acre was asked previously.

R. 33, our greatest airship, now at Barlow (Yorks), will be ready for the air again to-day, when it is hoped London will be visited as a preliminary to the projected Atlantic voyage.

"It is bad for children to know that so horrible a thing is conducted in school," said Miss David when Aberavon school managers granted the application of local spiritualists for the use of the schoolroom for Sunday services.

The Canadian Government is to authorise the appointment of an Air Board for the control of flying in Canada. It will, under the direction of a Minister, investigate all proposals for commercial air services and issue licences to pilots.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

The Editor, in publishing letters from Correspondents, will use his own discretion, and if necessary, limit the publishing of correspondence on any subject whatever. It must be understood, however that he is not responsible for the views stated.

All communications for this column should be brief and to the point, and preference will be given to those which bear the writers' signatures for publication. No letter will be published unless accompanied by rank name, and unit of sender, which are needed for the purpose of reference.

Many letters of a perverse nature have reached the office, and the Editor wishes to point out that these only cause waste of time both to the writer and the Editor himself. Letters of this nature will not be published.

TO SOME OPERA-GOERS.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir. — In the early numbers of "The Cologne Post" correspondents complained of the behaviour of our troops at the Cologne Opera House, particularly of late arrivals and of those who leave before the play is finished.

I have been present at several Operas and I cannot help thinking that, in the case of a considerable proportion, their attitude towards Opera is not sincere—although I know that some attend in complete ignorance of what they are going to see and hear. Many of us who are more familiar than the rest with the best in Music and Drama do not get the enjoyment commensurate with their fame. In the case of most the pleasure is almost purely emotional. But whether intellectual or sensual the process of obtaining that pleasure must be absorbing: we must not let our minds be distracted and carried to and fro, we must have all channels open, and be swept clean out of ourselves.

Is this what one sees? Not a bit of it. A shallowness of interest almost everywhere. Perhaps some will say I am exaggerating. I will give a few concrete examples. I was present at the performance of "Fidelio" last Thurday. After the first act a sergeant-major in the R.A.M.C. left. He said "It's beautiful isn't it? I'm going now." A private who left at the same time had been beating time to the music throughout. A soldier on my immediate right who had read a "Guide" before the play commenced, explained to his neighbour what it all meant. "I wish I could understand what they say," said another An Artillery Major and some of his officers left during the "Leonore Overture" accompanied by the indignant "Sh's" of the House.

Why do these people go to the Opera? If they only reflected for a moment on the annoyance they cause—an annoyance sometimes amounting to physical pain—the enjoyment of others they spoil, and the number clamouring tickets who would be appreciative, perhaps they would stay away.

The man who wished he understood German is a type. He didn't notice how careful the singers were in their enunciation, a carefulness necessary when ears are strained in listening to the music and to voices, not to words. And didn't the acting tell him anything?

When I last saw "The Tales of Hoffman" in London presented by Sir Thomas Beecham, I did not see a theatre filled to overflowing as I did at the Opera House at Cologne at Wednesday.

OWEN OLIVER.

THE "PARSIFAL."

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.—In answer to "S.H.F.," in whose letter in Tuesday's issue mention is made of Leonardo da Vinci and his art, may I say that I should not have expected his name to be quoted in favour of any representation of Christ where strength is lacking. Giotto indeed did picture for us the conventional Christ, but with da Vinci it was different. I should also still like to reiterate that from the point of view of the artist only, it seems entirely inappropriate to introduce the Figure of Christ. To take one incident alone, what could be more incongruous than for Him to worship the sacred Spear? At least one German musical critic makes the comment that Parsifal in the last act with Kundry "returns good for evil after the example of the Redeemer," and another writes: "Parsifal stands before us in Act III as a holy being who is dead to all carnal desires, and whose actions are not regulated by the impulses of free will generally attributed to characters in the drama." Not having attended the Bayreuth Festival, I should be interested to know whether Parsifal is always represented in Act III as he is in the Cologne Opera House. There are no stage directions as to the entire change in his appearance, and this fact partly supports my theory.

(Miss) C. A. EASTGATE.

(This is the last letter on this subject to be published.—Ed.)

ARMY AMUSEMENTS.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir, — Might I make a suggestion through the medium of your valued paper that, now the troops are permitted recreation in the evening an hour longer than formerly, the Army Cinemas and other entertainments commence half-an-hour later. This would enable many of us in the outlying districts to stand a fair chance in the queue, and also to witness the first part of the programme. Our men (M.T., R.A.S.C.) like to get rid of the day's collection of dust and grease before coming into town and, as parade dismissal is 4.30 p.m., we have a very poor chance of reaching the entertainment houses by 6. p.m.

NEW WAR SAVINGS BASIS.

At a conference of all the War Savings Committees of Greater London, held in the Guildhall yesterday, the Lord Mayor presiding, Sir Robert Kindersley, chairman of the National Savings Committee, emphasized the connexion between national thrift and national expenditure.

The conference approved a scheme for giving associations and clubs direct representation on the local savings committee for each municipal area, and similar representation to the local committees on the National War Savings Committee, the whole organization being bound together by a representative National Savings Assembly meeting in January and July.

HUNGARIAN SOVIET'S FRANTIC APPEAL.

SQUEALING FOR MERCY.

ARCHANGEL BOLSHEVIST OFFENSIVE OPENS.

INDIAN DEMOBILIZATION TO START.

BOLSHEVISTS ATTACK AT ARCHANGEL.

TAILS UP.

In reports from Archangel dated 1st and 2nd May General Ironside states that enemy attacks in force, which have long been anticipated on the Dvina and Vaga fronts, have now commenced.

As regards the Dvina front a telegram dated 1st May states that Bolhevist gunboats which appeared opposite our front shelled our positions spasmodically without causing any casualties. They were forced to withdraw owing to the effective fire of our sixty-pounders.

As regards the Vaga front a telegram dated 2nd May states that after a long bombardment the enemy attacked in great strength, but was everywhere repulsed with great loss. In the forest they suffered heavy casualties and left forty dead on our wire.

General Ironside states that our men fought splendidly.

The ice on the Dvina is now completey broken up. At Archangel the flow is going well and it is expected that within a week the river will be navigable for our own gunboats.—Reuter.

SOUNDING THE KNELL OF RUSSIAN BOLSHEVISM.

IN SIGHT OF THE END.

Interviewed by the Times Archangel correspondent, General Miller, Governor general of the North Russia region, said he expects that with the aid of the new troops which are on the way, Russia will be within sight of the end of its internal troubles before the close of the summer. "Let the Allies help them to recapture Pretrograd and Moscow," he declares, "and the Russians themselves will clear the country of Bolshevists."—Reuter.

Helsingfors.—According to the Russian paper Ruskoje Slovo the Bolshevist ormies are being beaten along the entire Siberian front and are retiring in disorder.—Reuter.

DEMOBILIZATION TO START IN INDIA.

ANOTHER APPEAL TO EMPLOYERS.

Reuter is officially informed that the latest advices from India indicate that the situation, though not yet normal, is improving rapidly. It is hoped that the return of troops due for repatriation from Mesopotamia and of other troops detained in India with the concurrence of the War Office, will be commenced within the next few days.

There is still, however some anxiety among the men who loyally accepted the situation, which led to their detention, lest their chances of employment should be prejudiced by their detention beyond the date by which they had expected to return to England.

In view of this apprehension the War Office again appeals confidently to the public spirit and fair-mindedness of employers that the men whose return has been delayed in the interest of the Empire will not be subjected to the risk of unemployment, or allowed to suffer any sense of injustice.

TORTURING TEN THOUSAND.

Copenhagen. 2nd May.— From Berlin it is reported that terrible misery exists at Riga among the ten thousand people of all nationalities whom the Bolshevists banished to the islands of the Dvina. They are without assistance and very scantily clad and will succumb to exposure and starvation unless very prompt help reaches them. The Women's Association has appealed for help to all Red Cross Societies.—Reuter.

INDIAN RIOTERS SENTENCED.

The India office announces that three rioters at Lahore who stoned the police have been sentenced to three years imprisonment. Two others were acquitted.

Twenty-five men have been sentenced to seven years imprisonment in connection with the attack on a bank at Amritsar.

It appears that the rural population has taken little part in the disturbances and returned emigrants have held aloof.—Reuter.

SYMPATHY AND HELP FOR ANTI-BOLSHEVISTS.

The National Democratic party has sent the following telegram to the British Consul at Helsingfors, for handing to General Yudenitch:—"National Democratic party and other sympathisers with anti-Bolshevist Russians wish you good luck in your purpose of getting to Petrograd. Have arranged for immediate dispatch to you of a shipload of food and supplies for the people in Petrograd as soon as you get in." It is stated that efforts will be made to persuade British dock labourers to get the foodship loaded for nothing and Mr. Havelock Wilson will also use his influence with the seamen to secure a free voyage for the cargo.

FRANTIC APPEALS FROM BUDA-PESTH.

TOO LATE.

Vienna. 1st May.—Panic stricken at the continuous advance of the Rumanian and Hungarian counter-revolutionary troops, Bela Kun's Cabinet has addressed frantic and sensational appeals to President Wilson asking him to bring pressure to bear on Rumania in order to arrest her advance upon Buda Pesth. The advancing forces are encountering practically no resistance and could therefore easily reach the capital before the end of the current week.

Intense irritation and dissatisfaction exists amongst the moderate Socialists, who declare that the arbitrary acts, impracticable measures and generally ridiculous policy of the revolutionary Government will render futile all the patient work of Socialists during the past thirty years. While probably some of the most extreme of the Communist members will be forced to leave the Cabinet, this will not suffice to placate the Socialists.

Although it is practically impossible to obtain meat in Buda Pesth at any price the Bolshevist Soviet recently sent a train load of cattle to Vienna in payment for a huge quantity of red cloth bunting for May-day celebrations. The Austrian authorities refused to accept any other form of payment.

The revolutionary confiscation of jewellery and valuables belonging to private citizens is not proving a great success. Red Guards pay visits daily in search of hidden treasure and ransack private apartments.

The Soviet's attempt to sell stolen valuables abroad in exchange for raw materials has hitherto proved futile. The Swiss Government has informed Bela Kun that it is not disposed to purchase stolen goods.

Berlin. 3rd May.— The Hungarian Red Army is going over to the Rumanians by divisions. A new counter Government is being formed by the ex-Minister of the Interior and other ex-Ministers.—Reuter.

BUDA-PESTH SOVIET "KAPUT."

Berlin. 3rd May.— The Buda-Pesth "Government" has accepted the Allies terms. These include immediate capitulation, surrender of all arms and munitions and occupation of Buda-Pesth by the Allies.—Reuter.

PARIS WOULD HAVE FALLEN.

FRENCH AND KITCHENER.

Referring to Smith Dorrien's decision to stand at Le Cateau, where the resulting fight caused the loss of fourteen thousand officers and men, eighty guns, and other material, as well as rendering the retreat more arduous, French dwells on the circumstances which made a proper decision difficult. He adds "in more than one account of the retreat from Mons it is alleged that some tacit consent at least was given at Headquarters to the decision arrived at by the commander of the Second Corps. I owe it to the able and devoted officers of my staff to say that there is not a semblance of truth in this statement."

Continuing in the Daily Telegraph his story of the retreat after the disastrous stand of the Second Army at Le Cateau, Field Marshal French writes that although Joffre was anxious to take the offensive, he (French) insisted on the necessity of further retreat.

At a discussion among the various commanders, held at the British Headquarters, Smith-Dorrien expressed the opinion that the only course open was to return to the Base, re-embark, and try to land at some favourable point on the coast "I refused to listen to what was equivalent to a counsel of despair" writes French.

He relates further pressure from Joffre; but says that, remembering that the French Fifth Army had commenced its retreat twenty-four hours before he had been given any official intimation that Joffre's offensive plan had been abandoned, he wrote to Kitchener that he felt very seriously the necessity for retaining complete independence of action. On the 31st August the demand that he should stand and fight was urgently repeated and backed by imperative messages from Poincaré, Kitchener and the British Government; yet at the same moment Lanrezac was throwing back the Fifth Army and the gap was widening, while Kitchener was assuring H.M. Government that our losses were small and that deficiencies had been made good "Neither on this day, nor subsequent days did one man, horse, gun, or machine gun reach me to make good deficiences. I refused. This brought Kitchener to Paris" says the Field Marshal, who expresses his profoundest belief that had he yielded to those violent solicitations the whole of the Allied Army would have been thrown back over the Marne and Paris would have fallen an easy prey.

MUNICH BOLSHEVISTS TO BE EXECUTED.

Berlin. 3rd May.—The Hoffmann Government has announced that the Communist leaders arrested at Munich will be treated as they treated the hostages they held, ten of whom were murdered. The Communist Eglhofer has already been executed. — Reuter.

EX. R.A.S.C. PRIVATE SUES HIS C.O.

FINANCIAL DEALINGS.

At the resumed hearing of this case, an interesting discussion took place on the business relationship between officers and privates in the Army. "I would not have been countenanced for a moment before the war," said Brigadier-General Atkinson, but owing to the present exceptional circumstances he did not see how it could be avoided.

The action was against Major G. C. Evans for alleged false imprisonment, malicious prosecution, and slander. Plaintiff was Mr. Christopher Henry Heddon, solicitor, of Ripon and Harrogate, who was formerly a private in the Royal Army Service Corps. It was stated by Mr. Tindal Atkinson, K.C., who appeared for defendant, that the action for slander "had now gone."

The words complained of were, "I knew you were a rogue. Now I know you are a damned fool. Get out." This, plaintiff alleged, had relation to his profession as a solicitor. "Will you never tell the truth?" was another statement complained of.

By the defence filed, defendant admitted the arrests, which he claimed arose out of the administration of military discipline. He denied the statements complained of were in relation to plaintiff's professional conduct, and pleaded that they were spoken without malice and were privileged. Defendant further claimed alternatively that the arrests were ordered by the General Officer Commanding-in Chief.

Plaintiff alleged that when he complained of Second Lieutenant Haydon habitually using language unbecoming an officer and a gentleman and of systematically persecuting him he was arrested and ordered fourteen days C.B. for making a frivolous complaint to his commanding officer and for conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline. He had demanded to be tried by court-martial, and after refusing defendant's request to withdraw his appeal to Lieut.-General Sir John Maxwell, in command of the Northern District, the charge was altered to making a false accusation against an officer. On 25th November last, after sending a letter to the Treasury Solicitor making charges against Second Lieutenant Haydon, he was put under close arrest for eighteen days. A court-martial to try plaintiff had been adjourned pending the trial of the present action, but he obtained his discharge from the Army on 24th January last. In cross-examination, he admitted he had taken "French leave" six times in order to see his wife. He maintained that defendant was actuated by malice towards him, but this was denied.

"CONDUCT TO THE PREJUDICE."

Brigadier-General Atkinson said he gave plaintiff a long interview. They spoke as man to man.

In cross-examination, the General said: "I came to the impression that plaintiff had a grievance against Second Lieutenant Haydon, and was prepared to go to any length and take any steps in any direction—how shall I put it?—to get back on Lieutenant Haydon. I also formed the impression that he was rather apt, perhaps innocently, to colour the various statements he made. I am quite convinced he was perfectly honest in thinking he had been badly treated by Lieut. Haydon."

Witness agreed with Mr. Watson's suggestion that it would be highly improper to alter the charge sheet in the way in which it was altered. He said there was power to add to the charge-sheet and give details of the charge under Section 40 of the Army Act, which referred to "conduct to the prejudice." The details could be added after conviction, as a record of the grounds established against the man. That was what should have been done, but it was not.

In reply to his Lordship, witness said he meant that instead of altering the charge they should have set out in detail the note that "this was added at a subsequent date."

No court-martial charge was ever made against plaintiff respecting a letter of 16th November, in which he accused Second Lieutenant Haydon of keeping back Private Tolfree from active service for his own purposes.

Mr. Justice McCardie said it was a serious charge to make against an officer, and still witness formed the view that no inquiry was necessary.

Witness: We did not consider there was anything in it.

Second Lieutenant Haydon's letter, read by Mr. Watson, stated, that he had not borrowed any money from Private Tolfree, and he denied that he was keeping back that private from going overseas. A letter from Private Tolfree was also read. It referred to business relations between the writer and Second Lieutenant Haydon respecting a patent for a parachute.

Mr. Watson: Is it a proper thing for an officer to have financial dealings with a private under his command?

Witness: I think it is under present conditions, because it is unavoidable.

Mr. Justice McCardie: You cannot mean that? Here the lieutenant asks a private to finance a scheme and the private wants to become a co-partner in a patent with the officer. Then the private does not provide the money. He happens to be the managing-director of a picture-house which puts £300 into the business concern. What is to be the relationship of a private who has financed a lieutenant?

Witness: I admit the difficulty, but according to your lordship one would have to look into the antecedents of every man in a battalion and ensure that no private was having financial relations with an officer.

Witness said there was no intention of sending the private in question to France. He was over age and in category B. 3.

Mr. Justice McCardie: You would not as a rule favour a loan by a private to an officer?

Witness: Before the war it would have been exceedingly wrong, and would not be countenanced for a moment. But I don't see how business relations between privates and officers can be avoided just now.

His Lordship: You mean the circumstances are exceptional?

Witness: Yes.

Witness said that no charge was made by him, or with his knowledge, respecting the letter of 16th November.

In re-examination, Mr. Tindal Atkinson read the plaintiff's letter which said that Tolfree pretended to be employed as a clerk in Second Lieutenant Haydon's office. In Tolfree's letter, he stated that no pressure was brought to bear upon him, that the investment was voluntary, and he considered it to the benefit of his company.

Witness thought Second-Lieutenant Haydon was justified in writing his letter. The letter of 16th November was not made the subject of a charge against plaintiff.

Mr. Atkinson: Would it be possible for the military authorities to investigate the exact business relationship, with the Army being constituted as it was, between officers and men? Witness: Quite impossible.

Mr. Atkinson: Do you consider it any part of your duty to do so? Witness: No.

"AS MAN TO MAN."

Colonel Edward Arthur Waldegrave Courteney, Assistant Director of Supplies and Transport, Headquarters Staff, Northern Command, stated that Major Evans had complained that plaintiff was inefficient and troublesome. The complaint was more or less of a soldier who was not "pulling his weight." At an interview with plaintiff, witness asked him to talk as man to man and overlook the differences in rank, but he could get nothing out of him. He told plaintiff he would get no leave until his conduct as a soldier entitled him to it. If he had known plaintiff was taking "French leave" he would not have been granted any leave at all.

In cross-examination, witness said he came to the conclusion that plaintiff was not a man anxious to be disciplined.

Colonel Hugh Duncan Lawrence, Assistant Adjutant-General, Northern Command, gave evidence. He said he gave verbal instructions for altering the charge from conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline to that of making a false statement, not false accusation, against an officer.

In cross-examination, he said he had never given orders that plaintiff should be under close arrest. He had given orders for him to be released from arrest.

Lieutenant-Colonel Sayers, Officer Commanding the Army Service Corps, Winchester, said that in August, 1918, he was in the East Yorks District. He investigated the case of Private Heddon and made the report of 12th August. It was not true that he threatened to put plaintiff in the infantry and send him to France in three weeks time.

Cross-examined, witness said he had concurred in the charge against plaintiff being altered. Major Evans had said plaintiff was young or fit enough to go into the infantry, and witness replied, "Perhaps he is." Witness questioned Second Lieutenant Haydon before plaintiff.

THE RIGHT TO QUESTION.

Mr. Justice McCardie: Plaintiff ought to have been told that he had a right to put questions.

Witness: I thought if he wanted to put questions he would have done so. He did not seem a man who was afraid to make complaints.

During the course of further discussion between his lordship, counsel, and witness, the latter said he did not think there was a written regulation to the effect that a private had to answer questions put to him and not ask questions. He did not think it would be prejudicial to good conduct for a private to cross-examine an officer without permission in a case like the present one. As a rule a private was not supposed to put questions to an officer.

Mr. Justice McCardie: I cannot see why plaintiff did not put questions to the officer in view of the strong feeling in the letter.

Witness: I looked upon it that in the ordinary circumstances of military life a private would not be allowed to ask questions from an officer without permission, but when he had made a complaint and was put in front of me he could ask questions and say what he liked.

Upon the close of the evidence for the defence plaintiff was recalled and denied defendant's statement in court that he had told witness he regarded the last paragraph in his letter of July 22 as mutinous. Defendant had said nothing like it. As to his buttons not being cleaned, he said he always wore leather buttons. He had over-slept on the morning he was found not to have shaved. It was untrue that witness had caused unrest amongst the men.

The case was adjourned for the arguments of counsel until next week.

INCREASE OF VIOLENT CRIME.

POLICE COMMISSIONER'S VIEWS.

Sir Nevil Macready, Chief Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police, expresses his opinon that the war is responsible for the increasing amount of crime in England. There is a change in the type of criminal and a big rise in the number of robberies. The robber of to-day had grown callous after four years experience of killing, and is indifferent alike to the taking of life and to his own personal safety. Another result of the war, he said, would be an increase in the number of women murders.

APPRENTICESHIP OF THE PRINCE OF WALES.

The Prince of Wales was initiated into Freemasonry in the Household Brigade Lodge No. 2614 at Prince's Restaurant, Piccadilly, on Friday, the Duke of Connaught, as Grand Master, conducting the ceremony in the presence of a large gathering of distinguished brethren. At the banquet which followed, the Prince sat on the right of the Grand Master. In the course of his reply to the customary toast, the Prince of Wales said "when I returned from France I found quite a few things for me to do and those few things became so many that it has been practically impossible for me to undertake them all. I determined however, that nothing should stand in the way of my becoming a Freemason and although I know I am going to be very busy I hope to find time properly to fulfil my duties as a Mason.

BONUS FOR RETAINED PERSONNEL.

The War Office announces that officers, non-commissioned officers and men eligible for demobilisation but not actually demobilised by 1st May will receive as from the 1st May the full bonus as granted to personnel retained in the Army of Occupation.

CHAMPION OF THE ROYAL AIR FORCE.

FAR GREATER THAN RICHTHOFEN

It is understood that the Air Ministry has decided that so far as is ascertainable, the champion British airman during the war was the late Major E. W. Mannock, D.S.O., and two bars, M.C., who is officially credited with having brought down seventy-three German machines. Major Mannock, who was born in India, is considered to have been the greatest aerial tactician the Royal Air Force has produced. He was shot down by gun fire from the ground.

Royal Air Force officials consider Mannock's record to be far greater than than of Richthofen, as the Germans worked on a different system respecting official confirmation of each victim.

Lieut. Colonel Bishop, V.C., the Canadian airman, ranks second to Mannock, with seventy-two machines to his credit.

SOLDIER MURDERER IN THE DOCK.

"LOST HIS TEMPER."

Henry Beckett, a private who was wearing an Army Veterinary Corps badge, was charged at West Ham police court on Saturday with the murder of the family named Cornish.

After his arrest, the prisoner, who was charged in the name of Harry Perry, made a lon statement to the police confessing to the murders. He said he joined the army in November 1916 and went to Egypt in 1917. He was overtaken by Arabs and shot at, eventually being taken as a prisoner to a Turkish Camp. Afterwards he got to Italy and ultimately returned to England in February 1919.

On the day of the murders he had had some beer and was passing Mrs. Cornish's door when she called him in and asked him to stay to dinner. Subsequently he lost his temper and knocked her down with the kitchen poker.

Prisoner decribed in detail how he killed the other members of the family. He was remanded until Friday.

AVIATION CONTROLLER CRASHES.

An aeroplane in which Major General Sykes, Controller-general of Civil aviation, intended to fly to Paris, crashed at Kenley on Saturday as the result of side-slipping just after it left the ground. Major General Sykes was badly shaken but was able to motor to London. The pilot, Captain E.N. Knott, Australian Flying Corps, was killed.

Major General Sykes was removed from his chambers in Piccadilly on Saturday evening to a nursing home. He was able to walk unassisted to his car. Medical examination revealed no evidence of anything serious, but he was very badly shaken and must be kept quiet for some time. It is expected that he will be back at the Air Ministry within a few days.

TWO AEROPLANE FATALITIES.

Flight Commander Peter Legh, flying as civilian pilot on a Bat machine, was killed at East Finchley. His machine caught fire while at a great height, and came down in flames, the pilot leaping from it into a field.

While Flight-sergeant Parry was in the air about two hundred feet above Alexandra Park Aerodrome, Manchester, his machine side-slipped and caught fire. Parry was extricated from the wreckage but he was in a hopeless condition and died shortly.

A.P.M's SUCCESSFUL APPEAL.

Major Vere De Crespigny, A.P.M. at Richborough, when sued at Sandwich County Court for fifty pounds damages for alleged wrongful arrest, asked for the case to be heard elsewhere.

He said he was likely to be prejudiced, locally through "unpopularity incurred by stopping depredations of Government property."

His application was granted.

"SHOUT (OFF)"- SIXPENCE.

An agreement to abolish the practice of promiscuous tips on the music hall stage has been reached as the result of negotiations between the Variety Artists Federation and the National Association of Theatre Employees.

A scheme of "specific charges for specific services" has been agreed. The tariff for such items as giving a shout, interjecting a remark, or handing an article, is sixpence a time.

KING'S MESSAGE TO OVERSEAS TROOPS.

In the course of a printed message which was handed to each man of the overseas troops on dispersal after the march through London on Saturday the King said:— "It is with a heart full of pride and gratitude that I take your salute to-day as you march in triumph through London. The people of the British Dominions beyond the seas, by their instant readiness to share in the trials and responsibilities of the great war, have shown the world the unity of the British Empire. Now, in the day of victory, I wish to express to you who represent the overseas forces, my unbounded admiration for the splendid feats of arm and the sacrifices made."

The British Salonika Force will in future be known as the Army of the Black Sea.

A negro charged at Liverpool with being a stowaway had twelve thousand sterling in Portuguese money in his possession. He was remanded for enquiries.

A pearl necklace belonging to a Society woman disappeared at Sandown Park Races on Saturday. Its value was several thousands of pounds.

A Zürich telegram says that Landauer, one of the leaders of the Munich Communists, has been shot by Government troops at Bamberg.

A TRIBUTE TO THE BRAVE.

On Saturday the capital of our Empire paid warm-hearted tribute to the brave men of our self-governing Dominions — Canada, Australia New Zealand, South Africa, and Newfoundland. Twelve thousand troops, representative of these countries, assembled at Hyde Park and marched past Buckingham Palace where King George took the salute. They then made a grand circuit of central London and gave a grateful people the opportunity of demonstrating thankful and joyous appreciation of a victorious sacrifice that shall never fade from the memory of our Motherland. Lieut.-General Sir Arthur Currie had the honour of leading the Dominion troops, and his is a name which stands for courage, initiative, and self-discipline. Who can forget the Canadian Corps in days when, undaunted, it withstood the onslaughts of foes flushed with success, or in the last drama of war when, with an irresistible majesty, it swept from the gates of Amiens the capture of Cambrai and the relief of Mons? Saturday's triumphal march was the first that the men of Canada have made in England, and in it were represented all branches of the gallant Corps.

The Australians marched through London on Anzac Day, but on Saturday they were represented by men of five renowned divisions. Australia has had its imperishable glories in the campaigns of the East and of the West, in Gallipoli and Palestine and France—and Australia never failed. But it is invidious to mention records of gallantry, for every part of our Empire has nobly played its part and worthily earned its renown. The bonds that have been welded in these years of war can never now be broken. Our history is ennobled by annals that shall ever speak of loyalty, courage, and self-sacrifice.

The British Army of the Rhine would also pay its tribute to the happy warriors. Have not many of us fought by their side in the battles of yesterday? We soldiers do not forget our comrades in arms. Our gratitude may not be the gratitude of easy emotion, but it is real and deep. The campaign for life and liberty is well-nigh over, and Peace is hovering above us Our Empire sounds its paean of thanksgiving

"But to the hero, when his sword
Has won the battle for the free,
Thy voice sounds like a prophet's word;
And in its hollow tones are heard
The thanks of millions yet to be."

AN ATLANTIC AIR-FLIGHT.

It was not often that Edgar Allan Poe permitted himself the luxury of humour devoid of grimness, but he gave it freely in one of his Fantastic Tales, entitled "The Balloon Hoax." It is a whimsical account of the crossing of the Atlantic Ocean by the Victoria, a flying machine belonging to Mr. Monck Mason, which in seventy-five hours accomplished a passage from Great Britain to America. The details of the adventurous voyage were made public in the New York Sun, and Poe narrates the great exploit of Mr. Mason and his friends, Holland, Ile sons and Harrison Ainsworth, with much artistic skill and notably fertile imagination. The curious story concludes with the words: "This is unquestionably the most stupendous, the most important undertaking ever accomplished or even attempted by man. What magnificent events may ensue, it would be useless now to think of determining."

Thus Edgar Allan Poe joined the goodly band of men who have achieved intelligent anticipations of the future. It is a platitude that truth is stranger than fiction, and in the next few days we may have a proof that truth is stranger than even Poe's fiction. There are at this very time eager airmen, straining at the leash of weather, who have made hopeful preparations for the crossing of the Atlantic. At any moment we may hear that one of Poe's "magnificent events" has ensued. To some cautious people the enterprise of these airmen may seem a literal flying in the face of Providence, unnecessary and unprofitable; to others it may seem a scientific endeavour for the conquest of Nature, hazardous yet inevitable. Whether or not the courage and mechanical skill of these pioneers are crowned with succes, it is certain that the firmament of the Atlantic will ere long be wooed fort the aeroplane. As Blériot conquered the Channel between England and France, so a like-minded airman will conquer the vaster seas.

The Jules Vernes of yesterday are the prosaic realists of to-day. In one of our newest contemporaries Spencer Leigh Hughes has reminded us that in 1714 Swedenburg boasted that he had in hand several wondrous mechanical inventions. Men of his own day must have reckoned them the creatures of a chimerical brain, yet they are now commonplace. One corresponds to the modern submarine, another to the Lewis gun, a third to the automobile, and the last to an aeroplane. We are tempted to believe with a Hebrew sovereign that there is nothing new under the sun.

When the Atlantic is no longer safe from irrestible aircraft we shall have strange happenings. In vigorous health President Wilson will alight from his airship and meet Mr. Lloyd George as he emerges from the Channel Tunnel and together they will journey to Geneva to hear the latest gossip about the League of Nations.

THE OPERA.

TANNHAUSER.

The first performance of Tannhäuser in 1845 was not an unqualified success. Madam Devrient who took the part of Venus, in writing to Wagner, said: "You are a man of genius, but you write such eccentric stuff it is hardly possible to sing it." Critics also complained that "this sort of stuff acts on the nerves," and asked "why should not Tannhäuser marry Elizabeth?" Most of us have now learnt to understand the grand musical language in which Wagner speaks to us in his Music Dramas, but I think that often the real beauty of his music impresses us more after the actual performance than at the moment of hearing it.

It lives in the memory with enhanced charm, and there beautiful memories are revived and intensified with each successive hearing of his works.

Wagner did not write his music to display the voices of his singers as did so many of his predecessors. He most frequently uses the voices of the actors merely to give expression to the emotions connected with the story of the drama, the melodic part being given to the orchestra.

Just as a hungry infant expresses his emotions in vocal utterance of a strenuous nature, so does the Wagner singer Express on the notes presented in the score, the various emotions in the drama. It is, however, possible to accomplish this without sacrificing too much the quality of the singing and a good many artists outside the Fatherland have attempted this with considerable success. There is no need for such a high working pressure as was used on Sunday for a satisfactory artistic interpretation of Wagner's works, especially in so naive an opera as Tannhäuser. With this reservation the production was very good indeed. The orchestra was excellent, and the chorus of Nymphs commendably in time.

Herr Menzinsky as Tannhäuser successfully carried out the usual tradition of a Wagner singer but his singing suffers from an attempt to combine a rather exaggerated bel-canto with the "Helden-Tenor" method, which made his singing rather explosive, especially in the earlier parts of the opera, and his rendering of the love song to Venus was far too staccato.

Herr Karl Renner gave an excellent interpretation of the loveable part of Wolfram.

Frau Mimi Wernard-Poensgen singing as Venus was dramatic but not particularly seductive, and in common with some others her singing is spoilt by an excessive tremolo, brought about no doubt by strenuous service at the shrine of Wagner.

Frau Sofie Wolf as Elizabeth and her uncle the Landgraf sang with considerable charm, Herr Gless reminding one at times of the virile Van Rooy. The staging and lighting effects throughout were admirable with the exception of the rather hurried departure of the sunset, and the sudden switching on of the Evening Star for Wolfram's song.

The curtain came down at the close of the opera on one of the most beautiful colour lighting effects I have ever seen.

THE CONTRAST.

It was raining as usual. The dirty white of the houses seemed to stare more impudently at the world, the little village street was deserted save for a few children in grotesquely ill-fitting clothing, and the noise of the rain came through the open window in a most depressing way. A regular pour, and the sides of the street were fast becoming rivers of muddy water. The roofs of the cottages, shining with the rain, were the only clean things there were for the eye to see.

In the room — quite a medium sized dining-room in the only big house in the village — an officer was sitting, or rather half lying, in a big chair, gazing out of the window with a far away look in his eyes.

He had come to the conclusion that Germany, at any rate this part of Germany, was not very pleasant on a day like this, and his mind wandered. Thought hitched on to thought, and one of them tumbled in the same direction — homewards.

What were they doing at home?

3 o'clock. Was it raining? . . . The cottage opposite seemed blurred . . . Then sunshine came to him; and sleep.

He finished tea in the big hall, where the dark oak-panelling had looked down on countless of his ancestors many years ago.

"Coming down to the village, Tom?" asked his sister, hat in hand by the door, with the old French bull-dog jumping and barking and snorting with excitement.

"Right-o! Across the fields though, Baby!" "If you like."

They went out through the garden and he stopped to look at it. The corner by the apple tree was a riot of daffodils, nodding their pretty heads to him as though they were pleased to see him back. And why not? Eighteen years ago he had watched those same daffodils or their parents, on just such an evening as this.

They passed through the white gate and into the dusty road. "Pongo," the aged postman was just getting into his red cart by the Rectory gate, at the bottom of the hill, and that meant half-past-five to a tick.

How quiet and splendid it all looked! The gate of the field opposite the house clanged loudly as the last of the cows came out; and the rooks went cawing over the Rectory as ever they used to. On a slight rise to the left was the village. So neat, so clean, oh! so English! The church, plump and good-natured and dominating everything seemed to be watching him as he walked across the fields towards it, and the clock on the tower smiled and winked as the sun caught the gold hands and figures. It was a funny old church in every way, and it never worried because it had no spire. I suppose Thaxted's tall needle, showing clear against the sky four miles away, was quite sufficient for both.

They climbed the last stile and walked into the village. The girl went off to a farm and Tom strolled slowly down the hill. Every cottage white as white can be! Every little latticed window open to the evening sun, the kindly thatch of the roofs with the poked windows in their centres, all so trim and clean!

And the gardens! The paths kept so scrupulously tidy, with hints of roses and holly hocks and every flower that God sent to make country-people happy.

Some of the old folk, standing at their gates, smiled and bobbed or touched their caps as he passed, people who had known him "even since he was so high."

"Evenin,' Master Tom. How be you a-gooin' on?"

"Splendid, thanks, how are you, Mrs. Baines?"

"I'm wunnerful strong, thank'ee koindly, though I can't cnamp me wittuls to no sense, moind ye. But thet's threw gittin' on in years, ain't it?" And the old lady smiled and showed a row of faultless teeth.

He wandered on to the little bridge over the Chelmer, and stood leaning over, watching the water lazily ripple over the stones. He gazed downwards, thinking of nothing much, and it seemed that he was falling — falling — falling, straight into the water . . . . .

* * *

"What about stables" said the squadron leader with a smile, as the orderly officer picked himself up from the floor on to which he had slipped.

"I was dreaming. Are we in Germany? Great Scott! It's raining again."

He put on his coat and walked out with a vacant look on his face.

"A NOTE ON THE KAISER."

In the first issue of Air Pie, the Royal Air Force Annual, an interesting article is contributed by A. Clutton Brock.

I confess, says the writer, I could never feel that indignation against the Kaiser which many feel or at least express. He is to me, not the ruler and instigator of Germany in the war, but merely the gramaphone. He told the Germans what they wanted to hear, because he himself, like the editor of a popular newspaper, received into his mind what was suggested by their minds and gave it out as if it was his own. I could never believe in his great and dangerous ability. Nor that he willed the war or plotted for it. When the general suggestion of war grew too strong for him to resist it, he succumbed to that suggestion; and then believed that he willed a righteous war against the plotting enemies of Germany. For many years he honestly desired peace; but he thought that it was very noble of him to desire it, and that all the world ought to be grateful to him for not desiring war. He also thought that the least return the world could make was to give Germany all that she wanted without war. So at last, when he demands grew greater and greater and the world refused them, he thought the world must be punished for its wicked ingratitude. That was the way the war suggestion worked in his mind; and the Germans have no right to say that he led them astray. They led him astray. He was in a great position and was utterly unequal to it. It was the fault of the Germans that they did not know it, and listened to all the nonsense he talked.

But so long as they prospered they admired him, because he so thoroughly represented them. The old romantic Germany was romantic about all kinds of things. The new Germany was just as romantic, but about itself. And no one was ever so romantic about himself as the Kaiser. Ludwig II of Bavaria dreamed about Siegfried and Lohengrin and all the Wagnerian heroes, but the Kaiser, with the new German romanticism, saw himself as Siegfried and Lohengrin and Wotan and Jehovah. It is said by Mr. Spencer Leigh Hughes that when he went to Jerusalem he dressed himself up to look like Coeur de Lion, and preached a sermon in a church. Now, no doubt, he sees himself a Napoleon in exile. All that absurdity which we have laughed at in modern Germany, even when it was most evil, reaches its height in the Kaiser. Think of him, not as the greatest villain but as the most absurd person in history. It really is not his fault that he should have had the misfortune to display his absurdities in such a position and in such a moment. He has committed many crimes; but it is not he who has committed them. The fault is with his people who allowed so much power to rest in the hands of one man chosen by the chance of birth. The real weakness of Germany was the fact that no one knew where really the power lay.

THE MAN WHO DID — AND WHAT BECAME OF IT.

BY JUVENIS.

In an earlier issue of The Cologne Post, we gave the first chapter of this story. Montague Bilson, late Captain and Adjutant of the 51st (Gtrd.) Westmoreland Light Infantry, now demobilized, had been re instated in the office of Berry and Bilson, Ltd., the big jam manufacturers. Taking it for granted that his capabilities as an adjutant in the Army were sufficient qualification for a leading post in the management of the firm, he was made Managing Director. Forthwith drastic alterations were made. The discipline of the civilian workers was far too weak for commercial success, and Bilson instituted a system much akin to the one which throughout the war had occupied his most engrossing interest.

The secretary—an old man who had faithfully served the firm for many years—was informed of the new methods which were to be adopted, and the cheeky little office boy was promoted "Sgt. Major," to assist at the various trials of employees which at noon each day would be enacted.

CHAPTER 2.

The next day Mr. Bilson continued his efforts towards the militarisation of the firm of Berry & Bilson Ltd., Jam Manufacturers.

His amateur attempts at holding "Battalion Office" had been so successful that he decided to continue. Consequently he was closeted with Mr. Jones, the secretary, for the whole of the morning, and any stranger in the early afternoon would have seen the lady typists "typing" as if for dear life, at the same time apparently convulsed with merriment over what they were typing. At 3 p. m. the mystery was revealed as below to the expectant staff:—

CUT OF THE CARDS.

26 COMPANY, R.A.S.C. WHIST DRIVE.

A very pleasant evening was spent on Monday when they held at Frouzheim the first of a series of whist drives.

A feature of the evening's play was the close running of the entrants, the only prize won outright being the Gent's, 1st, the Lady's 1st and Lady's and Gent's, booby prizes having to be decided by cutting the cards.

The prizes were presented by Capt. S.G. Shaw to the following winners:—

Lady's 1st, Pte. F. Fryer;
Gent's 1st, Cpl. W. Craven, M.S.M.;
Lady's Booby, Cpl. F. Spearey;
Gent's Booby, Pte. F. East. S.S.M. G. Tyrrel carried out the duties of M.C. most efficiently

THE "ROYAL" CONCERT PARTY.

THE 6th (S) BN. "THE QUEEN'S OWN"
(Royal West Kent Regt.)

Three very successful performances were given at Wahn on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, when this newly-formed party appeared at the Kronprinzen Restaurant. Owing to last minute troubles, and the poor sportmanship of the Clerk of the Weather the attendances were not as they should have been. Nevertheless, the visitors on the three nights were as appreciative as one could wish, and that everybody was highly delighted, was proved by the applause which greeted the artistes. The Regimental Band were responsible for two selections, namely "Bubbly" and "Round the Map." It is needless to go in to details regarding each individual artiste, suffice to say that each one had to respond to encores. There is no doubt this party will be in great demand, judging by the fact that they are due at the Y.M.C.A. at Porz on Thursday and at Wahn again on Friday, while arrangements are now being made in response to numerous requests to give performances elsewhere.

47th "MACS" AT WHIST.

The Last Drive at Euskirchen.

The last whist drive of the season was held in the North School, Euskirchen, on Wednesday.

A most enjoyable evening was concluded by Lieut Harrison presenting the prizes to the winners.

Many of the men present, he said would shortly be demobilized and would carry away with them memories of the many pleasant evenings sport they had enjoyed while with the "Army of the Rhine." Sgt Dodson, who acted as M.C., speaking on behalf of the men thanked Lieut Harrison for the great assistance he had given in running the drives, and reminded him that much of the success was due to the interest taken in the sports by the Officers in the Convoy.

Hearty cheers brought to a close one of the best evenings spent by the M.A.C. at Euskirchen.

The following is the list of the prize winners.

1st Ladies, Pte Kings; 1st Gents, Cpl. Barnett; 2nd Ladies, Segt. Raymond; 2nd Gents, Pte Chasfield; 3rd Ladies, Lce.Cpl Lanfear; 3rd Gents, Pte Phillips; Booby, Pte Hancock.

MILITARY BAND AT WAHN.

The Military Band of the 1st Eastern Infantry Brigade gave an excellent Concert last Sunday afternoon at Wahn. It was excellent for many reasons — brilliant technique, fine tone quality, interpretation and conducting. This is a new band of 60 instrumentalists amongst whom are many men who have made their names famous in the musical world, with Lieut. H.B. Lewis its conductor.

The opening overture was Suppe's "Morning, Noon and Night," the playing of which evoked long and loud applause from the audience, whose enthusiasm was kept up to the end of the concert.

In the "Chu-Chin-Chow" Selection, the volume of sound was truly magnificient, and although the number of instrumentalists is large, Lieut. Lewis had the band under absolute control, getting out of the players just what he wished. A superb interpretation of "Carmmetta" finished the Concert.

Lce. Cpl. Handley of the "Royals" Concert Party sang two songs in great style, the audience demanding an encore for each.

We believe that in the near future, Lieut. Lewis is to bring the band to Cologne, so lovers of music can anticipate a first rate performance.

THE MERRY MICKS.

That section of the Rhine Army which is stationed in Esch, were favoured with a visit of "The Merry Micks," the Concert Party of the 5th Royal Irish Regt, the other evening. The various items in a rather lengthy programme were excellently rendered, and the artistes individually and collectively were accorded unstinted applause. Lce.Cpl. Livingstone was a prime favourite with his songs and facial expressions and Lieut Mc.Cracken and Lce.Cpl. Weeks gave a very popular item, an American rag-time song. A sketch was given in good style by Lce.Cpl. Dann, Pte Kelly and Lce.Cpl. Livingstone.

A sketch "The New Major" proved a very fitting conclusion to a delightful evening.

"THE PROBES."

"The Probes" Concert Party, the members of which belong to the 91st Field Ambulance Company, again added to their laurels on Saturday evening, when they gave a concert in the Kasino, at Friedrich Wilhelmshütte. The programme included several very "catchy" concerted numbers. whilst Artist Plum and "Stella," a female impersonator, created roars of laughter.

The American Army in France has challenged the British Army to a ten-aside team match at golf. If it comes off one of the courses near Paris will probably be utilised.

RHINELAND FOOTBALL REPORTS.

A SUMMER DAY MATCH.

42nd Bn. Machine Gun Corps in Great Form.

A Match took place on Sunday at the Lindenthal Park before a very good attendance, between the 42nd Bn. Machine Gun Corps, and the 51st Aux. Motor Bus Coy., the latter holding an unbeaten record. The Gunners soon made their presence felt by a raid on the opposing goal, but the "Busmen's" left back relieved the pressure, the ball was promptly returned by Lieut. Loup, and after a scrimmage in the Busmens' goal Hall forced a corner from which Crompton headed over, lively exchanges followed and after pretty play Cpl. Tice gave the ball to Allen who running in from the touch line, beat the "Busmen's" goalie with a brilliant oblique shot. Capt. Corvan shot wide and from the goal kick the busmens' centre received the ball and made a brilliant run half the length of the field, but his final shot was fisted away by the Gunners' goalie. The Busmens' left outside received the ball, and forced a corner, this was well placed and a lively scrimmage ensued in front of the Gunners' goal, the outside right finally shooting wide. Capt. Corvan who made no mistake, this making the Gunners two goals to the good. After this lively scrummages took place at both goals, but the game ended with the Gunners pressing. Result: 42nd Bn. M.G.C. 2, 51st Aux. M.B. Coy., 0.

The Game was remarkably fast considering the state of the weather. The M.G.C. were best represented by the full backs, centre half, and left inside, and the Busmen by the full backs, and centre half.

LABOUR GROUP COMPETITION.

5th Labour Coy. v 91st Labour Coy.

This tie in the Labour Group Competition was played at Volksgarten on Sunday, in sultry weather. The 5th scored twice in the first 15 minutes, Oddie and Swan being the successful marksmen. Play was then fairly even up to half-time.

Shortly after the resumption, the 91st, who at this time were having more of the play, scored through Mc Gregor. The spurt died away, however, and the 5th came into the picture again, Mc Conville, who played splendidly all through, scoring a third goal. This was followed by another from his wing partner, Pace, who also gave a fine exhibition. Towards the finish the 5th were pressing and Oddie scored his second goal, the final score thus being:— 5th Labour Coy. 5; 91st Labour Coy. 1.

187th. v 190th. BRIGADE HEADQUARTERS, R.F.A.

On Saturday the 187th. R.F.A. H.Q. played their final match of the season on their own ground at Hohenburg.

Gwyn, 187th's centre forward, after missing five opportunities, scored an easy goal. Lunn, the dashing outside right, although playing a brilliant game, failed to score. Sgt. Hyslop also played a fine game, holding the opponents, nippy outside right wonderfully. Hills, Williams and Mc Intosh deserve credit. Ball, who is a Manchester man, scored the second goal. Lt. Goad refereed the game with aptitude and wisdom. Result: 187th. R.F.A. 2; 190th. R.F.A. 0.

KNOCK OUT COMPETITION — 1st ROUND.

17th v. 153rd Labour Coy.

Played at Kalk on the ground of the first named club. The first half of the game produced no score, the backs of each team being too strong for the forwards. The 153rd Coy. were slightly the better side in the first half. The 17th forwards played pretty football in the second half, Drayton netting with a superb shot for the 17th after good combination.

153rd Coy. played hard to equalise, but the 17th backs were too strong. Result: 17th Labour Coy 1; 153rd Labour Coy., nil.

52nd Bn. NORTHUMBERLAND FUS. v. 9th DURHAM LIGHT INFANTRY.

A football match took place on Friday on the former's ground. The ground was very sodden, which rather spoiled a very good game. The Fusiliers scored first, and the visitors equalised before half time. The N.F's had the better of the play in the second half and scored soon after the kick off. The same team contributed two more goals before the whistle blew. Result: 52nd Northumberland Fusiliers — 4; 9th Durham Light Infantry — 1.

1/6th WEST YORKSHIRE REGIMENT.

"A" Coy. and D Coy. met at Bluch Park on Saturday "D" Coy. opened the scoring from a good shot by Lce. Cpl. Mercer, the ball shiking the inside post before entering the net. "A" Coy, whose team included three cup finalists now pressed, but without success. A good movement by Pte Redgead ended in Lce. Cpl. Mercer scoring.

Hereabouts Lieut. Lancaster of "A" Coy. was conspicuous for many brilliant runs. "D" Coy. again attacked and C.S.M. Hubbard repulsed them in fine style. "D" Coy. scored again, the ball striking Matthews, the left full back, and entering the net. Lce. Cpl. Mercer and Lieut. Rumney both played well for "A" Coy.

TRIAL MATCH AT EFFEREN.

A trial match — 12 aside — Signallers v. the rest of 70 Siege Battery — was played at Efferen on Saturday and resulted in a win for the Signallers. Hinchcliffe displayed capital form with both bat and ball but for the most part the men showed that they had not yet got their "eye" in.

Details: Rest of 70 Siege: Sergt. Crook b Salmon 4; Gnr. Root Run Out 2; Gnr. Manson c Clayton b Hinchcliffe 11; Farquharson c Clayton b Hinchcliffe 5; Livesay b Salmon 0; Love b Hinchchiffe 5; Tyrrell b Renyard 0; Kewley c Clayton b Renyard 4; Edwards b Hinchchiffe 0; Cpl. Signallers: Salmon b Frost 0; Gunby b Frost 0; Clayton st Sgt. Cook b Frost 7; Hinchcliffe c Frost b Root 32; McKinley b Root 5; Sgt. Muggiestone l.b.w. b Farquharson 2; Gaskell b Frost 7; Renyard b Frost 3; Oliver b Bowman 5; Lancaster b Frost 4; Wells c not out 4; Done b Frost 1; Byes 4; Total 74.

"BEST COMPANY" CUP.

51st H.L.I. "A" Company v. 28 Field Ambulance.

The third round of the "Best Company" Cup Competition, Lowland Division, was held near Stocker on Saturday in fine weather. The H.L.I. soon begun to press. Neat footwork took them to the visitors, goal, Gardner getting in a fine drive which gave the cus.odian no chance. The H.L.I. outside right had hard luck at goal, but his accurate centering subsequently resulted in Smith making sure of a second goal, from a corner. After this set-back, the F.A. began to work together, but fine back play frustrated their efforts. Before half time Smith got another goal. The R.A.M.C. were not playing up to their former style, while the H.L.I. displayed beautiful football.

On resuming, after the interval, the R.A.M.C. tried hard to score; but faulty shooting left them without a goal. The H.L.I. again become dangerous, the right playing in superb fashion. From a centre the inside left found the net with a good shot. For a time the R.A.M.C. pestered their opponents' goal, Davies eventually scoring. One penalty kick had been missed, but F. Menzies, who took a second penalty, brought the score to two The play of the H.L.I. was always good, and two more goals were added before the whistle blew. For the H.L.I., Brown, on the right wing, was always sure, and played a fine game; also Gardner and the right back. Luck, R.A.M.C., was in fine form and played a capital game, frequently having to fall back from centre-half to cover the full backs. Result: 51st H.L.I. "A" Coy 6; 28th Field Ambulance 2.

"FLAG WAGGERS."

51st. GORDONS HEADQUARTERS, SIGNALS V. EDUCATIONAL STAFF.

After their victory over the Transport eleven at the beginning of the week, the Educational Staff of the 51st Gordons, Duren, tried their luck against the Headquarters signallers on Friday afternoon. A boisterous wind and the sodden nature of the ground made good play impossible and the players found difficulty in controlling the ball.

The "flag waggers" early showed to good account, and before long found themselves two goals to the good through Mc Combie, their clever centre. The Education men had one or two good runs but it was close on the interval before they opened their score through Lce. Cpl. Henderson.

The second half was mostly in favour of the signallers, who missed many good chances a goal and Mc Combie completed his "hat trick" by putting on a third goal for them. That finished the scoring, the final result being 3—1, in favour of the Signal Section

Lieut. Brown, M.C. played a good game at centre-half for the "Sigs," and was ably supported by the backs. Capt. Loewe was prominent on the extreme right for the teachers and in goal Lawrie had more to do than his vis-a-vis, but he performed his work well. A return match is to be played shortly.

SAM BROWNES V. LEG IRONS.

136 Heavy Battery R.G.A.

On Saturday, a very interesting game was witnessed on the above Batteries ground near Euskirchen. Much amusement prevailed throughout the game, in which the officers defeated the Drivers by five goals to two.

11th ROYAL SCOTS V 1/8 SCOTTISH RIFLES.

Played on the ground of the former at Haan on Wednesday. Playing with the wind, the Royal Scots after 20 minutes hard struggling opened the scoring through the centre-forward, Pte. Giannotti.

The play during the first half was largely in favour of the Royal Scots.

The second half showed a sturdy struggle.

The centre forward of the Rifles was a man who had to be watched, being very deadly at the goal, but Devine, the centre-half of the home team, kept him well in check.

The goalkeeper of the Rifles played a great game for his side, being applauded several times by the spectators. — RESULT: R. SCOTS 1, S. RIFLES, Nil.

2/4 WEST RIDING REGT.

The re-play for the "Warwick Shield" took place at Pingsheim on "C" Coys. ground on Sunday. The game opened very fast, the opposing team making many efforts to score without avail. The first half of the game supplied plenty of thrills.

The second half opened with the same amount of dash and after 20 minutes play Douglas headed a splendid centre from Humprice which found the net. Two minutes before time, Cooper netted the ball in style, to the delight of "C" Coys. supporters.

"D" Coy. put up a splendid fight but were beaten on their merits, the game resulting in a win for "C" Coy. by 2 goals to nil.

YORKSHIRE OFFICERS OPPOSED.

In a keen game between the officers of 1/5 and 1/6 West Yorks on Sunday, at Blucher Park, the latter, by virtue of superior forward play, won by 2—1.

ATHLETICS AT DUREN.

Gordon H.Q. Inter-Company Sports.

"C" Company, 51st Gordon Highlanders held the first of their inter-company sports at Duren on Wednesday. The weather was favourable and the meeting was most successful. All the events were keenly contested, particularly the foot races, the tug of war competition and the pillow fight. The last mentioned afforded much amusement to the spectators. Lieut. Fraser, assisted by Lieut. Mac Donald, "C" Battery Sports Officer, and Sergt. Major Barfour, carried out the arrangements in an efficient manner. The S.M. took part in the high jump competition, and in spite of his years and service cleared 4 ft. 10 in.

The following were the results: —

100 yards race (Officers and Sergeants): 1, Sergt. Fairweather; 2, Sergt. Dunn; 3, Lieut. Burnett.

100 yards (final): 1, Lce. Cpl. Brown; 2, Sergt. Fairweather.

220 yards (24 entries): 1, Pte. Hutchinson; 2, Lce. Cpl. Brown; 3, Lce. Cpl. McMechan.

440 yards: 1, Pte. Hutchinson; 2, Lce. Cpl. McMechan; 3, Pte. White.

High Jump: 1, Pte. Brown (5 ft. 3 in.).

Tug of war: No. 10 platoon.

Pillow fight: Pte. Wallace.

Barrow race: 1, Pte. Hutchinson; 2, Pte. Black.

Boat race: No. 12 platoon.

Throwing cricket ball: 1, Pte. Plumer (90 yards); 2, Pte. Henderson (82 yards); 3, Lieut. Rennie (80 yards).

INTER ARMY COMPETITION.

Belgium v. Britain.

At Stamford Bridge, in fine weather, before 5,000 spectators. Hodgkinson made a thrilling run and put in a beautiful shot but Flackling saved at full length. Interval: No score.

On resuming, Johnson scored for the British with a shot at close range, and a few minutes later Vandervelde equalised from a corner kick, easily. Then the British pressed hard and Fisenling made a sensational save.

Result:— Belgium ; Britain 1.

THE VICTORY INTERNATIONAL.

England v. Scotland.

At Glasgow, before 80,000 spectators and in fine weather. Grundsell scored beautifully in the first fifteen minutes and added a second goal shortly afterwards. Puddefoot secured England's third point after a great dash. Interval:— England 3 goals, Scotland 0.

From a penalty kick, Wilson opened Scotland's score after which Puddefoot netted the ball again after a solo run. Then Wilson scored twice in fairly quick succession for Scotland. England were superior in the forward line.

Result: England 4; Scotland 3.

RUGBY INTERNATIONAL.

France and New Zealand opposed each other at Colombes, near Paris, before 20,000 spectators on Sunday.

In the first half, France secureda lead of five points but seemed to tire of their efforts after the interval. So badly did they fall away, in fact, that New Zealand finally won by 16 points to 10.

SANDOWN RACES.

BRITISH EMPIRE LEAVE CLUB.

All about the new Institution.

TO BE OPENED IN COLOGNE ON MONDAY.

A General Routine Order has now been published giving details of the conditions that will govern the much needed club that is to be opened in Cologne under the auspices of British Empire League.

A thoroughly sound idea has been adopted in granting leave to the cathedral town by the allotment of vacancies to units. It is quite obvious that were the leave scheme to be controlled by the commanding Officers of individual units alone, each week-end would witness a great influx of visitors into Cologne, out of all proportion to the numbers that could be catered for adequately by the Club officials. Moreover, there would probably be occasions when the holiday-makers would fall short of the numbers for which provision will be made at the institution.

Allotments to be made.

As already announced in the columns of this journal, the club is an immense place, the interior of which is so thoroughly well organised that something in the neighbourhood of a thousand men may be accomodated at one time without the slightest crowding. An additional hundred or so over and above the number provided for, however, would clearly be a serious impediment in the machinery of administration and would be a contingency calculated to complete the discomfort of everyone.

Consequently, it is unlikely that anyone will complain of the conditions contained in the G.R.O. mentioned, which starts off by announcing that the new club will be opened at 6, Langgasse, Cologne, on the 12th of May.

The order then proceeds to give details of allotments and states that parties will remain at the club for four days.

During the month of May, the first party will be accomodated from the 12th to the 16th; the second from the 17th to the 21st and the third from the 22nd to the 26th.

Corps Headquarters and Corps Troops will be alloted vacancies for four Warrant Officers, Sergeants and Corporals and twelve for privates, while each division, except the Northern Division, may send parties of six N.C.O's and 24 privates.

Parties will arrive at the Club between 9 and 12 o'clock on the morning of the first day, and will return to their units on the afternoon of the fifth day, which means that each man will have four clear days to see all there is worth seeing in Cologne. As for the charges to be made in the way of "hotel expenses," surely no-one will complain that they are unreasonable. Every guest will live on the fat of the land and will have a hundred and one of the little privileges that go to make for the comfort of life, all for an exclusive charge of eight marks a day.

With the mark at its present low value, it does not require the acquaintance with finance of a Chancellor of the Exchequer to realise how absurdly cheap these visits to Cologne will be.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

SUMMER IN RHINELAND.

Phew! We had our first taste of real summer weather on Sunday with a vengence. Everyone seemed to take to the new conditions as a duckling takes to the water. Although it is only a few days ago since we had snow, the activities of all the summer pastimes were running as smoothly as if summer were an old friend. At the Stadtwald, Lindenthal, for instance, the scenes were bright and animated and there was a real "holidayfied" appearance about everything. A motley throng of a couple of a thousand assembled in the vicinity of the picturesque little lake alone — yes, I counted 'em! — and there was not a rowing boat going begging throughout all the hours of daylight, generally speaking.

The Tennis courts were equally generously patronized, of course, and judging by several sets that I witnessed, the Army of Occupation includes among its members, some very capable racket wielders. The female population of Cologne and in fact everywhere in Rhineland, was no less behindhand in its readiness to adapt itself to the warmer climate, so that all the popular haunts of the holidaymaker were bright with the many colours of the ladies, dresses. Whether a large number of the light, dainty frocks were of paper material, I know not, but their appearance in large numbers in the al fresco cafés along the Rhine banks was distinctly refreshing. And even the male inhabitants were influenced by the warmth of the conditions temporarily to part with their heavy overcoats — a tragic state of affairs in their own estimation, surely.

If you buy your Ring from us, we will always buy it back, less 10 per cent.

Ring-buying from us is an Investment. It is like putting money in the Bank. You can convert the Ring into money at any time you wish. We will always give you back its original price, less 10%.

Our method of Ring Selling provides a leisured choice, the opportunity of changing your mind after you have bought, and a buying-back Guarantee for all time.

The shop method gives less choice, less opportunity for careful selection, does not permit you to change your mind, gives no re-purchase condition, and, in most cases, costs appreciably more.

We sell Rings direct to the Buyer in a unique way which enables you to compare 122 different styles of Beautiful Gem Rings, quietly at home. Even men on Active Service are buying by this method. It is like handling and choosing from the actual Rings, so lifelike and perfect are the reproductions.

THE RING BOOK, which we will send to you, delineates these 122 Gem Rings in all their natural Sparkle, Colours and Beauty. It shows Betrothal Rings, Gift Rings, Dress Rings, Men's Rings, all fashioned with the Craftsman's skill and mounted with very fine Gems of the grade that grow in value as they age.

You can select from the RING BOOK with certainty. You can compare the Rings quietly at home, away from the Shopman's embarrassing gaze. After you have made your selection, we send the Ring fully insured to your address on a fortnight's unconditional approval. If, within 14 days of receipt, you wish to change your mind, we will either exchange the Ring, allowing full value for it, or you can return it, and receive your money back in full.

If you decide to keep the Ring, you do so on this condition:—
Whenever you wish, after one month, one year, ten years, or twenty years, we will re-purchase your Ring at 10% less than the price you have paid for it.

To sell Rings in this very fair way demands the cutting-out of intermediate profits. We buy most of our Stones unmounted; sometimes we get them actually in the "rough." We sell DIRECT to the Buyer, and seriously claim that this method increases our Business, reduces Selling Costs, and gives the Buyer a corresponding advantage.

WRITE FOR "THE RING BOOK"

and choose your Ring, or her Ring, not over a Counter but quietly at home. The RING BOOK tells all about the manner-of-buying which safeguards you perpetually. We send it free to anyone interested in sound-value Rings, priced from £5 : 5 : 0 to £325.

D.A.H.?

AN INSUFFICIENT DIAGNOSIS.

In the course of an article dealing with the discharge of infectious soldiers, the medical correspondent of the Times of Friday says:

The trouble is quite simple. Infectious diseases of the type of dysentery and malaria masquerade under an enormous number of different guises. Unless any particular case has been definitely earmarked as dysentery or malaria before it comes to England it is apt to "pass muster" and go out into civil life under some such title as "disordered action of the heart" (D.A.H.) "debility," "Neurasthenia," "muscular rheumatism," or "bronchitis." It is none the less dysentery or malaria, or some other chronic infection, and it is none the less a real and grave danger to the civil population.

At present we are accepting the diagnoses D.A.H., debility, rheumatism, and so on, much too freely. They are handling these labels as if definite disease conditions were being considered.

At one military hospital at least, medical officers refuse to consider "D.A.H." or debility as a diagnosis at all. If a man arrives with these labels he is asked, not about his heart or his general weakness, but about what illnesses he had when the symptoms of breathlessness, giddiness, and so on appeared. If he has come from the East, a routine examination for dysentery is made, no matter what story the man may give. It is astonishing how often the patients are found to be infected with dysentery. Once discovered, the disease can often be cured, and then the man recovers.

The moral is plain. A great danger exists from these cases arriving under a vague diagnosis and being forthwith released among the civil population because "they are not cases of infectious disease." Moreover, a great injustice is done the man himself, because, if the cause of his so-called heart disease is chronic malaria or chronic dysentery, much can be done for him. Finally, an injustice is done the country, because a man who might have been rendered more fit is pensioned off as being less fit.

The remedy is this. It should be ordered that diagnoses founded on symptoms are not to be given unless complete failure has followed prolonged efforts to determine the first cause of the disease. Thus in a case of debility following malaria the diagnosis would not be "debility" but "malaria." This would ensure a watchful eye being kept on this patient. Again, a man with disordered action of his heart coming on after a dysentery attack would be labelled no "D.A.H." but "dysentery," and very careful efforts made to free him from infection.

This, of course, means the employment of expert and vigorous use of laboratory accommodation to make routine examination of all suspects. Finally we would point out that time is essential to the proper examination of any man. You cannot determine the nature of an infection in a day, probably not in a week. Men must therefore be kept in hospital. The policy of quick returns is a bad one. We are convinced that the public will support any efforts which may be made to secure a better state of affairs.

ARMY HEALTH DIRECTORS.

Better health in the Army and more effective control of disease are hoped for from the creation by the War Office of two new Directorates of Hygiene and Pathology within the Army Medical Department. Pathology in its wider meaning is the branch of medicine dealing with the nature, causes, and treatment of disease. The medical staff will number no fewer than 77.

The objects of the directorates, says an official memorandum, are "to utilise to the fullest extent the benefits of new knowledge and to initiate and control research work in connection with problems affecting the health of the troops; and to raise the standard of sanitary and pathological work in the Army, and to furnish inducement to officers who have specialised in these subjects to continue to work therein. It is also hoped that the improved prospects may encourage young medical men whose inclinations lie in these directions to enter the service."

The new departments will take over the work which has hitherto been distributed among various branches of the Army Medical Department. Each director will hold the rank of brigadier-general.

"The whole community, as well as the Army, will gain from this forward step," writes a medical correspondent. "Accident and disease are much the same in the Army and among civilian workers. Any discovery for the prevention or cure of disease will be available for all. There are hundreds of young doctors hungering for the opportunity of making research into disease, its causes and cure. Some of them have it now."

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

THE BATTLEFIELDS.

We who have fought on the battlefields of France, who have lived together amidst the mud and wreckage of the trenches, who have slept many a wearisome night on the cold clammy soil of the fields, in dark dismal dug-outs and in hurriedly made "cover" trenches; we who have coolly watched the shelling of villages and towns, have very vivid recollections of the horrors of war. And it is interesting, now that such are things of the past, to hear the comments of visitors to those devastated areas where we fought in order to save our country from an unbearable future. Especially interesting it is to read the accounts of the various members of the German Peace delegation — accounts of what they saw of France as it is to-day from the train which took them, by way of the battlefields, to Versailles.

Many of them, it appears — despite the fact that they are amongst Germany's cleverest people — had very little knowledge of the true state of affairs in those one-time prosperous villages. What, then can the average man or woman in Germany know? The restrictions placed upon the Press by the old Government prevented any true enlightenment of the real tragedy which was being enacted on other soil.

With clenched fists.

A representative of the delegation, writing to the Vossische Zeitung seems to have grasped fully the justly indignant attitude of the French people. After commenting on the desolation of the route, he says of the people: "They have not given us a friendly welcome at these places of horror. Many a wrathful word was uttered, many a fist was clenched. How can we be indignant, how can we disclaim this Chauvinistic spirit? The people here have suffered indeed heavily."

A painful reversal.

Another correspondent writing to the Vorwärts refers to their compatriots who are prisoners. "Whilst crossing over the devastated areas," he says, "we can see men in field-grey uniform with red ribbands on their caps and we all jump to the windows and answer the salutes not given to us but to their country and the dear ones at home. We have seen at home Russians, Frenchmen, Englishmen, Italians, Serbs, and Roumanians in the same situation. It is merely the painful reversal of a usual spectacle. The sight, depressing as it is, is not so terrible as some imagine. The prisoners, of whose condition we have the opportunity of investigating, appear to be fairly well fed."

Passing near St. Quentin the correspondent obtains an idea of the tragical situation. "St. Quentin!" he says, "we shall never be reconciled with France unless we do not thoroughly understand why they hate us. For all that human folly of destruction has done we shall receive the bill at Versailles."

Thus the veil is being withdrawn gradually from before their eyes, and it is to be hoped that when they return they will be able to convey to their own people the true reality. But by no means have they learnt the full reason why "French people clench their fists" merely by glancing at tumbled-down houses and swamped fields. Far more hideous crimes have been enacted for, after all, those are the natural results of war. There are others which cannot be included in any class of warfare save that of savages, and these crimes are they which have caused the bitterness, not only of the French people, but the whole of the civilized world.

Socialists no yet satisfied.

Though a great and very important victory was scored for the Socialists when May Day was proclaimed a National Festival, this party is not altogether satisfied. It would be difficult adequately to sum up the great effect which must in course of time result from this new institution, and which, in all probability, will entirely revolutionize the policy of the new Germany now that the driving power, so essential for any kind of success, has been placed at the disposal of the socialists by a sympathetic Goverment. At the same time, there is still much to be done before the mass of the people will be convinced of its value. Scheidemann, the Prime Minister of the Republic, recently made this point very clear. "We have gained he said," a certain amount of political prestige, but not all; for the majority of the people is not with us. Our aim must be to win over this majority and thereby ensure a perfect basis for the great economical successes which will convert capitalistic society into a socialistic one.

ARMY PAY OFFICE MYSTERY.

Consternation has been caused in military circles in Dover, says a Dover correspondent of the Daily News, by the disappearance of a large number of Army money orders of the value of about £10,000.

It is stated that the orders were placed in a drawer in one of the Army pay huts, and are known to have been there and securely locked up at the end of last week, after which they had disappeared.

One of the orders was cashed at a post office in London on Tuesday, and it was because of a defect in the Army date stamp that an inquiry was made which led to the discovery of the loss by a military officer.

It is believed that the date stamp used was not that used in the Dover pay office.

The Dover police were informed, and they are making efforts to solve the mystery.

THE SOLDIER'S RIGHT TO LIVE.

Major Malone, a magistrate at Tottenham, emphatically protested against the action of the police in opposing the resumption by a discharged soldier of the business of a flower-seller on the pitch he occupied before he joined the colours.

Inspector Abbey urged that the man had no right to stand where he did.

Major Malone suggested that there was a moral right as well as a legal right.

Inspector Abbey: Yes, but ——

Major Malone: But for men like this man having gone and done their bit, where should we be? Should we be here? Would you be here, inspector, if these men had not gone and fought and prevented the Germans from becoming our masters?

Inspector Abbey said the policeman objected to the man obstructing the pathway with his basket.

Major Malone: The policy of the Bench is that this man has a right to live. He has chosen to earn his livelihood in the way and at the place he did before the war. We direct that he shall be allowed to. He must not, however, obstruct the pathway.

The ROTH Memory Course

The Popular Course at a Popular Price

"Of course, I know you! Mr. Addison Clark, of Hull.

"If I remember correctly—and I do remember correctly—Mr. Burroughs, the timber merchant, introduced me to you at the luncheon at the Automobile Club three years ago this May. This is a pleasure indeed! I haven't seen you since that day. How is the grain business? And how did that amalgamation work out?"

The assurance of this speaker—in the crowded corridor of the Hotel Metropole—compelled me to turn and look at him, though I must say it is not my usual habit to eavesdrop even in a hotel lobby.

"He is David M. Roth, the most famous memory expert in the world," said my friend Kennedy, answering my question before I could get it out. "He will show you many more wonderful things than that before the evening is over."

And he did.

As we went into the banquet-room the host was introducing a long line of the guests to Mr. Roth. I got in line, and when it came to my turn, Mr. Roth asked, "What are your initials, Mr. Jones, and your business and telephone number?" Why he asked this I learned later, when he picked out from the crowd of 60 men he had met two hours before, and called each by name without a mistake. What is more, he named each man's business and telephone number accurately.

I won't tell you all the other amazing things this man did except how he called out, without a minute's hesitation, long lists of numbers, bank clearings, prices, lot numbers, parcel post rates, and anything else the guests gave him in rapid order.

When I met Mr. Roth again he rather bowled me over by saying, in his quiet, modest way:—

"There is nothing miraculous about my remembering anything I want to remember, whether it be names, faces, figures, facts, or something I have read in a magazine.

You can do this just as easily as I do.

"My own memory," continued Mr. Roth, "was originally very faulty. Yes, it was—a really poor memory. On meeting a man I would forget his name in thirty seconds, while now there are probably 10,000 men and women, many of whom I have met but once, whose names I can recall instantly on meeting them."

"That is all right for you, Mr. Roth," I interrupted. "You have given years to it. But how about me?"

"Mr. Jones," he replied. "I can teach you the secret of a good memory in one evening. I have done it with thousands of pupils. In the first of seven simple lessons which I have prepared for home study I show you the basic principle of my whole system, and you will find it not hard work, as you might fear, but just like playing a fascinating game. I will prove it to you."

He didn't have to prove it. His Course did: I got it the very next day from his publishers.

When I tackled the first lesson I was amazed to find that I had learned—in about an hour—how to remember a list of one hundred words so that I could call them out forward and backward without a single mistake.

That first lesson stuck. And so did the other six.

Read this letter from C. Louis Allen who at 32 years became head of a £200,000 concern, the Pyrene Manufacturing Company, makers of the famous fire extinguisher:—

"Now that the Roth Memory Course is finished, I want to tell you how much I have enjoyed the study of this most fascinating subject. Usually these courses involve a great deal of drudgery, but, this has been nothing but pure pleasure all the way through. I have derived much benefit from taking the course of instructions, and feel that I shall continue to strengthen my memory. That is the best part of it. I shall be glad of an opportunity to recommend your work to my friends."

Mr. Allen didn't put it a bit too strongly.

The Roth Course is priceless! I can absolutely count on my memory now. I can recall the name of almost any man I have met before—and I am getting better all the time. I can remember any figures I wish to remember. Telephone numbers come to mind instantly once I have filed them by Mr. Roth's easy method. Addresses are just as easy.

The old fear of forgetting (you know what that is) has vanished.

Perhaps the most enjoyable part of it all is that I have become a good conversationalist.

I can recall like a flash of lightning almost any fact I want just at the instant I need it most. I used to think a brilliant memory belonged only to the prodigy and genius. Now I see that every man of us has that kind of memory if he only knows how to make it work properly.

I tell you it is a wonderful thing after groping around in the dark for so many years to be able to switch the big searchlight on your mind, and see instantly everything you want to remember.

My advice to you is, don't wait another minute. Send to the National Business and Personal Efficiency Department 47a, of the Standard Art Book Co., Ltd., for Mr. Roth's amazing course, and see what a wonderful memory you have got. Your dividends in INCREASING EARNING POWER will be enormous.

VICTOR JONES.

A few testimonials just received.

"After the second lesson I had my money's worth, and would not part with what it has done for me for many times its cost. It is simplicity itself." —
J. M., M.D.

"The course has been of real value to me. The small amount of time required and the simplicity of the method will appeal to any busy business man." —

SEND NO MONEY.

So confident are the publishers of the Roth Memory course that once you have an opportunity to see in your own home how easy it is to double, yes, treble, your memory power in a few short hours that they are willing to send the course for free examination.

DON'T SEND ANY MONEY. Merely write a letter, and the complete course will be sent at once. If you are not entirely satisfied send it back any time within three days after you receive it, and you will owe nothing.

But if you are as pleased as are the 114,000 other men and women who have taken the course, send only 30s. in full payment. You take no risk, and you have everything to gain, so post the letter now before this remarkable offer is withdrawn.

"AM TAG" — OF THE PRELIMINARY PEACE TERMS.

THE HISTORIC MOMENT.

ITALIAN DELEGATES RETURN TO PARIS.

FIENDISH TURKISH CRUELTY IN ARMENIA.

ANNOUNCING THE PEACE TERMS.

OFFICIAL COMMUNIQUÉ.

The sitting during the course of which the text of the Preliminary Peace Terms will be handed to the German delegation will be held on Wednesday 7th May at 3 p.m.

There will be present the plenipotentiaries of the British Empire, United States of America, the Dominions of France, of Italy, Japan, Belgium, Brazil, Greece, Poland, Portugal, Rumania, Serbia, and the Tchecho-Slovak Republic, each of whom will be accompanied by a Secretary.

It has been decided that representatives of the Press of each country will be admitted up to a total of thirty for the Great Powers and ten for those powers who have special interests.

The German delegation will comprise six plenipotentiaries, accompanied by their secretaries and by five newspaper correspondents.

ITALIAN DELEGATES RETURN TO PARIS.

"THE DAY" APPROACHES.

Count Bonin Longare, the Italian Ambassador in Paris called on M. Pichon, the French Foreign Minister, yesterday and informed him that according to a telegram from Rome Signor Orlando and Baron Sonnino would be back in on Wednesday morning.

M. Pichon immediately communicated the information to the Council of Three. The decision of the Italian delegates seems to have been made spontaneously, following the conversations which have taken place in Rome during the last few days.—Havas.

TURKISH TROOPS' FIENDISH CRUELTY.

ARMENIAN FAMINE.

The Times correspondent at Igdir, in a message dated the 13th April, via Constantinople (delayed in transmission) says the systematic removal and destruction of the crops and food supplies by Turkish troops in South Russian Armenia has left the country famine stricken. The supply of food at Igdir is insufficient to keep more than a fraction of the population alive. Many families are feeding on grass and clover and will die unless proper food supplies are not at once forthcoming.

Some twenty-five bodies are removed from the streets daily, and instances are known of portions of corpses being offered for food by refugees. The correspondent has actually seen in the cemetery the remains of bodies which had been dug up at night and partially consumed by the starving people. The conditions in the surrounding villages are reported to be even more desperate than at Igdir.—Reuter.

WAR MINISTER KILLED BY AEROPLANE CRASH.

Copenhagen. An aeroplane containing the Czecho-Slovak War Minister Stefanik and two Italian officers, crashed near Wajnor. All the occupants were killed.—Reuter.

HOME RULE FOR SCOTLAND.

A Bill for the Government of Scotland introduced into the House of Commons by Sir Henry Cowan provides for the setting up of a single chamber Parliament subordinate to the Imperial Parliament. The Parliament will comprise 148 members, representing existing constituencies, with the addition of peers.

The powers of the new Scottish Parliament will include all those powers conferred on the Irish Parliament by the Government of Ireland Act of 1914.

TRIAL OF TURKISH FIENDS.

Constantinople.— The great trial by court martial of twelve Unionist leaders, including ex-Grand Vizier Said Halim Pasha and the ex-Foreign Minister Halil Bey, has commenced.

The indictment involves a lengthy list of atrocities committed against the Americans, and foreshadows the death penalty against Enver Talaat and Djemal. These two are fugitives and will be tried by default.—Reuter.

DELAYING THE INEVITABLE.

Copenhagen. A telegram from Buda-Pesth dated 5th May says there is not a word of truth in the report that the Hungarian Government has accepted the Allies' demand for capitulation and surrender of all arms and ammunition and for the occupation of Buda-Pesth by the Allies. Reuter.

AMNESTY FOR MILITARY PRISONERS.

It is understood that in connection with the forthcoming peace celebrations the Government is taking into consideration a review of all cases of British soldiers serving sentences for offences against military discipline committed during the war, with the object of granting free pardons or reductions of sentence when peace is ratified.

VICTORIOUS ROUMANIAN ARMY.

SEEKING NEW CONQUESTS.

Reuter learns that the army invading Hungary under Humbert is progressing rapidly and has probably reached the occupied suburbs of Buda-Pesth. The Rumanian troops who are participating comprise six divisions, with two French divisions. These have been involved in heavy fighting. Slovak troops are following on the right wing of the Rumanian army. The situation is good in Bessarabia where there are four Rumanian, two French and two Greek divisions, while there are further Rumanian divisions in Moldavia. Practically the whole of the Rumanian Army, whose spirit is magnificent, is mobilised. The Military situation in Rumania is regarded as absolutely safe and after the occupation of Buda-Pesth the Rumanians will be ready to advance against the Bolshevists in any direction.

SIBERIAN ARMY'S ADVANCE

PRISONERS AND BOOTY.

A delayed telegram from Omsk dated 23rd April says that the Social Democratic Party at Perm passed a resolution declaring that it regarded Lenin and Trotzky as anti-democratic and disastrous to Russia, and that it was its duty to help to bring about, as soon as possible, the downfall of Bolhevism.

According to advices from Omsk dated 25th April Koltchack announces that along the Perm railway the offensive is being energetically pursued, the despatch adding "We have taken many prisoners and a large amount of booty. On the river Kama our troops captured eighteen steamboats and forty-five other vessels."

Omsk. 26th April. It is officially stated at Headquarters that Siberian troops have taken Aktubinsk and Sabartchine stations on the Tashkent railway, thus cutting off the Bolshevist retreat from Orenburg towards Tashkent.

FRENCH AND KITCHENER.

PIQUANT REVELATIONS.

Field Marshal French, continuing in the Daily Telegraph his narrative of the retreat from Mons, dwells on the difficulties he experienced with Kitchener, who "arrived at Paris in his uniform as a Field Marshal, and from the outset assumed the air of Commander in Chief, announcing his intention of taking the field and inspecting the troops." French says that Sir Francis Bertie, the British Ambassador, supported him in protesting against Kitchener's attitude and after interviews in which French told Kitchener that he could not tolerate such interference with his executive command, an amicable understanding was reached. "Kitchener realised his mistake and left Paris that night."

French emphasises the danger of undue interference of the Home Government with the Commander in the field and says that the utmost pressure was brought to bear on him to compel him to make a stand, thus exposing the British Army to the greatest danger of annihilation. Kitchener came to Paris with no other object than to insist on arresting the retreat. "It was difficult to resist such pressure. Fortunately I was able to do so." French says Kitchener's visit had the important result of enabling French to communicate his views regarding the future conduct of Allied operations to the French Government, who transmitted them to Joffre. The latter replied that it would be impossible to organise a line of defence on the Marne, as French suggested, saying that the British could best help by participating in the defence of Paris, whose safety, says French, was paramount in the minds of the French generals. He shows how the arrogance of the Germans in thinking the British were crushed led them to abandon the direct advance to Paris and attempt to cut the Allies in two South of the Marne, the consequence being that the Germans were thrown back in confusion over the Marne. French says that von Kluck showed hesitation and lack of energy.

QUEEN OF SWEDEN'S AWKWARD PLIGHT.

Stockholm, 2nd May. The Swedish newspaper Afton Tidningen, in an article headed "Queen of Sweden besieged by revolutionaries" says: "The Queen, who for over five months has been staying with her mother, the Grand Duchess of Baden, at the castle of Count Douglas of Langenstein, South Baden, near the Swiss frontier, with six Swedish attendants, is unable to leave the castle even for an hour's visit to her mother as the risk of unpleasant experiences is too great. The Baden Government has emphatically advised the Queen against making even the shortest trip until the people's minds have quietened down. Therefore it seems that the Queen, together with several Swedish subjects, is now kept practically in imprisonment.—Reuter.

JAPANESE PORT BURNT.

An undated Reuter despatch from Yokohama says that 3,500 buildings have been destroyed by fire. The damage is estimated at one million pounds. A hundred persons were injured and sixteen are missing.

ASTOUNDING CONFESSION OF FOURFOLD MURDERER.

A CALLOUS CRIMINAL.

One of the most callous confessions of crime ever made by a cold blooded criminal was that voluntarily given to the police by Henry Perry, alias Beckett, who is charged with murdering an entire family.

The victims were:— Walter Cornish (46), Mary Cornish (42), Alice Cornish (14) and Marie Cornish (5).

While this astounding document was being read in Court and throughout the hearing of the evidence the prisoner stood to attention in the dock.

He was remanded until Friday.

Beckett, who was arrested on Friday morning at East Ham, was charged with the murder of the Cornish family at Stukeley Road, Forest Gate. He is a short man, with a bronzed face, dark brown hair and moustache.

He wore a shabby greatcoat and waistcoat, the coat having a wound stripe on the sleeve, and corduroy trousers. He stood motionless at attention in the dock, holding a cloth cap in his right hand and with his eyes fixed straight in front of him looking on the floor. He was charged in the name of Harry Perry, although he is stated to be generally known as Beckett.

SENSATIONAL EVIDENCE.

Divisional Det. Insp. Hall, who, with Chief Insp. Neil, of Scotland Yard, had charge of the case, was the first witness. He described his visit to the house in Stukeley Road, and the finding of the body of Alice Cornish on the cellar landing, and that of Mary Cornish in an outhouse at the bottom of the garden. He removed a carving-fork from her throat.

On the floor was the severed portion of the ring finger of the left hand. There was the impression of a ring, but no ring on it. Under a bench was an axe.

In the house he found a soldier's overcoat with six shillings in coppers tied up in a khaki handkerchief in the pocket. Under the coat was a bloodstained hammer, and near by another hammer with human hair adhering to it.

There was a pail in the sink containing bloodstained water and floorcloth, and the passage near the cellar appeared to have been recently washed. He searched the house, but nothing else appeared to have been disturbed.

"I also found some letters addressed to Mrs. Cornish," proceeded Inspector Hall, "but I do not propose to put them in to-day."

THE COLOGNE POST will issue a SPECIAL EDITION containing an Exhaustive Summary of the PRELIMINARY PEACE TERMS as soon as they are received.

"I AM THE MAN."

Proceeding, witness said that at noon on Friday he, with Chief Inspector Neil, saw the prisoner, detained at East Ham Police Station. He said to him: "I understand you give the name of Jones." Prisoner replied: "No, my name is Perry—Harry Perry, but I am known as Beckett. I am the man you are looking for."

I told him who I was, said the Inspector, and I told him he would be charged with the murder of Walter, Mary, Alice, and Marie Cornish. The prisoner said: "Quite right."

I noticed he was wearing a wedding ring, and told him to take it off. He did so, and said, "That is not the one I took from her. I gave that to a woman in Stratford on Monday night." I looked through some documents which I found in prisoner's possession, and he said. "I will tell you all about this."

I said, "If you wish to make a statement I will take it down writing, and you can sign it." I again cautioned him, after which he made the following statement.

THE CONFESSION.

PRISONER'S ANTECEDENTS.

As far as I can remember, I was born at Chatham. My father was a sailor, and he died when I was young. My mother married a hawker named Becket. Whilst I was still very young we used to travel the country in a caravan.

On November 29, 1916, I joined the 3rd Suffolks at Bury St. Edmunds, and did my training at Felixstowe, and was drafted early in 1917 to Egypt. I was stationed at Sidi Bish, near Alexandria, and in about six weeks we were then sent to Palestine, on the Gesrea Beersheba front, some time in May, 1917.

I went out to get some water, when I got lost. I rambled about all night, and next morning I was overtaken by some Arabs, and whilst walking along I was fired at by a Turkish Bedouin. I was slightly wounded in the left leg, just above the instep. I was taken prisoner and carried to a Turkish camp.

I was five days in hospital, and was then taken to Jerusalem. I left there, and was taken to Damascus, where I had typhoid fever. About November 4, 1917, I left the hospital, and was sent with a working party on a railway with other British prisoners. I was taken to different places, and finally to Constantinople, where we were taken over by the British Colonel Commins, who was in charge.

BAD MILITARY RECORD.

I was sent to South Italy by the steamship "Contomber" (an Australian boat), and detained in hospital at Terranto, Italy. I remained there a week, and was then sent to Genoa at Bordegear remaining six weeks, after which I was sent to England on a paddle-boat from Le Havre pier.

We disembarked at Southampton on February 26, 1919. I went to the office of the A.P.M., Horseferry Road, and I told a lot of lies and, represented that I belonged to the Australian Expeditionary Force. The A.P.M. disbelieved me and sent me to the detention barracks.

I was then taken to Scarborough, where I remained four days under arrest. I was there given a warrant to proceed to my depot at Bury St. Edmunds, but instead of going to the proper depot I went to the new infantry barracks.

I was then directed to report myself to Quartermaster-Sergeant Shelling. I did not go, but went to my sister, Mrs. Louie Smith, at Ipswich.

Whilst I was there I went to a War Office assurance place, represented I was a returned prisoner of war, and gave them some papers, which they kept. They gave me £5. I then went to my step-aunt, Mrs. Cornish, 13, Stukeley Road, Forest Gate.

The address was given me by my sister, Mrs. B. Bird, of Ipswich. She recognised me by my photo, which she had received from one of my sisters. She asked me in at about 9 p.m. Mr. Cornish was there.

They made me welcome and comfortable for the night, and I stayed two weeks. That would be near the end of March. I stopped with them until the Saturday after Good Friday. Whilst there I became acquainted with Mrs. Sparks, and we arranged to get married.

I had some words with Mr. and Mrs. Cornish, and they turned me away. I left the house and went to Warley. When I got there I changed my mind and returned to London, called at the Whitehall Recruiting Barracks, and tried to get some money, as I was hard up. I stopped in the barracks that night.

POKER, PICKAXE, AND FORK.

Next morning (Saturday, April 26) I returned to Mrs. Sparks, where I remained until Monday. I left her about ten o'clock, and walked about till twelve o'clock. I had some beer, and about 1.30 p.m. I was passing Mrs. Cornish's door. She called me in and gave me one or two rough words, and asked me to stop to dinner.

I lost my temper and knocked her down with the kitchen poker. I carried her into the shed at the bottom of the garden. She was not dead, but unconscious. I hit her with a pickaxe and went back into the house, got a carving-fork from the drawer and stabbed her in the throat.

This would be between 2 and 3 p.m. I covered her over with some boards and rubbish, and then went back to the house and remained there until the little girl Marie came in from school. I hit her on the head with a hammer in the passage. She fell down, and I struck her again, then picked her up and threw her down the cellar.

Soon after Alice came in from school. I let her in. She went into the kitchen, and I struck her on the head with a hammer. She fell down, and then I hit her on the throat with an axe, and carried her into the cellar.

I CUT HER FINGER OFF.

I waited until Mr. Cornish came in from work. He said to me, "What games are you having? I am going to hand you over to the police." We had a few words because he was annoyed at me being there.

He turned his back, and I hit him on the head with the axe with which I hit the girl Alice. I struck him a second time, but he got away and was frightened and went out of the house.

Before Mr. Cornish came I had gone upstairs and taken £3 in notes and 8s. in silver, the two half-sovereigns which were in Mrs. Cornish's purse on the dresser in the kitchen, and also 4s. 3d. in silver.

I cut Mrs. Cornish's finger off with a table knife and took off the ring, which I gave to a woman I met the same night. Before Marie came home Mrs. Gallagher called, and I told her Mrs. Cornish was out shopping.

On Monday night I went to a clothes shop at Stratford and bought a jacket and waistcoat and cord trousers, which I am now wearing. I paid 37s. for the jacket, vest, and cap, and 17s. 6d. for the trousers. Altogether it came to £3 0s. 5d.

I took the clothes down to the docks and took off my uniform, removed the stripes and changed into plain clothes. I met some sailors and went gambling. I have been sleeping about the docks ever since.

Last night, with a sailor, I broke into some schools at North Woolwich and stole some of the coppers found on me. The sailor had a revolver. Someone came to the place to make he fire up. The sailor then threatened to shoot him if he came near him. We got away.

That is all I have to say. This statement has been voluntarily made after I was duly cautioned that it might be given in evidence against me. It has been read over to me, and it is true.

(Signed) HENRY PERRY.

Taken and witnessed by Arthur Neil, Chief Inspector.

OFFICER V.C.'s SAD PLIGHT.

Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, speaking at the Royal Academy banquet, said that no commander in the history of the war had been so ably and loyally supported as himself by all ranks of the British Army. It was because every man had played the game as a true English sportsman that we had won. Let us always remember, he said, what British training and education had done when we are asked to adopt some system of education invented abroad. The people's wonderful support of the army earned a high tribute from the Field Marshal, who asserted that the Pensions and Labour Departments are sympathetically coping with the problems of demobilization. The numbers dealt with are enormous and one heard of very sad cases daily. Sir Douglas begged employers to be patient with applicants for work and to help them to learn their job.

Quite recently an officer who had won the V.C., D.S.O., and M.C., was discovered vainly trudging the streets of London in search of work.

This statement that a demobilized Victoria Cross officer was trudging London in search of work has attracted great attention and the Appointments Branch of the Ministry of Labour is in communication with Sir Douglas Haig to find out whether or no the V.C. registered his name with them.

It is stated in papers discussing the subject that demobilized privates are much better off than officers owing to the improved conditions secured by their unions, while officers without unions are unwilling to accept positions at salaries which are lower than their Army pay

FLYING THE ATLANTIC OCEAN.

OCEAN LAMP POSTS.

Commander Towers, the U.S. Naval officer who is supervising the American preparations for the trans-Atlantic flight, has issued the following statement: "On a forthcoming morning the United States Naval seaplanes in Newfoundland will hop off on a flight of not less than eighteen and a half hours to the Azores. This means that the machines will travel throughout one night, and will not alight before daylight. Sixty destroyers equipped with powerful searchlights will swing beams heavenwards throughout the hours of darkness, thus affording aircraft a lamp post every fifty miles. The flying height will be roughly one thousand feet. In the daytime the destroyers will have huge numbers painted on their decks and sides so that aviators may check their couse regularly.

St John's, Newfoundland. 3rd May. — Three American warships have already arrived at Trepassey Bay, near Cape Race, which has been selected as the base for the American trans-Atlantic flight.

The second United States seaplane is expected to be ready to-morrow.

American Naval officials declare that these three vessels form the advance guard of a squadron of thirteen which will be strung across the Atlantic from Newfoundland to the Azores. American seaplanes are expected to start from Rockaway Beach for the first section of the trans-Atlantic flight on 5th May and will probably leave Trepassey Bay for the Azores between 12th and 14th May. In addition to the destroyers it is also proposed to employ five battleships, which will keep Washington advised of the progress of the flight.

New York, 5th May. By an accidental fire at the aeroplane station at Rockaway Beach, the wings of seaplanes N.C. 1 and N.C. 4, two of the three machines intended for the trans-Atlantic flight, were destroyed. It is announced that N.C. 3 will start tomorrow, weather permitting, and it is hoped that N.C. 1 and N.C. 4 will be able to start later.—Reuter.

A FAVOURABLE DAY.

St. John's. 5th May. There is a light North West wind here this morning and the day is fine. So far as local conditions are concerned the prospects are favourable for the trans-Atlantic flight.

YET ANOTHER ENTRY.

A Vickers Vimy-Rolls machine is the latest entry for the trans-Atlantic flight. Completed at the Weybridge works, it is fitted with two 350 h.p. Rolls-Royce engines. Carrying 865 gallons of petrol it has a range of 2440 miles, with a maximum speed of a hundred miles per hour, although the average cruising speed will be kept at ninety miles.

Captain J. Alcock D.S.C., is to be the pilot of the machine, which is now awaiting shipment to Newfoundland.

Vice Admiral Mark Kerr, Lt.-Col. Stedman and Major Brakley left Liverpool on Sunday for Newfoundland in connection with the trans-Atlantic flight by the Handley-Page machine.

UNEMPLOYMENT SWINDLERS SENTENCED.

At Portsmouth a man was sentenced to two months hard labour for obtaining unemployment donations by false pretences.

A mother and her daughter were sentenced at Grays to three weeks imprisonment and twelve months probation respectively for attempting to obtain the unemployment donation.

A Manchester man was sentenced to six months imprisonment for obtaining unemployment pay by false pretences.

The Minister of Labour has appointed a Committee to make enquiries and report as to whether modifications of the unemployment donation scheme are necessary.

The scandal of the flagrant abuse of the out-of-work donation scheme is receiving the attention of the authorities and heavy penalties are being inflicted where offenders are detected. The following are cases in point:

At Aylesbury, on Saturday, John Kingham, general dealer, of Aylesbury, was charged with obtaining £11 12s. representing out-of-work donation from the Ministry of Labour Employment Department, by false pretences.

Accused had served in the Royal Air Force, and the Public Prosecutor asked that he should be adequately dealt with, as frauds of this character were very prevalent. Defendant received the donation between Jan. 31 and March 31, whilst carrying on business as a dealer. He registered himself as a general labourer, and signed a declaration that he was unemployed and unable to find suitable work. If he had registered as a person working on his own account he would have come under the special supervision of the officials. During January and March he did business with one firm to the extent of £65 for the sale of marine stores.

Defendant was sentenced to three months' imprisonment with hard labour.

A man aged 20, drawing unemployment pay, was fined at Croydon yesterday for playing banker on Mitcham Common. He said he was not looking for work but was waiting for the Government to find him a job.

COLONEL TO CONSTABLE.

Holding the rank of Acting Lieutenant-Colonel when he was demobilized recently, a Cardiff policeman named Arthur Ritchings has resumed duty as an ordinary constable.

Sir Frederick Sykes was very much better yesterday.

2nd Lt. Cuthbert Skerrison, R.A.F. flying a machine for instructional purposes at Port Grange, Gosport, yesterday, crashed on the railway line and was killed.

Burglars have lifted and removed the safe from the Ministry of Labour's Employment Exchange at Rotherhithe. It weighed over half a ton and contained 600 pounds.

Neither the men nor the money have yet been found.

THE LUSITANIA.

Four years ago to-day the Lusitania was torpedoed by German submarine craft and sunk into the mighty deep. The deed was dastardly the loss of life was appalling. These years have not sufficed to wipe out the memory of a dread and ruthless blow. Its sorrow and its shame lingered throughout a campaign unequalled in gloom and death, for the escutcheon of humanity was foully besmirched. The sinking of the Lusitania was an outstanding fact of war; there was no excuse for it and there could have been no excuse. Men and women and children, devoid of the passions of war, engaged in no act of war, were doomed to swift and cruel death. What were the consequences? They were speedy and inexorable. A great moral revulsion against militant Teutonism gripped the heart of the civilized world and brought to our country the succour which spelt defeat for Germany. The unholy jubilation of our foes, evilly expressed in a medal which drew the memory of mankind to St. Bartholomew's Day, nerved our Empire for the fight and gave to it spiritual significance. The seventh of May 1915 was a day of doom.

Is there a German argument against the fact of the Lusitania? Assuredly there is, and it takes diverse forms. It is possible to hold that all is fair in war as in love, that war at its best is so brutal that swift and ruthless warfare is in the end the most merciful. That is the apologia of terrorism. Against it we say that whilst war is undoubtedly a business of savagery it has usually been limited by certain rules which owe their origin to international law, and that any violation of these rules brings shame to humanity. No more flagrant violation of international law could be imagined than that involved in the sinking of the Lusitania. It may be held that Englishmen are not free from hypocrisy when they emphasize the outrage of 1915 and pass over in silence a systematic policy enforced every day from the beginning to the end of war, a policy of calculated blockade. Which policy, we are asked, is the more humane — the Prussian policy which brought swift death on the high seas, or the British policy which as long as war was waged brought the spectre of famine into every German home? We state this argument fairly and frankly, for as a nation we have always prided ourselves on our fairness.

We answer with confidence that the British policy was infinitely more humane. Our reasons are twofold. In the first place, the policy of blockade is as old as the art of war. From the earliest years responsible statesmen in counting the cost of a campaign have paid due heed to the cardinal question of their nation's food. They have known that their enemies would try all means to hinder and if possible cut off food supplies. Thus they have never embarked on war without some reasonable assurance that they could feed their soldiers and their countrymen till victory or defeat brought fighting to an end. In 1914 the German authorities calculated the power of the British navy—it was well known to them—and they reckoned that they could win the war against the Allies before the Grand Fleet could starve their country. There was no swift, unprecedented policy in the British navy. It attempted what the German war-lords expected it to attempt. But there was miscalculation, for the Grand Fleet accomplished what it was not expected to accomplish — and so famine spread over the German empire. It was a slow weapon, a sure weapon, and, if you like, a cruel weapon — for war is cruel — but it was a weapon that Germany had carefully gauged and, as it turned out, wrongly gauged. The British navy struck no fierce, unlooked-for blow in the dark; it worked on expected and recognized lines, on the lines of international law, and it worked surely and relentlessly.

Surely and relentlessly — the words point to our second argument. On the seventh of May 1915 the unsuspecting passengers on the Cunard liner had no chance of surrender, no sporting chance even of life — if we may use a colloquial adjective. Quite frankly, they were murdered on the high seas. The slowness, sureness, and relentlessness of the British blockade gave the Germans a daily chance of life during every one of four long years. The war-lords had only to say — "It is enough, we shall not allow our nation to starve;" and they might have brought war to an end. If the war-lords proved recalcitrant, then the people had only to say — "It is enough, we shall not allow our war-lords to starve us;" and they could equally well have brought war to an end. Surely a policy of blockade is humane when one has regard to the infinite warnings it offers to beleagured men and women. Its very insistence on the frailty of mankind is merciful when it is compared with a policy of stand and deliver and die.

We have thought it wise to point out the British attitude. The policy of The Cologne Post is explanatory and reasoned but not provocative. It is against every British tradition of honour to maltreat the fallen, and we would not offend our tradition. But it is a mere matter of kindness and common-sense to lay bare the secret of the sore inflicted by Germany on our Empire, when reluctantly brought into the abyss of strife our Empire strove to keep war from its most hideous evils. The time may come, we believe it will come, when healing will assuage the enmities of these years. We have no desire to wound a nation in its throes, but we believe that the Lusitania episode has made the art of healing far harder than it might have been. Even now a frank avowal on the part of the German people that the sinking of the Lusitania was a crime against humanity would make it easier for many of us to forget the bitterness of the past years.

RUSKIN ON WAR.

Suppose I had been sent for by some private gentleman, living in a suburban house, with his garden separated by a fruit-wall from his next door neighbour's; and he had called me to consult with him on the furnishing of his drawing-room. I begin looking about me, and find the walls rather bare; I think such and such a paper might be desirable—perhaps a little fresco here and there on the ceiling—a damask curtain or so at the windows. "Ah," says my employer, "damask curtains, indeed! That's all very fine, but you know I can't afford that kind of thing just now!" "Yet the world credits you with a splendid income!" "Ah, yes," says my friend, "but do you know, at present, I am obliged to spend it nearly all in steel-traps?" "Steel-traps! for whom?" "Why, for that fellow on the other side of the wall, you know: we're very good friends, capital friends; but we are obliged to keep our traps set on both sides of the wall; we could not possibly keep on friendly terms without them, and our spring guns. The worst of it is, we are both clever fellows enough; and there's never a day passes that we don't find out a new trap, or a new gun barrel, or something; we spend about fifteen millions a year each in our traps, take it all together; and I don't see how we're to do it with less." A highly comic state of life for two private gentlemen! but for two nations, it seems to me, not wholly comic? Bedlam would be comic, perhaps, if there were only one mad man in it; and your Christmas pantomime is comic, when there is only one clown in it; but when the whole world turns clown, and paints itself red with its own heart's blood instead of vermilion, it is something else than comic, I think.—Crown of Wild Olive.

WHAT CANADA IS DOING FOR EUROPE.

(BY A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

No-one who has not had an opportunity of visiting Canada during the past few months can have any adequate conception of the great change which has taken place in that country during the war. Previous to 1914, Canada was regarded as pre-eminently a suitable country for the emigrant, and although Canadian flour, bacon, cheese, fruit, and agricultural machinery reached Europe in considerable quantities, they only served to confirm the popular idea that Canada was, so far as her occupied territory was concerned, an agricultural country and nothing more.

The transfer to Europe of hundreds of thousands of Canada's manhood during the war incidentally provided a means of disseminating information with regard to the great Dominion, and many were surprised to learn for the first time not only of its immense mineral and water power resources but also of its great manufacturing activities. No doubt much valuable although unintentional propaganda work was performed in this way by the members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, yet, strange though it must appear, even they were not in a position to do justice to the great Industrial Canada—which owes its rapid expansion almost entirely to the War.

Two factors have been mainly responsible in converting Canada into a great manufacturing community. The serious shipping losses and the general war situation in the United States prevented Canada from obtaining from without many commodities she usually imported, and in consequence she was compelled to manufacture them within her own borders. Canada's splendid effort in the manufacture of munitions has often been referred to, but few people outside official circles are aware of the immensity of it. It is hoped that later on some statistical information on the subject will be available. In the meantime it may be stated that it was necessary to build large factories for the actual manufacture of munitions; that other factories had to be set up to turn out machinery, tools, and other appliances required in the equipment of the first mentioned factories; that steps had to be taken to develop the mineral and other resources of the Dominion in order to provide the raw materials necessary for both.

The foresight and business acumen which were displayed in organising and equipping the Canadian munition factories were applied, on the signing of the Armistice, to the difficult task of demobilizing them, and it speaks much for the ability of Canadian business men that demobilization was effected in a fortnight and without the necessity of paying out large sums in the form of donation allowances. The factories which turned out the machinery, tools and other appliances were not however, demobilized, nor were any efforts made to retard in any way the output of raw materials. These factories have been adapted to the manufacture of commodities required in the work of reconstruction, and the raw materials themselves are happily as useful in peace as in war.

It is this new industrial Canada that is coming to the assistance of Europe, and the Canadian Government, through its mission in London, has already made the necessary arrangements. Canada realises that peace will not have been attained in Europe until there is a sufficiency of food and abundant employment. It is apparent that food, being nature's gift, cannot be produced for many months in lands lately ravaged by war, and Canada is willing to place her surplus food products at the disposal of the Allies until they are in a position to provide for themselves.

Moreover, if food is to be produced in Allied Countries in quantities which enable those countries to be self-supporting to any great extent, agriculture must be reorganised and more up-to-date machinery utilised. Here again Canada is coming to their assistance by sending them that up-to-date agricultural machinery which has for many years been one of her best-known products.

The herculean task of rebuilding the devastated areas in Belgium, France, Roumania and Serbia has also to be taken in hand. Raw materials and manufactured articles are required for this work. Canada has abundant supplies of iron and steel, timber, asbestos, and up-to-date building appliances, and arrangements are being made for them to be placed at the disposal of the Allies in their work of reconstruction.

Reports of commissions who have enquired into the conditions prevalent in the devastated areas have laid emphasis on the necessity of providing clothing, boots, and other vital necessities. Prior to the war Canada would not have been in a position to furnish articles of this description, as large quantities had to be imported to satisfy her own needs. It gives some indication of the remarkable and rapid growth of Canadian manufactures to state that the Allies are now receiving from Canada goods of the varities which previous to 1914 they were in the habit of exporting to that country.

There is a further service which Canada is rendering, but which cannot be measured in quantity or value. Conditions arising out of the war have produced in Europe pessimism, despair and, in some cases, unrest and even anarchy. The fact that a new country like Canada with its optimism, gospel of hard work and of the dignity of labour, is assisting in the work of reconstruction, is having a healing influence which must in the end make for peace and for a more hopeful outlook on life throughout the whole of Europe.

The Canadian Mission in London with headquarters at 1, Regent Sreet, S.W.1, and under the Chairmanship of Mr. Lloyd Harris, one of the master-builders of the new industrial Canada, is prepared to put at the disposal of all who are interested full information regarding Canada's exports.

MY LOVE.

I feel so hopeless. I almost wish that we had never met. Had I not known your joys I might have stayed content; and yet, to know that I have known you makes me proud.

I came to this land with my head held high; I was glad we had won the war. My chest went out as the Germans went by, and I couldn't have swaggered more.

Then came You, who showed me visions to be, and made all the world look bright. I shuddered in awful ecstasy, I tremoled in mad delight.

I could not think. The sight of you made my nerves tingle; the first touch made my poor heart throb until I feared my head would burst. I had not dreamt such painful joy could be.

They said I could not fraternize. They barred me from all social intercourse with Fritz. But to have owned you I'd have violated all the laws that be. You could not be described as handsome or divine; I cannot say that you were anything but plain. And yet from that first touch my heart was yours. I wouldn't have lost you for the wealth of kings. I knew that you were mine, made just for me, and consequently I'd have died for you. You gave me happiness for one brief spell, and proved how dear to me you really were. Until to-day I could not leave you; not for one moment were we seen apart. You were so close to me that now I've lost you I feel that some essential part of me is gone.

I try to fall again into my former groove, but fear that that is quite a task beyond me.

I might well have known that we soon must part, but I looked on the joy that I had, and did not count the sorrows to come, for—

"All men returning from leave must invariably hand in their passes."

THE MAN WHO DID — AND WHAT BECAME OF IT.

BY JUVENIS.

CHAPTER III.

Mr. Bilson noted with satisfaction the gradual change coming over his business. Certainly, it was being conducted on army lines, and the only thing he now desired was the rigorous discipline of the Army. So he set his brain to work in order to devise a scheme for imbibing to his employees the military idea of government by fear. He realised that the mainstay of Army obedience lies in the non-commissioned officers, and he felt the absence of those inestimable creatures in the jam manufactory. He determined to try and secure some of these demobilized individuals who were at the moment fattening on the Government unemployment pay.

Accordingly the following advertisement appeared soon after in the Northern Telegraph: —

WANTED at Berry & Bilson's Ltd., good reliable men as foremen; ex-full rank N.C.O.'s and Warrant Officers only need apply. Salary good. Apply between the hours 2 p.m. and 4 p.m.

The day after the insertion of the above advert. about the hour of 2 p.m. a queue of men might have been seen outside the firm of Berry & Bilson Ltd., which have brought up reminiscences of the cigarette queue in a Y.M.C.A. canteen. On a closer inspection one could easily have detected that the badly fitting civilian garments worn by the men were Army Issue, from the Dispersal Centre.

Mr. Bilson, informed of their arrival, was a bit disconcerted at their numerical strength, but promptly ordered them to "Fall in" on their markers, according to their respective ranks. He had previously selected a beery looking individual with a large "corporation" as marker for the warrant officers; a square-jawed person whose face suggested long acquaintance with the boxing ring to represent the sergeants; and an expressionless youth with baggy trousers for the corporals.

Having "dressed" the ranks, and "stood them at ease" in correct "Infantry Training, 1914" fashion, he proceeded to interview the Warrant Officers. After questioning them about their old regiments, how many men they had "pegged" daily, and what their average number for the guard room had been per day in the good old days, he eventually chose the most bellicose of them all, because he claimed the greatest propensity for "bullying the troops." Still adhering to the old army ideas, considering men of intelligence unfit for responsible positions, he instinctively chose those with the least business ability, so from the sergeants he chose a man who could neither read nor write, but who had a voice like a 9.2, and claimed long experience as "i/c defaulters." From the corporals he selected one, who having served a long time on the P. T. Staff, only possessed the ability to shout, "Move," "jump to it," and other similar cryptic phrases.

The three favoured men having fallen out, Mr. Bilson "pulled the remainder to attention," and dismissed them.

Returning to his office with the new employees, the director explained to them their new duties, laying emphasis on the fact that he wanted them to make the workpeople "sit up." He told them that he was engaged in the greatest experiment, he considered in the annals of commerce, the militarisation of a business.

So these three ex-parade ground tyrants left the "Orderly Room," as Mr. Bilson now termed his office, and went out like roaring lions seeking whom they might devour.

Mr. Walley, the ex-warrant officer, commenced by entering the lady clerks' department and telling a young lady of the flapper variety to get her hair cut. To enforce this, he applied the treatment he had so often found efficacious in previous years; drawing from his pocket a pair of barber's clippers, he ploughed a furrow through the hair of the astonished girl from the back of her neck to the crown of her head. Thereupon, she promptly went into hysterics, and Mr. Walley just as systematically informed her that she would be on a charge for "dumb insolence."

He did not see the absurdity of the charge, although the air was rent with the girl's shrieks, and so he proceeded to lock her up in a cupboard in lieu of a guard room.

Mr. Givitem, the ex-provost sergeant, strolled into the Packing Dept. and used his lungs with such violence because a girl, carrying about a dozen jars of jam had got in his way, that she dropped the lot through sheer fright. He quickly apprehended her and demanded her name, at the same time adding that she was under open arrest for "Irregular Conduct."

Mr. O'Grady, the late Physical Jerks exponent, caused more amusement than fear, by his nervous excitability. He entered one room, where several girls were engaged in superintending the boiling operations. He shouted in his shrill voice, "Class," and as no one seemed greatly impressed, he exhorted them to "jump to it." That having no effect, he told one girl to double round the Works twice, and another to ascend and descend the staircase three times in succession. These outbursts of Mr. O'Grady were too fatiguing to the girls to be really enjoyed, and they showed some signs of insubordination, to which he immediately replied by threatening to "bash all their heads in."

Three weeks later, Mr. Bilson drove up in his car to the works, at 9.30 p.m., his usual time of arrival, and was surprised to find a solemn stillness reigning in place of the usual hum of industry. He entered the building and met his three devoted overseers on the threshold. Their faces soon showed that something was wrong. The facts were soon told; for some unaccountable reason, none of the employees had appeared that morning. The director rushed into his office, and his eyes immediately met the following document, typed on his own business paper, lying on his desk:

"The Staff of Messrs. Berry & Bilson, Ltd., desire to intimate to the Managing Director that no employee on that staff will return to his or her duty, until the three overseers, Messrs. Walley, Givitem and O'Grady have been discharged from the firm.

Furthermore, they would like to inform Mr. Bilson, that while military methods of such description as the treatment received from the three overseers in question, may be tolerated in the Army, they, as civilians, have no intention of submitting to the violation of any of their liberties.

(To be continued.)

One of the parishioners of a young minister was disgusted at the reverend gentleman's close attention to his manuscript, and was only too pleased to give vent to his feelings when a friend inquired—

"How's the new minister getting on?"

"Getting on!" replied the irate churchman, "Well, he's getting on like a crow in a later field—two daos and a look-up."

THE "RED PATCHES."

Debut of Another Concert Party.

Last week saw the formation of yet another concert party, namely, that of the 52nd Battalion Manchester Regiment which takes the name of the "Red Patches" from the distinguishing mark of the Battalion, i. e., red patch which is worn behind the cap badge.

The entrepreneurs of this new attraction are Captain W.G. Swain and Lieut. J.H. Moore, who have been untiring in their efforts to produce a really first class show. The three initial performances were given on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, in the Battalion Recreation Room at Gestringen, to large and very appreciative audiences.

On entering this building on the first night, one was astounded at the transformation in so short a period from what, only a few day before, had been a dowdy dilapidated and depressing village "Konzert Halle" to what now would compare very favourably with many an up-to-date "Casino" in France or England.

The Battalion Pioneer Sergeant and his Staff must have been real "treasures" to those concerned and are to be congratulated on the wonderful results they achieved in producing such excellent lighting arrangements. The programme, consisting as it did of numbers which were suited to all tastes, was sufficient proof of the versatility of the artists.

The Battalion is extremely fortunate in having at its disposal the services of ex-members of such eminent theatrical companies as the original "Tatlers" concert party and the late Mr. Geo. Edward's Companies of London and Miss Horniman's Gaiety Theatre Company of Manchester, in addition to three excellent vocalists, a first class light comedian, a solo 'cellist and last—but certainly not least—an accompanist of the highest order.

Sergeant Bedfort, who is responsible for the originality of many of the excellent lyrics, and C.Q.M.S. Critchlow whose stage management was all that could be desired, both deserve the highest praise in contributing to the success of the performances.

The exceedingly high level of the tone maintained throughout was admirable and there is no doubt whatever that the "Red Patches" are sure of success and full houses wherever they may go.

CARDS AND MUSIC.

715 Labour Coy Detachment Whist Drive

As a slight relaxation from the heavy work of handling ammunition at one of the Army Depots, the detachment of the 715 Labour Coy. held a most successful whist drive on Monday. The winners of the ladies prizes were, Pte. Adams (1st) and Pte. Graham (3rd), and very charming they looked too, though unfortunately they had stubby chins and their prizes were, most appropiately razors. The winners of the gentlemens prizes were Pte. Cochran (2nd) and Pte. Knight (4th). The booby prize went to Pte. Hay, that most harrassed of all men, the detachment cook. It consisted of a medal with the appropiate inscription "For Lotion and Rouge." Lieut. Cann, O.C. Detachment, acted as "Whip," and a very good job he made of it. The whist drive was followed by a sing—song, with Sergt. Brown in the chair and the evening proved a huge success. The detachment is in about the last spot on this earth so far as amusements are concerned, and, as the evening was so thoroughly appreciated and enjoyed, it is proposed to make it a weekly fixture.

"Y. M.'s" AT HOME.

Gen. Sir Charles Ferguson, the Military Governor of the occupied Territory, Viscount Broome, R. N., the Town Major of Cologne (Major Bles) and several other distinguished officers were among those present at an At Home given by Dr. Frances and his colleagues on the staff of the Central Y.M.C.A. on Monday. General Robertson, the Army Commander, had signified his intention of being present, but was prevented from attending owing to pressing military duties. Subsequently Viscount Broome gave a most interesting lecture in the Great Hall, his discourse dealing with the doings of the British Army during the war. He gave a very instructive account of the surrender of the German Fleet, his remarks being illustrated with cinematograph views.

The audience was most enthusiastic in its appreciation and Major Bles' proposal that a vote of thanks be given was accorded with great acclamation.

SPORTS REQUISITES.

Those who are in search of sports and athletic goods will be interested to learn that the Central Y.M.C.A. in Cologne are daily expecting a large supply of these articles which are to be placed on sale at the Souvenir Stand.

A SUCCESSFUL TOUR.

The "Iddy Umpties" brought their most successful week's end to a close on Saturday night at Miel. Crowded houses have been the rule at each place they visited, but their final show at Miel was to an overwhelming audience, which demanded frequent encores. At the conclusion of the performance the entertainers were heartily thanked for their excellent services throughout the week by Colonel H. Ward, D.S.O. (104 Brigade R.F.A) after which the officers and men joined in giving the Party "musical honours."

FOR NIGHT BIRDS.

By keeping open their hostel, in the Hohe Str., all night, the Salvation Army authorities in Cologne are meeting a long felt want amongst men in the Army of the Rhine. Thus men reaching the City late at night, during their journeys to and from England, are able to obtain a comfortable bed and refreshments, instead of wandering about the streets till morning.

INTERESTING MATCH AT RIEHL.

51st D. L. I. — "Y." v. "Z." Companies.

In view of the fact that the football team of "Y" Coy beat the "rest of the Battalion" (?) the other day, and were rather elated over the fact, "Z" Coy challenged them to a game on Sunday May 4th and a good but rather one-sided game resulted.

In the first half, Sgt. Wilkinson and Lce.Cpl. Robinson ("Z" Coys.' defence) easily accounted for the rather spasmodic attacks of the opposition and with their forwards playing a good game they were two goals up at the interval.

In the second half, Cpl. Edlington, "Z" Coys. goalie, was practically a spectator and "Y" Coy were very fortunate in keeping the score down to three goals. Lce.Cpl. Illingworth (2) and Pte Peel were the scorers.

Although "C" Coy were far superior in method, the game was always interesting to the onlookers. Result: "Z" Coy 3; "Y" Coy 0.

ANOTHER CHALLENGE MATCH.

Headquarters v. 51st Battery — 39th Brigade.

The above match was played at Rhinebach, the outcome of a challenge by the Battery, after a previous defeat of one goal to nil. From the kick off the Headquarters team pressed in fine style, the outside left continually beating the opposing backs, but the Headquarter's failed to score, owing to the players all being eager to find the net. A sudden breakaway by the battery forwards was foiled by the right back, who cleared in brilliant style, after which the Headquarter's forced a corner from which the Rev. W. Heale scored. Half time arrived with Headquarters leading, and from the kick-off against the wind, Headquarter's had the best of the play. Several good runs by Headquarter's failed to materialise, but at last Dr. Liversley scored. The game finished by Headquarters winning 2 goals to nil. The left half of the Headquarters played a brilliant game, as did the goalie, who saved brilliantly. Headquarters team was picked from a cadre of 15 men, while the Battery had 50 men from which to pick.

12th IRISH RIFLES "ONE UP."

12th (S) BATTN. THE ROYAL IRISH RIFLES V. 2nd ARMY COLLEGE.

Played at Stommeln on Thursday. The College was much the heavier team, but during the first half play was generally in their half.

Several good opportunities were missed following fine runs by Prescott, the visitors' goalkeeper saving smartly; Mc Kindley's tackling and passing considerably handicapping the visitors' right wing. The interval arrived with no score.

In the second half play was more even, the visitors nearly finding the net with a shot from Capt. Saxton, but Thompson pushed the ball away.

The right wing of the College now worried the Rifles, but a fine kick by Lee relieved the pressure. Prescott's run ended with a corner. From this a scrimmage took place in front of the visitor's goal from which Mc Minn scored.

Great excitement now prevailed, but the Rifles defence kept the visitors out, the Rifles winning by one goal to nil.

For the visitors Sapper Blackmore, with excellent kicking, relieved the pressure on several occasions. Capt. Thornton played much better in the second half, often worrying the Rifles defence.

For the Rifles, Mc Kindley and Prescott were in good form, but unfortunately Prescott's centres were not made use of, or the Rifles would have won easily.

The teams were: College, Smeaton; Blackmore, Maddox; Lt. Trom, Berryman, Longstaff; Capt. Thornton, Capt. Bassford, Capt. Saxton, Lt. Fish, Pte. Black.

Rifles. Thompson; Rainey, Lee; Mc Kindley, Dunne, Galloway; Prescott, Doherty, Campbell, Walker, and Mc Minn.

1st MACHINE GUNNERS v. 141 FIELD AMBULANCE.

The return match played on the ground of the former on Sunday resulted in a win for the Machine Gunners by one goal to nil, Pte. Mc. Callum scoring from a corner by Pte. Scott.

303rd v 488th SIEGE BATTERIES.

303 Siege gave a taste of their mettle, when they beat the hitherto undefeated 488 S B. on the latters ground at Ippensdorf, on Saturday. Although the score was but 1—0, there was never any danger of defeat for 303, who were much the better team throughout. They well deserved the goal, which was scored by Gunner Hill, after some pretty footwork amongst the forwards.

No. 2 v No. 9 51st BEDFORDS INTER PLATOON COMPETITION.

Favoured with fine weather, the above two platoons met at Hennef on Sunday, to decide which was to be the champion football platoon of the Btn. From the kick off a considerable amount of midfield play ensued with No. 2 platoon doing rather more attacking than No. 9. After a while No. 9 made the running but were unable to score. Half time arrived with neither side having claimed any advantage. From the restart No. 9 went off with a rush but were still unable to overcome the excellent defence of No. 2 platoon. One great shot of No. 9's centre half (Lce. Cpl. Larkin) was splendidly cleared by No. 2's goalie, Sergt. Cope, From a breakaway, the centre forward of No. 2 managed to get home with a shot which registered the only goal of the match. No. 9 tried hard to obtain an equaliser. Their efforts met with no succes. The game was fast and exciting and some excellent football was played, to the great enjoyment of a crowd of excited and enthusiastic spectators.

TROPICAL FOOTBALL.

WATSON AND STEVENS IN FORM.

The return match between 70 and 319 Siege Batteries was played at Efferen, on Sunday, and resulted in a win for the first named by 3 goals to love. The reappearance of Andrew Watson at centre forward greatly strengthened the home front line and for the greater part of the game play ruled in the vicinity of the visitors' half. Quite one of the features of the game was the delightful passing movements between Stevens and Watson, and altogether the 319 defence had a gruelling time. Fairley brought off some clever saves, especially during the second half, while Gray and Brooks were a hard-worked pair of backs. Seventy were a couple of goals to the good in the first five minutes. Watson took a pass from Jones and, cleverly tricking Gray, beat Fairley at close range. The same player a minute later found the net again after some excellent play around the 319 goalmouth following a corner kick. No further scoring took place prior to change of ends, but 70 did nearly all the attacking, and once Fairley saved brilliantly from Watson at the expense of an abortive corner.

In a break away 319 were awarded a "free," close in, and Macdonald hit the crossbar with a terrific shot. In the concluding period the visitors were mainly on the defensive and it was during this period that Fairley did so well between the sticks. However, Stevens eventually beat him with a hard drive, and as 319 were unable to break through the home defence they were beaten pointless. The weather was ideal from a cricketer's point of view, but for football it was something like being in a vapour bath for over an hour minus the cold shower. The teams were:

70 Siege Battery: Gunby; Garnham; Cudworth; Meyerott, Howarth, McAuley; Lancaster Hinchcliffe, Watson, Jones J.E. and Stevens.

319 Siege Battery: Fairley; Brooks, Cpl. Grey; Bdr. Brandon, Bdr. Short; Chreston, Macdonald, Hay, Robins, and Reeve.

5th DEVONS INTER PLATOON FINAL.

Keen and exciting football was witnessed on Saturday last, when the final for the six a-side inter platoon competition was won by No. 4 Platoon who gave a good exhibition of the game by defeating No 9 platoon 4 points 2.

The Drums and H.Q. staff again tried conclusions which resulted in narrow win for the H.Q. by eleven to one.

4th R. S. F. IN WINNING FORM.

On Monday the 4th Royal Scots Fusiliers defeated the 16th Field Artillery (American Army) by 6—2. On Saturday the 4th R. S. F. met the 16th American Field Artillery and beat them by seven goals to one.

A FISHY TALE.

HOW NOT TO CATCH FISH AT GEMUND.

BY "FORELLA".

On arriving at Gemund after a weary journey from Cologne, where I had hoped to be stationed, I was cheered by the keenness of all ranks in the direction of sport. Football claimed the bulk of the mens' interest and I spent several afternoons cheering the Battery team. My voice lost tone and I had perforce to be a silent spectator, but by no means a sad one.

However, an unaccountable speeding up in the stage coach-demobilization, made gaps in the team and these were not easily replaced. Football became in consequence hardly worth watching, so I turned my attention to another form of sport which promised, if not more excitement, at least as much interest. I procured a rod and line and went fishing.

Perseverance unrewarded.

I fished at one or two sports where I had seen fish caught and hope soared high in my breast. Like the mercury in a thermometer, however, it gradually dropped. Thinking I might meet with success in another part of the river I drew in my line and walked about half a mile downstream, selected another ground and cast again.

About a quarter of an hour elapsed with nothing happening, and then a young German, evidently a native of Gemund appeared armed with rod, line and bait and accompanied by a small boy carrying satchel.

During this time I had been steadily growing colder and my hands had turned a delicate shade of purple. My feet too, were numb, but still I persevered. My worm had shrunk but not from over-eager fish biting at it. The cold had turned it a delicate pink, a colour pretty enough to tempt even the most fastidious fish. Alas! the colour scheme did not appeal to the denizens of the deep.

Hope Springs eternal.

Hearing a slightsplash in the direction of my neighbour, the German youth, I glanced up to see him land a beauty — a roach big enough to make half a good supper. In less than three minutes he repeated the performance and during the hour that ensued caught nine more as large or larger.

The pale flame of hope which had begun to flutter, revived and burned brightly. I noticed that the successful man was fishing without a float so I removed mine and sat down upon the bank. It was of no avail, those fish disdained my bait. The flame which had been revived now flickered again and when I saw another shining body jerked from the water and added to the almost full satchel, it went out. I then pulled my line and turned to go. I hated that youth with his satisfied air and his big catch.

That night I dreamed of fish of truly tremendous proportions and awoke in the middle of the hours of darkness with the cold clammy feeling of a fish upon my face — I had rolled off my bed boards on to the cold stone floor.

MUSIC, TENNIS AND CRICKET.

The list of activities of the Cologne Central Y.M.C.A. grows daily. It now embraces the encouragement of enthusiasts in the game of Badminton, the Great Hall being used as a court during the day time and on those nights when not required for meetings etc. There is also the training of young musicians in orchestral music, instruments and the services of an excellent conductor in the person of Mr. Newton Jones M. A., a professor of music in London, have already been secured. In addition a cricket pitch and tennis lawn are now "in full swing" and if recent displays by frequenters of these places are to be taken as any criterion, Y.M.C.A. will become famous for one or two cricket teams and tennis clubs.

The Barry F.C. directors have called a meeting of Welsh club representatives at Cardiff to consider the constitution of the Southern League Second Division for next season.

SPORT IN ENGLAND.

WYE RACES.

The Wye meeting opened on Monday, when there was a very large attendance. Results were:—

Selling Handicap Hurdle Race:— 1, Mind the Paint (8—1); 2, Longer Line (6—4on); 3, Mutton Cutlets (10—1). Six ran.

Canterbury Steeplechase: 1, Ready Cash (13—8on) finished alone. Four ran.

Ashford Handicap Hurdle Race: 1, Court Bleddyn (3—1); 2, Sporting Parson (5—2); 3, Macherry (5—4on). Six ran.

Selling Handicap Steeplechase: 1, Bradnell (evens); 2, Familiar (8—1); 3, War Duke (13—8). Three ran.

Wye Hurdle Race: 1, My Memo (2—1on); 2, In a Twinkle (5—1); 3, Neville Holt (7—1). Seven ran.

Dover Steeplechase: 1, Dublin Bay (3—1); 2, Chang (6—4on); 3, Turkey Buzard (5—2). Three ran.

LONDON BETTING.

The Derby: (run June 4th) 4 to 1 Stephen the Great; 100 to 14, The Panther taken and offered; 00 to 14 Lord Basil taken; 100 to 8 Paper Money taken and offered.

IN THE RING.

THE WILLARD-DEMPSEY FIGHT.

HEAVY WEIGHT CHAMPIONSHIP TO BE FOUGHT IN AMERICA.

A Reuter telegram states that the match between Jess Willard and Jack Dempsey for the worlds heavy-weight championship will take place at Toledo, Ohio on 4th July.

The bout will be limited to twelve rounds and the referee will be authorised to give a decision on points if the fight goes to the limit.

BOUTS IN LONDON.

At the National Sporting Club on Monday in a fifteen Round contest for two hundred pounds a-side, Terry Martin, United States Navy, beat Chris Langdon, Swansea, on points.

In a twenty-round contest at the Ring, on Monday, Driver Fred Housego, R.F.A. beat Young Charles, Newport in the tenth round, the referee stopping the fight.

In the same programme, George Langham, Clarkenwell compelled Stoker Warby, Chatham, to retire after eight rounds in a fifteen round bout.

RUGBY FOOTBALL.

MONMOUTHSHIRE BEAT NEW ZEALAND.

Monmouthshire defeated New Zealand at Ebbw Vale in a rugby match on Monday, by four points to three. There were ten thousand spectators.

In the beginning of the second half, a great rush by the New Zealanders resulted in that team scoring a try. Play then favoured the Monmouthshires and after a brilliant exhibition by the forwards, Shea dropped a goal, amid scenes of great enthusiasm.

OVERSEAS BEAT ENGLAND R.A.F.

In the return match between the R.A.F., Overseas and the R.A.F., England, at Fulham, on Monday, the former won by 6—3. England twice took the lead through Lee and Pick, and Adams and Morris, in turn, equalised. Then Fox made the score three all after Adams had put the overseas men in front.

Each goal had many narrow escapes before Masterman scored the first of three more goals for overseas, the last two being obtained when England, having lost the services of Crook, who retired injured, relied on one back. Adams and Morris were the scorers.

TWO-DAYS CRICKET MATCHES.

Views of Surrey Club's President.

At the annual meeting of the Surrey County Cricket Club, Sir Jeremiah Colman, who was re-elected President of the Club, referring to the two-days matches this summer, said that there was an opinion abroad that Surrey and Yorkshire had not pressed their views with sufficient urgency at the time the matter was under discussion. He affirmed that the view held by Surrey and Yorkshire was the right one, and the decision come to the wrong one. He would say that Surrey spoke in opposition in no unmeasured terms.

The county club had submitted to the decision of the majority, and entered the championship matches as usual. He did not think it would be very long before they reverted to three-day matches again, or at least took steps to make the two-day fixture a success.

The President explained that Surrey and Middlesex had not yet ended their efforts to combat the Entertainment Tax, which in many aspects was not applicable to them. Obviously there was a distinction between those who paid at the gate for cricket entertainment and members of the club who neither received nor expected any entertainment out of it at all.

NOTTS CRICKET.

In their annual report the Notts Committee state that subscriptions to the club were fairly well maintained last year and the freehold of the Trent Bridge ground has been purchased. During the war the pavilion at Trent Bridge was used as an Army hospital, the total number of patients admitted since the opening being 3,553. The hospital has now been closed except for the electrical and mechanical wards.

In their report the committee of the M.C.C. state that in 1918 the club consisted of 5,403 members, an increase of 459 over the previous year. Captain P. F. Warner, Mr. P. J. de Paravicini, and W. H. Paterson retired by rotation from the committee, and Mr. C. H. Benton died in 1918. The four candidates are the Earl of Ellesmere, Mr. J. Shuter, Mr. M. Falcon, M.P., and Mr. C. M. Wells. The committee recommend that honorary memberships should be offered to Admiral Jellicoe, Sir D. Beatty, Viscount French, and Sir Douglas Haig.

A special meeting of the council of the Welsh Football Association has been summoned at which it is proposed to appoint various committees to thoroughly investigate the rules of the game and to alter them to suit present day conditions.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

Wednesday, May 7, 1919.

Surface wind between East and South-east 10-15 m.p.h. Considerable amounts of low cloud. Some showers likely. Morning mist. Visibility improving during day. Moderate temperature.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

An Ideal Sportsman.

A very marked distinction — that of being the ideal sportsman — has been bestowed upon Sapper Harold Hardwick, who won the inter-theatre of war championship held at Aldershot. The tangible mark of this distinction is a cup which was presented to Hardwick by Brigadier-General H. A. Jones, R.A.S.C. Hardwick was declared the winner by a ballot of men who voted under the following conditions, which may be regarded as the Army's definition of a sportman: That he must play the game for the sake of the game; play for his side and not for himself; be a good loser and a good winner, modest in victory and generous in defeat; accept all decisions in a proper spirit; be chivalrous towards a defeated opponent; be unselfish; be always ready to help others in every possible way to become proficient in sport and a cheerful comrade. Bravo! Hardwick.

Since he first visited England in 1911 Hardwick has carried off the A.S.A. 100yds, 220yds, and 440yds championship and 100yds Empire swimming championship and heavy-weight boxing, and when he came he was the holder of the Australian 220yds and 440yds swimming championships. In 1912, at Stockholm, he was third in the 400 metres and 1,500 metres races, and was one of the Australian team who won the 800 metres. In 1915 he turned professional boxer, and after several minor successes was knocked out by McGoorty in ten rounds.

Bayardo's Owner Dead.

The world of racing has recently suffered by the deaths of several well known and thoroughly popular sportsmen. Yesterday we published the sad news of the death of Mr. A. W. Cox, at the age of 62, the owner of the well-known racehorse Bayardo. The late Mr. Cox, who resided in North Wales, raced under the name of Mr. Fairie, and had a good deal of success with his horses. He won his first race in 1888 and, after several other minor successes, took first place in the One Thousand Guineas with Galeottia in 1895. Other important races won by "Mr. Fairie" were the St. Leger, with Bayardo in 1909; the Derby with Lemberg, 1910; the Chester Cup and the Ascot Gold Cup with Aleppo, 1914; Triple Crown, 1917 and the Oaks, with My Dear in 1918.

The obituary follows close on the heels of the announcement made last week of the death of Mr. Oliver Jones, the owner of Rathnally. For years he was nominator for the Waterloo Cup, but never got into the final. In 1911 and 1912 great hopes were entertained of his horse Rathnally winning the Grand National, but the first time his chance was ruined by jumping into Caubeen, and he finished second to Glenside, whilst in 1912 Rathnally fell at the third fence. Mr. Jones was a companion of Lord Enniskillen, and the pair were patrons of all branches of sport.

Re-Union Dinners.

In our advertisement columns, almost from the first issue, re-union dinners have been announced with extraordinary frequency. Many of these happy little fructions have already taken place chiefly at Cologne, Bonn and Duren and have, apparently without exception, been thoroughly successful. The revival of old associations and the recollection of past happy memories are wonderful influences in life, and with past experiences so full of tragedy and pain, albeit not witnout an admixture of brighter moments (as has been the average officer's life during the past four years or so) reminiscences are a happy and fruitful theme for conversation. Among the pending re-union function are, an Edmundian dinner at Cologne on the 22nd inst.; an old Edwardians (Five Ways) evening, the date of which is not yet fixed; an old Harrovian dinner at Cologne on the 8th and a dinner of members of "E" Company, 26th O.C.B. Crookham, which will probably be on 1st of June. Hitherto, facilities for similar functions by "O.R.'s" have been sadly lacking, but with the opening of the new British Empire League at Cologne, I doubt not that such affairs will be frequently instituted.

Williard — Dempsey Bout.

Latest reports state that the contest between Jess Williard and Jack Dempsey for the world's heavy-weight boxing championship will be decided in America.

Williard, in a interview with an American pressman, however, said he had not the remotest idea where his proposed battle with Dempsey would take place.

"I don't know any more about where the big battle will take place than you do. The only thing I know is that it's supposed to take place on July 4," he added.

Jess said he had a deal on for a four-reel picture, and was in Chicago to do some posing. Some of the scenes will be taken in Chicago.

"What kind of a picture is it going to be?" Jess was asked.

"Harry Revier is taking the pictures and I'm in on the proposition on a percentage. I think it's to be a four-reeler—no, not a comic, a real sonest-to-goodness drama. Bill Hart won't have much on me after I get a start."

Polo at Cologne.

Lest ye forget, the names and numbers of chukkers required for the polo that is to be played to-morrow, must be in the hands of the Hon. Secretary, c/o Amusement Officer, Cologne, by six o'clock to-day. Given fine weather, there is bound to be a good attendance at the Kalk-Merheim Exercier Platz, and there should be plenty of exciting sport. Play starts at three pip emma.

FURTHER WAR SAVINGS.

52nd GORDON'S FINE RECORD.

In a recent issue we gave an account of the War Savings department of the 51st Devon Regt., stating that over 22,000 marks had been invested in War Saving's Certificates. We are glad to learn that even this proud achievement has been surpassed by the 52nd Cordons. This Battalion, between the 12th and 30th of April, investigated no less a sum than 23,017 marks— a worthy record — whilst "C" Company of the same Battalion in one week totalled 6,894 marks.

Competition is very keen, stimulus being given by the grant of a free certificate to each company which is drawn for by Certificate holders every month. Great care has been taken to explain the working of the association, and to point out the advantages of this form of investment.

'CELLO CONCERT AT THE GROSSER GÜRZENICH SAAL.

Music lovers had a feast on Monday evening at the Grosser Gürzenichsaal, when a number of eminent 'cellists combined together, and presented to a large audience a unique and very enjoyable programme. Herr Julius Klengel, 'Cello Virtuoso, Leipzig, opened the programme with Bach's Suite in D Major for 'cello alone, an item which showed this artist's wonderful technique and memory. This item was followed by a 'cello concerto in D flat, composed by Herr Klengel and accompanied by himself, the solo part being played by Herr Willy Lamping, of Köln. The outstanding feature of this item was the soloist's power of expression, the beautiful "singing" tone he produced, and the masterful way in which the octave passages were played. The first half of the programme closed with a double concerto in E flat for two 'cellos by Herr Klengel; this virtuoso being joined by Fräulein Paula Böckel, solo 'cellist, Heidelberg, the accompaniment being played by Herr Willy Lamping. This item was very pleasing, the ensemble being extremely good and the counter-melodies original.

The second half of the programme opened with three short pieces for four 'cellos: "im Dorfe," "Ländler," "Romanze," of Max van de Sandt, the fourth player being Herr Carl Schaefer, of Bonn. These were beautifully played; "Ländler" and "Romanze" showed originality, the former portraying a rural dance, the latter an idyllic episode.

Herr Julius Klengel next played two solos, differing widely, Mozart's "Andantino" and Piatti's "Tarantella." The latter item was taken strictly to time, and again brought this artist's technique to the fore: the staccato passages being wonderfully executed, involving an enormous amount of wrist work. It was loudly encored, Herr Klengel responding with a "Wiegenlied."

The programme ended with three short pieces: (a) "Abenddämmerung," (b) "Scherzo," by Eduard Straesser, (c) "Hymnus" by Corn. Rubner, played by 10 'cellos. "Abenddämmerung" contained some wonderful modulations, almost "Wagnerian." "Scherzo" was in 6/8 time in which all the 'cellos seemed to take up a leit-motif at different moments; "Hymnus," which was almost diatonic, was beautifully rendered, the body of tone being very full, and the playing very even.

SHORTHAND CLASSES.

Afternoon or evening classes in the Sloan-Duployan method of shorthand will be held in the Army College, Cologne, provided that there is a sufficient number of applicants.

All troops, living in or near Cologne, who wish to take up this subject should see Capt. Bassford, Army General and Commercial College, Hansa-Ring, Cologne, if possible before Saturday, May 10th. The office will be open for this purpose between the hours of 14.00—15.00 and 17.00—18.00.

CENTRAL CLASSES — ARMY TROOPS.

The afternoon classes for Army Troops will re-commence during the week beginning May 19th, as follows: —

MONDAY AND THURSDAYS.

Arithmetic (Commercial and Workshop), Elementary Mathematics (including Workshop Mathematics), German, Geography, Shorthand (Pitman's), Building Construction.

TUESDAYS AND FRIDAYS.

History, French, Machine Drawing, English Composition and Literature, Applied Mechanics.

WEDNESDAYS AND SATURDAYS.

Commercial Correspondence, Book-keeping.

Army troops who wish to join these classes or to prepare either for a full course at one of the Army Colleges, or for the Army First Class Certificate Examination, should see the officer in charge of Education in their units. G.H.Q. personnel should apply direct to the Education Officer, Army Troops, at the Army College, Hansa Ring, at 14.00 hrs at 17.00 hrs.

A NEW BEAST.

PREMIER'S PROMISES TO LABOUR.

48 HOURS WEEK.

The following letter from the Premier, giving the Government's decisions with regard to a maximum working week and a minimum wage, was read at a meeting of the Provisional Joint Committee of the National Industrial Council on Friday, under the chairmanship of Sir Thomars Munro:—

"Though I cannot commit myself to every detail, as many of them are complex and technical I may say at once that I fully accept in principle your recommendations as to the fixing of maximum hours and minimum rates of wages. As regards hours, a Bill is now being drafted to give effect to your recommendations, and will, I hope, be introduced at a very early date.

"There are certain industries, such as agriculture, in which seasonal and other conditions necessitate special consideration, and some cases, such as those of seamen and domestic servants in which it would be impossible to enforce a week of 48 hours, but I agree that the Act should otherwise apply to all industries in which a legal limitation of hours is practicable, and that where exceptions are necessary they should be applied for by those concerned through the machinery which you have suggested.

WAGES AND UNEMPLOYMENT.

"As regards wages, I accept the principle that minimum rates of wages should in all industries be made applicable by law. The question of the best method of doing this, however, is complex and full of difficulties, and I do not think it would be possible to frame legislation until a scheme for carrying out the principle of minmium rates has been fully worked out.

"I therefore gladly accept your suggestion that the Government should, in the first place, set up a Commission with wide terms of reference to report on the whole matter. As regards the extension of the wages (Temporary Regulation) Act, a Bill has been prepared for this purpose and has been introduced.

"The question of unemployment is one, of the most urgent and important of the problems confronting us, and until it is satisfactorily solved I do not feel that we shale have really effected one of the most vital improvements in our social conditions. I therefore hope that this is the first question to which the National Industrial Council will address itself. I cordially welcome your proposal to set up a National Council, and hope that you will take steps to bring it into being as quickly as possible, as I am sure that it will be of great value in assisting the Government to improve industrial conditions."

ANOTHER ARMY EXPERIMENT.

An experiment in Army economy which has been tried successfully by the Western Command has now been extended to the whole Army, says the Daily Mail. The scheme places the commanding officers of units in much the same position as the managing director of a commercial concern.

Under the scheme articles are issued in terms of cash instead of in numbers. For example, on the formation of a new battalion, the commanding officer, instead of taking over a round number of, say, 1,000 rifles, will be required to sign for £15,000 worth of rifles. The thousand hair brushes for the men will be issued as, say, £75 worth of hair brushes.

In a unit such as a battalion with 1,000 men the commanding officer on taking over has in his charge property valued at something like £75,000, for which he is responsible to the public. The junior officers, in their turn, share the responsibility, a platoon commander for several thousand pounds' worth of Army material.

As in the case of commercial undertakings, sums will be written off from time to time for depreciation. The experiment in the Western Command is said to have resulted in greater economy and a keener sense of responsibility. One junior officer impressed with the scheme is said to have added the word "Limited" to the number of his platoon.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

BERNSTEIN — FRYATT.

In the early days of April, it will be remembered, a commission sat in Berlin to investigate the murder of Capt. Fryatt and, after a final discussion lasting over six hours a verdict was given that Fryatt's execution by the German military authorities was perfectly justifiable, that no infringement of international law was made either at the trial or the execution of the Captain.

That was the verdict of the majority of the members who formed the Commission of Inquiry, but by no means can it be said that such was accorded unanimously. Two of the members of the Commission, Dr. Cohn and Bernstein, have recently made a statement in the Vorwärts in proof of this. Bernstein—whom the Times recently acknowledged to be "one of the wisest socialists of Germany" and who, it was rumoured, might be the new German Ambassador in London—and Cohen obviously wish to open up a wider and truer knowledge of this past tragedy, and emphatically show that they were, and still are, not in agreement with the decision made by the Commission.

An Unpardonable Murder.

From a general point of view and for personal reasons do these two men declare that, despite the verdict of the Commission, the condemnation and execution of Captain Fryatt was a great violation of international law, and they even go so far as to agree with us in that it was an unpardonable murder. They declare that no proof has been given that Fryatt wanted to ram the U-boat — "perhaps he only wanted to chase it away," —and further, even if it was his intention to ram the submarine and thereby renounce the protection afforded by naval law, by doing so he did not commit a violation of international law as this law does not prohibit self-defence. It is pointed out that an expert told the Commission that the British Government had issued orders to the merchant ships with instructions to ram U-boats, but, as is stated in the article, if that were true the charge ought to have been against the British Government and not against Fryatt.

Commenting on the fact that the Captain was both sentenced and shot on the same day the writers say "this procedure was also a violation of International law. We regret sincerely, in the interests both of the Commission and of the people, the verdict of the Commission of Inquiry."

It must be noted that neither Bernstein nor Cohn were able to be present at all the sittings of the Commission, otherwise a different verdict might have been the issue.

Gerard's Letter.

In another portion of the paper Bernstein quotes the words of Gerard, later American Ambassador in Berlin who, at the time of the trial, made a plea for fair representation. "The manner in which my request was treated was surely a direct insult to the country I represent. In conversation with me, Zimmerman, the Chancellor, and von Jagow merely expressed their deep regret about the case, which shows how small was the influence of the civilian Government in Germany upon the military authorities!"

CAN YOU WRITE STORIES?

A splendid opportunity for short story writers is being offered by the Cologne Central Y.M.C.A. in connection with the series of armchair talks on short stories now being given by Mr. E. W. Hornung, the creator of "Raffles."

A competition has been arranged, in which the best short story writer will receive a prize of 250 marks. The competition is open to troops in the British Occupied Territory, and Mr. Hornung will act as adjudicator. Further particulars as to the rules of the competition will be published in a day or two.

The language classes at the Central are to be reorganised, the services of an English lady highly proficient both in French and German, now being available.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

The Editor, in publishing letters from Correspondents, will use his own discretion, and if necessary limit the publishing of correspondence on any subject whatever. It must be understood, however that he is not responsible for the views stated.

All communications for this column should be brief and to the point, and preference will be given to those which bear the writers' signatures for publication. No letter will be published unless accompanied by rank name, and unit of sender, which are needed for the purpose of reference.

Many letters of a perverse nature have reached the office, and the Editor wishes to point out that these only cause waste of time both to the writer and the Editor himself. Letters of this nature will not be published.

"THE GUNNERS" ONCE MORE.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,— We again notice that in spite of the gentle hint given by a correspondent in a recent issue of The Cologne Post, the 1st Bn. M. G. C. and other units of this Corps, constantly refer to themselves as "the Gunners." It would appear that the M.G.C. are sadly lacking in originality that they must needs refer to themselves by the sobriquet by which the Royal Regiment of Artillery has been known from time immemorial. Moreover we find in a recent sports report, we are referred to as "the Artillery," a name which we believe has been used by flappers in England during the war, but has certainly never been used in the Service, when referring to the Royal Regiment.

Gunners as a whole must resent this usurping of their ancient title especially by so recent a formation as the Machine Gun Corps.

Surely Mr. Editor some part of the energies of members of the Corps might be devoted to the task of inventing a name, which might in time become as well known, and might we say famous, as our own? Failing this may we suggest a competition in the "Post"?

Apologising for taking up so much of your valuable space.— Some Gunners.

WHIST DRIVES.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.— I would like to know if it is possible for some organization in Cologne to hold Whist Drives periodically. I know many who would welcome the idea as a pleasant innovation when visiting Cologne, and it would help us to enlarge our acquaintances in no mean degree. Will you please publish this? N.F.

"HIGHER BRANCHES OF MUSICAL ART."

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.—The addition of an article on The Opera to the many subjects treated by your paper, will be greatly appreciated by all musical enthusiasts.

One must agree with your contributor A.F. Jones when he criticises the manner in which the Cologne Opera Company performs the brilliant and sparkling music of the Italian composers.

The last paragraph of his article of the 2nd inst is, however, very debateable. Surely Grand Opera produced in any of our largest cities would be very largely supported if the standard of production equalled that of the Cologne Opera House, the seating arrangement was as good, and the price the same. The great demand for seats by all ranks for every performance goes to prove this argument.

It would be interesting to hear how the "appreciation of Grand Opera tends to violate the taste for higher branches of musical art."

Is this the case with the German people?

Answers to Correspondents.

[The flow of correspondence, since the Cologne Post was inaugurated, has been enormous, and the Editor would like to point out that only a certain number of the innumerable questions can be answered in each issue. Should any inquirer find that his question has not yet been answered, he can have the assurance that it will receive attention in due course, and the answer will appear accordingly. Many questions have been received which could be answered much easier by the Adjutant of the unit concerned, and all such cases which affect the unit commander must be taken to him and not sent here. — Ed.]

Regular Reader.—Barnsley won the Cup in 1912, beating West Bromwich (after a draw 0-0) 1-0.

A. A.—The University Building at Bonn was formerly the Residential Palace of the Cologne Elector Jos. Clemens. Between 1717 and 1730 the building was constructed according to the plans of the Director of the Parisien Architectural Academy, Rob. de Cothes, and is said to have been one of the most splendid palaces in Germany. In the January of 1777, however, the greater part of the building was destroyed by fire and it has only been partially restored.

Major J. B. S.—In the case of a dead heat, half the winning stake is lost and full s.p. odds are paid for the other half.

Cook.—The speed limit for cars and motbikes in the British Isles is 20 miles per hour. This does not vary in special counties, but local government bodies sometimes display notices instructing motorists not to exceed a particular limit when passing through congested villages.

OUR BOOKSHELF.

"AIR PIE."

Members of the Royal Air Force have every reason to be proud of the new Annual Air Pie, published by Palmer Heywood, Bloomsbury Street, W.C., at the price 5/-. The Joint Editors, Pte. W. Kean Seymour and Cadet Cecil Palmer, both members of the "great club of aeronauts," have indeed proved that their talent does not merely lie in manoeuvring the great birds of war; and there is little doubt, judging from the first number, that the new Pie annual will receive equal reward to if not more than those annuals of similar character which have already made a firm hold on the public — Printers, Pie and Winter Pie

Though the term "pie" as interpreted by the printer generally refers to certain material which, in consequence of ill treatment, lies battered on the stone waiting for the "devil" to clear it up, this new annual does not by any means give one such an interpretation. Neither can one take it as a culinary product even if, as the Editors say, the finished thing is good enough to eat.

The book contains more than fifty illustrations and several photographs, amongst the contributors being Sir John Lavery, A.R.A., Major Sir William Orpen, A.R.A., Glyn Philpot, A.R.A., W. Heath Robinson, and John Hassall.

The literary branch of the production has had the attention of equally prominent contributors, including Mr. H. G. Wells, G.K. Chesterton, Jeffrey Farnol, Harold Begbie, Spencer Leigh Hughes, and many others.

The tone of the annual is high and a strong sense of humour (that type of wit and pleasantry for which the British soldier is renowned) prevails throughout.

From an artistic standpoint the Annual is irreproachable and the publishers are to be congratulated on the neatness and clearness of the production. The colouring of the various pictures is superb.

Though Air Pie will essentially appeal especially to members of the Royal Air Force, for whom it was originally designed, yet there is no doubt that its realm must reach beyond, to all the other arms with which the Force has co-operated since its formation.

Lord Leverhuhne is defraying the expenses of a trip to America of five members of the Bolton Cotton Mill Managers and Overlooker's Association to investigate conditions in the cotton industry. Each delegate will make a separate report.

The Soviet Government has introduced a new chronology whereby the year begins on October 25, the date of the establishment of the Bolshevist regime. All religious holidays have been abolished. The year is to contain only 280 working days.—Reuter.

DISARM AND DISMANTLE.

REPARATIONS AND GUARANTEES.

"AND SHE SHALL HAVE PEACE IN HER BORDERS."

CHIEF PROVISIONS OF THE PEACE TERMS.

WAR'S HIDEOUS PRICE.

With one exception the most momentous document the world has ever known was that which was handed to the German plenipotentiaries at Versailles on Tuesday 6th May, 1919.

It contained the terms upon which the world will have Peace through the fulfilment of the conditions imposed on Germany.

First and foremost Germany will take the first step towards international disarmament.

By pointing the way for the League of Nations the Allies aim at the prevention of wars in the future, and the betterment of mankind.

The following are the chief provisions:

TERRITORIAL.

Saar district ceded to France on terms.
Alsace and Lorraine restored completely to France.
Entire independence of German Austria.
Frontier and territorial adjustments in the Balkans, Poland, East Prussia, Denmark and Russia.
Destruction of Heligoland.

POLITICAL.

Germany loses:—
All rights, titles and privileges outside Europe.

MILITARY.

Germany's Army is restricted to 100,000.

NAVAL.

The German Navy is reduced to a minimum and its personnel restricted to 15,000.
All submarines to be handed over.

AERIAL.

All Military and Naval air craft, including dirigibles, must be surrendered, except certain specified aeroplanes, and future manufacture is forbidden.

REPARATION.

Germany must pay Belgium's war debts.
Germany must pay within two years one thousand million pounds sterling, either in gold, goods, ships or other specified forms, and a further two thousand million pounds sterling between 1921 and 1926.
The Allies' losses in shipping are be replaced, ton for ton.
Louvain library is to have an equal quantity of historic literature. Germany shall not discriminate against the trade of the Allied countries.

GUARANTEES.

German territory to the West of the Rhine, together with the bridge-heads, will be occupied by Allied troops for fifteen years, or less, subject to certain stipulations.
Graves of all soldiers and sailors are to be respected.
The ex-Emperor William II. is publicly arraigned.
The Treaty shall be ratified as soon as possible.

The full text is issued as a supplement to this issue of the Cologne Post.

SAN SALVADOR EARTHQUAKE.

Some details have been received of the earthquake which occurred at San Salvador on the 26th April. Seventy-five persons were killed and over five hundred injured. Extensive damage was done to the city and surrounding district. —Reuter.

(Salvador, the smallest but most populous of the Central American Republics, is very subject to earthquakes, being in the very centre of the volcanic zone. The capital, San Salvador, was destroyed in 1854 by an earthquake, and violent shocks, causing great damage and loss of life, occurred in 1873, 1873, and 1891.)

KINMEL COURT MARTIAL.

The Kinmel Court Martial has now sat for fourteen days. In this period twenty-one prisoners have been tried, of whom six were acquitted. There are thirty-one cases still to be heard. Six of the accused entered a plea of not guilty and of these one, a private has been acquitted.

NATIVE INDIAN LOYALTY TO BE RECOGNISED.

Lahore. The Punjab Government is collecting the names of all Indians who assisted British officers, soldiers, ladies and children in the recent outbreaks, with a view to recognising their services.

Miss Sherwood, whose life was saved at Amritsar by some Sikhs, is proceeding home in consequence of the injuries she received. The total arrests at Lahore numbered 815.

The official contradiction of current rumours is having a soothing effect.—Reuter.

INDEPENDENCE OF FINLAND.

Replying to Mr. Clem Edwards, who asked in the House of Commons whether the Government had come to any decision regarding the status of Finland, Mr. Cecil Harmsworth said that the Government now recognised the independence of Finland, de facto, of the Finnish Government.

FURTHER SUCCESSES IN NORTH RUSSIA.

NO ARTILLERY ASSISTANCE.

An official wire from Murmansk dated 4th May states that on the 3rd May our troops captured Meselskaza, on the railway twenty-five miles South of Lake Uzosozero, after strong resistance by the enemy. Three armoured trains and a few prisoners were captured, also large quantities of railway material but no rolling stock. The enemy left forty dead on the ground.

The success of our troops is all the more praiseworthy as it was carried out after a long march and without artillery assistance owing to the railway being incomplete.

The troops engaged were the Royal Marine Light Infantry and the Slavo-British Legion, with small detachments of Canadians, French and Americans, all of whom, General Mayard states, showed splendid fighting qualities.

Our losses were four killed and four wounded. —Reuter.

BELGIAN CLAIMS SATISFIED.

ASKING FOR MORE.

M. Delacroix, the Prime Minister of Belgium, issued a declaration at Brussels on the 5th May in the course of which he says:

"Our delegates (at the Peace Conference) have obtained important results. The Great Powers have made very important concessions. They have released us from the loan debts we contracted during the war, which represent six milliards (francs). We shall receive by priority two and a half milliards in gold to redeem the notes we issued during the war. We have therefore no financial charges resulting from the war. The cost of revictualling, unemployment and redemption of requisitions amount to another milliard which, will be partly covered by realisation of war booty. There remains the question of adjusting the loss caused by the depreciation of the mark.

We have the promise of complete reparation. We are disappointed that payments will be spread over thirty years, and we had hoped for a speedier liquidation. We must however, submit to the common law.

ANZAC MEMORIAL AT GALLIPOLI.

There is a strong desire on the part of the Australian and New Zealand representatives in Paris, says the Pall Mall Gazette, to secure the Gallipoli battlefields and preserve them in perpetuity as a war memorial to the Anzacs. It is possible that this will be arranged by the insertion of a special clause in the treaty with Turkey.

NEW BOLSHEVIST ERA.

The Soviet Government has introduced a new era in Russia. The year will begin on Oct. 25, the day of the establishment of the Bolshevist millennium. All religious feast days will, of course, be abolished. The year will have 280 working days.

ADMIRAL SIMS ON THE BRITISH NAVY.

Admiral Sims, speaking at a luncheon given by the English-speaking Union at New York testified to the complete and practical co-operation of the British and American Navies during the war and said that he thanked God that the British Grand Fleet had been able to keep the Germans down.

Without the British Fleet, the Admiral added, even if the United States had had ten million trained soldiers, they could never have won the war. Every American should know the truth regarding Great Britain's attitude towards the United States in order to meet poisonous German propaganda.

If this is to be a decent world to live in, the Admiral concluded, it would be because the English-speaking branch resolved to stand together.

WARM CLIMATES FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

The Pensions Minister announces that steps will be taken to afford ex-service men suffering from tuberculosis which is certified to be non-infectious, facilities to proceed to warmer climates.

THERE WERE OTHERS.

In a latter to the Manchester Guardian General Monash denies that the Australians call themselves the "Storm Troops" of the British armies. He says that the term was applied to them by the German High Command and is only used by the Australians in a spirit of humour and not with any desire to draw a contrast beetwen themselves and other Imperial and Canadian divisions.

M. Pichon, Minister for Foreign Affairs of France, has been elected Chairman of the Committee of organisation of the League of Nations.

KITCHENERS, DERBYS, CONSCRIPTS AND CONCHIES.

MEDALS FOR ALL.

In the House of Commons Mr. John Jones asked whether, in view of the award of the 1914 star with rosette, also of the 1914—1915 star, the Government will consider the advisability of awarding a Somme fighting star to the armies raised voluntarily.

Mr. Foster replied that it is considered that the proposed award, the conditions concerning which will shortly be published, will afford due recognition of the services of the men referred to SYLVIA'S PUNISHMENT.

Miss Sylvia Pankhurst and Miss Amelia O'Mahoney were discharged by Sir John Dickinson at Bows-Street on charges of obstructing the police outside the St. Stephen's entrance to the House of Commons on Thursday evening.

The magistrate said May Day was no excuse for conduct of this sort, and the defendants would be bound over in £5 to be of good behaviour for 6 months. As they left the dock Miss Pankhurst called out, "I refuse to be bound over."

Later they were brought up again, and the magistrate said he would accept Miss Pankhurst's statement that she had not heard a police inspector say she could see a member of Parliament if he wished to. Accordingly he discharged the two defendants. They appeared agreeably surprised at the decision, and women in court applauded.

OFFICER INVENTOR'S CLAIM.

Yesterday the Royal Commission on Awards to Officers considered a claim for ten thousand pounds compensation by Lieut. J. F. Power, R.A.F., the inventor of an aerial target largely used in training young army aviators in spotting for artillery.

The chairman pointed out that since the invention had been perfected in connection with Power's duties, he could not expect remuneration on the same scale as a business man bringing an outside invention.

Counsel for Lt. Power said that the principle was fully recognised, otherwise his client's claim would have been for much more ten thousand pounds.

Whilst the Government had expended eighty thousand pounds on reproducing the apparatus, said Counsel, the only recognition Lt. Power had received was fifty pounds for out-of-pocket expenses.

HANDLEY PAGE NON-STOPS.

A Handley Page machine flew yesterday morning from Belfast to Carlisle, Newcastle, York, Doncaster, Lincoln, Boston and across the Wash, a total of 410 miles, non-stop, in four hours and twenty minutes.

Another Handley Page did 370 miles non-stop carrying Major Ordelees, who was at Manchester when Flight-sergt. Parry was killed. The Major was badly burnt in going to Parry's assistance, but in spite of his injuries he made a parachute descent at Aberdeen yesterday morning.

GOOD-BYE TO COUPONS.

Coupons are no longer necessary for the purchase of any foodstuffs in Great Britain, though butcher's meat, butter and sugar are still rationed.

Compulsory rationing, which began with the issue of Sugar Cards in December 1917, worked very much better than was anticipated. Prosecutions for food hoarding were comparatively few and there is no doubt that compulsory rationing was much more successful in the United Kingdom than in any other country. The fixing of maximum prices under the scheme greatly tended to allay unrest, which at one time threatened to be very serious.

In all probability the rationing of the three remaining articles will disappear within the next few months.

LANCASHIRE MILK PROFITEERS.

When three hundred cows were awaiting auction at Preston on Saturday the auctioneers were besieged by women and children begging for the milk. It was accordingly sold to them instead of sending it back to the farmers.

Later a large crowd with jugs surrounded the market and molested a man who was leaving with milk, an ugly situation being saved by the auctioneers again supplying the crowd, despite protests from the farmers, one of whom demanded that it should be thrown down a drain.

SHIPS WE DID NOT NEED.

In the House of Commons Dr. Macnamara, replying to a question on Naval construction, said that four battleships of the Hood class were laid down. Of these only the Hood had been completed.

The construction of the other three ships, which were laid down in the autumn of 1916, was stopped in March 1917. This effected a saving of from eighteen to twenty million pounds, compared with the expenditure which would have been incurred had they been completed.

PEER'S SON DIVORCED.

In the Divorce Court on Tuesday a decree nisi was granted to the Hon. Diana Isabel Brougham in consequence of the desertion and misconduct of her husband, the Hon. Henry Brougham, only son of Lord Brougham and Vaux.

The parties were married in 1908 and there are three children.

Spartacists blew up a train crowded with Republican troops near Munich. Three hundred dead have already been counted.

AN OFFICER'S HONOUR IMPUGNED.

STRANGE CASE.

Serious allegations against the honour of an officer in the Army were made at Brentford Police-court on Saturday during the hearing of a charge against Quartermaster-Sergeant Harry Harries, of the Record Office, and Lennox Neil, for being unlawfully in the possession of Army stationery and books.

Detective-inspector Prothero stated that, acting upon information from Captain Sarll, he went to the offices of the Discharged Soldiers' and Airmen's Corporation Ltd., at Hounslow, of which the prisoners were directors, and there found the books and stationery in a box and in the prisoner Harries' kitbag.

Captain Sarll, a director of the company, said Harries told him he could get the books, and witness, recognising them afterwards in the office of the company as Government property, informed the police.

Harries, giving evidence, swore that he knew nothing of the case. He left his bag which was unlocked, in the office, and he was quite unaware how the Government property came to be in it.

The caretaker of the office of the company stated that Captain Sarll was often there, and he left him on the premises.

Mr. Sampkin, solicitor to the company, stated that at a directors' meeting Captain Sarll had inquired if a conviction would disqualify a director.

Mr. Wilfred Firth, defending, urged that Captain Sarll was the instigator of the whole affair. Because he was not appointed managing director of the company he threatened to smash it. He had entry to the offices and was often there, and the prisoner Harries' kitbag was there unlocked. It would be wrong to convict on the evidence of one man who was hostile to the company.

The charge was dismissed, and the decision was received with applause.

Captain Cornwallis West, a provost marshal, asked the Bench to express the opinion that Captain Sarll did his duty. His honour had been attacked, and he asked the Court to say that he left it without a stain upon his honour.

The Chairman: There is no charge against Captain Sarll.

Captain Cornwallis West: There is a horrible innuendo that he could be put in the dock himself. It is made under the protection of the Court. If it were made outside I for one would know how to deal with it.

Mr. Firth: I will give you the opportunity when and where you like.

TO MAKE THE CLERGY ATTRACTIVE.

The Rev. Basil G. Bourchier, of the Hampstead Garden Suburb, speaking at a meeting of his parishioners, referred to the "hideousness" of the clerical dress. He had, he said, not bought a clerical suit for years, and would not, if he could help it, ever do so. On one occasion, when a poor curate, he exchanged his suit for two gramophone records, one being "The Honeysuckle and the Bee." The dress of the clergy, in his opinion, created a barrier between priest and layman, and the time had arrived when the bishops should make such a change which would allow the clergy to be attractive and presentable.

MERELY A COINCIDENCE.

The question of the visit to Paris of the Commissioner of Metropolitan Police, Sir Nevil Macready, was raised in the House of Commons yesterday, when the unrest in the Metropolitan Police Force formed the subject of interpellations.

Mr. Snortt, replying to Mr. Pemberton Billing, said that Sir Nevil Macready had not been called to Paris by the Prime Minister but had simply gone to France to fulfil a long-standing engagement in connection with the Graves Commission.

GOD SAVE THE KING.

For the first time since 1914 the anniversary of the King's accession was celebrated with the customary ceremonies. At 8 a. m. all ships at Plymouth were dressed rainbow fashion and at noon fired a royal salute, which was also fired from the Citadel.

All the motor patrol boats on the Rhine were dressed in like manner.

At Windsor the King and Queen, with Princess Mary, Queen Alexandra and other members of the Royal family, attented service at the Albert Memorial Chapel in memory of King Edward. The Arcnbishop of Canterbury officiated.

EXTENSION OF LICENSED HOURS.

The Central Control Board of the Liquor traffic has decided to extend the week-day closing hour for the sale or supply of intoxicating liquor for consumption on licensed premises and in clubs. In England and Wales the hour of closing will be 10 p. m. The new rule comes into force on 12th May.

FATALITY TO AN AIRMAN.

A verdict of death by misdaventure was returned at the inquest on Peter Legh, a nephew of Lord Newton, who was killed as the result of leaping or falling from a blazing aeroplane at Finchley last Saturday.

A police witness said that the machine nose-dived and he saw the airman walking along the right wing of the aeroplane before he fell.

A representative of the company owning the machine, which had been up ten times, said that Legh was testing it in an ordinary height record.

The Right Rev. John Percival, formerly Bishop of Hereford, left forty thousand pounds.

The late Lord Glentanar, director of J. and P. Coates, the thread firm, left over four and a quarter millions sterling.

COAL COMMISSION AND NATIONALIZATION.

APPLIED TESTS.

At yesterday's sitting of the Coal Commission, Professor Hobhouse, Professor of Sociology at London University, said he had come to the conclusion that nationalisation had both advantages and drawbacks. Intelligently applied, however, the advantages should be greater than the drawbacks, and that as compared with a mixed system of public and private ownership nationalisation had everything to recommend it. Mr. Ryan, the Premier of Queensland, gave interesting evidence of the state of various enterprises in that colony.

He said that the greatest successes were achieved in those works where the controllers were believers in and sympathisers with nationalisation.

METROPOLITAN POLICE UNREST.

The Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police, Sir Nevil Macready, has gone to Paris to consult Mr. Lloyd George concerning the unrest in the London police force.

The Home Secretary admitted in the House of Commons yesterday that the police are inadequately paid, and said that the Cabinet had again decided against recognition of a police trade-union.

A high official at Scotland Yard, interviewed by Reuter with reference to the police demonstration at Trafalgar Square on Sunday, said:—"Recognition of a police union is a most difficult question and there seems no way by which it can come about without undermining the discipline of the force. Commissioner Macready seems to have been misunderstood when he said that recognition could not be discussed during the war. It did not imply it might be accepted when the war was over. All he meant to say was that it was too big a question to be considered then."

FINANCIAL AID FOR HIGHER EDUCATION.

The Government has approved the scheme whereby Imperial and Overseas ex-officers and men, including those who have served in the Imperial forces, are made eligible for financial assistance to pursue courses of higher education.

The scheme embraces scholastic and technical studies at Universities, also in offices and works either in the United Kingdom or elsewhere. The maximum assistance granted will be 125 pounds yearly with additional allowances for wife and children.

APPLICATIONS FOR SMALL HOLDINGS.

A statement issued by the Board of Agriculture shows that 13,797 applications for small holdings have been made, the total area required being 247,277 acres. As might be expected, the proportion of applications from men serving overseas is small, but is likely to increase. On the other hand the large demand for cottage holdings which is being received from ex-service men will have the effect of reducing the average size of the holdings to be provided. It is unlikely, therefore, that the average cost of the land per small holding will exceed the pre-war figure of 450 pounds.

COMPULSORY LAND PURCHASE.

Although many of the landlords approached by County Councils with a view to the provision of land for settlement of ex-service men responded generously to the appeal, this is not the case in every instance. The authorities therefore propose to exercise powers of compulsory purchase in the case of about six thousand acres in Bedfordshire, Leicestershire, Cambridge, Suffolk and Warwick.

On the other hand, thirty thousand acres have been offered direct to the Board of Agriculture by 147 landowners as the result of a special appeal by the Board for small holdings for ex-soldiers and sailors. The Board is receiving numerous applications from the latter class who wish to take up poultry farming.

MEAT SUPPLIES FROM THE ANTIPODES.

Sir Auckland Geddes states that the Government has purchased the whole of the exportable surplus of frozen meat in Australia and New Zealand.

The quantities awaiting shipment on the 31st March were 37,263 tons in Australia and 173,639 tons in New Zealand. Shipment is proceeding as fast as steamers become available. As a general rule the beef and wether mutton is being reserved for the Allied forces in Great Britain, the Continent, Egypt and other places, while all the ewe mutton and lamb is intended for civilian consumption in Great Britain.

HONOURING GENERAL PLUMER.

General Sir Herbert Plumer was presented with the freedom of Torquay, his native town, on Monday. In his speech of acknowledgment, in which he expressed his appreciation of the work of the Navy, he said that in proportion to its population Devonshire had more men serving afloat than any other county. He added that the war was won by the men who had not returned, and every town and village should keep as a sacred trust what was aptly described as the roll of honour.

PHENOMENAL RAINFALL.

At a meeting of the Thames Conservancy it was stated that the rainfall during the first three months of the year totalled 11.97 inches, against 6.54 inches for the same period of 1918.

The daily flow of water over Teddington Weir during this period was more than double that of any similar period during the last thirty-six years.

THE TERMS OF PEACE.

The days of expectancy are ended, for the Terms of Peace are now handed to the world. We have before us an official document entitled General Scheme of the Treaty of Peace, and The Cologne Post offers to its readers at the earliest moment the accredited summary of the Allies terms. The design of the draft Treaty of Peace delivered to the German delegates is twofold. In the first place it sets forth "the conditions upon which alone the Allied and Associated Powers will make peace with Germany," and in the second place it is an attempt to establish international arrangements devised for "the prevention of wars in the future, and the betterment of mankind." The Covenant of the League of Nations and the International Labour Convention, published in the first and the thirteenth sections respectively, are outstanding expressions of these international arrangements.

There is no one of the thirteen clauses of the Treaty without a paramount interest, but we can only select the salient features of this historic charter of liberty. It will rank as one of the world's great documents and mark the settlement of a war-stricken earth. Justice faces us in every section, but in the main it is justice tempered with mercy. Time after time, as our readers will note, a final adjustment of national claims is left to the League of Nations, and it is well to remember that this greatest achievement of the Congress of Paris may in the future play a noble part as a fountain where wisdom and justice and righteousness will spring eternally for the healing of the world. Friend and foe must see in the League a spiritual power which shall dominate and guide the destinies of empires.

The trend of Allied opinion has prepared us for the political clauses of the Treaty. Belgium suffered the first fierce onslaught of Germany and Belgium is clearly entitled to the reparation offered to her. None can grudge her the enlargement of her borders, and all will rejoice that provision is made for a new library in her most famous university. Louvain University cannot be restored to the place it held, but it is good to know that Germany will deliver to this ancient seat of learning manuscripts and early printed books which shall be "the equivalent of those destroyed." Belgium will also have given back to her the art treasures that were removed from her keeping by covetous hands. France gains Alsace and Lorraine, and in addition Germany will cede to her full ownership of the coal mines of the Saar Basin in compensation for the destruction of the coal fields of northern France. The governance of the district will be in the hands of a Commission appointed by the League of Nations, and after fifteen years a plebiscite will determine whether the inhabitants desire the existing regime or prefer union with either France or Germany. In such ways the Congress of Paris has sought to provide reparation for the wrongs suffered by the two principal countries in the battlefields of the west.

The Treaty does more than rearrange the boundaries of several European countries, it sets up two new powers. Germany is to recognize the entire independence of the Tchecho-Slovak State; and Poland, the country that lost its freedom in the maze of partition treaties, is restored to something like its ancient glory. Its new boundaries are to be marked by a Commission, but already it is assured of a great part of Upper Silesia, of Posen, and of that portion of West Prussia which lies of the left bank of the Vistula. Danzig is to be a free city under guarantee of the League of Nations, and we look forward to the day when the freedom of Danzig will be a solvent of national jealousies that once threatened the harmony of Versailles.

The great Kiel Canal once a emblem of war is now to be a symbol of peace. Armaments and fortifications are to be removed, and peaceful shipping will take the place of sinister ironclads. We cannot enter into the details of the fifth section which deals with matters military, naval and aerial, but we gladly point out that the conditions laid upon Germany are a first step toward general disarmament. That is the world's ideal, for the world cannot suffer longer the cruel burden of war taxation or the moral stigma of bitter strife.

One last note — it is laid down that the Allies publicly arraign the ex-Emperor William II "for a supreme offence against International Morality and the Sanctity of Treaties." A tribunal will be set up, consisting of one judge from each of five Great Powers, and "guided by the highest principles of international policy" it will dispense evenhanded justice. We have no petty desire for vengeance on the stricken person of the Kaiser, and we confidently believe that mercy will temper the proceedings and the verdict of this tribunal; but the Allies rightly hold that it is a proper task and a clear duty to make known to the world that no lord nor emperor can with impunity unloose the dread demons of war.

ON THE LEAVE TRAIN NEAR LIEGE.

We are passing through a country
Clothed in beauty, Oh! so rare;
Through a country swarmed with hillocks,
Castled hillocks, wondrous fair.
And its valleys, Oh! its valleys
Simply set one's heart aglow,
For they speak to us in language
Only nature-lovers know.

There are meadows, green, green meadows,
Rippling rivers running through;
There are cattle, fine stock cattle,
With their little bairnies too;
But the lambkins, little lambkins
Always dancing to and fro
Start a-something deep within me,
And its depth I cannot know.

Some will say that God dwells in us
And if that statement be true,
Then the God who dwelleth in us
Dwelleth in those lambkins too;
And within the castled hillocks,
Maybe also in the dew
Sparkling in those grand green meadows
Giving joy to me and you.

Wherever there is beauty, there
God speaks to us, but, lo!
He speaks to us in language
Only nature-lovers know.

"Ah," she sighed, "all the good and great men are dead!" "But the beautiful women are not," he answered. Then she gazed up into his eyes, and told him she had only said it for the pleasure of being contrary, and not because she believed it for a moment. And he believed her!

BOLSHEVISM

AN HISTORICAL ACCOUNT.

The Russian word Bolshevistvo means in English, majority; hence the term Bolshevists. Bolusviki means those who are in favour of a system of government whereby the idea or the aim of the majority can be enforced.

What is the root idea of Bolshevism and what is its importance in the world? For it is clear that if it did not stand for the ideas of a majority, it would never have reached its present development.

We must go back about a 1,000 years in Russian history in order to find an explanation. There were at that time, living in Khieff, Novgorod, and Moscow separate tribes which engaged in hunting, fishing and agriculture, leading a completely free life. But as their hunting grounds became more and more restricted, they emigrated to the South and East, thereby obtaining fresh pasture and hunting grounds in sufficient quantities.

This migratory life, however, had its inconveniences, and the princes or leaders of the people made efforts to tie the people down to the ground.

As a result of incessant fighting without, and internal disorder within, the still existing free land was declared to be state property, and was accordingly distributed amongst the officials and the nobility — the remainder being confiscated to the State and the Church. The only estates recognised in mediaeval times being the State, the Church, and the nobility, the peasant completely lost his former freedom and rights, becoming a mere tool or chattel in the hands of the lord of the manor, who was thus able to deliver him over to the State or Church according to his own desire. Under the stress of these oppressive measures thousands of people fled into the steppes and forests, and attempted to retaliate by means of raids and forays. These Lords inhabited the Volga and Dnieper regions, and were often sufficiently strong enough to take part in the wars waged against Turkey, Persia, Poland, as well as in internal strife in Russia itself.

We hear nothing of labour movements in this connection, only agricultural labourers taking part in these disturbances. Industry was only in its infancy in the reign of Peter I., in the 18th century.

Serfdom was abolished in 1833 by Czar Alexander II. The peasants obtained personal freedom, together with that of local administration, and the right of inheritance. They received land in sufficient quantity for themselves and their children, together with pasturage for their cattle. Local autonomy was obtained by a system of communism; by this the land in a "commune" (or parish) was not held by private ownership, but on a system of communal property by the district as a whole, fresh distribution being made from time to time. A similar system obtained in mediaeval times in England and elsewhere on the continent. The commune was held responsible as a whole for the working of the land and the obligations thereby entailed. As the population increased, fresh distributions of the communal land became necessary, until at last very little was left for the individual and the land was badly cultivated owing to the excessive re-allotments and the distance from the villages. A Russian village is built on a closely-compacted system in the centre of the area allotted to it.

Thus the problem of the land, including that of bread, became even more and more acute.

The foundation of the Agrarian Bank dates from 1883. Agricultural labourers were, by this agency, able to purchase from the State land, of which there was still a considerable quantity available on the Black Sea and in Siberia. Those who were in a position to purchase land, and were in possession of some capital, soon became well off; less fortunate individuals, however, sank into a condition of ever-increasing poverty.

The Revolution of 1905 did not produce the hoped-for results. A more favourable opportunity presented itself during the present war in 1917/18.

The agricultural population of Central Russia, amounting to about 30 millions, took their destiny into their own hands. The ground had been well prepared beforehand by the works and influence of Tolstoi. "Distribution" became the catch word, and the whole agricultural population joined in the movement. But what became a reality for the agricultural labourer remained an idea alone for the town artisan. Appeals to the labouring classes as a whole were in vain—only work remained for the former, the land became the property of the land workers.

Bolshevism has proved victorious, but only in Russia. Such conditions are impossible in more highly civilized countries such as England or France.

The present situation in Russia is as follows: Those who have received land, are cultivating it for themselves and their families in order to obtain bread. Each man has his own land, and must himself work, being thrown on his own resources. he towns are naturally, empty and those living in them must starve or die.

As landowners have hitherto been deprived of their estates either without payment at all, or have only received payment in paper, they are only cultivating the bare minimum of land necessary for themselves. Thus there can be no question of a superfluity of corn or cattle in Russia. Some time must elapse for foodstuffs to reach towns from their own provinces again. With the restoration of orderly and settled conditions in Russia, as in Germany, it is probable that Bolshevism will die a natural death; it is obviously impossible for the Entente to undertake the delivery of foodstuffs to countries which are inclined to adopt the tenets of Bolshevism. In a further article we propose to examine in more detail the aims and methods of Bolshevism as applied in Russia and elsewhere, and to draw some conclusions as to the universal danger with which European civilization is thereby threatened.

There are also signs that in Germany as well, more sober and reasoned counsels are prevailing. A system which appeals to an illiterate peasant population, forming 80% of the inhabitants of Russia, is not so likely to carry weight in Germany, were agrarian and social conditions differ widely from those obtaining in Russia. Order and work are closely connected with food supplies and these are not likely to be forthcoming to a Bolshevized Germany.

"I hear that you said I was the biggest fool in town." "No, sir, I did not. I do not consider you capable of taking first rank in anything."

An Englishman in Paris had to visit the dentist. "And, m'sieur," asked the servant in a tender tone, "whom shall I have the misery to announce?"

Mrs Casey—My sister writes me that every bottle in that box we sent her was broken. Are you sure you printed, "This side up, with care," on it?

Casey—Oi am. An' for fear they shouldn't see it on the top Oi printed it on the bottom as well.

"Why not try Hopkins for a subscription to our fund?" asked the treasurer of the charity meeting.

"Hopkins?" repeated the president. "No, I know Hopkins; he's like the letter F—first in pity and last in help."

THE MAN WHO DID — AND WHAT BECAME OF IT.

BY JUVENIS.

CHAPTER IV.

The typewritten manifesto which he had just read literally "put years" on Mr. Bilson. All had not been going well of late with the business, since he had commenced his experiment. So much time had been wasted in carrying out to the letter the useless rigmarole and red tape that his output of gain was barely half that of the previous period, and this "strike" would delay things even more.

Under the new regime, his overseers, living up to their old ideas, always sent eight men to unload a lorry where three had formerly been employed. Then, in a moment of folly, he had taken the advice of Mr. Wally, and had bought two Army mules, engaging with them an old A.S.C. driver. Since then, almost every post had brought Mr. Bilson some new claim for damages to property, and, with an "account rendered" that morning for damages due to the early decease of two women and a child, owing to the refractory conduct of the mules, he found himself faced with a gross liability of nearly £500, besides two law suits in process of litigation.

Mr. Bilson roused himself at length, and having rung for his old secretary, who had still remained faithful to him, he tried to face the new problem. He wished that this path could be as plain to him now as it would have been in his Army days. As an adjutant, if he had made a mess of things generally, he would have evaded the consequences by asking for a transfer to another unit. Now, however, he had to face the trouble manfully, or give up his only means of income, and go into a bank or some other unenviable occupation.

He turned to the correspondence at his side, in the hope of obtaining relief there. Most of it had arrived a week before, but he adhered to his old methods of neglecting to answer correspondence promptly. The first he took up was from one of the firm's largest customers, informing him that unless certain goods, long overdue, were not speedily delivered, it would be necessary to cancel the order.

The next letter was a private one from Messrs. — Bankers, reminding him that his account still remained overdrawn considerably.

He turned in desperation to an official blue envelope. To his horror, it was a summons to pay certain money to the amount of 250 pounds, due two months ago. This roused him to action; he searched through his file for the invoice, which, of course, was missing. An hour later he found it in a ledger, acting as a bookmark.

Mr. Bilson immediately wrote out a cheque, signed it, and had it taken by hand to the creditor's solicitor.

Later in the day, the telephone bell rang; he answered it and found himself in communication with the firm's bank. The manager desired to tell him that the account was too low to admit his paying so large a cheque. Mr. Bilson was startled when the manager continued to tell him that no money had been payed in for over a week. He sent for the cashier of the business, who swore to sending off the money daily to the Bank by an office boy, but he admitted that he had never troubled to examine the counterfoils of the credit slips. (The cashier, also, was one of Mr. Bilson's Army protégés, who had had long business experience as a C.Q.M.S.)

The office-boy was sent for, but was found to have failed to turn up that morning with the rest of the staff.

That was the limit; especially when the director realised that dividends were due to be paid within a fortnight.

He had rung up the police to give particulars of the missing office boy, and was just trying to think out a solution to this hopeless muddle, when Mr. Wally entered to enquire whether all the employees on strike would be for "Orderly Room," on their return.

The unconscious irony of the enquiry struck Mr. Bilson so forcibly that he realized for the first time the farce of the whole routine which he had tried so hard to introduce. Answering with a scarcely civil negative, Mr. Bilson decided to "chuck up the sponge" and surrender unconditionally to a cruel fate.

Seizing his hat, the director rushed from the room, called a taxi, and drove to the railway station. There he booked his ticket for the little country village where his father, entirely ignorant of the trouble in which the business was involved, was living in retirement.

Half an hour later found Bilson in the train, a victim to sad reflections and uncomfortable forbodings. He had told his foolishly confiding parent little about his experiments, and nothing about the financial losses, so he now realised the difficulty of communicating the news to him. His courage, based on his desperate resolve to hand over the whole concern for his father to steer from ruin, was beginning to wane, but inwards feelings of his own utter incompetence to deal with such a situation compelled him to proceed on his mission.

The interview was long and stormy. The old man, disappointed in his son's business capabilities, and fearful for the stability of the business, did not spare his words. If any other man in the Army days, had hurled one quarter of the epithets at Mr. Bilson, as his father did, he would have spent the remainder of his days at Derby or some equally pleasant residence for those who have incurred His Majesty's displeasure.

Finally, the senior partner set out with his son for the business again, and the remainder of the day was spent in a close examination of the finances of the business.

Through the skilful management of Mr. Bilson, Senior, the jam manufactury was rescued from ruin, the employees willingly consenting to return on the revival of the old ideas. All the military specialists have long taken their departure, and Business Orders no longer appear.

Our friend, Montague Bilson, is now sheep farming in New-Zealand. His father had insisted on his departure to some distant spot from where he could do no further mischief.

He is a wiser man now, although he often wonders, still, why Army methods were not successful among civilians. He feels himself an injured man, a martyr to his ideals, and he is secretly longing for another war to come so as to give him back his former proud position of Captain and Adjutant.

When "Macbeth" was once being played in a provincial town local workmen were requisitioned as stage carpenters. All went well until the scene where Macbeth murders the King. The actor who was playing the part of Macbeth was feigning hesitation, and, holding up the dagger, he said tragically, "Is this a dagger I see before me?" Imagine his surprise and discomfiture when one of the stage carpenters, sticking out his head, answered apologetically, "No, sir, it's the putty knife; we couldn't find the dagger."

Youngly—"Did you ever notice that the matrimonial process is like making a call? You go to adore, you ring the belle, and you give your name to the maid." Synicus—"Yes, and then you're taken in."

A-FISHING AND A-SHOOTING.

INEXPENSIVE SPORT ON LEAVE.

A FORTNIGHT IN SCOTLAND OR IRELAND.

Anent recent discussions on the best way to spend furlough we are indebted to Major Hew Congreve Kennedy, Hillside, Glanuce, N.B., for a circular on "Shooting and Fishing syndicates."

The object of the circular is an endeavour to provide sports at "a reasonable figure for officers when on leave." The document recounts the well-known obstacles in the way of such endeavours, such as the great cost of taking a fortnight's shooting, procuring a gun, and the problematical dates when officers are to have leaves, as a result of which the fixing of a fishing period is oft times impossible. The circular then proceeds to elaborate on the advantages of syndicates.

Briefly, the idea by which the syndicates are to secure periods of ten or twelve days sport at shooting or fishing at a minimum of expense and inconvenience or trouble is as follows:

A moor with good low ground shooting (including one day's grouse driving each week) and some fishing, is to be secured at a rental of about 500 pounds.

Such a moor would require about 6 or 7 guns on it each week and during the first fortnight. August 10th-24th for instance, they would get, say, one day's grouse driving (grouse should not be driven before August 20th), seven or eight days' walking up birds, etc., and a few days' fishing.

About August 24th another six or seven guns would be wanted, and they would get two days' grouse driving, eight days' walking up grouse and partridges, etc., and a few days' fishing. A third lot of guns would be due on about September 8th, and would get similar sport to the last lot.

Thus 18 or 21 guns would each have had a fortnight's sport, the moor but half shot and the coverts not touched.

About the beginning of November the first guns would again be due for leave, to be followed in turn by the second and third lot; and each would again enjoy another fortnight's shooting, the only difference being that the second and third lot would be too late for grouse. As, however, they had the best of the driving in September, matters would be about level. The cost of such a shooting, in addition to rent, may be put at roughly £250, which would embrace all charges and wages, such as agency fees, taxes, ghillies, beaters, etc. Thus, we have £750 divided amongst, say, 18 or 21 guns, and I think it will be admitted that it is cheap at the price.

It is probable that money could be saved on the £250 mentioned above, but you will no doubt agree that it is wiser to be on the safe side rather than to risk a whip round to make good a deficit after you have had your sport.

As regards fishing it is suggested that the syndicate might rent salmon and trout fishings, both river and lock, in Scotland or Ireland, with accomodation in a hotel as near the ground as possible. As it is probable that house accommodations may be prefe red there is also a proposal to rent or purchase a house.

The whole scheme is the work of Major Kennedy, and officers about to form such syndicates should communicate with him at the adress given above.

MIDLAND DIVISIONAL MATCH.

The old friends and opponents of the 12th Field Company R.E. will be pleased to hear they are still unefeated, although reduced to Cadre, and unable to turn out their war-time team. The latest victims were the Midland Divisional Signal Coy, R.E. whom they played at Bruhl on Saturday. This was greatly brought about by Sergeant Taylor who played a very good game and scored two splendid goals. He was ably assisted by Sapper Halke, at inside-right, who scored the first of his side's three goals, and by Sergeant Christian at centre-half. The latter successfully held and broke up the combination of the Signals forward line. The game ended without further scoring. Result:—12th Field Co, R.E., 3; Mid. Div. Signals, Nil.

SMOKER AT BENSBERG.

A very enjoyable smoking concert was held at The Schloss Bensberg, on Sunday evening when "A" Coy, of the 17th Bn. the Royal Fusiliers was provided with an excellent programme. In spite of the exceptionally fine evening, the appreciation of the considerable number present was shown by their hearty and generous applause, and the way the choruses were sung.

The programme was provided by Sgt Jackson; Cpls. Firks and Pantoll; Lce. Cpl. Lawrence and Terry; Ptes, Woodley; Sweeney and May; and Lieut Hudson.

"ENGLISH SPOOKEN HERE."

It is "a moot point" as to whether we could be tried by court martial for an offence under the fraternization order if we adopted the plan of our contemporary "John Bull" and awarded biscuits to some business proprietors in Cologne for their efforts at displaying "The King's English."

Here are a couple of samples:

"It is permit to hand over drinks on the British Military from etc." "English spooken here."

Another proprietor has gone to the trouble of painting out his pre-war shop sign and substituted the following "Barber-Chop," and we are not sufficiently trusting to enquire of him if the "Chop" is his name, his trade or his intent.

These signs remind one of a few we used to find out Ypres way. There was one of particular attract on, especially on these days when rations had not come up. It ran thus "Eat less and save shipping: Waste prolongs war."

Then there was the eternal question "What have you salved to-day?" This on the tail board of a motor lorry with the words "Load not to exceed three tons" seemed rather too pathetic. Then, there was the Belgian woman who had a card in her window telling all and sundry that she was "Authorised to wash for soldiers." If she had been in Germany in these days when soap is a scarcity, the real idea of the notice would have been more apparent.

"THE COLOGNE POST" CRICKET CUP.

NINETY-TWO ENTRIES — AND STILL THEY COME.

RULES OF THE COMPETITION.

The reception of our offer to award a handsome silver cup to the most successful Rhineland cricket team during the present season has far exceeded expectations in its unanimity.

From the day the announcement of our intention appeared in the Cologne Post, entries for the competition have been received in numbers that indicate that we have hit upon a scheme that appeals to popular taste.

When first the project was discussed in this office, we felt somewhat dubious about its possible success, principally on the score that suitable playing grounds were at such a premium in this new dwelling place of ours. This was not dispelled by a cursory run round the various stations, which revealed every square foot of open space apparently in process of cultivation. There were other obvious shortcomings in the prospect of a successful cricket season in Germany, which it would be futile to discuss here. Suffice it to say that by some extraordinary means, promoters of clubs have, in the majority of cases, secured quite respectable playing pitches. Others, even more fortunately circumstanced, have, by dint of praiseworthy enterprise, coupled with prodigious physical effort, contrived to convert apparently impossible material into really first rate wickets.

The result off all this is that secretaries, in sending in their entries have, in far more cases than we ever dared to anticipate, been enabled to include the situation of their grounds. This is very encouraging, and we are gratified to think that our scheme has so far attained such generous measure of success.

Anticipation and Realization.

As we have already hinted, when our plan was evolved, we had in mind the formation of a single league comprising, perhaps 20 or 30 competing teams. Then there would follow three months (or thereabouts) rattling good cricket, culminating in a happy little function whereat a proud skipper would be handed a magnificent cup and each member of his team a neat little replica (suitably inscribed). Then, our job would be finished, we thought, and the flight of time would once more have brought us to within hailing distance of King Football.

Subsequent events, however, have proved that we rather miscalculated the degree of enthusiasm with which the anouncement of the competition would be acclaimed.

So, here we are, on the eve of the closing date with no fewer than 92 names of clubs, all anxious to carry off our trophy. The entries are from all quarters, and vary considerably in point of the extent of the units they represent.

Such circumstances bring us face to face with a variety of points calling for careful consideration. Perhaps the two chief of these are the limits of time and the difficulty of arranging ample and efficient transport to convey teams to the scenes of battle.

Time, a Prime Consideration.

In respect of the first item, the amenities of military life prohibit a protracted absence of a party of men from its station, and this would be especially undesirable if a great part of that absence were to be involved that the success of a sporting competition depends firstly upon the degree of keenness and enthusiam that is maintained in it; all other considerations are of minor importance. Taking that for granted, it is therefore essential that the competition should not drag on to unreasonable lengths. Well, that's that.

Then comes the question of journeys. It is quite unthinkable that say, a team in Siegburg should have to travel all the way to Düren and that the same distance should have to be repeated subsequently for the return match. Apart from the physical exhaustion that such trips would entail, it couldn't be done (plus the time occupied in playing the match) in a single day.

So in view of these things, it is tolerably apparent that a single league is out of the question.

Six Leagues Necessary.

Consequently what we propose to do is this: The Corps areas in the occupied territory will form the boundaries of six different leagues in each of which there will be an equal number of clubs. Home and away matches will be played by all competing teams and, when all the fixtures have been exhausted, the most successful elevens in the leagues will, in turn, oppose one another to decide the final issue.

The adoption of such an arrangement will not only obviate the necessity for long journeys, but will enable the competition to be concluded with that desirable feature — brevity.

It should, perhaps, be pointed out here that while deciding upon the adoption of a Corps area for each league, we do not necessarily intend that such a league will be exclusively confined to teams representative of units in that particular Corps. The geographical location of a club alone must clearly be the governing factor in allotting constituants of the leagues, for the good and sufficient reason that each one must necessarily comprise an equal number of competing teams. In other words, supposing a matter of 20 teams entered from "A" Corps and there were only half a dozen from "B" Corps. Well — no explanation is needed to indicate the hopeless muddle that would inevitably be the outcome of such a contingency.

The work of grouping the entrants into what appear to us to be the most convenient leagues, is now in hand.

As it is very important that a start should be made with as little delay as possible, it is proposed that we shall arrange the fixtures from this office as soon as the leagues are formed, and publish them, together with the names of the secretaries. This list will be purely tentative and alterations will be permissible. Secretaries will then be asked to sign the fixture lists, after which, changes will not be allowed without a very sound reason.

In presenting the following rules in connection with the competition, we must reserve the right to alter or add to them should occasion necessitate, but our object at the outset is to make them as brief and as clear as possible.

Regarding rule 10, there are many cases of men being detached, singly, from their units and attached to a department at a considerable distance from their real stations. There is no reason why a man so situated should not become a member of some other units team, since there are bound to be several composite elevens, in the competition including among their members players from various branches of the service.

THE LIST OF RULES.

1.—The competition shall be know as "The Cologne Post Cricket Cup competition."

2.—It shall be open to all teams in the Rhine Army of Occupation.

3.—Matches shall be played according to fixture lists to be published in the Cologne Post.

4.—Two points will be awarded for a win and one for each team in the case of a drawn game.

5.—Matches will in all cases be decided at the first innings.

6.—In the event of a match being abandoned on account of rain, a subsequent date will be arranged.

7.—A team failing to fulfill an engagement without good reason will forfeit two points.

8.—In the case of a club being without a ground, the home and away fixture will be played on the opponents ground. Should neither side have a ground the Cologne Post shall decide whereon the match shall be played.

9.—All teams must register their players with this office, 24 hours before a match is timed to start. The time of post mark will be accepted in the case of teams in outlying stations.

10.—No cricketer may play for more than one team in the competition, but a player is not restricted to assist a side representative of his own unit. Once having registered and played for a team, however, he may not go to another club.

11.—Each team shall appoint its own umpire.

12.—Twenty-four hours after each match, the winning team is requested to send in the result to the Sports Editor, the Cologne Post. In the case of a drawn game, the home team will be responsible for this.

Our Thanks.

It is possible that some other points of importance may occur to our readers, in which event, we shall be very glad to receive them. Suggestions and criticisms are welcomed, and will receive careful consideration, on all matters relating to the competition.

In the meantime, we extend our thanks to all those who have send us such cheery messages of congratulation, and to all the clubs who have entered our competition, thus supplying the basis of the huge success we hope our enterprise will be.

A PROMINENT RHINE CRICKETER.

MULHEIM LEAGUE.

280th ARMY TROOPS R.E. v. 52nd WARWICKSHIRE REGIMENT.

A good game was played between the above teams on Tuesday. The weather was good and the Warwicks won by 2 goals to nil. The 280th lacked finish and it was largely due to the excellent services of their goalkeeper that a much larger score was not registered against them.

2nd MACHINE GUNNERS v. 12th IRISH RIFLES.

The above game was played at Deelen, on the ground of the 2nd M.G. Bn.

From the kick off the Machine Gunners attacked, and good work by Holmes and Duffy enabled Baily to score with a fast shot. A few minutes later the same player scored again. Good play by Mc Ginley enabled the M.G. forwards to get away, and Walker scored from a centre by Woodward. They returned to the attack and in a scramble in front of goal Fay equalised.

Just before half time Bailey dribbled through, but was pluckily stopped by the goalkeeper. The ball, however, came out to Joyce, who scored with a left foot drive.

The restart found the gunners playing ten men, Edge their left half being injured and unable to resume. From the kick off the Rifles tried hard to equalise, Walker missing the bar by inches, but time after time Poulton drove them back with beautiful kicks. This player was giving a beautiful exhibition of back play, and at times his kicking was nothing short of marvellous. Some good work by Richards enabled Joyce to put in a long run on the touch line and from his centre Ravenscroft headed past the goalkeeper. Then the Rifles attacked and forced a corner but it was cleared after some scrambling in front of goal.

The long whistle went with the Gunners pressing. Result: 2nd M.G.Bn. 4; 12th R.I.Rifles 2.

INTER-PLATOON COMPETITION.

1/5th WEST YORKS REGT.

On Tuesday, the 1/5th West Yorks completed the first round of the above competition on the Zeppelin ground at Blucher Park.

On Blucher Park, No 5 Platoon easily accounted for No 16 Platoon by 4 goals to nil, Snowdon, Wilkinson and Cummings showing very good form for the winners.

On the Zeppelin ground, the Transport were beaten by No 9 Platoon by 5 goals to 1. Lieut. Ward did good work for the Transport. No 10 Platoon defeated No 1 by 2 goals to nil. A very good game ensued, the winners being well represented by Pte. Jagger and Hall.

RHINE OFFICERS SPORTS CLUB.

FORMAL OPENING AT LINDENTHAL.

After being postponed from May 3rd on account of wet weather, the Rhine Army Officers Sports Club was formally opened yesterday.

The opening ceremony took place in the delightful precincts of the Lawn Tennis Club at Stadtwald, Lindenthal, when glorious weather attracted a large number of prospective members and their lady friends.

The proceedings were purely social and informal, so that there were no speeches.

From early in the afternoon until sunset, the sixteen courts were alive with white-flannelled officers, and ladies of the Q.M.A.A.C., the Y.M.C.A. and other bodies which are now well represented in Rhineland. Looking from the club-house, glimpses of the sparkling lake could be seen, the whole scene being most picturesque and animated.

Major-General Sir S.T.B. Lawford, K.C.B., the President of the Club was present to welcome the members and visitors, while the ever popular secretary, Major the Hon. P. Bowes Lyon had organised the ceremony in an admirable manner. There were many distinguished officers also present, and there was a general brightness about the whole affair which augurs well for the Club's future well-being. During the afternoon, music was provided by the excellent band of the 1st. Bn. R.S.F. and the Royal Scots Pipers.

Applications for membership to the club, which embraces tennis, golf, cricket, polo, boating and swimming, should be made to: Major Hon. P. Bowes Lyon, attached General Staff (Education) H.Q. British Army of the Rhine, Cologne.

ELEVEN GOALS TO ONE.

3rd LIGHT BRIGADE H.Q. v. "A" COY. 52nd RIFLE BRIGADE.

Played at Bedburg on Monday the game started off by the 52nd passing to the right wing and a smart run by Capt. Hawkins, who scored with a splendid fast shot. Throughout the game the H.Q. were frequently penned in, further goals being added by Capt. Hawkins (1), Lieut. Plant (3 goals), and Sergt. Pinnock (1). Finally H.Q. scored from a corner. At the interval the score stood at 6—1 in favour of the Rifle Brigade.

In the second half the R.B. forwards went away and commenced a bombardment of the home goal. Lieut. Galbraik dribbed through the home defence and scored with a low drive which gave the goal-keeper no chance. A few minutes later, the same player added yet another goal. Further goals came in due course from Sergt. Pinnock (2) and Rfmn. Cunningham (1). The H.Q. forwards made a great effort to get through, but could not penetrate "A" Coy's defence, the latter eventually walking on easy winners by 11 goals to 1.

"A" Coy R.B. was represented by the following: Rfm. Kempster; Sgt. White and Cpl. Jones; Beach, Rfm. Pearson and Cpl. Graves; Rfm. Gunningham, Lieut. Galbraith, Sgt. Pinnock, 2nd Lieut. Plant, and Capt. Hawkins.

Referee: Cpl. Knight (53rd R.B.)

There was a good attendance, and great enthusiasm prevailed. Amongst interested spectators were Brigadier General Kennedy and many officers.

NO. 1 v. NO. 2 SECTIONS MIDLAND D.A.C.

Keen interest prevailed in an inter-section match of the Midland D.A.C., No. 1 meeting No. 2 on the latter's ground last Sunday afternoon. Winning the toss, No. 2 Section pressed continually, but Reynolds, in goal, proved a good asset to his side. Eventually, the Ex-Fulham goalkeeper was beaten with a low drive from Jarvis. On the change of ends, the play was again even, although Barrett, No. 2 Section custodian, prevented No. 1 from equalizing on several occasions. The whistle blew leaving No. 2 Section the winners (1—0).

NEWMARKET RACES.

Two-thousand Guinea Trial Plate.

There was a good crowd at the opening of the Newmarket meeting on Tuesday. The returns were:

Two-thousand Guineas Trial Plate: 1, Athletic (1—2); 2, Freezomint (4—1); 3, Jasana (100—12,; Four ran.

Maiden Plate: 1, Poltava (100—8); 2, Orpheus (1—2); 3, Seraph Colt (6—1); Seventeen ran.

First Spring Stakes (Division 1.: Herakles (100—8); 2, Woodrow (8—4); 3, Rapier (8—1). Sixteen ran.

Hastings Plate: Galloper Light (30—100) beat Rapelan. Two ran.

Visitors Handicap: 1, Tom Pepper (5—4; 2, Warwick (6—1); 3, The Gunyah (5—1).

First Spring Stakes (Division 11): 1, Senhora (10—1); 2, Abbots Trace (evens); Escenseur (100—7); Fourteen ran.

Risby Plate: 1, Carapace (2—1); 2, Chasseur (5—2); 3, Eastern Valley (100—6).

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

Thursday, May 8, 1919.

Wind Easterly, 10—15 m. p. h. in the day. Weather continuing fair; visibility indifferent early, good later in the day. Rather warm.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

Who Said Cock Fighting?

In all seriousness, a couple of young officers came into this office a few days ago and suggested a revival of cock fighting at Bonn or Cologne — I really forget which — a couple of birds having already been spotted for the opening show. The suggestion would be humourous in its antediluvianness, were it not for the tragedy of a state of mind that in these enlightened days could turn to so primitive a form of sport. "In days of old, when Knights were bold" (and when they were not bold, for the matter of that!) the discovery of fresh forms of entertainment must have caused amusement caterers a great deal of furious thinking. Reading was a diversion limited to a privileged few; theatres, cinemas, and motor cars were undreamed of and thus we find that cock fighting flourished pretty considerably. If our seekers after new thrills must satisfy their fighting proclivities, I can recommend no more exciting way of doing so than in the ring. The days of such an atrocious form of sport as cock and bull fighting are, happily, of the past, and with our present day higher conception of real sport, they are not likely to return.

Campanologists Please Note.

A Bombardier writes to ask if there are any ringable bells in any of the Cologne churches. What a question to ask! If my correspondent could but spend a day or two in the neighbourhood of my humble little apartment, he would not have the slightest doubt on the subject. The deafening clatter that proceeds merrily from all directions, (at about three second intervals) from the wee sma' hours of the morning until well beyond the time when I have devoured my morning bloater, convinces me, by its volume more certainly than by its music, that there must be quite a lot of bells in Cologne. Presumably a peal of bells is meant, and I am informed that several churches in Cologne have quite a good bunch. Those in the cathedral are the biggest and are, I understand, in capital harmony, although they have not been much used collectively for several years. The largest of them all, the "Empress Bell," which was rung only on very special occasions, served the fate of many others, and found its way into the melting pot, at a time when shell making was a matter of more vital importance than any amount of bell ringing. If any enthusiastic campanologists would care to get into touch with our correspondent, shall be pleased to forward to him any letters addressed to "Bellringer," c/o the Cologne Post.

The R. A. A. D. C.!

I referred recently to the thought which had prompted the British Rhine Army Amateur Dramatic Company to adopt so copious a title, and pointed out that such voluminous "bill matter" would be ruinous to the most talented of music-hall turns. As might have been expected, I have had my knuckles rapped by the organiser of the company for my temerity. Lieut. Percy, from the Cologne amusements office, tells me that his party never was, never is, and never will be intended to be a "big drum, boosting show." It is a combination of amateur artistes, well versed in the dramatic art, who will present the dignified works of our best dramatists. As a matter of fact, Mr. Percy actually adressed me as "Laddie" in a deep tremulous voice that convinced me that he, at any rate, was surely a diciple of the old school. It also caused several suggestions for a new title that I had intended to unfold when I barged lightheartedly into his office, to freeze in my throat. Several snappy ideas had occurred to me, "The Dramaosities" and "The Ticklesome Thespians" to quote but two. Heavens! if I had dared to mention them! Harking back to the point, however, Mr. Percy reminded me that the new organisation was purely an army one, and in keeping with the familiarity born of its observance, he objected not to reference being made to the Company by its initials.

By the way, the R. A. A. D. C. (!) will submit for the approval of Deutsche Theatre patrons, its first performance to-night, when "Mollusc" will be played.

The Price of Golf Clubs.

Even at the present high prices golf clubs are cheap. They are practically indestructible. Wet weather has no effect on them. And after the initial outlay on a set, the yearly repairs and renewals will be a matter of a few shillings. There will always be players who, for no apparent reason, buy new clubs; for which Allah be praised (writes Joshua Taylor in "Golf Illustrated"). Nothing pleases them better than to spend an hour in the pro's shop turning over his stock. Any other club seems to suit them better than what they are playing with. They take a particular fancy to a club. They have seen it in its different stages of manufacture. They like it. From that to purchase is, fortunately for us, a short step. Such loyal amateurs as these are the one thing a pro. has to live for in these days of Stores competition. Such men rightly acknowledge the moral obligation they are under to purchase their clubs from their own pro. and act accordingly. Would there were more of them.

HOLBORN, LONDON, E.C. 1.

PRINCE OF WALES ON HOUSING.

UNEMPLOYED OFFICERS.

The Prince of Wales was the principal guest on Saturday night at the Royal Academy banquet, the first held since the outbreak of the war. His speech was marked by a pointed reference to the housing of the people. Another remark worty of note in the speeches was the reference of Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig to the difficulties experienced by many demobilised officers in securing employment.

In acknowledging the toast of the Royal Family, the Prince of Wales said: The President has been kind enough to associate my name with that great national movement which occupies our minds so much to-day, and which it is hoped will result in prompt and drastic measures to provide adequate sanitary and cheerful homes for all classes of the people. But my humble efforts in this direction are no more than anyone here would heartily undertake. We all wish to see our fellow-countrymen happy, healthy, and contented, and we are agreed that this end cannot be attained without securing decent and comfortable homes for others, the blessings of which we ourselves enjoy. The wonder is, if I may be allowed to say so, that only now have we been brought to realise that this pressing need must be boldly faced and boldly handled."

Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig having paid a very warm tribute to the Army, in replying to a toast, said that while it was perhaps permissible to look back on the work of the past five years with certain feelings of satisfaction, he knew that some of them were very anxious as to the future of many of their gallant comrades who had left the Army for one cause or another. "I hasten to say," he proceeded, "that the several Departments of his Majesty's Government concerned with pensions and labour seem to be doing their best to cope with the problem in a sympathetic spirit. But the numbers to be dealt with are very great, especially of those seeking employment. One hears of sad cases every day, such, for instance, as that of a demobilised officer, who had won the V.C., D.S.O., and M.C., trudging in vain through the streets of London in search of work, and there are many other such cases. When a request for work is made to an employer, I would beg him to reflect on all he owes to these men, and to be a little patient, and try to help the gallant fellow to learn some job before he turns him away altogether."

HOW TO TREAT THE BRITISH.

Replying to a toast at a luncheon given by the English Speaking Union, at New York, the object of which is "to draw together in bonds of comradeship the English speaking peoples of the war," Admiral Sims, after remarking that the war would have been of little benefit to civilization if it had not brought together in stronger ties the two English speaking nations, recited many instances of the bonds uniting officers and men of the two navies. Having dwelt on the fact that the British Grand Fleet was the foundation stone on which the success of the war was built, the Admiral went on to speak of "the way to deal with the British." Tell them the truth (he said) as far as you understand it without qualification. Never mind if the Britisher likes it or not. He is a good sport, and an English statesman's word is his bond. Englishmen cannot stand indirection. I tell this especially for the benefit of those here who may be thinking of trading with him.

NEW TYPE OF CRIMINAL.

The war, in the opinion of Sir Nevil Macready, Chief Commissioner of Metropolitan Police, is responsible for increasing the amount of crime in this country, and for changing the type of criminal. To an interviewer Sir Nevil said there was a big rise in the number of robberies, and the robber of to-day, grown callous after four years' experience of killing, was indifferent alike to the taking of life and to his own personal safety.

"In pre-war days if a burglar was met on the stairs by a householder in his pyjamas his first thought was to escape, but to-day the thief would probably resort to violence, and, if necessary, to murder."

Sir Nevil also thought that another result of the war would be an increase in the number of women murders. Before the war, when a man quarrelled with his wife—or the woman he lived with—he would "just clip her under the ear," and all would be right again next day. "But now he would hit her over the head with an iron bar or anything handy, and there would be no next day for her."

GOOD-BYE TO GOVERNMENT ALE.

The Liquor Control Board are considering a proposal for altering the evening opening of licensed premises from 6 p.m. to 6.30 p.m. to 10 p.m. Some members favour opening from 6 till 10, but the opposition to this is probably strong enough to prevent its adoption.

Similar opposition has prevented the abolition of the no-treating order. A solution is now being sought for, which will allow a certain liberty of treating while preventing the custom of every person in a group paying for "rounds" of drinks.

The Board have been informed of the Government's intention to allow stronger beer. The present maximum strength will become the minimum thus abolishing so-called "Government" ale.

DEAD SOLDIERS' DECORATIONS.

The War Office states that a mistaken impression is prevalent that the parents or other relatives of a deceased officer or soldier are entitled to wear on the right breast the decorations and medals, or the ribands appertaining thereto, that may have been awarded for service in the field. Decorations and medals, it is stated, may only be worn by the individual upon whom they are conferred.

The Queen opened the Princess Alice Home for totally disabled sailors and soldiers at Slough, on Monday.

Thirty Newfoundland fishermen released from war service, are touring east coast fishing ports as guests of the War Office.

Reporting on a scheme for buying large houses and converting them into flats, Deptford Council says the cost would involve prohibitive rents.

Lord Chilston told Kent V.A.D.s at a Bromley reception on Saturday that though V.A.D.s are demobilized they are not disbanded, and that schemes are in preparation for utilizing them.

Miss May Butler-George, Australian painter and sculptor, is to execute designs for the base and reliefs of a memorial statue to the 2nd Australian Division for the top of Mount St. Quentin.

Fish prices, a Labour member at the 11th London Labour Conference stated, are as high now as when fishermen were mine-sweeping, and they are a scandal the Food Ministry should remove.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

GREATEST OF ALL GERMANS.

We who have fought against Hindenburg have our own opinion of the Field Marshall; those who served under him have another; and it is perhaps only natural that in these two opinions there should be, to some degree, a contrast. Though we have reason to despise many of the tactics of Prussia's greatest leader, we must ever give him credit for his greatness, his skill, and his indomitable courage. During the past few months, or since the armistice, he has been called upon to perform perhaps the hardest task a leader of soldiers has ever been given, in that he had not only to withdraw a vanquished army from the battlefields, but he had to keep it together in face of a violent revolution which threatened severely all German militarists. Only with that resource of courage for which Hindenburg is renowned was he able to maintain his position at the head of a fallen army amidst such revolutionary surroundings.

A Great Father.

It has been announced that Hindenburg has sent in his resignation realising, now that the crisis is past and the peace terms are almost ready for signature, that his work is finished. His departure into retirement is the subject of eulogistic comment in a recent issue of the Kölner Tageblatt. "There is nothing of vanity in him, nothing but understanding for all human matters, says the writer."

"Everybody who came in touch with him was influenced by his abundant kindness. Like a great father did he gather all the millions of his children around him."

"Now he leaves us — the greatest of all Germans, the symbol of German thought in the world. He has remained faithful into the last. Not until the Versailles Conference is adding the final dash to the bill of former times has he thought of himself or of the few years of earthly existence left to him."

All is finished.

The article then deals with the military career of Hindenburg, and in conclusion states: "An emperor has fleed and with him twenty-four princes. All is finished, the old world bursts! Only Hindenburg remains upright. He cannot agree with the Revolution — he who has been ever a true subject of the Kaiser. But he could not ignore the people in its greatest distress. Then again he takes command of the great army and like Napoleon, he leads it home unbeaten."

Such a comment might call for our strong resentment, but the mere presence of British soldiers in the territory of the "unbeaten" is sufficient to portray its gross falsity.

"Once more the people calls for him, the second revolution is threatening — the ruin of the newly gained liberty through the madness from the East. Once more he takes command and secures the holy frontier of the Fatherland."

NEWS IN BRIEF.

The Duke of Connaught left London on Sunday to visit the Army on the Rhine.

Ten Army officers at St. Peter's, South Croydon, on Saturday rang a peal of 5,201 changes.

An Army Order says the British Salonika Force is to be known as the "Army of the Black Sea."

"Do, please, respond to this advertisement," implores the advertiser in a North London paper for a domestic servant.

At St. Paul's Cathedral, on June 5, the Prince of Wales will attend the annual service of the Order of St. Michael and St. George.

Steps are being taken to amend the Act, passed when the foreshore was reclaimed, which exempts from rates the land on the Thames Embankment.

Mr. W. Noble, assistant engineer-in-chief, has been appointed engineer-in-chief to the Post Office in succession to Sir William Slingo, who is retiring.

While the Bishop of Southamptons's motor-car was standing at the door of Holy Trinity Rectory, Winchester, the Bishop's robe case and portmanteau were stolen.

Sir Edward Kemp, Minister to the Overseas Military Forces in Canada, sailed from Southampton on Saturday for Canada in connection with the business of his Department.

"My expert man has been demobilized at last," says a Marylebone bootmaker's notice.

A SMILE OR TWO.

The fire-eating colonel had received a letter which consumed him with rage, but this was his noble reply:—

"Sir—My stenographer, being a lady, cannot ranscribe what I think of you. I, being a gentleman, cannot think it. But you, being neither, will understand what I mean."

"You say your baby does not walk yet," said Brown. "Mine does and he is not so old as yours. Has your baby cut his teeth yet?" "No, he hasn't" admitted Robinson sadly. "Oh, mine has them all" boasted Brown. "Your baby talk yet?" "Not yet," replied Robinson. "Can yours?" "Great Scott, yes!" answered Brown. Then Robinson got desperate. "Does your baby use a safety razor or one of the others?" he asked.

Little Benjamin, accompanied by his governess, went out for his morning stroll. They passed a street where a load of straw had been scattered in order to soften the noise of traffic in front of a house in which there had been a serious illness.

"Miss Teacher, why have they scattered all this straw about here?" asked Benjamin.

"Well," replied the good lady, "a little baby came to Mrs Jones last night."

"My goodness," exclaimed Benjamin, "but it was well packed!"

A Canadian named Casey was appointed to a Government place. Technically, it had to be held by a lawyer, which Casey was not. The Benchers of the Law Society, however, undertook to obviate the technicality. "Well, Casey," said the examiner, "what do you know about law, anyway?" "To tell the truth," replied the candidate, "I don't know a single thing." The examiner reported in his affidavit "that he had examined Mr. Casey as to his knowledge of the law, and, to the best of his information and belief, he had answered the questions that he had put to him correctly." The aspirant was thereupon admitted.

Mr. Elihu Root, America's ex Secretary of State, who accompanies President Wilson to the Peace Conference, is rather fond of telling this story against himself.

One day he said to his office boy, "Who has taken my waste-paper basket?"

"Mr. Johnson, sir, the caretaker," was the reply.

Some time later Mr. Root asked, "James, who opened that window?"

"Mr. Smith, sir, the window-cleaner."

"Now, look here," said Mr. Root, "we call men by their first names here. We don't 'mister' them in this office. Do you understand."

"Yes, sir." Ten minutes afterwards the door opened and the shrill voice of James was heard saying, "There's a man as wants to see you, Elihu!"

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

The Editor, in publishing letters from Correspondents, will use his own discretion, and if necessary limit the publishing of correspondence on any subject whatever. It must be understood, however that he is not responsible for the views stated.

All communications for this column should be brief and to the point, and preference will be given to those which bear the writers' signatures for publication. No letter will be published unless accompanied by rank name, and unit of sender, which are needed for the purpose of reference.

Many letters of a perverse nature have reached the office, and the Editor wishes to point out that these only cause waste of time both to the writer and the Editor himself. Letters of this nature will not be published.

"WHY NOT?"

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.—I have read the article appearing in your edition of May 5th entitled "Why not?" with great interest and whilst admitting that there are many good points in the proposition put forward by "Georex" it seems to me, as a ranker, that the writer is not sufficiently in touch with the feelings of the troops.

The proposal with regard to English beer and refreshment would, no doubt, be appreciated by many; but "Georex" loses sight of the fact that most of us have been in the Army long enough to be only too glad to get away from the ubiquitous khaki in our leisure hours. Has it never happened to him (pen ant la guerre) to arrive in a little village behind the lines and to remark, with a sigh of relief, that there are no troops there? Has he with a few friends, perhaps, ever entered a hitherto undiscovered estaminet and rejoiced in the fact that it was undiscovered?

I will not attempt to deny that there may be many disadvantages attendant on the free use of German "Wirtshäuser." It must be borne in mind, however, that Tommy can thereby enjoy, at least, a freedom from restraint and feel that he has an individuality of his own, apart from his khaki self. It is no good denying the fact that Tommy does not like to have his amusement "according to plan," these plans being made for the good of the troops by officers (undoubtedly earnest and well-intentioned) but it savours too much of that spirit of telling others what is good for them (so very prevalent at home.)

PHOTOGRAPHIC EXHIBITION.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.—The British in Bonn are about to hold an exhibition of water-colour and oil-colour paintings and photographs. Would it not, do you think, be possible to arrange such an exhibition here? The profits would, as at Bonn, be given to the Red Cross Society or some other worthy institution. My work prevents me from organising such an exhibition, yet I would be most willing to lend assistance to any good work of this kind.

We have artists here and photographers, but do not let us restrict ourselves to war pictures simply, but to all manner, for, by widening the scope, so much more does interest increase.

With reference to the photographic section I should like to suggest:—

1) That photographs be certified taken by the exhibitor, but not necessarily developed by him or her.

2) That enlargements therefrom need not be always the exhibitor's own work.

3) That any German photographer might be permitted to affix his business card to any print or enlargement on payment according to the sizes and numbers of the pictures. This would undoubtedly bring funds to a good cause.

I await your readers' comments.

Answers to Correspondents.

[The flow of correspondence, since the Cologne Post was instituted, has been enormous, and the Editor would like to point out that only a certain number of the innumerable questions can be answered in each issue. Should any inquirer find that his question has not yet been answered, he can have the assurance that it will receive attention in due course, and the answer will appear accordingly. Many questions have been received which could be answered much easier by the Adjutant of the unit concerned, and all such cases which affect the unit commander must be taken to him and not sent here. — Ed.]

STILL A WAR ON.

The War Office announces, says the Sunday Chronicle, that between the date of the armistice and noon of the 1st inst. 87,583 officers and 2,505,647 men of other ranks had been demobilised or discharged from the Army. All men who have passed their thirty-seventh birthday and who enlisted for continous duty before January 1, 1916, are being demobilised and released as quickly as possible.

An idea appears to be prevalent among the relatives of men who joined the Army on the "six months after the cessation of hostilities" basis that these men will be demobilised on the 11th instant. Many of the men themselves are also under this impression that they will be demobilised this month. This is not the fact. Apart from the new Military Service Act, under which all soldiers are liable to be retained until April 30, 1920, all men are legally bound to serve until what is called "the termination of the war." A law has been passed explaining what "the termination of the war" means. It means as nearly as possible the date of the "exchange or deposit of ratifications of the treaty or treaties of peace." The date of the armistice has nothing to do with "the termination of the war." The armistice is not "the termination of the war," but only a "suspension of hostilities," which may or may not be resumed according as the enemy accepts our conditions and yields to us the fruits which have been gained by the war.

THE DRAFT TREATY OF PEACE.

"FOR THE PREVENTION OF WARS IN THE FUTURE AND FOR THE BETTERMENT OF MANKIND"

DESCRIPTIVE INTRODUCTION TO SUMMARY.

The draft Treaty of Peace handed to the Germans is designed, in the first instance, to set forth the conditions upon which alone the Allied and Associated Powers will make peace with Germany, and, in the second place, to establish those international arrangements which the Allies have devised for the prevention of wars in the future, and the betterment of mankind. For this latter reason it includes the Covenant of the League of Nations and the International Labour Convention. The draft Treaty, however, does not deal, except incidentally, with the problems arising out of the liquidation of the Austrian Empire, nor with the territories of two enemy Powers—Turkey and Bulgaria—except in so far as it binds Germany to accept whatever subsequent settlement may be decided upon by the Allies in the case of these belligerents.

The Treaty is divided into thirteen sections:

The first sections contains the Covenant of the League of Nations, to which functions are assigned in various places by the Treaty.

The second section describes the geographical frontiers of Germany, beginning at the north-eastern point of the present Belgian frontier.

The third section, which consists of twelve clauses, binds the Germans to accept the political changes in Europe brought about by the Treaty. It establishes two new States, Tchecho-Slovakia and Poland, and provides for their recognition. It revises the basis of Belgian sovereignty and alters the boundaries of Belgium. It establishes new systems of government in Luxembourg and the Saar Basin, and restores Alsace-Lorraine to France. It provides for possible additions of territory to Denmark, and binds Germany to recognise the independence of German Austria and to accept conditions to be laid down as to those States or Governments which have created themselves since the Russian Revolution.

The fourth section deals with the Political Reconstruction of the territories outside Europe affected by the war. It contains a general renunciation on the part of Germany of her possessions and rights abroad. By it she yields her Colonies to the Allies, together with her rigths in Africa under the various international Conventions, particularly the Berlin Act of 1885 and the Brussels Act of 1895, which have regulated European enterprise in Tropical Africa. This section gives international recognition to the British Protectorate in Egypt, and annuls the Act of Algeciras, which was one step in the German policy of aggression which led to the war.

The fifth section sets forth the Military, Naval and Air Conditions of Peace, limits the size of the German army and navy, and abolishes compulsory recruiting in Germany, as a first step towards general disarmament.

The sixth section imposes on all the signatory Powers the obligation to maintain all graves of the fallen, and regulates the return of prisoners of war.

The seventh section deals with Responsibilities and Punishment, and provides for the trial of the ex-Emperor William.

The eighth sets forth the Reparation and Restitution to be made by Germany, and contains special provisions relating to documents and war trophies seized by the Germans in earlier wars.

The ninth section contains Financial clauses mainly designed to put into operation the provisions of the previous section.

The tenth section, which is of great length and complexity, contains the Economic provisions, and re-establishes the various non-political international Treaties and Conventions which, in such matters as posts, telegraphs, and sanitary regulations, have been binding on civilised Powers before the War. Attached to this section is a special provision to regulate the traffic in Opium and similar drugs.

The eleventh section deals with Aerial Navigation.

The twelfth section contains clauses dealing with the international control of ports, canals, rivers and railways, with special provisions for the Kiel Canal.

The thirteenth contains the Labour Convention.

The fourteenth contains the guarantees for the execution of the Treaty.

The fifteenth is made up of a series of miscellaneous clauses, including the recognition of other subsequent Treaties of Peace and the confirmation of Prize Court decisions. The final clauses deal with the ratification and date of entering into force of the Treaty, both the French and English texts of which are recognised as authentic.

PREAMBLE.

The Preamble, which recites shortly the origin of the War and the application of the Germans for an Armistice, enumerates the High Contracting Parties, represented by the five Great Powers—the United States of America, the British Empire, France, Italy, and Japan, together with Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, China, Cuba, Ecuador, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, the Hedjaz, Honduras, Liberia, Nicaragua, Panama, Peru, Poland, Portugal, Roumania, Serbia, Siam, Tchecho-Slovakia and Uruguay, on the one hand, and Germany on the other. The Plenipotentiaries representing these Powers are enumerated, "who, having communicated their full powers found in good and due form, have agreed as follows: From the coming into force of the present Treaty, the state of War will terminate. From that moment, and subject to the provisions of this Treaty, official relations with Germany and with each of the German States will be resumed by the Allied and Associated Powers."

SECTION 1.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

MEMBERSHIP.

The Members of the League will be the signatories of the Covenant and other States invited to accede, who must lodge a declaration of accession without reservation within two months. Any State, Dominion, or Colony may be admitted provided its admission is agreed by two-thirds of the Assembly. A State may withdraw upon giving two years' notice, if it has fulfilled all its international obligations.

SECRETARIAT.

A permanent Secretariat will be estalished at the seat of the League, which will be at Geneva.

ASSEMBLY.

The Assembly will consist of representatives of the Members of the League, and will meet at stated intervals. Voting will be by States. Each Member will have one vote and not more than three representatives.

COUNCIL.

The Council will consist of representatives of the Five Great Allied Powers, together with representatives of four other Members selected by the Assembly from time to time; il may co-opt additional States and will meet at least once a year. Members not represented will be invited to send a representative when questions affecting their interests are discussed. Voting will be by States. Each State will have one vote and not more than one representative. Decisions taken by the Assembly and Council must be unanimous except in regard to procedure, and in certain cases specified in the Covenant and in the Treaty, where decisions will be by a majority.

ARMAMENTS.

The Council will formulate plans for a reduction of armaments for consideration and adoption. These plans will be revised every ten years. Once they are adopted, no Member must exceed the armaments fixed without the concurrence of the Council. All Members will exchange full information as to armaments and programmes, and a permanent Commission will advise the Council on military and naval questions.

PREVENTION OF WAR.

Upon any war, or threat of war, the Council will meet to consider what common action shall be taken. Members are pledged to submit matters of dispute to arbitration or enquiry and not to resort to war until three months after the award. Members agree to carry out an arbitral award, and not to go to war with any party to the dispute which complies with it; if a Member fails to carry out the award, the Council will propose the necessary measures. The Council will formulate plans for the establishment of a Permanent Court of International Justice to determine international disputes or to give advisory opinions. Members who do not submit their cases to arbitration must accept the jurisdiction of the Council or the Assembly. If the Council, less the parties to the dispute, is unanimously agreed upon the rights of it, the Members agree that they will not go to war with any party to the dispute which complies with its recommendations. In this case a recommendation by the Assembly concurred in by all its Members represented on the Council and a simple majority of the rest, less the parties to the dispute, will have the force of a unanimous recommendation by the Council. In either case, if the necessary agreement cannot be secured the Members reserve the right to take such action as may be necessary for the maintenance of right and justice. Members resorting to war in disregard of the Covenant will immediately be debarred from all intercourse with other Members. The Council will in such cases consider what military or naval action can be taken by the League collectively for the protection of the Covenants and will afford facilities to Members co-operating in this enterprise.

VALIDITY OF TREATIES.

All Treaties or international engagements concluded after the institution of the League will be registered with the Secretariat and published. The Assembly may from time to time advise Members to reconsider Treaties which have become inapplicable or involve danger to peace. The Covenant abrogates all obligations between Members inconsistent with its terms, but nothing in it shall affect the validity of international engagements such as Treaties of Arbitration or regional understandings like the Monroe Doctrine for securing the maintenance of Peace.

THE MANDATORY SYSTEM.

The tutelage of nations not yet able to stand by themselves will be entrusted to advanced nations who are best fitted to undertake it. The Covenant recognises three different stages of development requiring different kinds of mandates:

(a.) Communities like those belonging to the Turkish Empire, which can be provisionally recognised as independent, subject to advice and assistance from a mandatory in whose selection they should be allowed a voice.

(b.) Communities like those of Central Africa, to be administered by the Mandatory under conditions generally approved by the members of the League, where equal opportunities for trade will be allowed to all members; certain abuses, such as trade in slaves, arms, and liquor will be prohibited, and the construction of military and naval bases and the introduction of compulsory military training will be disallowed.

(c.) Other communities, such as South-West Africa and the South Pacific Islands, best administered under the laws of the Mandatory as integral portions of its territory.

In every case the Mandatory will render an annual report, and the degree of its authority will be defined.

GENERAL INTERNATIONAL PROVISIONS.

Subject to and in accordance with the provisions of international conventions existing or hereafter to be agreed upon, the members of the League will in general endeavour, through the international organisation established by the Labour Convention, women, and children in their own countries and other countries, and undertake to secure just treatment of the native inhabitants of territories under their control; they will entrust the League with the general supervision over the execution of agreements for the suppression of traffic in women and children, &c., and the control of the trade in arms and ammunition with countries in which control is necessary; they will make provision for freedom of communications and transit and equitable treatment for commerce of all members of the League, with special reference to the necessities of regions devasted during the war; and tney will endeavour to take steps for international prevention and control of disease.

International bureaux and commissions already established will be placed under the League, as will all those to be established in the future.

AMENDMENTS TO THE COVENANT.

Amendments to the Covenant will take effect when ratified by the Council and by a majority of the Assembly.

SECTION II.

BOUNDARIES OF GERMANY.

The boundaries of Germany are described in two articles, one dealing with Germany proper and the other with East Prussia. The boundary lines between the new State of Poland and Germany and East Prussia respectively, and the new boundary line between East Prussia and Lithuania, which are shown approximately on an attached map, are described in detail in so far as they are not left to be settled by Boundary Commissions on the spot. The boundary with Belgium follows the line described in the later Section dealing with Belgium. The frontier with Luxembourg and with Switzerland is that of August, 1914. The frontier with France is that of the 18th July, 1870, with a reservation regarding the Saar. The frontier with Austria is the same as that of the 3rd August, 1914, up to the point where that of the new State of Tchecho-Slovakia begins. The frontier of Tchecho-Slovakia follows the old frontier between Germany and Austria up to the point where the new State of Poland begins. The boundary between Germany and Denmark and a portion of the boundary between East Prussia and Poland remain to be decided by the result of a plebiscite.

SECTION III.

POLITICAL CLAUSES EUROPE.

BELGIUM.

Germany is to consent to the abrogation of the Treaties of 1839 (by which Belgium was established as a neutral State and her frontiers, &c., fixed), and to agree in advance to any Convention with which the Allies may determine to replace them. Germany is to recognise the full sovereignty of Belgium over the contested territory of Moresnet and over part of Prussian Moresnet; and is to renounce in favour of Belgium all rights over Eupen and Malmedy, the inhabitants of which are to be entitled within six monts to protest against this change either in whole or in part, the final decision to be reserved to the League of Nations. A Commission is to settle the details of the frontier, and various regulaions for individual changes of nationality are laid down. Territories acquired by Belgium will be free of all obligations.

LUXEMBURG.

Germany renounces her various treaties and conventions with the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg, recognises that it ceased to be part of the Germany Zollverein from the 1st January last, renounces all rights of exploitation of the railways, adheres to the abrogation of its neutrality, and accepts in advance any international agreements as to it reached by the Allied and Associated Powers.

THE LEFT BANK OF RHINE.

As subsequently provided in the Military Section, Germany must not maintain or construct any fortfications less than fifty kilometres to the East of the Rhine. In the above area Germany may maintain no armed forces, either permanent or temporary, nor hold any manoeuvres, nor maintain any works for facilitating mobilisation. If the provisions of this Article are violated, she shall be regarded as committing a hostile act against the signatories of the Treaty, and as intending to disturb the world's peace. By virtue of the Treaty she must respond to any request for an explanation which the Council of the League of Nations may address to her.

THE SAAR.

In compensation for the destruction of coal mines in Northern France and as payment on account of reparation, Germany cedes to France full ownership of the coal mines of the Saar Basin, with their subsidiaries, accessories, and facilities. Their value will be estimated by the Reparation Commission and credited against that account. The French rights will be governed by German law in force at the Armistice, excepting War legislation, France replacing the present owners, whom Germany undertakes to indemnify. France will continue to furnish the present proportion of coal for local needs, and contribute in just proportion to local taxes. The basin extends from the frontier of Lorraine as re-annexed to France north as far as St. Wendel, including on the west the valley of the Saar as far as Saarholzbach and on the east the town of Homburg.

In order to secure the rights and welfare of the population and guarantee to France entire freedom in working the mines, the territory will be governed by a Commission appointed by the League of Nations, and consisting of five members, one French, one a native inhabitant of the Saar, and three representing three different countries other than France and Germany. The League will appoint a member of the Commission as Chairman, to act as executive of the Commission. The Commission will have all powers of government formerly belonging to the German Empire, Prussia, and Bavaria; will administer the railroads and other public services, and have full power to interpret the Treaty clauses. The local courts will continue, but subject to the Commission. Existing German legislation will remain the basis of the law, but the Commission may make modifications after consulting a local representative assembly which it will organise. It will have the taxing power, but for local purposes only; new taxes must be approved by this assembly. Labour Legislation will consider the wishes of the local labour organisations, and the labour programme of the League. French and other labour may be freely utilised, the former being free to belong to French unions.

There will be no military service- but only a local gendarmerie to preserve order. The people will preserve their local assemblies, religions liberties, schools, and language; but may vote only for local assemblies. They will keep their present nationality, except so far as individuals may change it. Those wishing to leave will have every facilty with respect to their property. The territory will form part of the French customs system, with no export tax on coal and metallurgical products going to Germany, nor on German products for the Basin, and for five years no import duties on products of the Basin going to Germany or German products coming into the Basin for local consumption. French money may circulate without restriction.

After fifteen years a plebiscite will be held by communes to ascertain the desires of the population as to continuance of the existing régime under the League of Nations, union with France, or union with Germany. The right to vote will belong to all inhabitants over twenty resident therein at the signature. On the opinion thus expressed the League will decide the ultimate sovereignty. In any portion restored to Germany the German Government must buy out the French mines at an appraised valuation; if the price is not paid within six months thereafter, this portion passes finally to France. If Germany buys back the mines, the League will determine how much of the coal shall go to France.

ALSACE-LORRAINE.

After recognition of the moral obligation to repair the wrong done in 1871 by Germany to France and the people of Alsace-Lorraine, the territories ceded to Germany by the Treaty of Frankfort are restored to France with their frontiers as before 1871, to date from the signing of the Armistice, and to be free of all public debts.

Citizenship is regulated by detailed provisions distinguishing those who are immediately restored to full French citizenshep, those who have to make a formal application therefor, and those for whom naturalisation is open after three years the last-named class includes German residents in Alsace-Lorraine, as distinguished from those who acquire the position of Alsace-Lorrainers as defined in the Treaty.

ALSACE-LORRAINE.

All public property and all private property of German ex-sovereigns passes to France without payment or credit. France is substituted for Germany as regards ownership of the railroads and rights over concessions of tramways. The Rhine bridges pass to France, with the obligation for their upkeep.

For five years manufactured products of Alsace-Lorraine will be admitted to Germany free of duty to a total amount not exceeding in any year the average of the three years preceding the war, and textile materials may be imported from Germany to Alsace-Lorraine and re-exported free of duty. Contracts for electric power from the Right Bank must be continued for ten years.

For seven years, with possible extension to ten, the ports of Kehl and Strasbourg, shall be administered as a single unit by a French administrator appointed and supervised by the Central Rhine Commission. Property rights will be safeguarded in both ports, and equality of treatment as respects traffic assured the nationals, vessels, and goods of every country.

Contracts between Alsace-Lorrainers and Germans are maintained save for France's right to annul on grounds of public interest. Judgments of courts in certain classes of cases, while in others a judicial consequatur is first required. Political condemnations during the war are null and void, and the obligation to repay war fines is established as in other parts of Allied territory.

Various clauses adjust the general provisions of the Treaty to the special conditions of Alsace-Lorraine, certain matters of execution being left to conventions to be made between France and Germany.

GERMAN AUSTRIA.

The entire independence of German Austria is recognised by Germany.

TCHECHO-SLOVAKIA.

Germany recognises the entire independence of the Tchecho-Slovak State, including the autonomous territory of the Ruthenians, south of the Carpathians, and accepts the frontiers of this State, as they may be determined, which in the case of the German frontier shall follow the old frontier of Bohemia in 1914. The usual stipulations as to acquisition and change of nationality follow.

POLAND.

Germany cedes to Poland the greater part of Upper Silesia, Posen, and the province of West Prussia on the left bank of the Vistula. A field boundary commission of seven, five representing the Allied and Associated Powers, and one each representing Poland and Germany shall be constituted within fifteen days of the Peace to delimit this boundary. Such special provisions as are necessary to protect racial or religious minorities shall be laid down in a subsequent treaty between the Allied and Associated Powers and Poland.

EAST PRUSSIA.

The southern and the eastern frontier of East Prussia as facing Poland is to be fixed by plebiscites, the first in the Regency of Allenstein between the southern frontier of East Prussia and the northern frontier of Regierungsbesirk Allenstein from where it meets the boundary between East and West Prussia to its junction with the boundary between the circles of Oletsko and Augersburg, thence the northern boundary of Oletsko to its junction with the present frontier, and the second in the area comprising the circles of Stuhm and Rosenburg and the parts of the circles of Marienburg and Marienwerder east of the Vistula.

In each case German troops and authorities will move out within fifteen days of the Peace and the territories be placed under an International Commission of five members appointed by the five Allied and Associated Powers, with the particular duty of arranging for a free, fair, and secret vote. The Commission will report the results of the plebiscites to the five Powers, with a recommendation for the boundary, and will terminate its work as soon as the boundary has been laid down and the new authorities set up.

The five Allied and Associated Powers will draw up regulations assuring East Prussia full and equitable access to and use of the Vistula. A subsequent Convention, of which the terms will be fixed by the five Allied and Associated Powers, will be entered into between Poland, Germany, and Danzig, to assure suitable railroad communication across German territory on the right bank of the Vistula between Poland and Danzig, while Poland shall grant free passage from East Prussia to Germany.

The north-eastern corner of East Prussia about Memel is to be ceded by Germany to the Associated Powers, the former agreeing to accept the settlement made, especially as regards the nationality of the inhabitants.

DANZIG.

Danzig and the district immediately about it is to be constituted into the "Free City of Danzig," under the guarantee of the League of Nations. A High Commissioner appointed by the League and resident at Danzig shall draw up a constitution in agreement with the duly appointed representatives of the city, and shall deal in the first instance with all differences arising between the City and Poland. The actual boundaries of the city shall be delimited by a Commission appointed within six months from the Peace, and to include three reprentatives chosen by the Allied and Associated Powers and one each by Germany and Poland.

A Convention, the terms of which shall be fixed by the Five Allied and Associated Powers, shall be concluded between Poland and Danzig, which shall include Danzig within the Polish Customs frontiers, though with a free area in the port; insure to Poland the use of all the city's waterways, docks, and other port facilities, the control and administration of the Vistula and the whole through railway system within the city, and postal, telegraphic, and telephonic communication between Poland and Danzig; provide against discrimination against Poles within the city, and place its foreign relations and the diplomatic protection of its citizens abroad in charge of Poland.

DENMARK.

The frontier between Germany and Denmark is to be fixed in accordance with the wishes of the population, a vote being taken in Northern Schleswig as a whole and in portions of Central Schleswig by communes. Ten days from the Peace German troops and authorities must evacuate the region north of the line running from the mouth of the Schlei, south of Kappel, Schleswig, and Friedrichstadt along the Eider to the North Sea south of Tonning; and Workmen's and Soldiers' Councils in the zone must be dissolved. During the voting the zone will be under the charge of an International Commission of five members, of whom the Norwegian and Swedish Governments will be invited to choose two. The Commission will temporarily have general powers of administration. After the result of the voting has been declared, the Danish Government may occupy those territories which have opted for Denmark, and Germany shall renounce sovereign rights in these territories. All the inhabitants will then acquire Danish nationality, with certain exceptions. Provisions are made for individual change of nationality under certain conditions.

HELIGOLAND.

The fortifications, military establishments, and harbours of the Islands of Heligoland and Dune are to be destroyed, under the supervision of the Allies, by German labour and at Germany's expense. They are not to be reconstructed, nor are any similar works to be constructed in the future.

RUSSIA.

Germany is to recognise and respect the full independence of all the territories which formed part of the former Russian Empire. Germany is to accept definitely the annulment of the Brest-Litovsk Treaty and of all Treaties or Agreements of all kinds concluded by Germany since the Revolution of November, 1917, with all Governments or political groups on territory of the former Russian Empire.

The Allies reserve all rights on the part of Russia for restitution and satisfaction to be obtained from Germany on the principles of the present Treaty.

SECTION IV.

POLITICAL CLAUSES OUTSIDE EUROPE.

GERMAN RIGHTS OUTSIDE EUROPE.

Outside Europe Germany renounces all rights, titles, and privileges as to her own or her allies' territories to all the Allied and Associated Powers, and undertakes to accept whatever measures are taken by the five Allied Powers in relation thereto.

COLONIES AND OVERSEAS POSSESSIONS.

Germany renounces in favour of the Allied and Associated Powers her overseas possessions with all rights and titles therein. All movable and immovable property belonging to the German Empire or to any German State shall pass to the Government exercising authority therein. These Governments may make whatever provisions seem suitable for the repatriation of German nationals, and as to the conditions on which German subjects of European origin shall reside, hold property, or carry on business. Germany undertakes to pay reparation for damage suffered by French nationals in the Cameroons or its frontier zone through the acts of German civil and military authorities and of individual Germans from 1st January, 1900, to 1st August, 1914. Germany renounces all rights under the Covention of 4th November, 1911, and 28th September, 1912, and undertakes to pay to France in accordance with an estimate presented and approved by the Reparation Commission all deposits, credits advances, &c., thereby secured. Germany undertakes to accept and observe any provisions by the Allied and Associated Powers as to the trade in arms and spirits in Africa, as well as to the General Act of Berlin, 1885, and the General Act of Brussels of 1890. Diplomatic protection to the inhabitants of former German colonies is to be given by the Governments exercising authority.

CHINA.

Germany renounces in favour of China all privileges and indemnities resulting from the Boxer Protocol of 1901 and all buildings, wharves, barracks, forts, munitions of war, ships, wireless plants, and other public property, except diplomatic or consular establishments, in the German concessions of Tientsin and Hankow and in other Chinese territory except Kiao-Chow, and agrees to return to China at her own expense all the astronomical instruments seized in 1900 and 1901. China will, however, take no measures for disposal of German property in the Legation quarter at Pekin without the consent of the Powers signatory to the Boxer Protocol.

Germany accepts the abrogation of the concessions at Hankow and Tientsin, China aggreeing to open them to international use. Germany renounces all claims against China or any Allied and Associated Government for the internment or repatriation of her citizens in China, and for the seizure or liquidation of German interests there since 14th August, 1917. She renounces in favour of Great Britain her State property in the British concession at Canton, and of France and China jointly of the property of the German school in the French concession at Shanghai.

SIAM.

Germany recognises that all agreements between herself and Siam, including the right of extra-territoriality, ceased the 22nd July, 1917. All German public property except consular and diplomatic premises passes without compensation to Siam, German private property to be dealt with in accordance with the Economic clauses. Germany waives all claims against Siam for the seizure and condemnation of her ships, liquidation of her property, or internment of her nationals.

LIBERIA.

Germany renounces all rights under the international arrangements of 1911-1912 regarding Liberia, more particularly the right to nominate a receiver of the customs, and disinterests herself in any further negotiations for the rehabilitation of Liberia. She regards as abrogated all commercial treaties and agreements between herself and Liberia, and recognises Liberia's right to determine the status and condition of the re-establishment of Germans in Liberia.

MOROCCO.

Germany renounces all her rights, titles, and privileges under the Act of Algeciras and the Franco-German Agreements of 1909 and 1911, and under all Treaties and arrangements with the Sherifian Empire. She undertakes not to intervene in any negotiations as to Morocco between France and other Powers, accepts all the consequences of the French Protectorate there and renounces the capitulations. The Sherifian Government shall have complete liberty of action in regard to German nationals, and all German-protected persons shall be subject to the common law. All movable and immovable German property, mining rights, may be sold at public auction, the proceeds to be paid to the Sherifian Government and deducted from the reparation account. Germany is also required to relinquish her interests in the State Bank of Morocco. All Moroccan goods entering Germany shall have the same privilege as French goods.

EGYPT.

Germany recognises the British Protectorate over Egypt declared on the 18th December, 1914, and renounces as from the 4th August, 1914, the capitulations and all the Treaties, Agreements, &c., concluded by her with Egypt. She undertakes not to intervene in any negotiations about Egypt between Great Britain and other Powers. There are provisions for jurisdiction over German nationals and property, and for German consent to any changes which may be made in relation to the Commission of Public Debt. Germany consents to the transfer to Great Britain of the powers given to the late Sultan of Turkey for securing the free navigation of the Suez Canal. Arrangements for property belonging to German nationals in Egypt are made similar to those in the case of Morocco and other countries. Anglo-Egyptian goods entering Germany shall enjoy the same treatment as British goods.

TURKEY AND BULGARIA.

Germany accepts all arrangements which the Allied and Associated Powers make with Turkey and Bulgaria with reference to any rights, privileges, or interests claimed in those countries by Germany or her nationals and not dealt with elsewhere.

SHANTUNG.

Germany cedes to Japan all rights, titles, and privileges, notably as to Kia-Chow, and the railroads, mines, and cables acquired by her Treaty with China of the 6th March, 1898, and by other agreements as tho Shantung. All German rights to the railroad from Tsingtao to Tsinaufu, including all facilities and mining rights and rights of exploitation, pass equally to Japan, and the cables from Tsingtao to Shanghai and Chefoo, the cables free all charges. All German State property, movable, in Kiao-Chow is acquired by Japan free of all charges.

SECTION V.

MILITARY, NAVAL, AND AIR CLAUSES.

"In order to render possible the initiation of a general limitation of the armaments of all nations, Germany undertakes directly to observe the military, naval and air clauses which follow."

MILITARY.

The military terms provide for the demobilisation of the German Armies and the imposition of other military restrictions, within two months of the signing of the Treaty (as the first step towards international disarmament). All compulsory military service is to be abolished in German territory, and recruiting regulations on a voluntary basis are to be incorporated into the German military laws, providing for the enlistment of non-commissioned officers and men for a period of not less than twelve consecutive years, and stipulating that officers shall serve for twenty-five years, and shall not be retired until the age of forty-five. No reserve of officers with war service will be permitted. The total number of German effectives is fixed at one hundred thousand, including not more than four thousand officers, and it is provided that there shall be no other military forces raised outside this figure. Increase in the number of customs, forestry officials or police, or the military training of these services, is specially prohibited.

The function of the German Army is to keep internal order and control of frontiers. The High Command is to confine itself to administrative duties, and it will not be allowed to retain a General Staff. Civilian personnel at the Ministry of War and similar institutions is to be reduced to one-tenth of that in 1913. There will be not more than seven Infantry and three Cavalry Divisions, and not more than two Corps Staffs. Surplus war academies and schools for officers, cadets, &c., are to be suppressed, and the number of students admitted to the schools retained for the recruitment of officers is to be limited to the vacancies occurring in the establishments provided. The production of armaments, munitions and material of war in Germany is limited to a schedule, based on the amount considered necessary for an army on the scale decided upon. No reserves may be formed, and all existing armaments, guns and stores above the limit fixed must be handed over to the Allies for disposal. No poisonous gas or liquid fire shall be manufactured or imported, nor any tanks nor armoured cars. The Germans are obliged to notify to the Allies for approval the names and situation of all factories manufacturing munitions, together with particulars of their output. Munitions for use in fortified works will be limited to 1,500 rounds apiece for guns of 10.5 cm. calibre and under, and 500 rounds for guns of a higher calibre. Germany is prohibited from manufacturing armaments and munitions for foreign countries, and from importing them from abroad. Germany must not maintain or construct any fortifications situated on German territory less than 50 kilometres east of the Rhine, and in the above area no armed forces either permanent or temporary may be maintained. The status quo is to be reserved in respect of the fortifications on original southern and eastern frontiers of the German Empire. No military manoeuvres may be held nor any permanent works kept for the purposes of helping mobilisation. The demobilisation of fortifications must take place within three months.

NAVAL.

The Naval terms provide that within two months the German naval forces in commission must not exceed six battleships of the "Deutschland" or "Lothringen" type, six light cruisers, twelve destroyers, and twelve torpedo boats, or an equal number of ships constructed to replace them. No submarines are to be included, and all other warships are to be placed in reserve or devoted to commercial purposes. Germany may keep in commission a fixed number of mine-sweeping vessels until the mines within certain specified areas in the North Sea and Baltic have been swept up. After the expiration of two months the total exclusive personnel of the navy must not exceed 15 000, including a maximum of 1,500 officers and warrant officers. All German surface warships interned in Allied or neutral ports are to be finally surrendered. Within two months certain additional warships enumerated in the Treaty and now in German ports will be surrendered at Allied ports. The German Government must undertake the breaking up of all German surface warships under construction. Auxiliary cruisers, &c., are to be disarmed and treated as merchant ships. Within one month all German submarines, salvage vessels, and docks for submarines capable of proceeding under their own power or of being towed must have been handed over at Allied ports.

The remainder and those under construction must be broken up by Germany within three months.

Material arsing from the breaking up of German warships may not be used except for industrial purposes, and may not be sold to foreign countries. Except under specified conditions for replacement, Germany is forbidden to construct or acquire any warships, and the construction or acquisition of any submarines whatever is prohibited. Vessels of war are only to have a fixed allowance of arms, munitions, and war material. All excess of arms, munitions, and war material is to be surrendered, and no stocks or reserves are allowed.

The personnel of the German navy must be recruited entirely by voluntary engagements for a minimum period of twenty-five consecutive years for officers and warrant officers, and twelve consecutive years for petty officers and men, under various restrictions.

In order to ensure free passage into the Baltic, Germany is not to erect any fortifications in certain specified areas, nor to instal any guns commanding maritime routes between the North Sea and the Baltic. Existing fortifications within those areas are to be demolished and guns removed. Other fortified works within 50 kilometres of the German coast or on German islands are to remain, as being of a defensive nature, but no new fortifications may be constructed and the armaments may not be increased. The maximum stocks of ammunition allowed for such defences are 1,500 rounds per piece for 4.1 inch guns and under, and 500 rounds per piece for guns exceeding that calibre.

The German wireless stations at Nauen, Hanover and Berlin are not to be used for naval, military or political messages without the assent of the Allied and Associated Governments during three months, but only for commercial purposes, under supervision. During the same period Germany is not to build any more high-power wireless stations.

Germany will be allowed to repair German submarine cables which have been cut, but are not being utilised by the Allied Powers, and also portions of cables which, after having been cut, have been removed, or are at any rate not being utilised by any one of the Allied and Associated Powers. In such cases the cables, or portions of cables, removed or utilised remain the property of the Allied and Associated Powers, and accordingly fourteen cables or parts of cables are specified which will not be restored to Germany.

AIR.

The Air clauses provide that the armed forces of Germany must not include any military or naval air forces. Germany is, however, to be allowed to maintain a maximum of 100 unarmed seaplanes up to the 1st October 1919, to be exclusively employed in searching for submarine mines. The entire personnel of the air forces in Germany is to be demobilised within two months, except for a total of 1,000 men, including officers, which may be retained up to October.

The aircraft of the Allied and Associated Powers are to enjoy full liberty of passage and landing over and in the territory and territorial waters of Germany until the 1st January, 1923, unless prior to that date Germany is admitted to the League of Nations or is permitted to adhere to the International Air Convention.

The manufacture of aircraft and parts of aircraft is forbidden throughout Germany for six months.

All military and naval aircraft (including dirigibles) and aeronautical material are to be delivered to the Allied and Associated Governments within three months, except for the 100 seaplanes already specified.

GENERAL.

General Articles provide for the modification of German laws in conformity with the preceding clauses.

All the clauses contained in the Treaty are to be executed by Germany under the control of Inter-Allied Commissions, to be specially appointed by the Allied and Associated Governments, for which the German Government is bound to furnish all necessary facilities and expenses of upkeep. The duties of the Military, Naval, and Aeronautical Commissions of Control are laid down in detail.

SECTION VI.

PRISONERS OF WAR.

The repatriation of German prisoners and interned civilians is to be carried out by a Commission composed of representatives of the Allies and the German Government, together with local sub-commissions. German prisoners of war and interned civilians are to be returned without delay by the German authorities at their own cost. Those under sentence for offences against discipline committed before the 1st May, 1919, are to be repatriated without regard to the completion of their sentence, but this does not apply in the case of offences other than those against discipline. The Allies have the right to deal at their own discretion with German nationals who do not desire to be repatriated, and all repatriation is conditional on the immediate release of any Allied subjects still in Germany. The German Government is to accord facilities to Commissions of Enquiry in collecting information in regard to missing prisoners of war, and in imposing penalties on German officials who have concealed Allied nationals. The German Government is to restore all property belonging to Allied prisoners, and there is to be a reciprocal exchange of information as to dead prisoners and their graves.

GRAVES.

The Allies and the German Government are to respect and maintain the graves of all soldiers and sailors buried in their territories and to recognise and assist any Commissions appointed by the Allies in connection with them, agreeing also to give any practicable facilities for removal and reburial.

SECTION VII.

RESPONSIBILITIES FOR THE CRIMES OF THE WAR.

The Allies publicly arraign the ex-Emperor William II. "for a supreme offence against International Morality and the Sanctity of Treaties."

The ex-Emperor's surrender is to be asked for from the Dutch Government, and a special Tribunal is to be set up, consisting of one judge from each of the five Great Powers. The Tribunal is to be guided by the highest principles of international policy, and is to have the duty of fixing whatever punishment it thinks should be imposed. Military Tribunals are to be set up by the Allies to try persons accused of acts of violation of the laws and customs of war, and the German Government is to hand over all persons so accused. Similar Tribunals are to be set up by any particular Allied Power against whose nationals criminal acts have been committed. The accusud are to be entitled to name their own counsel, and the German Government is to undertake to furnish all documents and information the production of which may be necessary.

SECTION VIII.

REPARATION AND RESTITUTION.

"The Allied and Associated Governments affirm, and Germany accepts the responsibility of herself and her Allies for causing all the loss and damage to which the Allied and Associated Governments and their nationals have been subjected as a consequence of the war imposed upon them by the aggression of Germany and her Allies."

While the Allies and Associated Governments recognise that the resources of Germany are not adequate after taking into account permanent diminuations of such resources which will result from other Treaty claims to make complete reparation for all such loss and damage they require her to make compensation for all damages caused to civilians under seven main categories: —

(a.) Damage by personal injury to civilians caused by acts of war, directly or indirectly, and including bombardments from the air.

(b.) Damage caused to civilians, including exposure at sea resulting from acts of cruelty ordered by the enemy, and to civilians in the occupied territories.

(c.) Damages caused by maltreatment of prisoners.

(d.) Damages to the Allied peoples represented by pensions and separation allowances, capitalised at the signature of this Treaty.

(e.) Damages to property other than naval or military materials.

(f.) Damage to civilians by being forced to labour.

(g.) Damages in the form of levies or fines imposed by the enemy.

(h.) Germany further binds herself to repay all sums borrowed by Belgium from the Allies as a result of Germany's violation of the Treaty of 1839 up to November 11th 1918 and for this purpose will issue at once and hand over to the Reparation Commission Five per cent Gold Bonds falling due in 1926.

The total obligation of Germany to pay, as defined in the category of damages, is to be determined and notified to her after a fair hearing and not later than 1st May, 1921, by an Inter-Allied Reparation Commission. At the same time a schedule of payments to discharge the obligation within thirty years shall be presented. These payments are subject to postponement in certain contingencies. Germany irrevocably recognises the full authority of this Commission, agrees to supply it with all the necessary information and to pass legislation to effectuate its findings. She further agrees to restore to the Allies cash and certain articles which can be indentified.

As an immediate step towards restoration Germany shall pay within two years one thousand million pounds sterling in either gold, goods, ships or other specific forms of payment, this sum being included in, and not additional to, first thousand million bond issue referred to below, with the understanding that certain expenses, such as those of the armies of occupation and payments for food and raw materials, may be deducted at the discretion of the Allies.

"In periodically estimating Germany's capacity to pay, the Reparation Commission shall examine the German system of taxation, first, to the end that the sums for reparation which Germany is required to pay shall become a charge upon all her revenues, prior to that for the service or discharge of any domestic loan, and, secondly, so as to satisfy itself that in general the German scheme of taxation is fully as heavy proportionately as that of any of the Powers represented on the Commission."

"The measures which the Allied and Associated Powers shall have the right to take, in case of voluntary default by Germany, and which Germany agrees not to regard as acts of war, may include economic and financial prohibitions and reprisals, and in general such other measures as the respective Governments may determine to be necessary in the circumstances."

The Commission shall consist of one representative each of the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy and Belgium, a representative of Serbia or Japan taking the place of a Belgian representative when the interests of either country are particularly affected, with all other Allied Powers entitled, when their claims are under consideration, to the right of representation without voting power. It shall permit Germany to give evidence regarding her capacity to pay, and shall assure her a just opportunity to be heard. It shall make its head-quarters at Paris; establish its own procedure and personnel; assume general control of the whole reparation problem; and become the exclusive agency of the Allies for receiving, holding; selling, and distributing reparation payments. Majority vote shall prevail except that unanimity is required on questions involving the sovereignty of any of the Allies, the cancellation of all or part of Germany's obligations, the time and manner of selling, distributing, and negotiating bonds issued by Germany, any postponement between 1921 and 1926 of annual payments beyond 1930, and any postponement after 1926 for a period of more than three years, the application of a different method of measuring damage than in a similar former case, and the interpretation of provisions. Withdrawal from representation on the Commission is permitted upon twelve months' notice.

The Commission may require Germany to give from time to time, by way of guaranty, issues of bonds or other obligations to cover such claims as are not otherwise satisfied. In this connection and on account of the total amount of claims, bond issues are presently to by required of Germany in acknowledgment of its debt as follows:

One thousand million pounds sterling not later than the 1st May, 1921, without interest: two thousand million pounds sterling bearing 2½ per cent interest between 1921 and 1926 and thereafter 5 per cent with a 1 per cent sinking fund payment beginning in 1926, and an undertaking to deliver Bonds to an additional amount of twenty thousand million pounds sterling bearing interest at 5 per cent under terms to be fixed by the Commission.

Interest on Germany's debt will be 5 per cent. unless otherwise determined by the Commission in the future, and payments that are not made in gold may "be accepted by the Commission in the form of properties, commodities, businesses, rights, concessions, &c." Certificates of beneficial interest, representing either bonds or goods delivered by Germany, may be issued by the Commission to the interested Power, no Power being entitled, however, to have its certificates divided into more than five pieces. As bonds are distributed and pass from the control of the Commission, and amount of Germany's debt equivalent to their par value is to be considered as liquidated.

SHIPPING.

The German Government recognises the right of the Allies to the replacement, ton for ton and class for class, of all merchant ships and fishing-boats lost or damaged owing to the war, and agrees to cede to the Allies all German merchant ships of 1,600 tons gross and upwards, one-half of her ships between 1,600 and 1,000 tons gross, and one-quarter of her steam trawlers and other fishing-boats. These ships are to be delivered within two months to the Reparation Commission, together with documents of title evidencing the transfer of the ships from encumbrance.

"As an additional part of reparation," the German Government further agrees to build merchant ships for the account of the Allies to the amount of not exceeding 200,000 tons gross annually during the next five years.

All ships used for inland navigation taken by Germany from the Allies are to be restored within two months, the amount of loss not covered by such restitution to be made up by the cession of the German river fleet up to 20 per cent. thereof.

DEVASTED AREAS.

Germany undertakes to devote her economic resources directly to the physical restoration of the invaded areas. The Reparation Commission is authorised to require Germany to replace the destroyed articles by the delivery of animals, machinery, &c., existing in Germany, and to manufacture materials required for reconstruction purposes—all with due consideration for Germany's essential domestic requirements.

COAL ETC.

Germany is to deliver annually for ten years to France coal equivalent to the difference between annual pre-war output of Nord and Pas de Calais mines and annual production during above ten years. Germany further gives options over ten years for delivery of seven million tons coal per year to France in addition to the above of eight million tons to Belgium and of an amount rising from four and a half million tons in 1919 to 1920 to eight and a half million tons in 1923 to 1924 to Italy at prices to be fixed as prescribed in the treaty. Coke may be taken in place of coal in ratio of three tons to four. Provision is also made for delivery to France over three years of benzol coal-tar and sulphate of ammonia. The Commission has powers to postpone or annul the above deliveries should they interfere unduly with industrial requirements of Germany.

DYESTUFFS AND CHEMICAL DRUGS.

Germany accords option to the Commission on dyestuffs and chemical drugs including quinine up to fifty per cent of total stock in Germany at the time the treaty comes into force and similar option during each six months to end of 1924 up to twenty-five per cent of previous six months output.

CABLES.

Germany renounces all title to specified cables, value of such as were privately owned being credited to her against reparation indebtedness.

SPECIAL PROVISIONS.

As reparation for the destruction of the library of Louvain Germany is to hand over manuscripts, early printed books, prints, etc. to the equivalent of those destroyed.

In addition to the above Germany is to hand over to Belgium wings now at Berlin belonging to the altar-piece of the Adoration of the Lamb by Hubert and Jan Van Eyck the centre of which is now in the church of St Bave at Ghent; and the wings now at Berlin and Munich of the altarpiece of the Last Supper by Dirk Bouts, the centre of which belongs to the Church of Saint Peter at Louvain.

Germany is to restore within six months the Koran of the Caliph Othman, formerly at Medina, to the King of the Hedjaz, and the skull of the Sultan Mkwawa, formerly in German East Africa, to His Britannic Majesty's Government.

The German Government is also to restore to the French Government certain papers taken by the German authorities in 1870, belonging then to M. Rouher, and to restore the French flags taken during the war of 1870—71.

SECTION IX.

FINANCE.

Powers to which German territory is ceded will assume a certain portion of the German pre-war debt, the amount to be fixed by the Reparation Commission on the basis of the ratio between the revenues of the ceded territory and Germany's total revenues for the three years preceding the war. In view, however, of the special circumstances under which Alsace-Lorraine was separated from France in 1871, when Germany refused to accept any part of the French public debt, France will not assume any part of Germany's pre-war debt, nor will Poland share in certain German debts incurred for the oppression of Poland. The value of German Government property in ceded territory will in general be credited to Germany on account of Reparation, but no credit will be given for any German Government property in Alsace-Lorraine. Mandatory Powers will not assume any German debts or give any credits for German Government property. Germany renounces all right of representation on, or control of, State banks, Commissions, or other similar international financial and economic organisations.

Germany is required to pay the total cost of the Armies of Occupation from the date of the Armistice as long as they are maintained in German territory, and this cost is to be a first charge on her resources. The cost of Reparation is the next charge, after making such provision for payments for imports as the Allies may deem necessary.

Germany is to deliver to the Allied Powers all sums deposited in Germany by Turkey and Austria-Hungary in connection with the financial support extended by her to them during the war, and to transfer to the Allies all claims against Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria or Turkey in connection with agreements made during the war. Germany confirms the renunciation of the Treaties of Bucharest and Brest-Litovsk.

On the request of the Reparation Commission, Germany will expropriate any rights or interests of her nationals in public utilities in ceded territories or those administered by mandatories, and in Turkey, China, Russia, Austria-Hungary and Bulgaria, and transfer them to the Reparation Commission, which will credit her with their value. Germany guarantees to repay to Brazil the fund arising from the sale of Sao Paulo coffee which she refused to allow Brazil to withdraw from Germany.

SECTION X.

ECONOMIC CLAUSES.

CUSTOMS.

The Treaty contains detailed provisions for securing that Germany shall not discriminate, directly or indirectly, against the trade of Allied and Associated countries.

These provisions will remain in force for five years, unless extended by the Council of the League of Nations. Temporary provision is made for the free entrance into Germany, up to a limited amount, of products of Alsace-Lorraine, Luxemburg and German territory ceded to Poland. The German import tariff applicable at the outset to Allied goods will not exceed the lowest rates of 1914. After six months Germany will be free to raise her tariff, so long as it is impartially applied to all the Allies, except as regards a few specified articles, mainly agricultural products, with regard to which the restriction will extend for a further period of two-and-a-half years. Power is reserved in case of necessity to impose a special Customs régime in the occupied areas.

SHIPPING.

Vessels of the Allies are to enjoy both national and most-favoured-nation treatment in Germany for at least five years, and this provision will continue thereafter on condition of reciprocity, unless revised by the Council of the League of Nations.

As regards fishing, coasting trade, and towage, most-favoured-nation treatment is to be accorded for the same period as for Customs matters.

Provision is made for the recognition by Germany of ships' certificates, and of the places of registry of ships belonging to States without a seaboard.

UNFAIR COMPETITION.

Germany undertakes to protect the trade of the Allies against unfair competition, and, in particular, to suppress the use of false markings and indications of origin, and, on condition of reciprocity, to respect the laws and judicial decisions of Allied and Associated States in respect of regional appellations of wines and spirits.

TREATMENT OF NATIONALS.

Germany is not to impose on the nationals of the Allied States or their property any restrictions which were not in force before the war or any taxes, unless those restrictions and taxes are applied to her own nationals. She is also prevented from imposing restrictions in regard to the exercise of occupations which are not applicable to all foreigners. These provisions are to be in force for a period of five years, and, if a majority of the Council of the League of Nations so decides, for an additional period not exceeding five years. German nationality shall not continue to attach to a person who has become a national of an Allied or Associated State.

MULTILATERAL CONVENTIONS.

Some forty multilateral Conventions are renewed between Germany and the Allies parties thereto, but special conditions are attached to Germany's readmission to several. For example, as to postal and telegraphic Conventions, Germany must not refuse her consent to special arrangements concluded by the new States. She must agree as respects the Radiotelegraphic Convention to fulfil the provisional rules to be communicated to her and adhere to a new Convention when formulated; under the North Sea Fisheries and North Sea Liquor Traffic Conventions, rights of inspection and police over Allied fishing-boats are, for at least five years, to be exercised only by vessels of Allied Powers. Germany loses special rights granted her under Article 3 of the Samoa Treaty of 1899 and other Treaties, and in particular is to renounce her right to the Boxer indemnities subsequent to China's entry into the war.

BILATERAL TREATIES.

Each Allied State may, if it desires, renew any of its treaties with Germany, in so far as consistent with the Peace Treaty, by giving notice within six months. Treaties entered into by Germany since the 1st August, 1914, with other enemy States, and before or since then with Rumania, Russia, or Governments representing parts of former Russian territory, are abrogated, and concessions granted under pressure to German nationals annulled. The Allies are to enjoy the privileges conferred under treaties entered into by Germany with other enemy States before the 1st August, 1914, and under treaties entered into by Germany with neutral States during the war.

PRE-WAR DEBTS.

Clearing Offices are to be established within three months in Germany and in each Allied or Associated State which adopts the plan, and the settlement of pre-war debts and other specified pecuniary obligations will take place through these offices, direct settlement being prohibited. The adjustment of the proceeds of the liquidation of enemy property will also be made through these offices. Each participating State is to take responsibility for obligations of the kinds referred to on the part of its nationals towards nationals of the opposing States, except in cases where at the outbreak of war the debtor was insolvent. Claims are to be discussed between the Clearing Offices of the two countries concerned, and failing agreement are to be submitted to arbitration or the Mixed Arbitral Tribunal referred to below. The sums due to the nationals of each country are to be paid by the Clearing Office in that country and the sums owing by such nationals are to be debited to it. Debts are to be paid in the currency of the Allied country concerned, and the rate of exchange to be adopted, failing specific provision in the contract, is to be the average cable transfer rate prevailing in that country during the month immediately preceding the outbreak of war between the country in question and Germany. It is optional with any Allied Power to participate in the above system.

ENEMY PROPERTY.

The action of liquidation, control, &c., taken in the Allied countries and in Germany in regard to enemy property and businesses under exceptional war measures is confirmed, subject to compensation in respect of loss to the property, &c. of Allied nationals, to be determined by the Mixed Arbitral Tribunal and charged upon the property of German nationals which is under the control of the Claimant's State. Any compensation due to her own nationals is to be paid by Germany.

All action of liquidation, control, &c., in Germany is to be stayed, and the Allied property, if not completely liquidated, is to be restored. Nationals of countries which did not make any general liquidation of German property may require the restoration, if possible, of their actual property by the German Government, in whosever hands it may now be. Stipulations are included for the protection of returned property and businesses in Germany in the future.

The Allies reserve the right to retain and liquidate all German property within their territory. The net proceeds of sales of such property, both during and after the war, are to be credited to Germany, and to be applied by each State to the satisfaction of claims by its nationals with regard to their property in Germany or debts owing to them by Germans.

CONTRACTS.

Pre-war contracts between Allied nationals and German nationals are in general cancelled as from the date at which the parties became enemies. Exception is made in the case of agreements for the transfer of real or personal property, where the property therein had already passed, leases of land and houses, contracts of mortgage, pledge or lien, mining concessions, contracts with Governments and public bodies, and insurance contracts. In regard to the last-namd class of contracts, detailed provision is made, as indicated below.

Powers are reserved for the maintenance of contracts, the execution of which is regarded by an Allied State as in the general interest, subject, if necessary, to the payment of equitable compensation to be fixed by the Mixed Arbitral Tribunal.

Having regard to constitutional difficulties in the case of United States of America, Brazil, and Japan, these countries are excepted from the provisions relating to pre-war contracts.

Fire insurance contracts are not considered dissolved by the war, even if premiums have not been paid, but lapse at the date of the first annual premium falling due three months after the Peace. Life insurance contracts are not dissolved merely by reason of the war, but where they have lapsed the surrender value may be claimed, or if the lapse was due to payment of premiums being prevented by the conforcement of measures of war the contract may be restored on payment of premiums with interest. Marine insurance contracts are dissolved by the outbreak of war, except where the risk had already attached. Where the same risk was again insured against, after war had begun, the new policy is to be considered as substituted for the old. Where the risk had not attached at the outbreak of war, premiums paid are recoverable. The insurance treaties are abrogated unless invasion has made it impossible for the re-insured to find another re-insurer. Any Allied or Associated Power, however, may cancel all the life insurance contracts running between its nationals and a German insurance or re-insurance company, the latter being obliged to hand ovec the proportion of its assets attributable to such policies.

A Mixed Arbitral Triaunal is to be established between each of the Allies and Germany, consisting of one Member appointed by each of the two Governments, and a President to be chosen, failing agreement, by the Council of the League of Nations, or until this is set up, by the present President of the Swiss Federal Council. This Tribunal is to decide all disputes relating to contracts made before the date of the Treaty of Peace between nationals of the Allied States and German nationals, so far as they do not fall within the jurisdiction of Allied or Associated or Neutral Courts.

INDUSTRIAL PROPERTY.

Rights in industrial literary and artistic property are re-established, but subject, in the case of German-owned rights, to the effect of the special war measures of the Allies, the right of imposing on German patents and copyrights conditions in the public interest or to secure the fulfilment of Germany's obligations is reserved. Extensions of time are given for the accomplishment of formalities, for the working of patents, and for securing rights under the international conventions. Except as between the United States of America and Germany, pre-war licenses are cancelled, subject to the right of the old licensee to demand a new licence on terms to be specially settled; and except as between the same countries the right to sue for infringement committed during the war is not recognised.

OPIUM.

The High Contracting Powers who have not signed or ratified the Opium Convention of 1912 agree to bring it into force.

SECTION XI.

AERIAL NAVIGATION

Aircraft of the Allied and Associated Powers shall have full liberty of passage and landing over and in German territory, equal treatment with German planes as to use of German airdromes, and with most-favoured-nation planes as to international commercial traffic in Germany. Germany agrees to accept Allied certificates of nationality, airworthiness, or competency and licences, and to apply the convention relative to Aerial Navigation concluded between the Allied and Associated Powers to her own aircraft over her own territory. These rules apply until 1923 unless Germany has since been admitted to the League of Nations or to the above Convention.

SECTION XII.

PORTS, WATERWAYS AND RAILWAYS.

Germany is required to grant freedom of transit and full national treatment to persons, goods, vessels, rolling stock, &c., coming from or going to any Allied or Associated State and passing in transit through German territories. Goods in transit are to be free of Customs duties. Rates of transport are to be reasonable and no charges or facilities are to depend directly or indirectly on the flag of the vessel. Provisions are made against discrimination by control of transmigrant traffic; and all kinds of indirect discrimination are prohibited.

International transport is to be expedited, particularly for perishable goods. There is to be no discrimination in transport charges and facilities against Allied ports.

Free zones in German ports are to be maintained, and adequate facilities are to be provided for trade requirements without distinction of nationality. Only certain limited charges are permissible in Free Ports.

The Elbe, from the junction of the Vltava (Moldau) and the Vltava below Prague; the Oder, from its confluence with the Oppa; the Niemen, below Grodno; and the Danube, below Ulm, are declared international, together with the portions of their affluents. Nationals, property and flags of all States are to be treated on a footing of perfect equality with subjects, &c., of the riparian States, and various conditions are imposed to ensure facilities and reasonable charges and the maintenance of navigation, under the supervision of the League of Nations, and of International Commissions. These are to meet in the near future to prepare projects for the revision of the existing agreements, which are temporarily to remain in force.

Germany is to hand over within three months from notification a proportion of its river shipping, tugs and material.

In the case of the Danube, the former Commission is to resume its pre-war powers, but only Great Britain, France, Italy, and Roumania are to be represented on it. From the point where the competence of the Commission ceases, an International Commission is to be appointed to administer the whole Upper Danube, until a definitive Statute is arrived at.

PORTS, WATERWAYS, AND RAILWAYS.

Provision is also made for a deep-draught Rhine—Danube Canal, should it be decided to construct it within twenty-five years.

The Rhine and Moselle form the subject of a special series of clauses. The Convention of 1868 is in general to remain in force, with important modifications: the expanded Central Commission is to sit at Strasbourg, France to name the President. As Holland is a party to this Convention, the modifications are subject to her assent.

Within three months, Germany is to hand over to France a proportion of tugs and river shipping from the Rhine harbours, or shares in German navigation companies. A proportion of buildings, tugs, &c., owned by Germans in Rotterdam harbour on the 1st August, 1914, or shares in such concerns, is similarly to be handed over.

France is to have full rights all along her own frontier to use water from the Rhine for canals, &c., and to carry out works for deriving motive power, subject to certain payments and to the consent of the Commission.

Germany is to undertake to make no canals on the right bank opposite the French frontier, and to grant France certain privileges on the right bank for the establishment of certain engineering works, subject to the payment of compensation. Switzerland is also entitled to demand similar rights for the upper part of the river.

If within 25 years Belgium decides to constructed a Rhine-Meuse Canal, the German Government is bound to construct such parts of it as fall within German territory, according to plans drawn up by the Belgian Government, expenses to be divided among the various States.

Germany is to make no objection to the Commission extending its jurisdiction if desired to the Lower Moselle (with the consent of the Luxembourg Government), to the Upper Rhine (with the consent of the Swiss Government), and to the lateral canals and waterways which may be constructed to improve navigation.

The German Government is to lease to the Tchecho-Slovak Republic, for 99 years, areas in the harbours of Hamburg and Stettin as free zones.

RAILWAYS.

The Railway Clauses provide that goods consigned from or to Allied States to or from Germany, or in transit through Germany, are entitled generally to the most favourable conditions available.

Certain railway tariff questions are dealt with.

When a new Railway Convention has replaced the Berne Convention of 1890, it will be binding on Germany; in the meantime she is to follow the Berne Convention.

Germany is to co-operate in the establishment of passenger and luggage services with direct booking between Allied States over her territory, under favourable conditions, as well as emigrant train services.

Germany is to fit her rolling stock with apparatus allowing of its being incorporated in Allied goods trains, and vice versâ, without interfering with the brake system. Provision is made for the handing over of the installations of lines in transferred territory, and of an equitable proportion of rolling stock for use therein. Commissions are to settle the working of lines linking up two parts of one country and crossing another, or branch lines passing from one country to another.

In the absence of particular agreements Germany is to allow such lines to be built or improved as may be necessary to ensure good services between one Allied State and another, if called upon to do so within 25 years with the concurrence of the League of Nations, the Allied States concerned paying the cost.

Germany is to agree, at the request of the Swiss and Italian Governments, to the denunciation of the 1909 Convention as to the St. Gothard route.

As a temporary arrangement, Germany is to execute instructions given in the name of the Allies as to transport of troops, material, munitions, &c., transport for revictualling of certain regions, and re-establishment of normal transport, postal and telegraphic services.

Finally, Germany is to agree to subscribe to any General Conventions regarding the international régime of transit, waterways, ports, or railways which may be concluded by the Allies (with the approval of the League of Nations) within five years.

Differences are to be settled by the League of Nations. Cretain specified articles, e. g., those providing for equal treatment in matters of transit and transport, are subject to revision by the League of Nations after five years. Failing revision, they will only continue in force in relation to any Allied State which grants reciprocal treatment.

THE KIEL CANAL.

The Kiel Canal is to remain free and open to ships of war and merchant shipping of all nations at peace with Germany. Subjects, goods, and ships of all States are to be treated on terms of equality in the use of the Canal, and charges are to be limited to those necessary for the upkeep and improvement of the Canal, for which Germany is to be responsible. In cases of violation of these provisions or disagreements as to them, States concerned may appeal to the jurisdiction established by the League of Nations, and may demand the appointment of an International Commission.

SECTION XIII.

THE LABOUR CONVENTION.

1. An International Conference is to be held annually, to propose Labour reforms for adoption by States composing the League of Nations.
2. There is to be a governing body to act as executive and to prepare the Agenda for the Conference, and an International Labour Office for the collection and distribution of information and reports. The head of this office will be responsible to the governing body.
3. The Annual Conference will consist of four representatives from each State, two for the State and one each for employers and employed. Each Delegate may vote independently. The Conference will have power to adopt by a two-third majority recommendations or draft conventions on Labour matters. Recommendations or draft conventions so adopted must be brought by each State before the authority or authorities within whose competence the matter lies for the enactment for legislation or other action. If a draft convention receives the approval of the competent authority, the State in question is under obligation to ratify it and to carry it into effect. Should any State fail to observe the above obligations, it will be open to the governing body to appoint a Commission of Inquiry, as a result of whose findings the League of Nations may take economic measures against the offending State.
4. Special provision is made to prevent any conflict with the constitution of the United States or other Federal States.
5. To meet the case of countries where climate, imperfect industrial development, or other special circumstances render labour conditions substantially different from those obtaining elsewhere, the Conference must take the difference into account in framing any Convention a protocol altrached to the convention provides that the first meeting shall be at Washington in the present year, and sets up an International Organising Committee for that purpose. The protocol also contains the agenda for the first meeting, which include the principle of the eight-hours day, the question of unemployment, and of the employment of women and children, especially in dangerous trades.

Appended to the section containing the Labour Convention is an affirmation by the High Contracting Parties of the methods and principles for regulating labour conditions, which all industrial communities should endeavour to apply so far as their special circumstances permit. Amongst these are that labour should not be regarded merely as a commodity or article of commerce; the right of association for all lawful purposes for the employer as well for the employed; the payment to the employed of a wage implying a reasonable standard of life, as understood in their time and country. The adoption of an eight-hours day or a forty-eight hours week where it has not already been attained; the adoption of a weekly rest of at least twenty-four hours, including Sunday where practicable. The abolition of child labour and the limitation of the labour of the young, so as to permit the continuance of their education and proper physical development. The principle of equal pay for men and women for equal work. Any legal standard for conditions of labour to have regard in each country to the equitable economic treatment of all workers resident therein. The provision by each State of a system of inspection for the protection of the employed, in which women should take part.

SECTION XIV.

GUARANTEES.

WESTERN EUROPE.

As a guarantee for the execution of the Treaty, German territory to the West of the Rhine, together with the bridgeheads, will be occupied by Allied and Associated troops for fifteen years. If the conditions are faithfully carried out by Germany, certain districts, including the bridgehead of Cologne, will be evacuated at the expiration of five years; certain other districts, including the bridgehead of Coblenz, will be evacuated after ten years, and the remainder, including the bridgehead of Mainz, will be evacuated after fifteen years. In case the Inter-Allied Reparation Committee finds that Germany has failed to observe the whole or part of her obligations, either during the occupation or after the fifteen years have expired, the whole or part of the areas specified will be reoccupied immediately. If before the expiration of the fifteen years Germany complies with all the undertakings resulting from the present Treaty, the occupying forces will be withdrawn immediately.

EASTERN EUROPE.

Similary, all German troops at present in the territories to the east of the new frontier shall return as soon as the Allies think the moment suitable. They are to abstain from all requisitions, &c., and are in no way to interfere with such measures for national defence as may be adopted by the provisional Governments concerned.

SECTION XV.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Germany agrees to recognise the full validity of the Treaties of Peace and additional conventions to be concluded by the Allied and Associated Powers with the Powers allied with Germany, to agree to the decisions to be taken as to the territories of Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria, and Turkey, and to recognise the new States in the frontiers to be fixed for them.

The High Contracting Parties note the Treaty of July, 1918, between France and the Principality of Monaco.

They agree that chairmen of Commissions shall under certain circumstances have a casting vote.

The work of religious missions maintained by German Societies in territory transferred to or belonging to the Allied or Associated Powers is to be continued under trustees appointed by those Powers.

In a Barrer Clause, Germany undertakes not to put forward any pecuniary claim against any Allied Power signing the present Treaty, based on events previous to the coming into force of the Treaty.

Germany accepts all decrees, &c., as to German ships and goods made by any Allied Prize Court, and the Allies reserve the right to examine all decisions of German Prize Courts.

The present Treaty, of which the French and English texts are both authentic, shall be ratified, and the deposit of ratification made in Paris, as soon as possible. Various diplomatic provisions as to ratification follow. The Treaty is to enter into force in all respects for each Power on the date of deposit of its ratification.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE CHAPLAIN.

Dear Padre,

We hear a lot from the pulpit, we want you to hear a bit from the pew. We criticise everybody from the C.O. downwards, and you come in for your full share off it.

You're not a bad sort, but we sometimes wonder if you understand us, and whether you realise that we want to know more about religion than you ladle out to us Sunday by Sunday. We're not theologians and at the same time we're not fools. We don't kid ouselves that we're atheists and imagine that this wonderful world in which we live was the result of some freak or chance. And it is woederful!

We don't see much of the beauty of nature when we are taking a little exercise in the form of a route march and the road is long and dusty and has no 'pub' in it, but in the evening, sometimes, we have our think and, well — it wants explaining.

We've got sense enough to realise that a universe created and controlled must have some master mind behind it, and that men haven't given their lives in times past for something that's nothing at all. We know that a faith that's lasted and grown for nigh on two thousand years must have something mighty good in it and, Padre, we want to know the truth.

Give us a pure untarnished religion that we can believe in and hold fast to.

Give us the religion of the "Man who went about doing good," untrammeled by ecclesiastical additions.

Give us a practical living faith that will make us better men, and the world a better place in which to live.

And we don't forget that there are such things as different denominations, but we can't quite understand how that came about. Men have their own opinions on every subject, and so different people worship God in different ways. But it's all the same religion, and we'd like to see a stronger unity in the spirit of the cause. Padre, we'd like to remind you that neither the Maker of the universe nor the Nazarene was narrow-minded.

They say that the Church has failed to grapple with the problems brought about by the war, and so it has. But that isn't the fault of the religion, it's the fault of those who've had the handling of it.

We know you can't feed us on heavy theology any more than you can feed a baby on beefsteak, but prove to us what you can, show us that it's plausible, and then we can believe and enjoy the experience that you talk about.

We want to believe! We want to think that our pals who went down beside us are better off than we are, and we want to look forward to something more than six feet of earth ourselves.

And Padre, its your chance of a lifetime.

We have got to come and hear you now, but when that happy day arrives and we get our "ticket," it will be a matter of choice.

If you want to keep us then, get us now.

Padre, you're not a bad sort, but do your job.

We've all had our dose of hell; show us now to get a bit of heaven.

W.E.S,

"NIGHT SCENES."

BY OWEN OLIVER.

August, 1917. An observation post, a small wooden shelter in a trench on the Lorette Ridge. A deathly stillness only broken now and again by the scamper of rats outside, alarmed in their search for food, or the distant rat-tat-tat of a machine gun telling of a vigil faithfully kept. No other sound comes to my listening ears, and my eyes peering through the slit into darkness see nothing.

"Time they were coming," I say to myself, as I stretch my cramped limbs, for our men are making a raid to-night and the Colonel is bringing two nurses to watch the "strafe." It is quite safe up here nowadays, the enemy will not molest us. These hills have drunk their share of blood, God knows.

Soon three figures loom, stepping warily in the darkness — barbed wire and a shell-pocked land make a difficult path for women's feet. They arrive and we wait.

Suddenly down in front on the wide expanse of dark country an illuminated patch of belching fire and spurts of flame, and to our ears the boom of heavy guns. One would think a huge piece of mechanism hed been brought into play for our delight. There is nothing terrible in it, we watch it as a spectacle. Imagination does not follow the screaming shells to hear their savage swish. There is something grand, something magnificent about it all. There is something in those flashes and that roar which tells us of men below in front; of men doing men's work. We are strangely moved, we find that even guns can talk. For nothing is lost in this world of ours, and the actors in this drama, wrapped in darkness from our sight, must make their influence felt. Such an emotional experience must act upon imagination and expand and elevate the soul.

The firing dies down, the spectacle is over. "Quite a well-behaved affair," says one of the nurses, as the little party turns to the track.

* * *

August 1918. The sunken road running through the Bois l'Abbé, a road with fresh deep ruts. It must have taken a number of wheels and a number of heavy loads to plough the road like this. No wheels to-night, though, no heavy loads. Every gun is in its place, the shells all close at hand, everything ready. Guns at the top of the road, guns at the bottom, guns everywhere, with sheets thrown over them like horses waiting for their masters. They will not have long to wait.

I stand at the entrance to my dug-out. It is impossible to sleep. I have tried to read, but found no interest — he would indeed be a master of his craft who could hold me by his tale to-night. Expectancy is everywhere — and hope. The stars are out to show the way to men who follow strange paths. The woods are hushed. The calm before the storm.

Noiselessly a file of men pass by, a long continuous string of silent infantry. Not a word from anyone. Steadily forward; out of the darkness into the darkness. No wish to talk — all thoughts are far away. No end to them. Four years of war, each taking its toll of men, the best of men, and yet all these stout hearts. Steadily forward, steadily forward.

The minute arrives, the guns are ready, their muzzles cocked, ominous, waiting. They look as though they listen for the order. "Stand by! Fire!" A deafening blast and roar fills the air. Away go the shells screaming and screeching, they seem to know their hideous errand, to terrify, to kill. The woods take up the roar and echo and re-echo, a roar like the roar of an express tearing along through a tunnel as though pursued by the demons of darkness. Everybody, everything joins in the battle. "We've got them this time," a Canadian general shouts in my ear.

PHILATELIC NOTES.

I am frequently asked, "Are there any bargains in stamps to be picked up in Cologne?" Certainly there are, but not often from big dealers, who employ experts to separate every variety of colour, perforation, surcharge from the normal stock. These varieties are set aside for specialists who pay fancy prices for them.

One needs to watch the market very closely to get a bargain from a dealer. By purchasing a collection second-hand one can occasionally get something good, but the specimens should be carefully examined and priced from an up-to-date catalogue which records all varieties.

I was recently much amused when inspecting a German collection for which 1,200 marks was asked. It was a most extraordinary collection made by one who knew little or nothing about stamps. Fine specimens of rare old Europeans were placed side by side with obvious reprints, revenue stamps, and badly damaged copies. With pride the owner mentioned his U.S.A. stamps and pointed out particularly the high values of the 1892 Columbus Issue on which was printed in type half the size of the stamp the word "Imitation." He knew no English or French and was considerably chagrined to have the translation. Someone had also told him that the stamps of Brunswick without a watermark were forgeries and he had destroyed three such specimens of the first issue (1852 unwatermarked) of which the pre-war catalogue prices were 5,000, 1,200, and 3,000 marks.

Varieties and errors are so carefully searched for nowadays that it is seldom one discovers one not recorded in the best catalogues. Twenty-five years ago one was frequently asked "Have you got a Queensland with the LA joined?" and there was such a demand for specimens printed from this plate that the dealers sold them at 1.6 each, although one-third of the stamps issued had this error. A 1915 catalogue prices the normal 2d blue at 1d and with LA joined 2d. Three errors not catalogued have come into my hands.

The first is the 10 penni Finland of 1901 with no bar to the final a of the word Mapka; the second is a British Bechuanaland 2d of 1891 surcharged Bechuanaland, and the third is a used specimen of the 4 mils Porto Rico of 1891, with the top half of the word Rico broken. The stamps themselves are undamaged; the plates from which they were printed have been broken.

The current prices in England of some of the less common old English stamps are

1840 1d black 2/-; 2d blue, no lines	9/-
1869 5 shillings, Wmk. Maltese Cross, plate 2	5/-
1870 1/2d red (plates 1 and 3) unused, each	3/-
1887 L 1 green	15/-

C.S.

AEROPLANE TELEPHONY.

Of the many branches of science which owe their development to the war, perhaps the most wonderful, and, at the same time, the most useful, is that which enables us to talk across space; and, more particularly, the adaption of this wireless telephony to aircraft.

For some years now it has been possible to flash signals across the Atlantic and communicate by wireless telegraphy, but it was, until a month ago, impossible to use the telephone over such a wide space. Telephony bears a somewhat similar relation to Telegraphy as a huge organ with all its pipes of varied pitch and quality does to a penny whistle emitting one simple note only.

When America entered into the war, the basic principles of Wireless Telephony had been worked out, and the enormous advantage of the instantaneous communication by telephone over all other systems of signalling was obvious. An air-fleet which possessed means of telephone communication would have an enormous advantage over any other in all fleet manoevres.

The problem of adapting the signal sets to suitair-craft was no simple one. Lightness and compactness without loss of efficiency were to be aimed at. The method in which the problem was tackled was essentially American. All available specialists were set working at each particular detail as it cropped up. British technical men, sent over to assist, were amazed at the means at their disposal—splendid laboratories equipped not only with all necessary apparatus, but with masses of brain power such as is never met with outside the States.

The bulky apparatus — condensers, relays, and miles of wire, of the ordinary telephone set — was obviously useless. The problem was made possible by an insignificant-looking glass bottle, half the size of an ordinary incandescent lamp. This "talking bottle" is a vacuum tube, direct descendant of the Crookes' tube, and De Forest's Audion, containing plates, grids, and wire. It acts in an amazing number of ways, transmitter, receiver, alternator, amplifier, and a few others. The vacuum is the greatest obtainable, measured in billionths of an atmosphere. The plates and grids are made of platinum and nickel and coated with other rare elements. The tubes make it possible to convey such a complex noise as the human voice clearly and purely without losing any of the quality, and receive it where direct speech would be impossible, even among the deafening noises of motor and propellor in an aeroplane.

The problem of making the received message audible to the aviator was tackled in the characteristic style. Experiments were carried out in a sound-proof room containing an enlarged edition of a child's rattle worked by a motor, the resulting noise being very similar to that in an aeroplane.

As a result of much experimenting, a sound-proof helmet was evolved which did not interfere with the aviator's supply of oxygen at high altitudes. The ear-pieces containing receivers were made of porous sponge rubber, reinforced with shining tin-foil, one to absorb, and the other to reflect the sound. The result was so perfect that although messages may be received from ten miles away, the wearer cannot hear himself reply!

To pick up the transmitted waves, a copper wire is trailed behind the machine in flight, and wound up on descent, or else one is stretched along the top-plane.

Success was first achieved in July 1917 in Ohio, and since then much progress has been made. The present apparatus is so perfect that by simply moving a switch the operator can limit his talk within any radius from a hundred feet to more than 30 miles, and can talk to receiving stations on land, on ships, or in other air-craft.

The commercial adoption of wireless telephony is at present impracticable, being limited by the fact that the message is transmitted by waves in the ether, and if a small fraction of the talk between London and Manchester was done by wireless the resulting waves would interfere with each other so much that the result would be hopeless confusion.

HOW THE PEACE TERMS WERE HANDED OVER.

VERSAILLES IN 1871 AND 1919.

ANNIVERSARY OF THE LUSITANIA.

ATTITUDE OF THE GERMAN DELEGATES.

HOW THE TERMS WERE PRESENTED.

RANTZAU'S MANNERS.

VERSAILLES 1871.

On the 18th of January 1871, in the Hall of Mirrors at Versailles, William of Hohenzollern, King of Prussia, crowned himself the first Emperor of Germany and spoke these words:—

"May God grant that both we and our followers upon the throne may ever be Emperors of the German Empire, not through warlike conquests, but through works of peace, and so lead the nation to happiness, freedom and prosperity."

Even while he was prating about peace, German guns were bombarding Paris, which, reduced to eating rats and cats, was starved into capitulation.

A few days later Bismarck, the German Chancellor, standing erect as befitting a conqueror threatened to break off his conversation with Thiers and to speak with cannon unless his conditions were accepted.

One of those conditions was the payment of an indemnity of 200 million pounds sterling.

That war lasted almost exactly six months, and Peace was signed four months later, at Frankfort on the Main. The losers had to go to the winners to fetch the terms.

VERSAILLES 1919.

Again the Trianon Palace at Versailles, and Count Brockdorff-Rantzau sitting, and lacking even elementary courtesy; not dictating terms with the overbearance of his predecessor but receiving them in humiliation, with the iron of impudent arrogance in his soul.

Another war ended. It occupied 1,561 days of actual operations, and of His Britannic Majesty's subjects 670,986 were killed, and 2,041,040 wounded, while 350,243 are missing.

HISTORIC SITTING.

The historic sitting at the Trianon Palace began at 3.5. p.m., on Wednesday.

When the German plenipotentiaries entered the conference room, accompanied by a French officer, they bowed and took their places in silence. All were sombrely garbed in black morning coats and dark neckties, Herr Landsberg's flaming beard affording the only note of colour.

Practically the whole sitting was occupied by Count Brockdorff-Rantzau's speech. No reply was made to it, M. Clemenceau declaring the sitting at an end immediately Count Brockdorff Rantzau had finished speaking.

It is worthy of note that M. Clemenceau spoke upstanding, while Count Brockdorff-Rantzau remained seated while he read his speech.

Before handing the text of the Allies' terms to the German delegates M. Clemenceau, standing erect, and speaking in French with a firm and sharp tone, said:

"Messieurs the German Plenipotentiaries,

It is neither the time nor the place to utter superfluous words. You see before you the accredited plenipotentiaries of the small and great powers united in the hardest of wars so cruelly imposed upon them. The hour to settle the bill has come.

You have asked for peace. We are at your disposal to accord it to you. You will receive the book containing our conditions. You will have every facility to examine them at your leisure, but without argument. In addition to the courtesy customary to all civilised people you will find us eager to help you in your work, but this second Peace of Versailles has been bought too dearly for us not to have the right to demand by all means in our power the legitimate satisfaction which is our due."

This speech was first repeated in English by one.

This speech was first repeated in English by one interpreter and then in German by another.

The German delegates remained sitting at attention in stiff, tense attitudes. President Wilson maintained a fixed scrutiny of them but. M. Clemenceau's gaze wandered.

When the translations were finished Clemenceau resumed, acquainting the Germans with the procedure to be followed. He informed them that no verbal discussion will be allowed, but that any comment must be in writing, and that any observations they wish to make must be submitted in French and English within a fortnight.

After these conditions had been translated, M. Clemenceau again rose and said:— "Count Brockdorff-Rantzau has the word."

Attention was again concentrated on the German Minister. Arranging before him a typewritten memorandum, and settling himself in his chair, he began to speak, without any preamble.

"We are fully aware of the magnitude of the task which has brought us here in order to give a durable peace to the world."

The German interpreter seated behind Count Brockdorff-Rantzau rose and commenced to translate this exordium, but his voice was hesitating and his translation halting.

M. Clemenceau called out "One cannot hear anything. Let the interpreters come to the desk."

Accordingly the two German secretaries moved to the presidential table and repeated, phrase by phrase, in English and French, the words spoken by the chief German delegate.

"We do not ignore," he continued, "the greatenss of our impotence, and the extent of our defeat. We know that the power of the German arms is broken; we know the power of the hatred which we meet here, and we have heard the demand, full of passion, that the victors shall make us pay as vanquished and culprits. We are asked to confess that we alone are guilty. Such a declaration from my mouth would be a lie. It is far from us to decline our own responsibility in the world war and the manner in which it was made.

The attitude of the late German Government at the Hague Conference, their actions and omissions in the tragic days of July, have contributed to the calamity. But we firmly deny that Germany, whose people had to defend themselves, was alone guilty. None of you will pretend that the calamity only began because Austria-Hungary was the victim of a murderous hand.

For the last fifty years Imperialism had poisoned the International situation. The policy of revenge, of expansion, and denial of the people's rights, contributed to the illness of Europe which had its crisis in the war.

"The Russian mobilisation deprived statesmen of the means to prevent the solution of the conflict being placed in military hands.

Public opinion in all enemy countries is complaining about the atrocities which Germany has committed during the war. We are ready to confess the wrong we have done. We have not come here either to lessen the responsibilities of the men who have made the war politically and economically, or to deny the crimes committed against the rights of peoples. We repeat the declaration made at the beginning of the war in the German Reichstag. 'We have done wrong to Belgium and we want to make it good again.'

"But not only Germany committed faults, every nation has committed some. I do not want to answer repoach by repoach, but if we are asked to make amends, one must not forget the armistice."

Raising his voice Count Brockdorff declaimed "Six weeks passed before we received your armistice conditions, and for six months have we waited for your Peace conditions."

The crimes committed during the war are not excusable, but they were committed during a fight for National existence, in hours of passion which make the conscience of the people less sensible. Hundreds of thousands of non-combatants have died as a result of the blockade. They have been killed with premeditation. The measure of culpability of all persons concerned can only be determined after an impartial inquiry made by a Neutral Commission in front of which all persons responsible for the war will be called and for which our archives are available. "We have already asked for such an inquiry, and we repeat our demand. Besides, in this Conference, where we are alone, without our Allies, we are not quite without protection. We have one Ally, which you yourselves have given us. It is Right, which is guaranteed to us by the Treaty on the Principles of Peace. The Allied and Associated Governments between the 5th October and 5th November 1918, renounced a peace of violence and inscribed on their banner of Justice.

The German Government proposes to accept the principles of the President of the United States as the basis for Peace. On the 5th November 1918 Secretary of State Lansing declared that the Allied and Associated Governments had agreed on this basis with two exceptions.

President Wilson directed a searching look at the interpreters.— "There are among these principles some which demand great national and economic sacrifices, but the fundamentally sacred rights of all peoples are protected by this Treaty. The conscience of the world is behind it. No Nation may violate it with impunity. You will find us ready to examine the Preliminary Peace, with the intention to reconstitute with you what has been destroyed, placing in the forefront the wrong which has been done to Belgium, and to open to the world a new era of political and social progress. Our special experts will discuss with yours the principal points on the basis of the project which you have proposed to us.

We shall have as our principal objects the International protection of life and of the freedom of the Labour class, then we shall have to reconstitute the territory of Belgium and the Northern parts of France which we occupied. We have pledged ourselves to this. We shall have to ask the collaboration of our adversaries as we shall not be able to achieve this work without their political and financial participation. You will be no more able to accomplish it without us, than we without you.

This reconstitution can only be made by a commercial entente. The best way would be to continue to let the work be done by German prisoners of war. Certainly such labour is cheap; but it would cost the world dear; the German people would be filled with hatred if their brothers were retained in captivity after the Preliminary Peace. Without an immediate solution of this question, already postponed for too long, we cannot attain a durable peace. The experts on both sides will have to examine in which manner Germany will be able to fulfil the financial obligation without succumbing to the burden. The ruin of the German people would lead to an irrevocable devastation of the economic life of Europe. The victors, like the vanquished, must take care to guard against this threatening danger with its incalculable results.

There is only one way to avoid the danger, a creed of economical solidarity of all peoples, united in a free League of Nations.

Gentlemen, it is a sublime thought that from the greatest calamity of history the greatest opportunity for the development for humanity has been formulated and will succeed. If this League of the Sovereign Nations can reach this aim, then the victims of this war will not have died in vain.

The German people is at heart ready to accept their hard fate, if the promised bases of peace are not infringed. A Peace which cannot be defended in the name of Right would always cause new resistances. Nobody could gurantee its maintenance.

"We shall examine with a good will the document which you have delivered to us, hoping that all will be able to sign the final result of our meeting."

Count Brockdorff-Rantzau stopped. He had finished his lesson on "How to govern Europe."

There was a pause: M. Clemenceau asked "Are there any other remarks?" to which the German leader answered "No", whereupon the venerable President of the Conference said "The sitting is closed."

Interviewed by Reuter's correspondent afterwards, Mr. Sam Hughes, the Australian Premier, described Count Brockdorff-Rantzau's action in remaining seated while he spoke, as an "intolerable insult to the Conference, but that despite such intolerable arrogance we could see this day that humiliation had entered their souls."

Mr. Massey the New Zealand Premier, was also interviewed by Reuter's correspondent. He said "The Germans were more impudent and more aggresive than anything I have ever experienced."

AFGHANS VIOLATE INDIAN FRONTIER.

The Times states that according to private despatches from India, Afghan regulars have seized regular lofty positions inside the Indian border, commanding the Khyber and Loishilman passes. It is not possible yet to say how far the new Amir is cognisant of this violation of territory, but his proclamation of the independence of Afghanistan and his polite dismissal of three Englishmen in his employ is ominous.

Probably the origin of the Afghan outbreak is connected with the unrest in the Mohammedan world, says that journal, which expressed the opinion that if the trouble is swiftly countered it will not be dangerous. It has a good omen that the Afridi tribesmen at Peshawar remained staunch during the Amritsar rioting. Reuter.

BOLSHEVIST MOBILISATION SLACK.

PAINTED FEMALES.

Stockholm. According to a telegram just received from Petrograd the Bolshevist mobilization is yielding most unsatisfactory results. Whole regiments are leaving for front with barely five hundred to six hundred men, only half of whom ever reach the front at all. Men are being despatched to the front without arms, and all military trains are guarded with machine guns. A telegram from Riga via Reval says that the Bolshevists caused great agitation in the minds of the people at Riga by the scandalous conduct of Bolshevist Commissaries, who arrived there with parties of extravagantly painted females who were driven about the town in military motor cars.—Reuter.

WORK, OR JOIN THE ARMY.

A PRACTICAL SUGGESTION.

A member of Parliament made a very apt suggestion in the House of Commons yesterday. In view of the necessity of obtaining a large number of men at an early date for the relief of men in India, Mesopotamia, and other theatres of war, he suggested that the unemployment allowance be discontinued to men under-twenty-five years of age.

Mr. Winston Churchill said that the topic was much to big to be discussed at question time.

WHY NOT DRUM THEM OUT?

Mr. Winston Churchill "regretted" in the House of Commons yesterday that for reasons which are largely of a technical nature it is impossible in the opinion of the Law Officers of the Crown, to proceed against men released from prisoners of war camps by the Germans and who had presumably joined the German-Irish Brigade. Consequently it was equally as impossible to arrest them. They must therefore perforce be treated as any other repatriated prisoners of war.

Such men as are known to have accepted release on condition that they served against the Crown will be discharged from His Majesty's service for misconduct.

STREET CONDITIONS IN LIVERPOOL.

At Liverpool City Council yesterday Mrs. Stewart Brown suggested that the vote on behalf of the Women Patrol Committee be increased to eight hundred sterling.

She described the condition of Liverpool streets and parks as appalling.

Councillor Lucas, supporting the proposition, said it was astounding to see so many girls in their teens in fur coats, short frocks and painted faces.

The chairman of the Watch Committee said that the head constable blamed the war conditions for this state of things. There was no increase in the vote.

DISHONEST CANTEEN MANAGER.

At the Old Bailey yesterday Maurice Barnett, a canteen manager, was sentenced to fifteen months hard labour for frauds in connection with a military canteen at Norwich.

It is reported that the Palace of the ex-Crown Prince in the Unter den Linden, Berlin, has been allocated to President Ebert for his residence.

CRITICS OF FRENCH'S CRITICISM.

MOTION OF CENSURE.

Military members of the House of Commons resent Field Marshal French's attacks on Lord Kitchener in his war book "1914." They intend to ask the Government whether it is proposed to take disciplinary action against Lord French.

In the House of Commons yesterday Mr. Donald McLean, Leader of the Independent Liberals, asked the Home Secretary whether his attention had been drawn to Field Marshal French's articles in the Daily Telegraph, and whether such publication is considered by the Government a consonant with the duties and responsibilities of Lord French's high office. The speaker said that Mr. McLean was not entitled to ask such a question.

Mr. McLean thereupon tabled a motion of censure.

IMPERIAL TRADE UNITY.

TWO LABOURITE S's.

In the House of Commons, on the report of the Budget resolutions, Mr. Tom Shaw (Lab. Preston) put an amendment on the paper in the names of the Labour Party Independent Liberals directed against the Government policy of Imperial preference in general, and the preference on tea in particular.

Mr. Alfred Short (Lab. Wednesbury) seconded, and trotted out the stale old shibboleth that the Government's proposals would interfere with free and unfettered international trade and endanger good relations.

Mr. Austen Chamberlain in reply said:—"We are only doing what other foreign nations have done for years without complaint from us or anybody else. We believe that the principle of Imperial Unity should be recognised by the establishment of Imperial trade."

The amendment was rejected by 252 to 63.

COAL COMMISSION INQUIRY.

A DUKE'S ROYALITIES

Speaking as a witness before the Coal Commission yesterday, Mr. F. E. Downing, Secretary to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners said, with reference to the enclosure of common lands, that there may have been cases in which lands were first enclosed, and the transfer afterwards legalised.

Earl Durham was called as a witness. In the course of his evidence he said that he owned coal under 12,411 acres of land in the county of Durham. The total amount he received in 1918 from royalties, rents and wayleaves was 40,522 pounds sterling, as compared with 58,911 pounds sterling in 1913.

Cross-examined by Mr. Smillie Earl Durham said:—"I think the only one entitled to land is the person who owns it."

DRUMMING THEM IN.

The Prince of Wales, accompanied by Earl Dalkeith, whose engagement to Princess Mary has been announced and contradicted, visited Witley Camp yesterday to present colours to four battalions of a Canadian division which is about to return home.

About five thousand men paraded and thousands more witnessed the ceremony. A large number of men climbed to the roofs of neighbouring huts and beat a deafening tattoo of welcome on the corrugated iron roofs.

SOON TO BE REPATRIATED.

In the course of yesterday's parliamentary debates the Secretary for War states that the total number of prisoners of war in British hands is as follows: United Kingdom, 103,311, France, 196, 79; elsewhere 169,282. Total 469,072. These figures included both combatants and civilians of all nationalities.

ENLISTMENTS TO DATE.

The total number of enlistments in the four months ended 3rd May amounts to 88,622. This total includes all normal engagements for three and four years from 15th January and re-enlistments from 3rd January. The daily average is 834.

LONDON'S WAR MEMORIAL.

On behalf of the Royal Academy, the president Sir Aston Webb, recommends that a great road with a memorial arch and place at Charing-cross should be constructed as a national and Imperial memorial, just as Waterloo Bridge, Trafalgar-square, and Waterloo-place were the reminders of the great wars of the last century.

ATTENDED FIFTY-TWO ANNUAL CAMPS.

Mr. Richard Watson, aged 80, reputed to be the oldest volunteer in the North of England, died yesterday.

He had attended fifty-two annual camps up to the outbreak of war. He was a Colour-Sergeant in the King's Own (Lancaster Regiment.)

BIGAMIST SENTENCED.

A York bigamist yesterday at the Leeds Assizes was sent to prison for 6 months. He had married 5 women between 1893 and 1918, four at least being still alive. He got to know the women by advertising for a housekeeper.

The late Josiah Ritchie — "Uncle Ritchie" — formerly manager of the old Aquarium at Westminster left over a hundred thousand pounds.

UNPARLIAMENTARY, BUT VERY EFFECTIVE.

PLAIN SPEECH TO CONCHIES.

Sir Albion Richardson M.P., who was appointed in March last to hold an inquiry into allegations against Major Blake, acting Governor of Wandsworth prison, concerning his action against certain disorderly conscientious objector prisoners, has now issued his report.

He says the only complaint that can justly be made against Major Blake is with regard to the language which he used on two occasions towards conscientious objectors. Sir Albion Richardson is statisfied that Major Blake acted throughout with a single-minded desire to discharge his duty.

Major Blake admitted saying:— "You damned mutinous swine! I have come down here to restore order and if you do not behave yourselves I will give you Hell."

He said, however, that the language was justified and effective.

Sir Albion Richardson, in his report, says that for some months before Major Blake's arrival as Acting Governor of the civil side the prison had been in a condition of progressive disorder, and by February this year there was reason to fear a serious mutiny. "Conscientious Objectors" set the prison rules and officials at open defiance, held meetings, and sang the "Red Flag."

Then came Major Blake, and "order was, in fact, restored a few days after his arrival by the strict enforcement of the prison rules."

How this was done is told in the report in Major Blake's own words. The complaining letter referred to incidents which happened within half an hour of his arrival on February 20, and of these Major Blake says:

"There was in the hall a gang of men singing and making an awful noise. I said, 'Silence'. One man shouted, 'Get your hair cut,' and another made a disgusting and offensive noise with his mouth, and someone shouted, 'Who is this —— swine?' or 'Hark at the —— swine.' . . . . From the other door marched in, singing the 'Red Flag,' a gang of these 'Conscientious Objectors.' They were noisy, and I saw the other men were getting restive.

"I WILL GIVE YOU HELL."

"I said: 'March these men out.' I rather think I said: 'March these noisy devils out of here. I won't have them disturbing the decently behaved or respectable prisoners.' I had a purpose in saying that. As they went out they started shouting and yelling, and so for the benefit of everyone concerned I shouted to these men: 'You damned, mutinous swine. I have come down here to restore order, and if you do not behave yourselves I will give you hell'. Their tails went down at once. I had to take an extraordinary one with these men. They had defied every decent manner of dealing with them. It was a hopeless task to ask any man to come down to a strange prison and put it right.

"I am not a swearing man. I give you my word of honour that I did not call these men — swine." I wanted—to use a vulgar expression—to put the fear of God into them. I wanted to make them think they had a pretty ferocious man to deal with. I had to think of some means or other to put this place straight. I used illegal methods . . . I reported myself to the Commissioners as I had been guilty of a gross crime. It really is—swearing in prison. It is a gross crime, which I should never forgive except under certain circumstances.

"I went to Major Briscoe and I told him. 'I have got that place quiet, but I am going to tell you that I used improper and illegal means'. He said, 'What do you mean?' I said, 'I have cursed and damned these fellows until I frightened them.'

SIX MONTHS AFTER THE WAR.

MISTAKEN NOTION.

Commenting on the fact that Sunday next is exactly six months from the signature of the Armistice the Westminster Gazette says: "The day is important in one way because we believe that there still lingers in the minds of many soldiers now serving, the idea that the period for which they enlisted was until six months after peace which they interpret as meaning the end of fighting. Obviously that is not the right reading even of the original terms. Peace is still a long time ahead and soldiers who are retained would have been liable to remain with the coulors for some time yet even had there been no extension of compulsory service."

LONDON STOCK EXCHANGE.

Yesterday the Stock Exchange remained very firm, with renewed demand both for investment and speculation, though the scarcity of available securities checked expansion of business in several instance. Giltedged securities were quiet but steady pending an official announcement regarding the new British Loan. Foreign stocks were firm. Peruvians met with improved demand. Home railways showed good rises but Oils were still the most brisk market, fresh advances in leading shares being made. The Industrial section was active, especially the textile group. Prospects of British interests being better represented in Argentina stimulated the demand for Argentine securities, while Brazilians were strong on a steadily improving rate of exchange.

New capital issues in April constituted a record and the amounts subscribed generally exceeded the amounts applied for.

Lever Brothers latest issue of two millions six and a half per cent preference shares was oversubscribed within three days and Rowntrees half million six per cent preference shares was largely oversubscribed.

THE DRAFT TREATY AND THE FOURTEEN POINTS.

For many a day the draft Treaty of Peace will hold the interest and invite the commentary of friend and foe. Though it is merely a summary of a document which will surpass in bulk and significance any peace charter yet published, it bristles with points that demand close and leisured scrutiny. Some will hail it as a masterpiece of justice; some will reckon it an unsatisfying compromise of contending interests; some will deem it a failure either in its leniency or in its stringency.

To-day we ask ourselves whether it fulfils the ideals that were set forth in the historic Fourteen Points of President Wilson. It is an important question, and it is one which is even now being discussed in many circles more or less sympathetic with the Congress of Paris and its momentous labours. It is our considered opinion that there is nothing in the draft Treaty of Peace which must be interpreted as a violation of the American programme of peace.

Let us take the matter of territorial reparation. President Wilson laid it down in January 1918 that "complete restoration of Belgium in full and free sovereignty" was a condition of peace. The draft Treaty honours that condition. It is true that Germany is asked to recognize Belgian sovereignty over considerable parts of Moresnet, over Eugen and Malmedy. But, in the first place, the title to some of these territories is contested; in the second place, an early opportunity is to be given to the inhabitants of these districts to declare their choice of nationality; and, in the last place, the final decision is to be reserved to the League of the Nations, a Commission of which will delimit the Belgian boundaries. In the case of France the only matter of possible dispute concerns the Saar Basin; and it should be noted that our ally does not gain perpetual ownership of that territory but only of its coal-mines. Even during the fifteen years that will elapse before a plebiscite is taken the government of the area is vested in a Commission of the League of Nations.

Another matter is that of the independence and self-determination of nations. President Wilson's ideals are realized in the case of Poland, which is to be a new and independent state. Had Poland been given the city of Danzig our task of reconciling the Treaty and the American programme would have been infinitely harder, but Danzig is to be a "free city."

It may be argued that the Allies' insistence that Germany shall acknowledge "the entire independence of German Austria" is a breach of the ideal of self-determination, but it is not laid down that the entirely independent German Austria shall never of its own free will unite with Germany. Independence must come before any real form of determination, for it is only a free man who can exercise freedom of choice. Again, the way is prepared for self-government in Russia, in accordance with the sixth point of President Wilson; and no difficulties are met with in regard to Italy and the Balkans and the Ottoman empire, for the questions at issue have not been settled.

In matters naval and military the draft Treaty is easily reconciled with the second and fourth points, because the drastic disarmament of Germany is not an end in itself but a first and logical means to the greater end — that of "a general limitation of the armaments of all nations." Heligoland and Kiel are but symbols of a new and better policy of peace.

The point of greatest difficulty for most of us is in the fourth section of the draft Treaty where Germany's colonies and overseas possessions are dealt with. She must renounce them "with all rights and titles therein," and must undertake "to accept whatever measures are taken by the five Allied Powers in relation thereto." Whether or not President Wilson's Points are to be observed depends on these future measures, and we do not prophesy regarding them.

It is not an easy or perhaps a very profitable task to sentinize each section of the draft Treaty and attempt to reconcile each with the relative part of the Wilson programme. The former document has left many matters undecided and the time is not ripe for a final discussion. But we feel confident that apart from details the spirit of the draft Treaty is in keeping with that of the charter published by the President of the United States. And that is a great matter.

"Hurrah! Hurrah! A guinea for my latest story, 'A Modern Husband.'" "Congratulations, young man. From whom did you get the money?" "From the post office. They lost it!"

"I say, old man, was Smithson in the club at lunch-time to-day?" "Yes." "Was Robinson with him?" "He was." "Awfully sorry to bother you, but was I by any chance with them?"

Curate—"I am so glad to see you come to church regularly for evensong, Mrs Brown. You are a good example." Mrs Brown— "Yes. You see, my husband hates me to go out in the evenings, and I must do something to show I am boss in my own home."

THOMAS ATKINS, TOURIST.

By M.F. KEY.

In our Battalion there were several men who had never seen the sea, scores who had never sailed upon it, and hundreds who had never set foot outside their own country. Recently, in four crowded days, all these experiences were theirs, for the order to proceed overseas — to their predecessors a warning with its darker side — to them came as a rare opportunity of seeing foreign lands.

It is one of the by-products of war that the proletariat now makes le grand tour: the path is closed to the aristocrat and the dilletante: the British soldier travels free through scenes that the wealthy would give hundreds of pounds to visit.

On a recent Tuesday morning in "our mob" reveille went at 11 30 o'clock the night before — the Irishism expresses the precise truth — and all except one man who had been rash enough to go to bed, and who overslept, duly entrained during the small hours for the 200 miles' ride to Dover. It has to be confessed that grumbles were heard because the Great Eastern took seven hours or so to do the journey: if we had known what Continental railways had in store for us surely the voice of lamentation had been stilled!

The country as far as London to most of the travellers was merely the tract intervening between them and "Leave":—(you may use one of your beloved capitals this time, Herr Printer) the sense of adventure awakened, when ladies pressed the train at Liverpool Street with most welcome cups of cocoa and slabs of cake, and courteous old gentlemen took off their hats to us! We positively blushed that our expedition should be taken thus seriously and the minds of the thoughtful groped toward the future, pregnant with incalculable possibilities.

AT DOVER.

Diving under the Thames by a little-known route we ran through the pleasant country of Kent, noted Canterbury Cathedral — the fourth Cathedral we had sighted — and clanged into Dover Harbour, on time to the minute. Here the first of many pauses for refreshment was made, and it is interesting in retrospect to reflect on the organisation by which, at various points in three or four countries, twenty-minute meals for 1,000 men were pre-arranged.

A great transport was shared with another battalion: the sea was rough and 2,000 men were packed on the decks like sardines in a tin. Yes, without going into details, is was an unpleasant experience — until we did whatever is the nautical equivalent of taking a left turn, and ran smoothly before the wind along the coast to Dunkerque, which, as somebody naively said, is "French for Dunkirk" (or Belgian, for geographists at that time were of two opinions).

What a higgledy—piggledy town! We soon realised, as our journey continued, that whatever may be said of the backwardness of our own country in town-planning, at least we could give points to France, both as regards the attractive building of individual houses and their correlation with one another. Moreover, houses of a modern type, or any buildings of much later date than eighteen-eighties seemed non-existent. Was this dearth of new houses, we asked, a reflection of the declining birth-rate of France?

"OLIVER TWIST" ENCOURAGED.

To many readers of the Cologne Post nothing could be more stale and banal than our experiences the next morning, but I trust the Editor will allow me a little license—the Post has an important home circulation. For the first time in our uneventful and sheltered lives we were to travel in cattle trucks! We thought it truly weird, I remember; the edge of the sensation begins to wear off now.

At a siding was drawn up a cattle-truck train of vast length — nearly half-a-mile long it seemed — the whole comprising (as the auctioneers say) a desirable and self-contained travelling residence, complete with kitchen, pantry, store and wardrobes (vans being allotted to each of these several uses).

PLEASURES OF CARAVANNING.

The living rooms, to continue the methaphor, were slightly reminiscent of those dwellings in which a family occupies each corner of a room, and one the centre, and all is well until the family in the centre takes in a lodger — in a word, they were overcrowded. That is, of course, unless you happened to be a personage, to wit, a sergeant or a batman: in which case you were ten or twenty, respectively, to a truck, instead of forty.

Each cattle truck contained a little iron stove and chimney with a supply of fuel. There was also a truss of straw for bedding, and mysteriously out of the unknown arrived A.S.C. waggons with three blankets for every man. A home-like touch was a L.N.W.R. engine, unmistakable in spite of the huge letters, "R.O.D.," on its sides.

At length began the journey which was destined to last all that day and night, all the next twenty-four hours and most of the following day. Crash! bang! went the couplings and each coach started forward with a jerk which nearly upset the dixey of tea someone had already set going. And so the train continued, rumbling and plunging, day after day and night after night, except for vast pauses which probably totalled eight hours out of each 24.

THE PACE THAT KILLS.

And the pace! After an English troop train it seemed slow indeed. Maximum: 15 m.p.h.; minimum, too slow so express in figures. Some, deceived by the endless procession of the hours, formed the opinion that it must be at least 1,000 miles from the coast to the Rhine bridgeheads!

None of the inconveniences of the journey troubled us much for we had not long left Dunkirk before we had no thoughts for anything but the panorama slowly unrolled as the train crept along. The first hint that we were entering the area to which the eyes of all the world have been turned for four long years was a mundane one enough. The margins of the railway track were strewn continuously, mile after mile, with empty tinned food tins. What a vision it conjured up to the imagination of the hurried journeyings of countless thousands of troops and of the immense organisation behind modern war.

THE ABOMINATION OF DESOLATION.

By degrees more vivid indications of the results of war began to appear. Here and there, roofless and battered houses and trees with maimed branches were to be seen; the railway track itself had been severed at various points and since repaired. Water-logged shell holes become more numerous and by degress the familiar newspaper phrase "devastated area" took on a new and terribly vivid meaning.

The tortured countryside seemed to cry out, agonized by the horrors of the last four years. Nature's fair face was pitted as with a small-pox. trees and woods were blasted to shreds and splinters—human habitations were in ruins, and for miles all was silent and desolate.

Armentières, formerly, no doubt, a town of some importance, was now a ruin so complete that not a house could be seen that had escaped destruction. The tide of war had overflowed Armentières as the molten streams of Vesuvius the towns of Pompeii and Herculaneum. What more fitting than to leave the place as it stands, an everlasting monument of the most terrible cataclism in the world's history.

WILLIAM ROBERT PATTERSON F.R.G.S. ETC.

You must learn to work with your camera to such a degree of accuracy that your pictures will be suitable for enlargement. Produce sharp negatives in which the lights and shades are well defined. A really pleasant scene or charming portrait is worthy of study. An enlargement of such a picture may prove of great artistic value, and, indeed, may remain a pleasing remembrance for many years. Therefore, do not waste time and money upon idle ventures.

Many of you are anxious to obtain portraits of a friend or a group of friends in order that you may have a souvenir of agreeable companionship whilst together with the Army of Occupation. If such is the case, then by all means study the questions of light and shade and exposure and endeavour to produce a portrait that will present sufficient detail for enlargement. Such a picture would prove undoubtedly a charming gift and produce happy memories later. In Cologne, at the present time, you may obtain an excellent enlargement, on bromide paper, for the value of about a couple of shillings. The effect produced by enlargements, if the negative is a good one, is fascinating. The picture is softer in tone than a print; it becomes a veritable work of art.

Examine carefully the details of the scene or portrait you intend to reproduce.

In the case of an expected snapshot against a moving object not yet in view, firstly let your shutter be set in attendance and remove the slide which covers the plate or film-pack.

Be prepared, as the boy-scouts say! — for this is the secret of successful photography. It is an excellent plan to practice with the camera in your own room; by such means one may acquire judgment of immediate action. Say to yourself —

(1). There comes a galloping horse. Bright sunlight. No shade. Suitable background. Object, therefore, clearly defined. — Rapid exposure.

(2). There is an athlete performing the high jump. Probably silhouetted against the sky. Sunlight shining fully upon the figure. — Rapid exposure.

(3). There is a figure in a shady lane. Part of the light obscured by trees, etc. Bright light, however, it is a portrait study. Expose at moderate speed.

(4). There is a river scene. Light from all sides, but the sky gives only diffused light, yet clear because details of distant objects can be distinguished. Expose at moderate speed.

(5). There is a snow-scence. We have direct and reflected light, therefore. Expose at moderate speed.

(6). Out of-doors. Dull day. Expose at slow speed, according to amount of light from all sides.

(7). Indoors. Dull day. Object in full light. Slow time exposure.

(8). Indoors. Bright day. Much light upon object. Fast time exposure.

With reference to above take note of the following table: —

Rapid exposure	= 1 25 to 1/ 000 (second) or less.
Moderate „	= 1,5 to 1.25	„
Fast time „	= 1 to 1 5	„
Slow time „	= more than a second.

The above depends upon
(1) The diameter of your aperture.
(2) The strength of your lens.
(3) The quality and date of manufacture of your plate or film.

Always examine your film-roll, film-pack, and box of plates before you purchase them, since it has come to my notice that old an therefore inferior material has been sold to the British in Cologne by certain firms. It is far better to learn to judge speeds and dimensions after one's own attempts than to rely upon tabular statements. Indeed, it frequently happens that one finds no time to refer to them.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Pte. Klegan (113071). — If you read German you might buy Dr. E. Vogel's Taschenbuch der Photographie. Read my previous articles in the Cologne Post of 17th April, 24th April and 2nd May. Your friends at home could send you such a work as you wish. Do not buy a camera in a hurry. Come and see me.

Sgt. Sutcliffe (527794). — This size is apparently to be had in England. In any case one can always obtain adapters, which fit in the slide, to hold foreign sizes of plates and film-packs. Secure a camera with an anastigmat lens if you can afford it. Come and see me about this.

LONELY GRAVES.

A hush fell upon every lip when, in a shell-pitted meadow, we first encountered the grave of one who had made the great sacrifice. Thereafter almost every field for several miles contained one or more graves of those who had been buried where they fell, and we wished we could have stopped the train to discover whether any of these carefully-tended memorials marked the remains of father, brother or friend.

On the evening of the second day the train clattered through the precipitous valley of the Loire, one of the bottlenecks of France which contributed so greatly to the German defeat. The factory district through which we next passed presented unmistakable indications of German occupation. We could well believe that the retreating enemy had looted the machinery of the factories; nowhere was there any sign of industrial activity.

GERMANY—A CONTRAST.

The following morning the first station we saw was Düren and we knew we were in Germany. How marked the contrast with the districts we had passed through! Everywhere extreme neatness, a high state of cultivation of the land and no signs of the horrors to which Germany had subjected other countries.

Passing over a great plain we reached Cologne, which struck all as a clean and handsome city. The crossing of the famous Rhine could not but thrill the travellers, and an hour later we detrained at Siegburg, a bright and cleanly township, basking that day in brilliant sunshine.

So ended a four days journey which can never be forgotten by those who took part in it.

Since then the Battalion has occupied the Prisoners of War Camp at Wahn and has now left the uninteresting scenery of the plains of the Rhine basin to occupy villages further eastward in a hilly district very like Buckinghamshire. If the Germans do not sign the peace terms, we congratulate ourselves that we shall have an early place amongst those who will show them that the Allies and Britain mean business and to not propose to let Germany run amok again in Europe. If the advance is sounded, the remembrance of the scenes through which we have travelled will spur us to high endeavour.

OLD ENGLISH DANCING.

AN INTERESTING DEMONSTRATION.

A very entertaining and instructive demonstration of English Folk dances was given in the Cologne Central Y.M.C.A. on Wednesday evening and there was a large and appreciative attendance. The demonstration was organised by Miss Duking, a member of the Central staff and it says much for her ability and knowledge of the terpsichorean art that the artistes, who included several English soldiers and lady assistants of the Y.M.C.A. had only commenced their rehearsals a few days previously and yet managed to get through a very comprehensive programme without a hitch. In the main, the programme consisted of country and sword dances. The country dances were collected from English villages or taken from Playford's "English Dancing Master", 1650, a volume which has found a place in the British Museum. For a variety of reason only Yorkshire was represented in the two sword dances given. To those of us who hail from Cheshire or Lancashire they seemed rather familiar and evoked memories of festival days, and particularly Whit Monday in those counties. The artistes were attired in old English costumes. In addition at the dances a number of old folk songs were given, these being representative of Essex, Norfolk, and Cambridgeshire.

WOMEN'S THEATRE COMPANY.

The Women's Theatre Company, under the able direction of Miss Inez Bensusan, is giving by kind permission of the Church Army their first performance at the Empire Leave Club on Tuesday, 13 May at 7 p.m.

Besides the two amusing one act plays "Releasing a man" and. "A bit of Blighty" Mr Esmé Percy is playing in, and producing for the first time in Cologne, Sir John Hawkins' charming play, "A constant lover."

Songs by Gladys Norcott and Hilda Potts make up a delightful evening's programme and one that is sure to be enjoyed.

On Friday 16 inst. at 8 p.m. the first lecture at the club will be given by Major Arthur Bles, Town Major on "The War and its Ending." The Chair will be taken by Major General Sihem, C. B. Those who have not already had the pleasure of hearing Major Bles should not fail to take this opportunity.

DUREN DIVISIONAL THEATRE.

"MERRIE MUFFINS" IN "THE NAUGHTY WIFE."

The Divisional Theatre, at Duren, is filled in every part nightly and will doubtless continue to be, while "Ye Merrie Muffins" concert party remains in the town. This week "The naughty wife," a comedy in three scenes, is presented while next week, the "Muffins" will be seen "As you were."

The first part of the programme comprises variety items. From the moment that "Muffin" Davy introduces the troupe, till the final scene in the comedy, the audience is kept in perfect humour. "Muffin" Rae, a young Scottish singer of much promise, submits "Peaches in Georgia" with telling effect. Then the rich basso voice of "Muffin" coates, another Highlander, is heard to great advantage in the rendering of "Neptune". It would please audiences drawn so much from the kilted units to hear these two fine vocalists sing a few songs in their "mither tongue." "Muffin" Willson's singing of "Drake goes West" is a splendid effort. Unfortunately, time does not permit of the vocalists appearing more often. "Muffin" Lonsdale again takes the lead in several of the concerted items. He is a great favourite with the audiences, who appreciate the "go" he evinces in his work. "Muffin" Teddie scores many distinct hits. His female impersonations are great. "Muffin" Davy, the other lady in the party acts the part to a nicety, particularly in song and speech. Lieut. Reg. C. Matthews, the leading "Muffin," is the life of the company. In musical sketch, in concerted piece, or in comedy scene, he shines as a first class artiste. His work is marked by a neatness, originality and freshness of style which stamp him as an accomplished entertainer.

"The Naughty Wife" is a scream. As Hugh Seymour, Lieut. Matthews performs the part of a light-hearted, imperturbable husband to perfection, Teddie, as his wife, "Musie," acts admirably; "Muffin" Lonsdale gives a clever impersination of "Julie" and the "Mrs Winter" of Davy is done exceedingly well, "Muffin" Runacre plays the part of Basil in a manner that leaves nothing to be desired and "Muffin" Coates is amusing as the chuffeur. The play is staged with striking effect the scenes being Mr. Seymour's flat and his bungalow.

The troupe receives splendid assistance from a well trained orchestra under the leadership (during the first part of the programme) of "Mulfin Runacre, and during the second part, of "Muffin" Matheson.

153rd LABOUR COY. WHIST DRIVE.

The weekly whist drives of this Coy continue to attract great enthusiasm.

This week's drive took place at H. Q. left half Coy., Nippes, on Wednesday and was largely attended. The prizes consisting of two handsome keyless watches, two note wallets, both containing a "ünf mark" note for 1st and 2nd Ladies and Gents and two Booby prices (cigarette cases) were won by: Pte Couch (1st Ladies); Pte Hogg (1st Gents); Pte Butler (2nd Ladies); Pte Parsons (2nd Gents); Pte Yeates (Ladies Booby); Pte Lomas (Gent's Booby). Two hidden number prizes (20 mk. notes) were offered by Capt. Summers (R.A.O.C.) and Lieut. Greensmith (R.A.O.C.). But when the number was revealed, there were five competitors with the same no. Through the generosity of the officers present each man was given a 20 mark note.

Prizes were presented by Lt. H. Mason of the Coy. who was ably assisted in the arrangement by Sergt. Forsyth and Pte A. S. Newman. During the drive tea was served to the players and a keenly contested game was thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

RHINELAND FOOTBALL REPORTS.

SOCCER IN SUMMER.

73rd ARMY BRIGADE R.G.A. FOOTBALL TOURNAMENT.

Although one should really be saying "good-bye" to the football season, and turning one's thoughts towards the recognised summer sports, the 73rd Army Brigade R.G.A. has been bold enough to start another Football Tournament in order to fill in the time before the arrival of cricket kit, and the completion of the grounds.

The first round was played on May 6th at Heide and resulted in a win for the Brigade Headquarters, the score being 2—1. In the first half after ten minutes even play, Sapper Wright, assisted by one of the Battery's backs, scored the first goal for Headquarters from a corner. There was no further score when the whistle blew for half time. During the second half the Battery equalised the score by rushing the ball through the Brigade goal after a spirited run down the field. Fortunately for the Headquarters, however, one of their opponents shot a goal against their own side, and so left them the winners by a goal.

For the Brigade Sapper Fowler played a very sound game throughout, and during most of the second half the team was greatly handicapped by having to play only ten men, as Lieut. Worfolk had to retire from the field temporarily incapacitated. For the Battery Bdr. Bryning played admirably and was the only man who seemed really dangerous.

MEDICOS BEAT GUNNERS.

481 SEIGE BATTERY R.G.A. V. No. 2 FIELD AMBULANCE.

Played at Rottgen on Tuesday. The game started at a fast rate both goals having narrow escapes in the first few minutes, some worrying play by Waite enabled Carr to open the score for the Ambulance. Stableton, of the Gunners, then made a splendid effort and equalised. Gross at this stage, played a fine game at back saving the Artillery goal on more than one occasion. Waite, however, with some good work enabled Carr again to place the Ambulance ahead. An penalty given against Cross was taken by Waite. The ball hit the upright, then, striking the goalkeepers arm, rebounded away up the field. Five minutes from half time, Carr got the Gunners defence tied up and Captain Edwards seized the opportunity and scored the 3rd goal for the Ambulance.

In the second half, Waite put across a well placed centre enabling Howarth to bang in the fourth goal for the Ambulance. The gunners then visited the other end and from a penalty against Boughton, Cross, with a shot which gave the goal-keeper not the fuintest chance, scored the Artillerys second goal, Waite later scored the "Medicos" fifth goal. Result: No. 2 Field Ambulance 5; 481 Battery R.G.A. 2.

5th CAMERONS SPORTS.

"A" Coy Inter-Platoon Championship.

This meeting was held at Geich and proved to be an unbounded success, despite the threatening aspect of the weather.

Had spikes been allowed the track would have been considered perfect. The running and jumping were exceptional good Officers competing for their platoons, counted points, but were not allowed is take prizes.

Outstanding among the competitors were Capt. D. Macdonald M.C. — who was Junior heavyweight champion athlete of Scotland in 1913 — with 5 firsts Lieut. Aird with 2, first, 2 seconds and 2 thirds and Ptes. Hunter, Whyte, Miller and Mackay.

AIRMEN SHARE THE HONOURS.

H.Q., 2nd BRIGADE, R.A.F. v. H.Q., 2nd WING.

At Bickendorf Zeppelin Hangar Ground. Neither team was at full strength. At the end of 20 minute play splendid combination on the part of the Brigade forwards ended in the centre-forward heading through a centre from the right. In the second half the Brigade, aided by the wind, made several attempts to get through but play was quickly carried to the other end, when, by an individual effort the wing centre deserved to get through but was bowled over at the critical moment. Resuming the attack, the Brigade almost scored when the outside right hit the upright with a rasping shot. In the last minute the 2nd Wing's right wing got through, the centre forward headed the ball past the goalkeeper, thus equalising the scores.

No further scoring took place and a very pleasant game ended with honours even.

ANOTHER "RAF" MATCH.

H.Q., 2ND BRIGADE, R.A.F. V 6TH BALLOON COY.

This match was played on at Bickendorf Zeppelin Hangar Ground the above ground on Saturday, last. The Brigade won the toss and defended the Hangar end against a stiff breeze. The Brigade forwards raided their opponents goal but could do anything but score. The Company's Left Wing retaliated and by judicious passing the centre forward (Ward) scored the first point with a well judged shot at close range. Rapid exchanges took place and both goalkeepers excelled during exciting tussles in the goal mouth. Just before half-time a run through by the brigade left culminated in an excellent centre which was neatly converted by Prudham. On resuming the Balloon Coy. were sorely pressed by the opposing forwards and when a goal semmed certain a defender handled. Hibble made an excellent save from the ensuing penalty, and brought off many excellent saves before he was beaten by the Brigade Centre-half with a deceptive dropping shot. This was repeated by the same player within a few minutes. The Brigade now had much their own way. A well combined effort resulted in the outside-left scoring from a well judged centre from the right wing. The Balloon Coy. made strenuous efforts to reduce the lead but the Brigade defence prevailed. When the whistle blew the Brigade were still pressing, Results: Brigade 4. Balloon Coy. 1.

GUNNERS TOUGH GAME.

175th v. 145th SIEGE BATTERY R.G.A.

These teams met on Sunday at Flamersheim Considerable interest was attached to the match as 145 Siege Battery, the visitors, had so far not lost a match, while 175 had only suffered defeat once when they lost to 185 by the odd goal in five. The homesters pressed for the first ten minutes. Cuttle soon tested Wheelden with a stinging shot and, altogether, the 145 defence had a warm time. Harcombe and Hoyle, however, were in grand form and kicked with rare judgement and strength. Eventually Lemons put Dome on the run, with a well judged pass. The wing man took the ball down and centred. Colley pounced on it and scored, but the referee ruled that the ball had past outside the upright.

Not in the least discouraged by this piece of bad luck, the visitors played up with great dash and Robson looked a scorer with only the goalkeeper to beat. The goalie, however, came out and cleared the shot in fine style. The first, and, at it proved, the only goal, came after 20 minutes play. Dome centred the ball and one of the home backs handled in the penalty area. From the ensuing penalty Lemons scored. 145 thoroughly deserved their lead.

A feature of the game which greatly amused the spectators was the way Wilcose dogged Cuttle's footsteps. It was a case of everywhere that Cuttle went, Wilcox was sure to go.

On recommencing, Done was soon away on the left wing with a pretty run. At the right moment, he passed to Colley, who had hard lines with a grand shot which just passed outside the post. Immediately afterwards the same player missed an easy chance when Causeaway centred the ball across the goal mouth.

The pace of the game seemed to tell on 175 for 145 were now doing all the pressing, and their forwards were always dangerous near goal. Lemons worked hard but was inclined to hang back too much on his halves. 145 might have drawn level on two occasions. Once when Bragg put a lovely shot in from the right wing which Wheeldon just cleared and again when Cuttle, from one of the few chances that came to his way, put the ball over the bar.

The end came with 145 still leading. The match was always fast and interesting to watch. Lt. Ward is to be congratulated on the way he handled the match. Result: 145 Siege Battery 1, 175 Siege Battery nil.

HIGHLANDERS CONTEST CLOSE GAME.

HEADQUARTERS SIGNAL SECTION v. "D" COY 51st GORDONS.

"Two's up" was the result of this game, played at Duren, on Monday afternoon. The weather was too warm for football, but a pretty lively game was witnessed. At the outset, "D" Coy, were the the aggressors, and after five minutes play opened the scoring through Wylie. Later on, the "Sigs" came more into the game and a good chance was thrown away by Moyes. He had only the goalie to beat, but shot straight into his hands. The remainder of the half was slightly in favour of "D" Coy; but no more goals were scored before the interval. Early in the second half Buchanan put "D" Coy, 2 goals up with a soft shot which the keeper could have saved with a little exertion. The "Sigs" put on a spurt after this, and play was more evenly contested. McCombe reduced the lead for them and they tried hard for the equaliser. This they got in the last minute of the game from a disputed penalty kick, Lieut. Brown making no mistake with his shot. On the play, "D" Coy were unlucky only to draw. Their defence was sound and the forwards played well together. Their best players were Morrison, Longmuir, Lenagham, Gillespie and McDonald. The "Sigs" play was too ragged, and Harvey, Lieut. Brown, M.C., McCuire, Lieut. McGregor, and Robertson were the only men who played up to their usual standart.

Captain Robert MacFadyen (Seaforth Highlanders) has been appointed secretary of the Prestwick St. Nicholas Golf Club, in place of Mr. James Robb (ex-amateur champion), who now takes over the duties of hon. treasurer.

CRICKET.

WIN FOR 8th FIELD AMBULANCE.

At Efferen on Tuesday, the 8th Field Ambulance (R.A.M.C.) defeated 70 Siege Battery by 5 runs. Hardaker and Cousins displayed capital form for the winners and the first named bowled excellently. On the losers side, Renyard and Salmon batted with sound judgement.

A BUNCH OF "DUCKS".

185 v. 174 SIEGE BATTERIES, R.G.A.

In a cricket match played at Weidesheim, between 185 Siege Battery and 174 Siege Battery a regrettable incident occured at the commencement of the game. Major Moss M.C., of 174 Siege Battery, after shaping well, played a ball on to his face, which seriously injured his nose. He was forced to retire.

DETAILS:

174 Siege Battery: Major Moss M.C., Retired hurt 1; Gnr. Wallace, c.Mc.Guckin b. Seaworthy 5; Gnr. Pleace, c. Mc.Guckin b. Seaworthy 0; Sgt. Box, c.Mc.Guckin b. Lt. Hitchcock 1; Lt. A feature of the match was the remarkable catching of Sgt. Mc.Guckin, who caught out 5 players in succession, and the bowling Bd Seaworthy who downed 6 wickets for 3 runs.

NEWMARKET RACES.

The two-thousand Guineas.

The weather continued to be fine for the second day of the Newmarket meeting on Wednesday when the 2,000 guineas was won by the Panther, the late Derby favourite: The results for the day were:

Barlow Plate: 1, Lovely Nightie (4—1); 2, Look Ahead (even); 3, Belle I. (4—1); Five ran. Won by two lengths; the same between second and third.

Chippenham Plate: 1, St. Tudwal (100—6); beat D'Orient. Two ran. Won by six lengths.

Two-thousand Guineas:

1, The Panther (10—1) Cooper.
2, Buchan (100—8) Smythe.
3, Dominion (100—6) A. Smith.

Also ran Tanjiers, Laurentian, Lord Basil, Iron Hand, Knight of Blyth, African Star, Bruffbridge, and Stephen the Great.

The field got off smartly from a good start Buchan leading tightly from Stephen the Great with Dominion, Bronbridge and the Panther close up for six furlongs. The Panther then challenged Buchan and won by a neck. Three quarters of a length separated the second and third. Bruffbridge was a close fourth, Lord Basil fifth and Iron Hand last. Lord Basil and Stephen the Great started joint favourites, 2—1 each.

Bretby Handicap: 1, Freesia (9—2); 2, Violinist 8—1); 3, Viviane (9—2); Nine ran. Won by a head; a length between second and third.

Wilbraham Plate: 1, Beanfeast (20—1); 2, Fair Helen (10—1); 3, Morcia Blanche (5—1). Nineteen ran. Won by three-quarters of a length; a neck between second and third.

War Worn Horses.

The Richmond Royal Horse Show, to be held on the 4th and 5th of July is likely to attract an enormous amount of interest. An outstanding feature in the saddle section this year is the class for Troop Horses that have seen military service. This event is unique in the history of shows. For the first time it is possible to arrange a class for horses that have actually gone through a campaign, and it will afford the public an opportunity of seeing some of the famous animals that have helped us to win the War. Horses entered in this class must either bear the Government brand mark, or if privately owned must furnish official evidence of time and nature of service. The King is presenting a valuable Silver Cup as first prize in this class; the Lord Mayor of London, and the R.S.P.C.A., other cups as second and third prizes.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

Rhine Officers Sports Club.

The opening ceremony of the Rhine Army Officers Sports Club on Wednesday, was generally voted by the large number present to be a particularly happy jollification. The Stadtwald, Lindenthal, where the club has the use of no fewer than sixteen tennis courts is an ideal place for spending an enjoyable summer afternoon, containing within its beautifully shaded precincts facilities for indulgence in all manner of enjoyable diversions. The cricket ground there is practically completed and a few days should see a busy cricketing period started. Rumour hath it the palatial club house is to be converted into a real old style country club wherein meals will be served. Such an idea is full of attractive possibilities and it is to be hoped that, for once, Rumour is truthful.

Mrs. Cox, Unlimited!

A little while ago, it was announced that the well-known Army Agents (whom a wag recently designated as per the title of this paragraph) were to open a branch of their bank in Hohestrasse Cologne, for the convenience of officers stationed and passing through here. It now transpires that the circulator of thi information was a little premature, as we are informed by bankers themselves that for the present, at all events, it is not proposed thus to extend the business. How do these rumours get abroad!

A Warning to Bathers.

At this season of the year it is no uncommon thing to read in the newspapers in England of bathing fatalities in practically every place where a "dip" is possible. The Thames is notoriously a profitic life taker on account of its treacherous currents and whirlpools and the posting of many notices along its banks is rightly considered necessary. How much more dangerous is the Rhine, as a bathing place, may be imagined when it is pointed out that the current exceeds by at least four times in point of swiftness that of the Thames. As one of the most attractive of summer pastimes, swimming is bound to attract many devotees during the warm weather and to those people who are tempted to try a dip in the Rhine, allow me to recommend a trip to Dormagen, a pretty little spot about a mile along the bank, where a delightful back-water offers wonderfully tempting facilities. Only the strongest of swimmers are able to negotiate the eddies that abound in all parts of the stream proper.

THE RAMBLER.

THE FORCES HORSE SHOW.

Royal Naval, Military, and Air Force Tournament.

After an interval of five years, the Tournament will be resumed on 28th June and remain open until 12th July at Olympia. A feature of this year is the extension of the title to include the Royal Air Force as the third great service.

The Tournament will this year be unique. It will be given, so far as the soldiers are concerned, by the newer Army direct from France and will therefore be comprehensively national. In 1914 the Tournament, on the military side, was given by officers and men of the British Expeditionary Forces. Not long after closing the show, those ranks, horses and guns which had so delighted the record "Houses" of that year, trod in the gateway to Paris earning immortal fame. The show of this year is in consequence something of a memorial to the "Old Contemptibles" by the newer Forces although, happily, some of the old will again return. The Navy too, a great factor in the show, will have old and new ratings, and the Air Force comes in young and vigorous.

A War Demonstration.

The principal section of the programme will be a demonstration by troops of the method of attack in France. The Tanks, the Infantry assault, the Machine Gun rush and the Artillery barrage will all come into it. It will not be a "fight" but a demonstration of method; an exhibition of the skill and labour involved in modern military movement. It will interest all, for it will be the first clear demonstration of a section of the Great Line in operation.

The Chairman of the Tournament is a famous Guards Commander, Major-General G.P.T. Fielding D.S.O., who is G.O.C. London District, the Vice-Chairman is Brigadier-General F. C. Alston, D.S.O.

The honorary Secretary and Manager is again Brigadier-General Sir C. W. King, the Director of Supplies of the original B.E.F. The Sub-Committee Chairman is Lieut.-General Sir A. F. Codrington. The Committee embraces Commodores Harry L. Skipwith, N. Bax, Robin C. Dalgish, and Arthur B. S. Dutton of the Royal Navy; Major W. K. Garnier, Royal Marines; Colonel R. B. Campbell (Physical Training Inspector); Lieut.-Colonel W. W. Jolf for the Royal Artillery; Lieut.-Colonel Le Q. Martel for the Royal Engineers; Lieut.-Colonel J. F. C. Fuller for Infantry; Colonel G. T. Dalby, School of Musketry; Lieut.-Colonel B. L. Sherbrooke, for Machine Gunners; Major F. H. Hotblack for the Tank Corps; Brigadier-General W. K. Tauver for the R.A.S.C.; Colonel C. R. Tyrrell for the R.A.M.C.; Colonel M. H. Egan for the R.A.O.C.; Brigadier-General J. G. Hearson and Lieut.-Colonel E. G. H. Clarke and H. St. Clair Smallwood for the Royal Air Force; Colonel Viscount Valentia for Yeomanry, and Brigadier-General the Earl of Lucan for the Territorial Force.

WONDERFUL SOCCER RECORD.

Everton and Notts Forest, winners of the Lancashire and Midland Section honours respectively, meet in home-and-home matches on May 10 and 17 for the League championship proper. The first game will be played at Nottingham, the second at Goodison Park.

The Goodison Park team won the Lancashire Section championship with the following wonderful record:—

P.	W.	D.	L.	For.	Agst.	Pts.
30	27	2	1	108	26	56

Forest, in winning the leadership of the Midland Section, performed capably in many games, but their figures do not compare favourably with those of Everton. Here is the Forest's record:—

P.	W.	D.	L.	For.	Agst.	Pts.
30	18	6	6	59	31	42

The season's form points to Everton coming successfully through both tests, says the Daily Express. Certainly, the Forest have no forwards anything like as deadly as Gault and Cleemell. Gault is the champion shot of the season, and Clemmell has also a big bag of goals to his credit.

BRAVERY AT WESTHOVEN.

AN EXPLOSION AN ITS SEQUEL.

About two months ago a terrific explosion took place in the Artillery Depot near Westhoven. German workpeople were engaged in removing the explosive material from sixteen inch shells, and it was owing to some accident duriug this process that the explosion occured. Several of the German workpeople who were mostly girls, were killed outright, a larger number were injured, whilst to make matters worse a serious fire broke out making further explosions very probable. A number of men from No. 1 Section of the London H.A.C. whose lines were 250 yards away at once ran across to give help, and were the first to assist in removing the wounded. A fire hose was then got to work and two of these brave artillerymen, Gunner C. Baynton and Driver W. M. Hurst held the nozzle of the hose close to the burning shed although in the event of a second explosion, which seemed very likely, they would certainly have been killed. The same two men had been amongst the most daring in removing the wounded.

At an inspection on Saturday last, Brig.-Gen. Oldfield, the C.R.A. of the division, congratulated these men on their bravery and announced that both were to receive the Meritorious Service Medal. Baynton and Hurst are both on the point of demobilization and the award is a fitting close to a long war service. The bestowal of this honour has given much satisfaction to the men's comrades with whom they were very popular

SHORTHAND CLASSES.

Afternoon or evening classes in the Sloan-Duployan method of shorthand will be held in the Army College, Cologne, provided that there is a sufficient number of applicants.

All troops, living in or near Cologne, who wish to take up this subject should see Capt. Bassford, Army General and Commercial College Hansa-Ring, Cologne, if possible before Saturday. May 10th. The office will be open for this purpose between the hours of 14.00—15.00 and 17.00—18.00.

CENTRAL CLASSES — ARMY TROOPS.

The afternoon classes for Army Troops will re-commence during the week beginning May 19th, as follows: —

MONDAY AND THURSDAYS.

Arithmetic (Commercial and Workshop), Elementary Mathematics (including Workshop Mathematics), German, Geography, Shorthand (Pitman's), Building Construction.

TUESDAYS AND FRIDAYS.

History, French, Machine Drawing, English Composition and Literature, Applied Mechanics.

WEDNESDAYS AND SATURDAYS.

Commercial Correspondence, Book-keeping.

Army troops who wish to jouin these classes or to prepare either for a full course at one of the Army Colleges, or for the Army First Class Certificate Examination, should see the officer in charge of Education in their units. G.H.Q. personnel should apply direct to the Education Officer, Army Troops, at the Army College, Hansa-Ring, at 14.00 hrs at 17.00 hrs.

UTOPIAN SOLDIERING.

A DAY WITH THE UMPTEENTH M. G. C.

(With apologies to the 3rd.)

To begin with, we rise, and readers will at once realise that this is indeed a noble beginning bearing in mind how hard it is to tear oneself from the luxurious snow-white sheets and comfy eiderdowns.

After a good tub of hot water with Erasmic and Vinolia soap and a delightful shave with the best Gillettes we repair to our Dining Hall — Here we find an example other units might well copy. The following is a specimen of our daily menu.

Breakfast: Coffee, Rolls, Dairy Butter and eggs, with ham, whilst every other day we have in addition some lovely sole.

Dinner: Roast Beef or Mutton, Sauce, Potatoes, Beans, Carrots, Onions and Pickles, Milk Puddings, Butter, Cheese, Warrior Port, Coronas and Coffee.

Tea: Bread, Butter, Cream, Tea, Lettuce, Watercress, Light Pastries and Cakes. Meat.

Supper: Soups various, Bread, Cheese, Beer and Wines.

Our Corporals' room is indeed a close rival to the Ritz and to those familiar with the many delightful modernisms of the Ritz, a description of this room is unnecessary.

After a mornings work, carried out to the enlivening strains of our Drum and Bugle Band, which our natural modesty forbids us comparing to that of the Royal Artillery or J. P. Sousa's, or even the Modern Jazz) we take Dinner (as above), at 12.30 hours.

In the afternoon being distinctly manly men we naturally repair to the playing fields where Football, Cricket, Hockey, Baseball, Lawn Tennis, Rounders and Leapfrog etc., etc., are indulged in with great zest.

At 16.30 hours we take tea.

After tea we stroll along to our Electric Cinema de Luxe where pictures calculated to please the most fastidious are to be seen. Here we enjoy the lovely cushioned tip-up seats and inhale with delight the exquisite brands of tobacco and cigarettes smoked by our comrades.

Ad 20.00 hours we take supper.

At about 22.00 hours, fatigued to a degree that just makes sleep a repose of charm, and not (as to many) the welcome relief to a tired and worn body, we retire to our Spring Mattresses, Snowy Sheets and Eiderdowns, don our delicately perfumed pyjamas and assume a recumbent position, and thus ends another of our perpetually perfect days. G. H. T.

Proprietor (just demobilised)—Yus, I've been through it—officer's cook two years—been wounded twice. Tommy (tasting the soup)—You're lucky, mate. It's a wonder they didn't kill yer.

Poet—Ah, once a Bohemian, always a Bohemian. A Bohemian never changes. Friend—No. Not even his collar.

Clergyman.—You should do as you want to be done by. Young Hopeful—But I don't want to be done by anybody.

Artist (to wife, reading letter from sister). Was her wedding a success? Wife— Oh, yes! She received seventy-nine presents!

Fred—They tell me at your office you are only one of the clerks, and you said you were a director. Charles—So I am. I direct the envelopes.

ARMY RELEASE.

"EXTREME COMPASSIONATE GROUNDS."

An Army Council Instruction issued recently gives a definition of the expression "extreme compassionate grounds," used in a previous order, as a reason for granting the release of a soldier from the Service. It is explained that the expression applies to, and is limited to, warrant officers, N.C.O.s, and men falling within one or more of the following categories:

SON, who has a widowed mother in necessitous circumstances with two or more children dependent upon her; no child being capable of earning and the mother herself being incapable of earning.

GRANDSON, who has a grandparent or grandparents in necessitous circumstance with two or more great-grandchildren or grandchildren dependent upon him, her, or them; no great-grandchild or grandchild being capable of earning and being wholly dependent on the grandparent or grandparents being incapable of earning and dependent on grandson.

HUSBAND, whose wife is in necessitous circumstance and is a chronic invalid and wholly dependent on the soldier, either without children or, if with children, no child being capable of earning.

WIDOWER, with two or more children under 14 years of age and no near relation to look after them. The expression "near relation" for this purpose shall be interpreted as parent, grandparent, brother and sister of the soldier.

A release on extreme compassionate grounds shall not be extended to:

Soldiers serving on regular engagements whose period of colour service has not expired,

Soldiers who volunteer for service in the Armies of Occupation, without reference to the War Office.

DEMOBILIZED OFFICERS AND UNEMPLOYMENT.

BANDIED FROM PILLAR TO POST.

Prominent attention has been directed to the case of the demobilized officer by Sir Douglas Haig's story of one with the V.C., D.S.O., and M.C. trudging in vain through the streets of London in search of work.

There are, as he said, many such cases, and it is suggested that all is not quite as it should be with the official machinery that has been set up to deal with this problem. From the very beginning the results have been unsatisfactory. In the months of October and November, 1917, to take two typical periods, it cost more than £4 a head to find men appointments, and in these two months only 120 were placed.

Out of a total number of 139,000 applications including a certain number of men as well as officers, only 4,130, up to the time of the last return some days ago, had been found appointments. By far the greater proportion of the applicants, disgusted with being bandied from pillar to post, have given up all hope of finding employment through this channel, but 5,000 or more are still on the books waiting for something to turn up.

An authority who discussed the whole position with a representative of the Daily News on Monday, pointed to the urgent need for the Ministry to get into closer touch with employers of labour. At present, he said, employers generally have no confidence in the methods of the Ministry of Labour, and will not use their register. "The Ministry," he suggested, "should have men of undeniable business capabilities spending their whole time in interviewing the largest employers of labour, enlisting their sympathy in the scheme, and in keeping the Ministry in actual living touch with employers throughout the country."

A BIRMINGHAM EXPERIMENT.

A Birmingham correspondent of the Daily News writes:

Birmingham is experimenting with a new type of tramway, which it is proposed to incorporate in the ambitious town-planning schemes now being undertaken.

A number of arterial roads, 110 and 120 feet in width, will be a feature of the new Birmingham. Along these roads it is intended to run a raised tramway, with a carriage way on each side for up and down traffic respectively, flanked by spacious walking ways beneath which all the pipes will be laid for gas, electricity, water drainage, and such services.

Work is now in hand towards making a trial of the raised tramway in Pebble Hill-lane, on the south-west side of the city. It will be an independent line, on which no other traffic will be allowed except at certain appointed crossings. Occupying altogether a width of 33ft. along the middle of the road, it will carry double tracks. It will be raised on sleepers 8in. or 9in. above the carriage ways, the intervals betwen the sleepers being turfed where practicable or, in the alternative, filled in with gravel.

How far the sleeper tramway is a solution of the traffic problem is still a matter of controversy. It is agreed, however, that it would be much less noisy than the present system and much more economical, as the life of rails and rolling stock would be prolonged. Comparatively light construction would, it is thought, suffice.

CHUCKLE A WHILE.

An American naval commander, on arrival in Scottish waters, was signalled to anchor at the Forth Bridge. After cruising about for hours the officer signalled back this message:— "Have searched this brook from mouth to source. Have found the first bridge all right, but I'm blest if I can find the second, let alone the third or fourth!"

At a meeting of a board of guardians a member was welcomed back after a long illness. The chairman, in the course of his speech, said:—

"I am sure I express the sentiments of all here when I say that we are glad to have amongst us again Mr——. And I hope he will now take care of himself, for we all know that 'one live ass is better than a dead lion any day.'"

A little four-year-old boy had been unusually unruly.

He had received reprimands, threats, and finally mild corporal punishment from his father. With wounded dignity the child mounted the stairs to his mother's room.

"Mother," he said, in a voice of exasperation, "I can't stand that husband of yours much longer."

There had been a heavy downfall of rain, and the district railway manager was quickly on the warpath. He telegraphed along different sections of the line as follows: "Send full particulars of the flood."

Now there was a man on a particular section of the line where no flooding had taken place, and he decided that the message was a joke, so he wired back as follows: "Look in the Book of Genesis."

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

HATRED WITHOUT END!

If there is any branch of science in which the Germans can claim to have surpassed us it is that dealing with the inculcation of the spirit of hatred. The World War has revealed this fact to us, and it speaks well for the German propagandists when we say that the hatred of the Central Powers for those of the Allies was little short of complete.

There is a great difference between the dislike we have for the Germans and that of the Germans for us, each the result of a different form of growth.

The latter is of much longer standing than the former, more fermented, more hideous.

The Germans realised long before 1914 that if they were to have World Power, England must be reduced first of all to a secondary consideration. That little island, with its hundreds of appendages throttled the whole situation and nothing could be done until she was subdued. Accordingly, a hatred sprang up within the German people. To foster this most necessary element of war the Government placed at the disposal of the people sheet upon sheet of false statements anent the British. Thus this spirit of loathsomeness was made to grow, examples of which can be seen in the reports of the Commission of the treatment of Prisoners of War, in the outrages which from time to time have been committed, and in the medallions and commemorations instituted in honour (and disgrace) of these offences.

Wir lieben vereint, wir hassen vereint,
Wir haben nur einen einzigen Feind
England.

It is interesting to note a recent article in the Welt am Montag on this subject of hatred, and of how the spirit was fostered by means of deception. In the bringing of victory to the Central Powers, hatred has proved futile, and now's relegated merely to the purpose of encouraging antagonism between the various parties in the new republic.

Responsibility for militarisation of Europe.

We have hated, we hate, we are hated: shall it be endless?" Says the writer.

"Our delegates have gone to France. Slowly the train was driven across the desert of which a war declared by us and carried out according to our methods has changed the most fertile part of France. Hate accompanied them. Hate received them. Hate dictated peace terms. Hate and — fear. Fear of a Germany that only has become pacifist by chance, but remained militarist at the bottom of her heart.

"The worst sin I reproach to our Government is that it has neglected to enlighten our own people and to disperse the clouds which the official lies have caused. All the world knows that Germany is to be indebted for the outbreak of war; that we are responsible for the militarism of Europe, for we prevented disarmamen and court of arbitration at The Hague conferences that we rejected any attempt of international agreement in July 1914; that, by tolerating the ultimatum of Vienna against Serbia, we put the slow match to the barrel of powder; that we explained the war declaration to France with fraudulent assertions; and that by breaking the neutrality of Belgium and Luxembourg we represented ourselves from the beginning to be less scrupulous than the others from the point of view of morality.

"But German people in its majority do not know this as yet. It still believes in that fairy tale of surrounding politics, of the war forced upon us, and of the unneutral behaviour of Belgium.

"All the world knows too, that Germany was the cause of the endless prolongation of war; that already in 1915 there was an opportunity to get into touch with England through the medium of The Hague, but that the Foreign Office rejected violently the attempt of mediation of the Dutchman, Dresselnuys (naturally on the inducement of the military authorities); that in 1916, a favourable peace could have been obtained by Wilson's adjustment, but we preferred to promise to Mexico some American provinces and to start the aggravated submarine warfare.

"The German people in its majority is still thinking that always we have been ready for peace but that the others were full of unrestrained love of war.

German warfare distinguished for inhumanity.

"All the world knows that German warfare had distinguished itself by particular lack of consideration, not to say inhumanity. The reason of it was, partially, that we did not only make war in a foreign country, but also we were superior to the others in technics. But it remains that we, by sinking with our U-boats, merchant and passengers ships without warning fixed up as a system a specially exciting form of violation of international law; that we gave a most vile example in using poisoned gas and flame-throwers; and that by our aerial attacks on open English towns, which were totally senseless from the military point of view, we aroused a feeling of hate between the multitude of English people.

But German in its majority still believes that we restricted ourselves to the necessities of war and safeguarded faithfully the right of nations, whilst the others, the Baralong murderers, were beasts in human figures.

All the world knows that German propaganda abroad left behind everything concerning atrocity that in America, when she had not yet entered the war, we abused parts of our official representation to every form of corruption and force; It is known, too, that we made use of the sacredness of diplomatic intercourse to smuggle explosive stuffs to neutral countries like Norway, Sweden, and Switzerland, with the destination to injure our enemies, that we tried by most abominable means to bring to high treason Irish and other prisoners.

"The German people in its majority is still speaking faithfully of the propaganda of lies of others, of the campaign of bribery of English and American agents, of the murder of Casement etc.

"He who has but an idea of the sins of our former rulers, realises the world atmosphere of hate which surrounds us. But the majority of the German people do not know the things yet.

"But it ought to know them, unless it will oppose to hate nothing else than hate again. So that the world remains what it was during the past four years: A single theatre of war.

THE COLOGNE OPERA.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.—Your correspondent A. F. Jones, writing of "Rigoletto," is particular, and Opera in General in your issue of the 2nd inst. makes a curious statement. He says "opera productions in England are usually better than those to be heard here." The last two words of that sentence give the trend of his thoughts, which are in my humble opinion quite wrong. Putting aside for the moment the actual production — for what does the intelligent person go to the opera? Merely to hear good music well sung? Surely not. Music is merely one of the elements which go to make up an artistic whole. Wagner's view was that the music was merely an item, another move in fact of producing action or emotion. that is to say to through the ear instead of the eye. Most people know that colour can be conveyed to the mind by music. Fear, hate and love are as easily translatable through the same medium. It follows, therefore. that if one goes to the opera merely to hear it one loses half the joy of the feast, so to speak. The music should be absorbed — in conjunction with the setting, beauty of scenery, lighting effects and acting. That is the true way to appreciate an opera, which after all is only a drama with all its comedy, tragedy and love enhanced by music. Nowhere in England, may I ask, can one see an opera so magnificently produced and well-acted? In London, it is true, one can hear the world's most splendid songsters, and generally also see the worst acting. Caruso as Don Juan, the ardent young lover of Carmen, — ye gods! his voice is perfect, yes, but his acting, to say the least, mediocre. Tetrazzini as the beautiful heroine of La Traviata! — singing peerless I grant, vocal gymnastics wonderful, but figure, acting, expression? No; in England the vocal and orchestral side of the performance is beyond criticism, but the rest of the elements which go to make up the complete performance as visualized by the composer and the librettist (who by the way is too often forgotten) have been to a great extent ignored and especially the acting. If one's idea of enjoyment of an opera is merely to hear it, — one should not go to the opera house, for that purpose the Concert Hall is the place.

GERMANY OBJECTS TO PAYING THE PRICE

ONE WEEK'S MOURNING.

AND A LIFETIME'S REPENTANCE.

CONTINENTAL OPINIONS ON THE TERMS.

GERMAN GOVERNMENT'S APPEAL TO THE NATION.

JUSTICE AND RIGHT.

To say that the Germans are feeling acute humiliation over the terms on which they can have Peace is merely to record the obvious.

Amid the general chorus of "Germany will never sign", however, is heard here and there the voice of a thinking German that "Germany caused the war and therefore must pay; but it is hard that proud Germany shall be reduced from a first class to a third class power."

Even now, here in British Occupied Territory, the German people, thankful that they are under the protecting shield of the British Empire, do not know that it was Germany which introduced poison gas!

Is it to be wondered at that they are ignorant of other and bigger factors-the secret plottings of absconded Monarchs and Ministers-wich have brought a foully deceived people to this pass?

Germany can pay and must pay.

It must pay in treasure and trade. In those things which count for more than either of these things, more than thrones and Empires, will it rise again on a foundation of Justice and Right.

But in humble penitence it must undergo the weary and painful travail of new birth.

PROTEST OF THE PRUSSIAN ASSEMBLY.

OUR OLD FRIEND KULTUR.

On Thursday the Peace Commission of the German Government, in a sitting lasting five hours, occupied itself with the draft Treaty of Peace of the Allies and unanimously upon the policy to be pursued by the delegates at Versailles.

Prime Minister Scheidemann compared the fourteen points of President Wilson with the draft Treaty of Peace communicated yesterday. He said: "The present day, which finally, after the six months' torture of the Armistice, has acquainted us with the chief items of the peace terms of our enemies, signifies the lowest degree of Germany's abasement. No matter whether we accept or not, we would still be pushed lower to the more hopeless ruin of the State and the Nation. Gentlemen! We shall be standing by the grave of the German people it these Peace terms are ratified by contract. The Government is trusting to arrive at an agreement by negotiation.

"When Count Rantzau said in the name of the delegation: We shall examine with a good will the document which you have delivered to us, hoping that all will be able to sign the final result of our meeting', he said it in absolute agreement with the Government. We shall fight this battle with all our strength, with yours also, and I hope with the strength of our whole people."

The Prussian Prime Minister, Herr Hirsch, quoted Shakspeare in his speech. "To be, or not to be; that is the question," he said, "the whole people must stand united behind their Government, that it can fulfil its duty. The saddest day in German history must find a strong generation."

The Vice-President, Dr. Frenzel, added "We protest with energy against these conditions, which would make us unable to fulfil the task of Kultur which we must pursue if we want to live."

After the speech of the Prime Minister to the Peace Committee had met with unanimous approval, the President of the National Assembly submitted a manifesto, in which the leaders of all parties opposed the Treaty of Peace in its present form.

Herr Fehrenbach, the President, intends to convoke the National Assembly at Berlin on Monday next.

GERMAN GOVERNMENT APPEAL.

Headed "An appeal to the German people by the Government of the Empire." The following has been issued: —

"The sincere will of Peace of our much suffering people found a first answer in the extraordinarily hard conditions of the Armistice. The German people had laid down their arms and fulfilled honestly the conditions of the Armistice, hard as they were. The German people bore all their burdens with confidence in the promise given by the Allies in their note of the 15th November 1918, that Peace would be a Peace of Right on the basis of the fourteen points of President Wilson.

"Instead of that we are offered something which is unbearable for the German people and unrealizable with the utmost exertion.

"The German Government will answer this proposal of a Peace of Right on the basis of a durable peace between the people. The deep agitation which has seized all circles of the German people proves that the German Government expresses the united will of the people. The German Government will make every possible effort to acquire for the German people the same freedom of work in Economics and Kultur, which the Allies will give to all people of Europe.

"Without difference of parties may Germany unite herself in the common will to protect the German folk and the acquired liberty. The whole thought, and whole will of the nation belongs now to the work for the conservation and rebuilding of our Fatherland. The Government call upon all, in this serious hour, to hold out in reciprocal confidence on the way of duty and in the faith of the victory of Reason and Right."

(Signed) The President of the German Republic
EBERT

THE FRENCH PRESS NOT QUITE SATISFIED.

The Petit Journal says "If we examine only the great lines we must admit the efforts of Justice and Equity made by the authors of this document, unique in the history of the world, in order to give satisfaction to the legitimate claims of the people who have suffered under the criminal aggression of Germany.

"The Treaty does not bring to the people concerned all reparations which could have been expected' but it constitutes nevertheless an honourable compromise which deserves to be received with satisfaction."

The Echo de Paris: "The French Ministers have pledged our signature. We cannot go back on what has been done. Let us draw the best from what we have and let us not ignore its value because we wanted it greater."

The Humanite: "There will be no Frenchman who on reading the Treaty will not feel a deep joy at the sight of the consecration on so many points of this principle of nationalities for which France shed her blood. The dead have not died in vain. Hard as our conditions are, they are mild in comparison with those which the Germans intended to impose on us had they been victorious.

"If the German delegates find them too hard they have only to visit for a week the vast cemetery and the colossal ruin of Northern France and they would thank us for offering them a peace so generous, so exempt from all low spirit of vengeance, so impregnated by a spirit of Justice."

Le Gaulois: "Think it over and draw your own conclusions; perhaps you will realise that in this fight in which the future of France was at stake, M. Clemenceau was not inferior to the confidence which France reposed in him. After having won the war he has not lost the supreme battle for the acquisition of a peace worthy of such a people as ours. "However this treaty, as all treaties, will have its value only by the manner in which it is applied and respected."

AMERICAN OPINION.

New York morning papers are unanimous in declaring that Germany is rendered absolutely powerless by the terms of the Treaty and has incurred the fate she deserved.

The Newspaper World says that Germany's world power, in the one and only sense in which it was ever understood by Junkerdom, is obliterated. The Treaty is the death certificate of German Militarism and Imperialism and the damages Germany is to pay are reasonable in comparison with the damages for which she is responsible.

The New York Times says that the world is made safe against the German peril. The world can see that the terms are terribly severe but the world knows that they are just, and even lenient as compared with the terms a victorious Germany would have imposed. The punishment of Germany will be one of the greatest deterrents to the war spirit.

German press opinions are given on the fourth page.

A WEEK OF MOURNING.

The German Government has expressed a wish that for one week all public festivities will be suspended. All dances will be prohibited. In the theatres only serious plays should be performed, as befitting the serious character of the times. This week of mourning will probably begin on Sunday. The stock exchanges at Berlin and Frankfort will be closed.

DELEGATES AT PARIS.

The discussion of the Austro-Hungarian Treaty will begin in the middle of May.

The French newspapers say that the Germans will propose to take over themselves the reparation of the damages in Northern France and Belgium. It is probable that the Allies will reject this proposal. Le Journal adds that certainly Germany will contest the clauses concerning the Sarre, Dantzig, Colonies and military occupation.

Besides the guarantees furnished by the Treaty of Peace President Wilson pledges himself to propose to the Senate of the United States and the Prime Minister of Great Britain pledges himself to propose to the British Parliament that a proposal be submitted for the approbation of the Council of the League of Nations, binding both the United States and Great Britain to afford immediate help to France in the event of any unprovoked aggression by Germany.

Versailles 8th May. The German plenipotentiaries were rather silent during dinner yesterday evening. Immediately after dinner the translation into German of the text of the Treaty was commenced and completed by 3 a.m. At 3.15 a.m. a typed copy was handed to Count Brockdorff-Rantzau. The morning was well advanced before he had finished its persual. Thirty-two copies of this translation were made. Several copies were sent to Berlin by the diplomatic courier, who left yesterday evening at 9 o'clock.

Count Brockdorff-Rantzau also sent a long telegram to Berlin. He has expressed a wish to see the Austrian delegates when they arrive at Saint Germain.—Wireless.

According to a German delegate, three Germans will be present at the Peace Conference between the Allies and the Austro-Hungarian representatives. It is generally believed that the German plenipotentiaries will make counter-proposals to the Treaty. The competent commissions will examine these during the week. The Allies will then hand over the eventual modifications of the original text and grant a delay of four or five days before the Treaty is definitely accepted as a whole. From twenty-five to thirty days will then elapse before the signature of the Treaty.—Wireless.

CORRECTION.

After we had gone to press with our special edition of The Cologne Post containing the full text of the Preliminary Peace terms we received an important telegraphic correction.

In the copies which were issued before this telegram arrived a line was printed (1st para, 2nd Col. page 3) "to an additional amount of twenty thousand."

The correct sentence should read:—"and an undertaking to deliver Bonus to an additonal amount of TWO thousand million pounds . . . etc."

NORTH WEST FRONTIER OF INDIA.

TAKING PRECAUTIONS.

Reuter learns that the Foreign Office of India is now transmitting to England communications dealing with the anxious situation which has arisen during the last few days on the North Western frontier. It is known that Afghan tribesmen have crossed the frontier with, it is believed, the assistance of Afghan regulars, and occupied certain positions on the Indian side of the frontier. All military precautions have been taken. While the situation from a purely Afghan point of view may not be serious, these incidents must be taken in conjunction with the general unrest among Moslems resulting from the war.

A vigorous note has been despatched to the Amir which it is hoped may induce him to take adequate measure to keep his people quiet. No very large number of tribesmen is at present involved. The heights occupied have some strategic importance, as they command two of the roads leading across the frontier.

It is felt that the military steps taken will have the effect of expelling the intruders and there is no doubt of the ability of our available forces to deal with the situation. The attitude of native troops on the British side of the frontier is understood to be satisfactory.

General Barrett has been appointed to the command.

AUSTRIANS AGAIN IN THE FIELD.

UNEXPECTED OUTBREAK.

Reuter learns that hostilities have broken out between Austrians and Yugo-Slavs. The latter have advanced over the Drau (Drau) in the direction of Villach and Klagenfurt. The river has been crossed at Volkermarkt, East of Klagenfurt.

Carinthian troops recaptured the bridge-head on the 2nd May, but afterwards evacuated it.

The outbreak is entirely unexpected and the reasons for it are very obscure.

BRITISH DEMOCRATS HELP AGAINST BOLSHEVISM.

FINLAND'S GRATITUDE.

Mr. Clem Edwards, chairman of the National Democratic Party in London, has received through the British Consul at Helsingfors the following cablegram from General Judenitsch on behalf of the Russians in Finland whose aim is to crush Bolshevism. "I beg you to accept our most sincere gratitude for your good wishes in the commencement of our task, also our best thanks for your readiness to help the suffering populace of Petrograd."

TORPEDOED HOSPITAL SHIPS.

U BOAT FIEND ARRESTED.

The Captain of a U-boat has been arrested by the Naval authorities. He was aboard a Dutch liner which called at Falmouth, where he had arrived after internment in Spain with the crew of a German submarine. He is believed to be the commander of U 56, the boat which is reported to have sunk several hospital ships. It is understood that he has been taken to the Tower.

REWARDS FOR PRISONERS OF WAR.

An Army order says that, providing no blame is attached in respect of their original capture officiers and soldiers are eligible for appropriate reward, for exceptional services rendered while prisoners of war or during internment. Exceptionally gallant conduct or determination displayed while escaping or attempting to escape will also be recognised.

TRAINING MEN FOR THE LAND.

LORD FRENCH'S APPEAL.

The need for special training of ex-service men who wish to settle on the land is emphasised in a letter from Field Marshal French. He writes: "The number of ex-service men, who not only wish to settle on the land but wish to have adequate agricultural training is proving very considerable.

"With a strong Government Land policy for providing ex-service men with facilities for securingsland, the work of the British County Homeland Association, of which I am president, is likely to grow very rapidly. It only needs a strong backing of public opinion to enable it to cope with the demand.

"The Association has already established a large training centre at Buckhurst Manor, Sussex, and other countries are wishing to own training centres. Now is the time for men to begin training and I would urge that they should not be kept waiting because of lack of knowledge on the part of the General public."

FREEDOMS FOR FIELD MARSHAL HAIG.

THE HAMMERERS.

During his tour in North Britain Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig will receive the Freedom of nearly the whole of Scotland.

Yesterday he was honoured by Glasgow, the ceremony taking place in St. Andrew's Hall. The Field Marshal said he did no forget that Glasgow was the first city to offer him its freedom. It did so at a time when the issue of the great conflict was still in doubt, when it was in no way clear, at any rate to outside observers, that the tremendous efforts of 1916 and 1917 were not made in vain because so little seemed to have been accomplished. "God knows" he said "there was little need for exaggeration of the hardships and suffering of the heroic men who drove the enemy from Passchendale. They were perhaps such as no other army was ever called upon to bear or could have borne."

He remembered at the time that he figured in newspaper headlines as "Haig the Hammerer". That was a title others shared with him. If his was the responsibility for that policy it was the indomitable energy and strength of the British Armies, and their insistent blows, that made them irresistible.

CRITICISING FIELD MARSHAL FRENCH.

A leading article in the Morning Post says that "in the interests of his high soldierly reputation and a name which the nation delights to honour we would ask Field Marshal French whether it is not rather straining propriety by measures whereto he is lending himself. We cannot believe that the man who has the imperishable honour of commanding during the retreat from Mons, the recovery at the Marne and the decisive stand at Ypres is serving his reputation by the course which he is now taking.'

Mr. Lovat Fraser in the Daily Mail says that by his motion of censure on Lord French Sir Donald Maclean is seeking to prevent anything coming out about Mr. Asquith.

In the Daily Telegraph Field-Marshal Sir John French pursues his way. The latest instalment deals with the battle of the Marne. He claims that the fulfitment of the German strategical scheme was crushed for ever as the result of this battle. Splendidly as the Allies fought, however, it was the Germans themselves who deliberately threw away any chance of a decisive victory. French attributes Von Kluck's sudden change from advance to retreat to the fact that he and his staff had never liked the role forced upon them by the General staff, and undertook the battle with wavering minds and heads turned half round. As regards tactical experts in the battle French believes that the name of Joffre will descend to posterity as one of the greatest commanders in history. He claims that the British Army carried out the role assigned to it and its rapid passage and unexpected appearance on the lines of retreat practically decided the great result.

GERMANY STILL HAS GOODS TO EXPORT.

The Peace Committee of the German National Assembly passed a resolution favouring the re-establishing of friendly commercial relations with Russia and the conclusion of a truce. Herr Dernburg, Finance Minister, announced the appointment of a Commissioner to promote export trade and said that Germany still has goods enough to export and is even able to manufacture them.—Reuter.

INTOLERANTS AT IT AGAIN.

At the Annual Conference of the National Temperance League at Westminster a resolution was carried demanding the removal of facilities for obtaining intoxicating drinks during the Peace demonstrations.

In the course of the discussion Dr. Claude Taylor condemned the Army rum ration, which led men to think that alcohol was the best friend of man in an emergency.

POLICE RAID CONSPIRATORS' OFFICES.

INCITING TO MUTINY.

The police yesterday raided the offices in London of the "Sailors, Soldiers and Airmens Union," This society of malcontents was formed some months ago with the object of inducing soldiers who enlisted under the Derby Scheme, or who were conscripted, to demobilise themselves on the 11th May by marching out of the barracks at various stations in France and England.

It actually circulated leaflets inciting sailors to seize Naval ports. The conspirators contend that soldiers were entitled to discharge themselves after the Armistice.

COAL COMMISSION INQUIRY.

DUKES GIVE EVICENCE.

At the Coal Commission Inquiry yesterday the agent of the Duke of Hamilton (who is ill) said that the average income from the Duke's mines during the last ten years was 113 thousand pounds. The lands were granted by the Crown, the earliest grant being that made by Robert Bruce. The late Duke's income, he said, was 240 thousand.

Mr. Smillie said he had been living on the Hamilton Estate for fifty years. Many of the miners living close to the magnificent palace were on the verge of starvation in miserable conditions.

The Duke of Northumberland said he held rights over 244,500 acres. His average annual income for the last five years was fifty-five thousand but in 1918 it was only twenty-three thousand owing to taxation.

He had caused to be inserted in leases clauses to the effect that plans for new cottages must be submitted for his approval and that cottages on the estate must be kept in proper repair.

Replying to Mr. Hodges he said he should do his utmost in the House of Lords to prevent Nationalisation of mines because the Miners Federation was aiming at the confiscation of all land and wanted to gain complete control of the industry.

Sir Chiozza Money asked the Duke: "Don't you think it a bad thing for one man to own as much as you?" to which the Duke replied "No. I think it is an excellent thing."

The Marquis of Londonderry said he owned fifty-eight thousand acres in Durham, his average income being fifteen thousand sterling. He said he would oppose Nationalisation even if the Commission reported favourably, because his opinion was a good as that of any individual member of the Commission.

Earl Strafford as trustee to the Wemyss estate said that the late owner crippled himself by spending enormous sums on development and the trustee for Earl Dudley's estates said that the whole revenue from the estate was spent in development.

LONDON STOCK EXCHANGE.

Stock Exchange. Owing to business activity only a short time was devoted at the opening of the market to the discussion of the Peace proposals, which, however, had no marked effect on the upward tendency as they had been largely anticipated. It is also difficult as yet to forecast the outcome of the terms. The tone was good on the further improvement of British Foreign trade as shown in the trade returns for April, though some profit taking was afterwards effected in those securities which recently made a sharp rise. Home funds, after a dull opening, finished harder. French Loans were decidedly better on an easier rate of exchange. Other foreign funds were firm. Oils opened active but afterwards moved irregularly on occassional realisations but the undertone remained satisfactory. Home Railways continued in demand. Among industrials, textiles and motor shares were bright features and appreciated still further. The Marconi Group showed an upward trend in anticipation of an early bonus distribution. Rubbers were less active and in many cases easier.

WHERE THE ROAD FORKS.

The terms of peace are now in our hands, in the hands of the German Government and the German people. The Cologne Post was the first paper to publish and distribute the peace terms on German soil.

The terms are hard. We have given our reasons for supposing that they would be. Those who go forth to conquer and dictate must be ready to face the consequences of defeat and submission. That the people of Germany were to some extent fooled — fooled as to their chances, fooled as to their victories, fooled as to the grit and resources of their opponents — is true enough, but that any considerable number of them were ignorant either of the objects with which the war was begun, or the methods by which it was carried on, is not credible. The Bismarckian system of press-manipulation — the prevalence of the censorship and distortion of facts were no new things in German life. A people who had to wait under these circumstances for a débacle before they realize that they are being misled are either devoid of intelligence or open to the suspicion of letting the game go on until there is no chance of winning. The deaf adder is a dangerous form of biped.

The peace terms are an amplification of that blessed document, the fourteen points of President Wilson, to which every German orator has appealed since the autumn of 1918 as if it were the Canaan of her four year's pilgrimage of war. It must be allowed that the fourteen points, as became a document that only laid down general principles, admitted of an interpretation in details which might have been different from that embodied in the preliminary peace, but with the prophet of this new dispensation presiding over the deliberations as to the form it should take, it can hardly be alleged that it is not a correct expansion of the original formula.

The terms as to Poland are perhaps more advantageous to that country than German opinion will have anticipated, but they are necessary if Poland is to have any real independent political and economic existence, and are foreshadowed by the fifteenth point. As regards Danzig the scheme adopted appears to be the best, and it is interesting to note that Maximilian Harden in Zukunft, while not denying that Danzig was once a Polish town, recommends the solution which the Peace Conference has put forward as being more consonant with its present position.

The dispositions of the Conference in regard to the Saar Valley, and under the head of Shipping, will no doubt arouse the opposition of those who have listened too attentively to the devotees of the fourteen points, and it may be worth while in order to prevent ill-informed comment to recall what actually happened in regard to the armistice negotiations.

When in October, 1918, convinced at length that not only the edifice of her hopes but her bulwarks against invasion were crumbling down, Germany had recourse to Secretary Lansing to secure an armistice; the other Allied Powers were asked by America whether they would concur in granting one with a view to a peace being accepted by Germany which had been prepared by the Allies, such peace taking as its basis the fourteen points. Great Britain and France agreed, but with two important reservations. The first was that they should not be taken to assent to whatever was intended by that euphuistic but vague phrase the "Freedom of the Seas"; and the second that damage done by Germany to the civil population of the Allies both by land and sea should be made good. The enormous loss in lives, ships, and goods done by the U-boat war against innocent and at first unarmed traders—in flagrant violation of convention on convention entered into by Germany as well as the other powers—thus became the subject of compensation. On the same ground Germany now has the opportunity of paying such compensation as she can for the acts of destruction, such as the cutting of the fruit trees in the retreat before Arras, the, flooding of the French coal mines, and the looting of machinery from Liège and Lille.

Our earnest advice to the people of Germany is to accept these terms of Peace. Let them first of all reflect who have laid them down. There is President Wilson who represents America which assuredly has no interest in seeing that aught but justice is done, and has not the deep resentment engendered by the circumstances of the war's origin and the enormous sacrifices which it has left in its wake, to embitter its judgment. There is England, who, at any rate, will desire no direct advantage from any of the clauses except those relating to shipping, and whose interest is to see Germany, once her chief customer in Europe, able to resume her place in the world; and Italy whose chief quarrel and whose claims are against Austria. These represent the judgment of the civilized world in regard to the guilt and conduct of the war — a judgment too long screened from German eyes by a drastic censorship and an intensive cultivation of perverted ideas of international morality dating from the middle of the nineteenth century.

Let them also look to the alternative. If they refuse, the Allies are prepared to meet the situation, and the sympathy due to a fallen foe is alienated, while Germany adds to her sufferings, and delays her start on the road to recuperation, if she does not imperil her existence. If she accepts, she can set her hands straight away to the work of reconstruction, and can win back the esteem and recognition of the civilized world by treading a new path under the influence of new ideas and new leadership, and as she thereby enters once more into the comity of nations can obtain from coadjutors the readjustments and modifications of terms which are imposed by foes.

We do not wish to introduce into a subject which calls for the calmest consideration more than is inevitable of the note of recrimination, but we would ask the intelligent German, the intelligent Briton or the intelligent neutral to consider, what — if the Allies had fallen suddenly upon the Central Powers, entered their territory, slaughtered and swept into exile its civil inhabitants, devastated their factories and buildings, conducted an unlawful warfare against their traffic by sea, bombarded open towns and done, under derisory pretexts, to which no one attached the least credence, a hundred other acts which during four long years rendered miserable the lives of the inhabitants—what would have been the terms which a victorious Kaiser, Erzberger, Scheidemann or Rantzau would have dictated? We know what they did propose, without victory.

THE PERILS OF JOURNALISM OR "ACHTUNG."
A DRAMA IN ONE SPASM!

(We hope the candid critic still lives. Inability to get our contributor on the 'phone to announce our practical appreciation of his literary efforts accounts for his surprise, but we hope he will continue.—Editor.)

Until recently I have had no claims to the title of journalist, nor have I ever strayed into the realms of fiction. True I had written one or two picturesque replies to caustic letters from my adjutant, but these only from a sense of duty — I state this not as a defence but merely in mitigation of my offence. With the end of the war, however, came the recollection that some gentleman had stated that the pen was mightier than the sword, and it struck me that I might investigate the claims of the pen, (as portrayed by my Waterman) in comparison with those of the sword, (or to be explicit, in my case the six-inch howitzer).

The opportunity presented itself in the shape of the Cologne Post, and the temptation of an enthusiastic sub-editor, who urged me to contribute an article to the début of that paper. Under persuasion, I consented, and throwing my whole heart into the matter, sent over to the office at once and demanded large supplies of foolscap: (G.S. Mark I); the choice of a subject was not difficult, and having arranged my resources, consisting of a fountain pen, a decayed lead pencil, and unlimited paper, I set to work.

The selection of a title was my first stumbling block — it took me three days to decide on one! I was almost reduced to offering five marks to any member of the mess who could suggest a good one; ultimately I hit upon what appeared to be an apt title for my article, while reading an advertisement for somebodys soap, or a course in shortnand, I forget which! Having what is generally considered among my neighbours, an excellent vocabulary, I anticipated no trouble with the text of the article: there my anticipations were amply fulfilled — words, (and ink) flowed freely from my pen, and the result far exceeded my expectations. I achieved a wonderful effect, chiefly owing to the fact that most of my article was written in the mess, generally when the gramopaone was being exercised (played is too weak a word) and also while an argumentative bridge four conducted heated post-mortems: I think if anything, this varied my style, and I was alternately sentimental, serious and flippant according to the vicissitudes of the music and the arguments.

My article being duly completed, I showed it to the sub-editor, who grudgingly approved it and undertook to forward it to the proper quarter, although he informed me that it was doubtful whether it would ever appear in print. I reminded him gently that he had urged me to the crime in the first case, and consequently would be responsible if anybody ran me in for libel, or if any other unpleasant contingency occurred. A day or two later he appeared with a copy of the Cologne Post and remarked "By Jove, Major, they've got your article in, and as a leader too! His tone of voice was non-committal, and in my ecstacy I overlooked his sarcasm. I gazed eagerly on the paper and read and re-read my masterpiece — I pictured myself on the staff of the Times, and already turned over in my mind what my next journalistic effort was to be. Presently my senior subaltern entered also with a copy of the Cologne Post — he, by the way, is a keen literary critic, and a close reader of our leading "dailies." "They must be darned hard up for contributions," he remarked, pointing to my article, "Look what they've got in as a leader to-day: did you ever read such nonsense?" Well I will say no more — the denouement of this drama has been reached, and I would only draw the attention of the reader to the title of this article. It is meant as a warning to all would-be amateur journalists.—Incidentally it is also meant as a warning to subalterns against criticising, in the presence of their superior officers, a subject, the authorship of which is unknown to them. Finally I would add that what little incipient talent I ever had, has been blasted at birth by the outspoken criticism of a hard hearted critic! — the talent was present all right — witness the previous sentence!

MEMORIES OF BLIGHTY.

To the exiled angler, these days of "merrie" May evoke memories of beloved streams on which, previous to the war, he deftly plied the piscatorial art — those streams maybe, that sing through the solitudes of Dartmoor and Exmoor, or that hurry down from the Welsh mountains and the heathery heights of "bonnie" Scotland.

At this time of the year, the lusty little trout of these upland waters have attained excellent condition; they respond vigorously to the challenge of the angler. On the moors, Spring, too, will be asserting her radiant presence, tingeing with delicate colour the wide grey landscape. Day by day, the mystic poetry of Nature shines out more sublimely. Sunlight and shadow play upon the hills; the scent of moist peat and moss rises like incense on the morning air, whilst a faint purple mist softens the rugged outline of some distant pinnacle. The gentle tinkle of a sheep-bell sounds sweetly amid the eternal silence of some rocky gorge, and the remote recesses of the mountains re-echo to the thrill of Pan's joyous pipers.

Later in the season, the angler may essay the capture of larger trout inhabiting lowland waters, but now, during these golden days of early May, the hill streams yield abundant sport to the enthusiastic fly-fisherman. And the magic of the vast, untrame led uplands grips the angler and holds him spell-bound.

Some morning when the sun is frequently hidden by light clouds that, high overhead, sail through illimitable space, the angler wanders upstream casting his well-oiled fly into every likely spot. For here, in these rapid upland waters the dry-fly may now be used successfully, since warmer weather and a larger hatch of insect life has made the fish more alert and eager for suface food than in the earlier days of the season. True, on the hill-streams the angler does not exactly follow the methods of the chalk stream "purist," but, without waiting for a "rise," casts his floating lure into the spots wherein he knows a trout should lurk.

Not very big are these trout of the moors; perhaps they average only five or six to the pound. But they give rare sport for their size, and, when cooked, form a most delectable breakfast dish. However, the great joy of solitude and freedom and the tonic of pure air offer ample consolation for the smallness of the quarry.

Perchance, if he is lucky, the angler may capture a few half-pounders during the course of the day, or, at the tail of some limpid pool, he may fasten into an even larger fish. An exciting tussle occurs before he lands his prize, a trout of nearly one pound; a bonny specimen whose beautifully spotted flanks glisten in the fleeting sunlight.

Given favourable conditions of sky and stream, the basket hangs heavily upon the back when night draws on. Then in the gloaming the angler, smoking the pipe of peace, returns to the old inn lower down the valley. MOORLANDER.

THE SPREAD OF BOLSHEVISM.
AND ITS LESSONS FOR THE RHINELAND.

The world danger of Bolshevism is neither rightly nor fully appreciated either in Germany or beyond her borders.

Bolshevism is no revolutionary movement, which may be compared with any other similar movement in history and thus be fought with the usual weapons; it is rather a religion — the religion of the international proletariat — which has sent its disciples into all lands and means to conquer the world, regardless of her ruin it leaves in its wake.

A determined minority has made up its mind to overpower an enormous majority and to impose its vague and criminal principles not only in its own country but on the world at large.

The only clearly recognisable object of Bolshevism is the destruction of all capital and the annihilation of all rights in personal property.

According to the "Declaration of Rights of the working and exploited classes" in Russia, dated 18th January 1918, private right of property is abolished root and branch, all forests, mineral rights and waterways are nationalised, and all factories, works, mines, railroads and other means of production and transport, as well as the Banks, are transferred to the workers and peasants states.

The duty of universal labour and the formation of a red, socialist army, consisting of workers and peasants, as well as the complete disarmament of all propertied classes, are decreed.

The barbarous policy of bourgeoise civilisation, which founded the prosperity of the exploiters in a few chosen nationalities at the cost of the enslavement of hundreds of millions of labourers in Asia and the Colonies, is utterly condemned and the repudiation of national loans is greeted as the severest blow which can be offered to international bank capital.

In order to attain these ends Bolshevism is working on a carefully thought out plan of operations.

The avowed ambition of Lenin has been, and is, to create civil warfare throughout Europe. Every speech of Lenin's is a denunciation of constitutional methods, and a glorification of the doctrine of physical force. With that object in view he is destroying systematically every form of opposition to Bolshevism. This system of terror is aimed chiefly at the Liberals and the non-Bolshevist Socialists, whom Lenin regards as his most dangerous opponents.

By means of an unchecked paper issue, the Bolshevists are enabled to pay their supporters enormous wages, until to-day money in Russia has naturally lost all value.

As soon as the old regime has fallen and its support, the Army, has been broken up by depriving the Corps of Officers of all authority, and by the removal of all discipline, influence will be brought to bear on all phases of national life by setting up Workers' and Soldiers' Councils.

With the help of these councils, and of a far-reaching propaganda provided with plenty of funds, the proletariat of the towns will begin its attack on capital, whilst those in the country will attack the landlords and therewith commences the real fight for the power of the proletariat.

As a "precautionary measure" against counter-revolution, the citizen classes will be disarmed, and as a counter-balance to the tottering remains of the old army, revolutionary armed bands will be formed to keep the peace.

As soon as this is done, two weapons come alternatively into play, i.e. strike and riot.

The object of the latter is to cause endless difficulties to the new and possibly not entirely Bolshevist Government, whilst the former serves to destroy capitalism.

Factories, works, Banks and the traffic and transport organisations will be weakened by the ever wilder demands for higher wages and will finally have to shut down.

The resources of the whole country are thus brought to the lowest ebb, the distribution of food is interrupted; prices mount to a limitless figure and need and hunger drive the population finally to excess. Now comes the time of Bolshevist harvest. It is quite a simple matter to persuade the proletariat that the Government alone is responsible for all the misery, in that it has not preserved the "Achievements of the Revolution" and so, with the war cry "all power in the hands of the proletariat" the Government is overthrown and supreme power is placed in the hands of Soldiers' and Workers' Councils and immediately safeguarded by the formation of a Red army.

What this Bolshevist victory means for a nation is easily seen, for Bolshevism is naturally not in a position to raise the economical strength of a country which has systematically been laid in the dust. In order to maintain its hold it must give free rein to the licence of the mob who seek their means of sustenance by robbery and plunder at the cost of others.

The leaders, however, have already cast their eyes beyond the boundaries of their own country, in order to prepare a further triumphal march for their religion.

Bolshevism in Russia offers to our civilisation no less a menace than did Prussianism, and until it is as ruthlessly destroyed we may expect trouble, strikes, revolutions everywhere. There is reason to believe that the reactionary elements in Germany are working hand in hand with Russian Bolsheviks with the idea of spreading Bolshevism ultimately to England, by which time they hope to have got over it themselves, and to be in a position to take advantage of our troubles. For Bolshevist propaganda unlimited funds are available.

It is therefore a matter of the utmost importance that we should so shape our policy towards Germany in the coming Peace that no help or assistance should be given to these elements of reactionary disorder, whether they come from the extreme Left or Right. Supplies of food and raw material, by which alone the industrial efficiency of Germany can be brought to life, will be forthcoming only to a people who have realised to the full both their responsibilities for the excesses committed during the War, and are resolved to pursue the path of orderly government, together with reparation for the past, and guarantees for the future.

A SMILE OR TWO.

"Do you like Miss Prattle?" "Yes, she's so generous. Never keeps anything to herself, and is always ready to give away even her best friend."

Colonel (who detests motors)—Well, and how did you enjoy your ride? Flossie—We've simply had a killing time of it! Colonel—Animals, or old women?

Gaiboy—Why did you leave your last place? Comely applicant—I was caught kissing my employer, sir. Gaiboy—Er—um—you can start to-morrow morning.

"I wouldn't be in Jim Thomson's shoes just now." "Why not?" "He left 'em in the cellar last Monday night and they dumped four tons of coal on 'em before Jim was up."

"Why have you quarrelled with George?" "Because he proposed to me last night." "Well, there's no harm in that, is there?" "But I had accepted him to night before."

MUSIC AT DUREN.

HIGHLAND DIVISION ENTERPRISE.

The series of operas and concerts arranged by the Highland Division each Tuesday evening in the Duren Town Theatre continues to maintain a high standard of artistic excellence, and considerable musical enjoyment is afforded to large numbers of officers and men. The season opened on April 15th with "Il Trovatore" and was followed a week later by a fine orchestral programme under the conductorship of Kapellmeister Engel, in which Terese Saruta, the well-known and highly-gifted violinist, scored a great success in Beethoven's Concerto and a group of charming miscellaneous solos.

"The Armourer" by Lortzing, and Mozart's "Magic Flute" were given on April 29th and May 6th. The latter was an exceptionally fine production, being magnificently presented on the spacious and welle-quipped stage of the Duren Theatre, the setting being beyond reproach.

The chorus was augmented for the occasion by the "Concordia" Vocal Society and special costumes were procured. The Tenor, Kraus, from the Cologne Opera House, made a great impression in the role of Tamino and both vocally and histrionically was in his finest form. Another orchestral concert is announced for Tuesday next the 13th for which occasion the services of Willy Hülser, a brilliant pianist from Dusseldorf, have been secured. The programme offers some interesting and popular items, and should once again attract a large and appreciative audience.

THE "TIGER PIPS."

11th Leicestershire's Concert Party (Pioneers.)

The "Tiger Pips" gave two very succesful performances, one at Lechenich on Saturday, and one at Westerberg on Monday.

The troupe is fortunate in the possession of two pianists, both well above the average, Ptes Butterworth and Abbott.

Sgt. Higgott's "Hello, Old New York," (from the "Bing Boys on Broadway,"), "Raggedy Doo" and "That Little Old Home," are as good an interpretation of ragtime as you could hope to find in the Army of the Rhine, while in Pte. Connor we find a sentimental singer of undoubted talent. Cpl. Hammond, the "Lady" of the troupe, has a dainty manner and sings nicely, and the two comedians, Ptes. Whitbread and Whitehead, are indubitably funny, particularly in the sketch "Snowflakes," when whitened brings the house down. Pte. Abbott is an excellent all-round man, and Pte. Senior sings with spirit.

Altogether the show is well worth seeing, and the troupe is keen to secure engagements.

THE APOLLO THEATRE.

The Apollo Theatre is doing great business nightly and for those who arrive a few minutes late, it is no uncommon thing to be confronted with the notice "House full." This is not in the last surprising for news travels quickly, and the eulogistic remarks passed by those who have witnessed this week's variety performance are making many others anxious to pay a visit.

Even for no other reason than to see and hear the drolleries of Harry Rogers an evening at the Apollo is well worth while. This artiste reels off an ever fresh fund of bright humour, and his funiosities generally keep the audience thoroughly well tickled.

On the same bill is J.H. Latham who for a long time was by no means the least successful member of the well-known "Maron Hares" party in England. He is a comedian of quite another style and, in his own particular line of business, he scores fresh successes every night. He and Rogers are now working a double turn and, although they have selected a somewhat hackneyed theme for their sketch — a rehearsal for a new music-hall act—they present the show with sufficient original comedy to make it one of the most popular items in the programme.

Tom Pacey another well-known English music hall artiste displays considerable talent as a vocalist and dancer while the richness and tone of E.M. Nightingale's voice are as agreeable as ever.

Gunner E. Barker, who is a new arrival to Cologne plays the violin exquisitely. The brilliance of his technique and the quality of tone he produces have caused more than one musical member of the audience to raise his eyebrows. We must have a little more to say about this artiste when space is not such an important consideration as it is to-day.

GUNNERS SHUFFLE THE "WILKIE BARDS".

48th. AND 16th. BATTERIES, R. F. A.

These two friendly batteries opened a series of whist drives at Hoven on Tuesday. A very good evening was spent, in which there were numerous entries.

There were five prizes (including the booby). The "Dragon's" were very pleased to see one of their visitors ("The old Books") secure the first prize, all of which were won in the following order:

1st Prize Fitter Dodd	16th Bty R. F. A.
2nd Prize Gunner Breenan	48 Bty R. F. A.
3rd Prize Sergt Groves	48 Bty R. F. A.
4th Prize Dr. Cox C. C.	48 Bty R. F. A.
Booby Prize Dr. Everard	16th Battery R. F. A.

WHIST AT SCHLEBUSCH.

The first of a series of whist drives, organised by 420th Siege Battery, R.G.A. was held at Schlebusch on Tuesday evening, and turned out to be pleasant and successful.

A feature of the evening was the remarkably high scoring of the players, the card held by the winning "lady" averaging nine for all the tables.

The prizes were presented by Major J. C. Pollock to the following winners:

Ladys 1st, Wheeler Wildey; Ladys 2nd Gnr. Williams; Ladys 3rd, Gnr. Benson; Gents 1st, Gnr. Carpenter; Gents 2nd, Gnr. Lavender; Gents 3rd, Gnr. Woodhouse. The Booby prize went to Gnr. Wilkes. Sergt. Render carried out the duties of M.C. most efficiently.

"THE MOLLUSC" AT COLOGNE.

Rhine Army Amateur Dramatic Companys Successful Debut.

A CLEVER PLAY—CLEVERLY ACTED.

The Rhine Army Amateur Dramatic Company made its debut on Thursday when "The Mollusc" was presented at the Deutsche Theatre, Cologne. The effort was an unqualified success in every way, and the agreeable change that will henceforth be afforded troops in Cologne, and elsewhere, of witnessing first-rate plays, acted by talented performers, is bound to meet with approbation.

Lieut. S.A. Percy, the producer, and all the others associated with him in the initial effort deservedly come in for showers of congratulation. After the performance on Thursday, while the spontaneous outburts of applause accorded by an appreciative audience as the story was unfolded was testimony of the popularity of the show.

"First night" are necessarily anxious events for all concerned in a new production, and the quality of the performance very frequently suffers thereby. Not so with the presentation of the "The Mollusc" on Thursday, however. In its staging there was all the precision of a well rehearsed professional company and the only slip or hesitation the writer noticed in the reeling off of the "book" was when Mrs. Baxter addressed her brother Tom, as "Dick". That is saying a geat deal.

The play suffered nothing by reason of indifferent scenery or lighting effects. These were quite in keeping with the general excellence of the production, as also were the efforts of a capable little orchestra that kept up the interest during the brief intervals between the acts.

An Outline of the Play.

"The Mollusc" is one of those plays which depends for its effect chiefly upon the merits or demerits of those who take part in it. That is not to say that the "book" is not cleverly written. It is. A slender but extremely intelligible plot is presented in such bright and poin ed little speeche and such sparkling dialogue by the author, Mr. Hubert Henry Davies, that it is capable of holding an audience thoroughly interested for a couple of hours. Described as a three act modern comedy the tittle is no less happy and appropriate than the characters are well conceived and cleverly drawn.

Mrs. Baxter is the mollusc and one gathers from the conversation of her brother, Tom Kemp (duly bronzed and boisterous) who has temporarily ceased his labours in California to spend a holiday in England, that she has been a mollusc ever since she was so high. She is deeply selfish, and displays a great disinclination to exert the slightest physical effort on her own or anyone else's behalf. She even goes to the limit of feigning indisposition for no other reason than to elicit the sympathy and the little attentions that are naturally bestowed upon the invalid.

But then there is a devoted (if rather downtrodden) husband, and a charming governess who "governesses" their two children, and they spare themselves not in their anxiety to pander to my lady's every wish and whim. So, you see, there is some excuse for Mrs. Baxter's indulgence in her lethargic weakness.

All goes happily — or as happily as such circumstances will permit — in the household, until brother Tom comes on the scene. Now, although this individual is not quite so young as he used to be — judging by the generous streak of grey in his hair — he nevertheless has plenty of hot blood in his veins and an abundance of boisterous energy.

He observes the lay of the land, and forthwith conspires with his rather slow-thinking brother-in-law to wage war on the molluscan microbes with which, he declares, the house is permeated. Unfortunately the little conspiracy is seen through by the erring lady and the efforts of her brother to influence her by discipline fall rather flat in consequence.

Meanwhile, brother Tom falls head over heels in love with the governess, Miss Roberts, and beseeches her to return with him to California, greatly to the consternation of his sister and to the displeasure of Baxter — who confesses confidentially to a sneaking regard for her himself.

However, to cut a long story short, Tom, by cleverly contriving to set aright the fires of jealousy in his sister heart, brings about the inevitable happy climax wherein we see the wife lavishing attentions upon her husband — much to his bewilderment it may be mentioned — and himself the radiant possessor of the hand and heart of the governess.

A Good Play, Admirably Acted.

From this little sketch, it will be realised that the four people in the story are of distinct and totally different character. It will also be realised that the lion's share of the work falls to the lot of the lady who takes the part of the Mollusc, and that upon her charm of personality rests much responsibility. Miss Shirley King has that charm and displays it to such a degree in her portrayal of Mrs. Baxter that she fits into her little niche in the story as if it were made for her. She is natural; she infuses just the right amount of langour into her voice and, in the earlier scenes, she assumes a stateliness that quite coincides with the character she represents.

Miss Roberts, on the other hand, is a fictitious individual whose winsomeness lies in her brightness and vivacity. Miss Gabrielle Paul does justice to her part. She is pensive on occasion, when telling "Tom" of her purposeless life, but she positively bubbles over with delicious, sparkling laughter when listening to his humour. In short, Miss Paul displays just the type of girl the author surely had in mind. It would be very surprising, indeed, if such "fetching" ways did not capture the heart of our hero from America.

Of the two male characters, Lieut. S.E. Percy, H.L.I. has no simple proposition in providing a representation of Tom Kemp, but he succeeds admirably. In turn he is the "hale fellow well met" type of man whose one consideration is to live a free, open-air life "out west"; then he becomes the hard disciplinarian, endeavouring to rule with a rod of iron, and later, we see another side of his temperament when he makes violent — if somewhat abrupt — love to the governess. Mr. Percy reveals these characteristics in a convincing and effective manner.

Last, but by no means least in the caste, there is J.H. Hope, R.E. who submits a protrayal of the inactive Mr. Baxter. In fact, so thoroughly in accord with the character are his mannerisms that one is left in doubt as to whether his acting results purely from an effort of make-believe or whether he merely allows himself to recite his lines with no more deception of his own personality than he would adopt in ordinary, natural conversation. If the former is the case, Mr. Hope is an extraordinarily good actor; if the latter suggestion be true, then Mr. Percy is to be congratulated upon finding a living counterpart of the author's well-drawn character.

The stage director is Lieut. Macatta, 1st West Yorks, and the stage manager, Sergt. T.J. Crozier.

BRITISH ARMY v. FRENCH.

Last match in Triangular Football Tournament.

The last of the triangular football matches between British French and Belgian military teams was played at Stamford Bridge on Thursday, the contestants being the British Army and the French Army.

The British defeated the French after a close game by 3—2. The goal scorers were: Hanot and Lesur for the French and Woodward, and Reau (2) for the British.

The tournament is thus won by Belgium who defeated the British team and drew with the French.

The teams on Tursday were:

BRITISH ARMY: C.S.M. Chalton; Pte. Wood, Pte. Eastwood; Gnr. Eastwood, Pte. Valentine Spr. Sage; Gnr. Douglas, Capt. V. J. Woodward. Sergt. Lee, Pte. Reid, and L.-Corpl. Hodkinson.

FRENCH ARMY: Chayrique; Lt. Gamblin. Matineu; Mercier, Huges, Devic; Schalbart, Harrou, Bouches, Dubly, and Spriet.

At the conclusion of the game, H.R.H. Prince of Wales presented medals to various members of the three teams taking part.

RUGBY UNION AND A CHARITY MATCH.

UNFOUNDED REPORT OF A DECISION.

Many news on Thursday published a statement to the effect that the Rugby Union had barred a charity match between the Northern Command and New Zealand on the ground that players in such a match would come under the category of professionals.

We are able to deny that such action has been taken. It is true that the matter was considered by the Rugby Union Committee, on account of the report being circulated that Northern Union players were to take part in the match. When it was found that this was not so, however, no objection was raised.

RUGBY UNION'S REMARKABLE DECISION.

CHARITY MATCH BANNED.

Considerable feeling has been aroused in football circles by the action of the Rugby Union in banning a fixture between a military team from the Northern Command and a team of New Zealanders which was to have been played at Leeds in aid of St.Dunstan's.

The reason given by the Rugby Committee for their action is that it will be professionalism for players to participate in a match on a Northern Union Ground.

CAPTAIN AND TWO EX-CAPTAINS.

Kent County Cricket Club will this year have the advantage of the leadership of L. H. W. Troughton, says Sporting Life, who will be able to call upon two ex-captains, E. W. Dillon and C. H. B. Marsham. Capt. Dillon is a little afraid of his eyesight, and has now been ordered to wear glasses, through a smash he received at rackets some years ago. It will be a question of practice this year for amateur cricketers, as so many are newly returned after a long absence, and they are finding the calls of business very pressing. H. N. R. Blaker may also be found in the Kent side. It must be ten years since he played regularly for the county.

AUSTRALIA'S NEW FAST BOWLER.

The Australian mail to hand contains many references to the new fast bowler produced by Victoria, E. A. McDonald, who in the opening match of the season at Sidney dismissed eight New South Wales batsmen for 42 runs. One paper describes McDonald as the best fast bowler Victoria has had for thirty years, says Sportsman Life. He kept a splendid length, a fine command of direction, an occasional swing, and he made the ball come with the arm from the leg-side, now and then bringing it back from the off. If a chance in the slips had not been missed by E. R. Mayne (the captain of Victoria), McDonald would have joined the select few who have taken nine wickets in one innings of an inter-State match.

FAIR FOOTBALLERS AT HITDORF.

ENGINEERS IN FRIVOLOUS MOOD.

On Sunday the 5th Field Company R. E. played a very exciting game (much to the amusement of the crowd). Twelve Sappers and Drivers attired as the most bewitching damsels gave the ball "The order of the Boot." Lieut Mickie was a reproduction of a famous "Gainsborough" and almost ended with a Court scandal. (Countess Pushfarthing could say a lot!) Cpl. Mc Donald (representing the ex-Kaiser in private life) presented the various orders "Iron crosses" and Medialle de Bully Tins.

The match ended in a draw.

5th LABOUR COMPANY v. 180th LABOUR COMPANY.

Played on Wednesday in fine weather. Both goals were visited in turn without tangible result. This continued for some time and several likely looking chances were missed. Lieut. Wilkinson in 5th goal had some good shots to stop. The 180th goalkeeper also got some work to do but 5th came no nearing scoring than their opponents. In the second half the 5th took up the running and pressed for a time one or two good chances going a-begging. The game was very fast but the hard ground caused the players often to misjudge the ball. 180th again looked like scoring but the 5th defence managed to keep them out. Result.: No score.

5th South Staffords Signals v. R. E. Signals.

Played on Monday at Commern, in glorious weather. Early on, the home goalie, Royston, brought off a good save which seemed a certain goal. Some nice movements on the part of Stillings were then witnessed. The visitors inside right, taking advantage of a misskck by Royston, placed his side one ahead. Brown, at right back saved the home side a further downfall when the defence was sorely tried. The home right wing showed good combination and Taylor scored the equaliser from an almost impossible angle.

Shortly after the restart, Cpl Jeavons had several tries and had exceedingly hard lines on more than one occasion. Stillings showed great skill throughout the game, and half an hour from the restart he sent Lt. Orford through. The ball was fouled within the area. The penalty was taken by the last named who put it well out of the custodians's reach, the Staffords winning by 2—1.

92nd v. 103rd FIELD AMBULANCE.

This match was played on the former's ground at Friedrich Wilhelmshutte on Monday.

Play was very even in the opening stages of the game but after the visiting custodian had skilfully cleared his charge, the visiting forwards made a rare bid for goal and were decidedly unlucky in failing to open the scoring.

The homesters took control of the game after this, and pressed the visiting goal for nearly all the remainder of the first half, the custodian, who played a fine game, effecting some brilliant saves. The game underwent a change just before half time was called. The visiting left wing forwards, securing the ball, shook off all opposition and opened the scoring.

On resuming the visiting forwards made some vigorous attacks on the homesters goal and it was very evident that their efforts would soon produce another goal. From a determined rush they scored this midway through the second half. Their third goal was scored afterwards.

Result: 103rd Field Ambulance, 3; 92nd Field Ambulance, 0.

GEE! SOME SPORTS.

AMERICAN OPINION OF THE 4th SCOTS FUSILIERS.

Writing in the American News, the American Army's daily newspaper, a writer under the name "Jock Cann" refers thus to the 4th Royal Scots Fusiliers:

"So delighted with their treatment while touring the 3rd D.v. that they wish themselves to become hosts to a group of athletes from the Army of Occupation, the 4th Royal Scots Fusiliers' unbeaten soccer team are now enthusiastic exponents of international sporting friendships between the British and American armies.

They have yet one other ambition to satisfy before they cease their soccer activities in the American territory, and that is to meet the championship soccer team of the 3rd Army, which is being decided in a series of games now in progress.

The Scots have nothing but praise for the Americans. They stated that the skill at the game shown by their American opponents was a real surprise to them, and that it will only require a certain amount of coaching in team play and the finer points of the game to make the Yanks real contenders in this continental sport. The game itself is a far better spectator game than Rugby, and is so much less complicated that the uninitiated quickly grasp the idea and can follow the play intelligently.

Pictures of the American teams that they have met were taken by Lt. Cabas of the Scots, and will appear in the British journals and sporting columns as proofs of the interest that America is taking in the game. An effort will be made to have two doughboy baseball teams released for a series of demonstrations of the American national pastime in the area occupied by the British army on the Rhine, as there is a certain amount of interest being shown in our game there.

"SOCCER" OR "RUGGER"

Sports Control Board Secretary Favours Association.

Speaking at a dinner in honour of the teams in the International Army Tournament, Major Hartley, secretary of the Army Sports Control Board, said it was a great pity that many enthusiasts had expressed opinions about the advantages of rugby football over the association code. Although he had always been associated with the rugby game, he was of the opinion that association football would always be one of the most popular postimes of the British Nation. It was essential that schools at present playing the association game should confine to do so in the order to provide officers who could take part in the game in the Army.

BOXING AT NEW CROSS.

Seaman Hayes, Hoxton, outclassed Duke Lynch, Camberwell, in the eleventh of a twenty round contest at New Cross on Thursday. At the same meeting Seaman Hall, Chatham, beat George Groves, Canning Town, on points in a fifteen round bout.

NEW ZEALAND v. FRENCH.

Yesterday afternoon an exciting Rugby match in which the contestants were teams representative of New Zealanders and French, took place at Pau, and after exciting play the Colonials won with a majority of ten points. Result: New Zealanders 16 pts; French 6 pts.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

Saturday, May 10, 1919.

Wind S. E. 10—15 m.p.h. in the day. Fine at first tendency to thunder to-morrow evening. Day visibility good. Very warm.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

(With an Occasional Entertainments Note.)

THE COSTER'S MARATHON.

The Donkey Marathon has now become an accepted feature of the Royal Horse Show, a popular comic interlude to more serious matters. The Costers are to have their show on Friday afternoon, assembling with their turn-outs on Kew Green, and driving thence to the Show Ground where Lord Lonsdale (who is bearing the whole cost of the Competition with the exception of the first prize) will judge them. There are eight prizes offered, the most coveted of them being a new coster's barrow laden with ripe bananas, a donkey and a set of new harness. Money awards are offered to every competitor and special cash prizes for each entrant dressed in pearlies.

TENNIS FOR OTHER RANKS.

There are several thousand rank and file in Rhineland who are enthusiastic tennis players, but they complain that opportunities for an occasional set are very few and far between. It is perfectly true that the large towns wherein so many military people are stationed are sadly lacking in courts, but it should be possible to arrange for the men to have a good share of those that are going. In one of the first numbers of the Cologne Post, I suggested that the time had arrived for the preparation of additional courts in the thickly populated areas in order that they might be available when the season proper came round. It is a pity this suggestion could not be carried out, because the numbers of courts available are not nearly adequate to meet the demands for tennis that are being made by all ranks. As it is, I hear that there is to be a special allotment for other ranks in all parts of the occupied area. Let's hope the materialisation is pretty slick.

LOOK OUT FOR "THE MOLLUSC"

Finishing work at six pip emma yesterday, I decided to spend my half holiday by paying a visit to the Deutsche Taeatre, there to have a peep at the Dramatic Company giving the popular comedy "The Mollusc." I had more than a peep; the proceedings were so attractive that I remained to the last word. This was spoken by Capt. Haygarth, the 2nd Army Amusements Officer, and it concerned the future shows that the Company intend to stage. As his announcement was so full of interest we all forgave him for failing to catch conductor Porter's eye before the first chord of "The King" had been played. The performance of Lieut. Percy and his party is of the best and worth going a large way to see. Those people stationed in or near Bonn, Duren, Euskirchen, and Solingen should keep a weather eye open for the bills announcing the advent of the Company, during the next few days.

HARRY ROGERS TO BE "DEMOB'D."

Many will learn with regret that Harry Roger's whom we all remember as the wonderful mirth provoker in the irresponsibles, is shortly to depart from Germany, once more to resume his merry career across the channel. Whether the continued performances of that great little sketch of his "Demobilization" has influenced his mind, I am unable to say, but it is true that he is now giving his last few shows at the Apollo Theatre before being "demob'd." As an Army entertainer, Rogers is perhaps the most popular and certainly one of the most genuinely funny of the many good comedians whose job it has been to entertain the troops. Still, all good things come to an end, and we shall have to be content in the knowledge that this artiste will help thousands in England, in the near future, to forget any trials and tribulations they may have.

A GOLF RECORD (?)

Among the party of civilian engineering people who are visiting Germany, I came across a man yesterday, in Cologne, who holds what surely must be a record in golf matters. He hails from Lancashire, and on the difficult Shipley links he holds the most enviable position on the handicap list. Further than that he has to sons whose names come second and third respectively on the same list. Quite recently — just before the father left for Cologne, in fact — these three cheerful golfers entered a competition, and when the result was declared, it was found that "Dad" had won first prize; son number one had secured second and son number two came in for third place. They were all divided by a single point.

THE RAMBLER.

The Holland Park Rink has now been definitely secured by a private syndicate connected with the National Sporting Club, and it is hoped to get it ready for several important fistic engagements by the early autumn. At present it is in the occupation of the military, who are daily expecting to be demobilised.

Mr. F.G. Hill, who before the war was Bristol City's secretary, has now been demobilised, and has again taken up the reins of his old office. During his absence Mr. Albert Glass has filled the position.

BRITISH EMPIRE LEAVE CLUB.

The meals supplied at the Club are exclusively reserved for resident N.C.Os. & men on 4 days special leave. Arrangements have, however, been made to supply one evening meal, consisting of soup, meat and vegetables, and sweets or cheese, to non-residents from 7—8-30 p.m., at the price of 3.50 Marks. One glass of beer is supplied free with the meal.

There are no beds available at any of the Club Hostels except those reserved for members who are detailed from units on 4 days special leave.

Why are

"SAPON" SOAPS

the favourites with British Soldiers and Sailors?

Because they have used MILLIONS OF TABLETS and find they get the best results. Free lather in any water. No scum which irritates the skin. Stops irritation from insect-bites and heals open wounds.

WHY waste your money on old-fashioned Soaps made from Boiled Fats, when you can get better Soap for less money in "SAPON" SOAPS?

ENTIRELY DIFFERENT from all other Soaps—

you have only to try a Tablet in hard water to convince yourself that no other Soap, no matter how widely advertised, or what price is paid for it, can compare with it in producing a feeling of cleanliness and freedom from skin-irritation.

Two kinds:
SWEET SCENTED IDEAL TOILET SOAP
ARCHANGEL (WOOD) TAR SOAP.

Disinfects and soothes the skin and destroys all insect life.

Sold at all British Army Canteens.

A sample box of three Tablets of Toilet, full size, either Sweet Scented or Archangel Tar, from the makers post free, for 1/- Postal Order.

You will never use old-fashioned Fat Soap once you have used "SAPON" SOAPS and given them a fair trial.

A DESERTER'S ESCAPADES.

ACTED "UNDER INFLUENCE."

"A very remarkable history," was the comment of Mr. Chapman, the magistrate at Tower Bridge, on the career of James Parking, or Green, an Army deserter, 27, born at Bloemfontein South Africa, charged with George Clark, 27, a Canadian Dragoon, with stealing blankets, the property of the Y.M.C.A.

The blankets, taken off the beds, were carried away in a kit-bag, Clark, it was alleged, stating that Green watched and helped him. Clark stated that he acted under the influence of morphine and heroin.

Officer witnesses said that Green, in various names and at different times, had passed as a South African, and Australian, and a Canadian. He had been condemned to death in France for desertion, and made his escape there on commutation of sentence to a term of five years' penal servitude.

He had stolen letters containing cheques, had twice escaped from Seaford while under military sentence, had robbed a hospital comrade, had falsely posed as a repatriated prisoner of war, and had obtained money from various officers by posing as a shelishock victim.

Green was sentenced to six month's hard labour. Clark, who was said to be using a false pass, was remanded for a further charge under D.O.R.A.

"DOUGHBOYS" THANKS TO ENGLAND.

PROCESSION OF 3600 U.S. TROOPS THROUGH LONDON.

General Pershing, Commander-in-Chief of the American Expeditionary Force, is at present paying a visit to London with the principal object of expressing thanks to the King, the Government and the British Nation for their hospitality to the 1,000,000 or more U.S. troops who have passed through England during the last two years.

Accompanying him is a full U.S. regiment numbering about 3,600 troops and on Empire day May 24th, these with General Pershing at their head and played by their own regimental band, with colours, will march through London, escorted by a large body of British troops.

On Friday, May 23rd, General Pershing will present the American Distinguished Service medal to a number of British officers, the ceremony having being arranged to take place on the Horse Guards' Parade.

H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT IN COLOGNE.

A VISIT TO CENTRAL Y.M.C.A.

H.R.H., the Duke of Connaught, paid a surprise visit to Cologne on Thursday, and in the evening spent a considerable time in inspecting the work of the Central Y.M.C.A. — work in which his grace is keenly interested he being president of the vast organisation of the Y.M.C.A.

He was attended by several distinguished officers of the British Army and made numerous enquiries of Dr. Francis and his colleagues on the Staff of the Central of the various activities they were engaged in.

On arrival at the Hall he was received by Dr. Francis who introduced the members of the Staff collectively. Subsequently the Duke visited the large library and to Mr. E.W. Hornung, the librarian, expressed great satisfaction on the comfortable provision made for book lovers. The beautiful Lorely Hall and the Edgar Music Corner were also commented upon in terms of great appreciation by his grace. The answers given to his enquiries by Mr. A. F. Jones M.A., the Musical Director, evidently created some surprise and delight. The great hall, which is perhaps the largest of the city, was then visited, and the Rev. A.D. McKenzie, who presides over this department, told of the large crowds which gather there every evening. In the practice cricket pitch adjoining the canteen the Duke stated that had he been younger he would have accepted a challenge to bowl Mr. A. L. Baker the coach and director of the Central's Sports. The canteen with its bizarre surroundings and tier upon tier of alcoves proved to be of exceptional interest and here he was shown round by Miss Beel, the head of the lady workers, at whose hands the duke graciously accepted as a memento of the visit a leather case containing specimen souvenir photographs published by the Central for relatives and friends of the men in England, as well as other publications.

During his tour of inspections His Highness conversed with many of the patrons of the Y.M.C.A. At the souvenir stall he found an Indian soldier to whom he spoke in Hindustani whilst in the great Hall two French poilus were rather surprised when he chatted with them in their own mother tongue.

On leaving the building he requested Dr. Francis to convey to the staff his great appreciation of their excellent work for the troops in Cologne, adding that it was gratifying to him to see that the Army had placed such magnificent premises in trust with the Y.M.C.A. for the benefit op the troops of Cologne.

"DIE ZAUBERFLÖTE" AT DUREN.

A FEW NOTES.

The troops stationed in and around Düren took full advantage of the opportunity provided on Tuesday evening of hearing in the Stadttheater Mozart's „Magic Flute." Perhaps some one well versed in the terminology of music has already given the piece and the players the full measure of appreciation they observe, but in any case a word or two from one, the veriest Philistine in matters musical, may be "worth while" if only by way of comparison. Perhaps an advanced musical education helps more fully to appreciate and interprete into his works, but the passive power to be swayed — to be "cheated of a sigh, or charmed to a tear," — has insinuated itself into the composition of all but the most unfortunate of us. Now, Mozart strikes the right note, or succession of notes in his "Zauberflöte" to harmonise with life as it finds us these glorious days of the Merry Month. Surely there is no call for music of the "lat the tear doon fa," variety when Nature is in her kindest mood and the old world is taking unto itself a new lease of war — free life; and the spirit of Spring served to weave over performers and audience a net of fraternity too subtle to come under the scope of Army regulations.

The shade of Mozart will perhaps pardon me when I say "Die Zauberflöte" was as undiluted joy to me as my first pantomime, but then the whole piece was so deliciously reminiscent of the ingenuous fare of our younger days, — harlequin and columbine, be-whiskered magician, gorgeous black men and "happy-ever-afterwardsness, all complete. Three very feminine fairies, sometimes good, sometimes bad, give the hero a magic flute to help him on his rather vague mission. He soon uses it to advantage with the assistance of somebody "off," with the genuine article,—when Monostatos, the magician's dusky hireling, tries to carry off the heroine, no less a person than the daughter of the Queen of Night. Like a true coon, and like our demobbed brethren, he is carried off in a transport by the strains, and, along with his black squad, break into a passable imitation of the "Tickle-toe" while the audience grip their seats to keep their shoulders from syncopating. The piece takes us through as many, as bizarre and as authentic eastern scenes as a modern revue, and little wonder that Tamino (our hero) and Papageno (my harlequin) are, to quote the programme, "a lotted three boys as guides." It is a safe guess that the writer of the synopsis is not unfamiliar with the Army Telegraph form; certainly the wording brought back to me unpleasant memories of rendezvous at inaccurate MAP references, where at no time did an omniscient Staff "allot as guides" to us three such flaxen-haired Fräuleins, who Orpheus-like, could have charmed away the tedium of the eternal duck-walks. Perhaps the next war will be better organised in this respect.

The caste was too excellent for me to draw invidious comparisons, but, after the ladies of course, my heart went out to ye merry old harlequin, who did most of the gagging while his principle "swung the bad." Certainly according to "the book" the hero was bound to silence for a time, but the infectious vivacity of his henchman, more than made amends. I felt just a little glad when the heroine misinterpreted the hero's silence and gave him the cold shoulder. Her attempt at suicide was half-hearted, — apologetic almost, as being against the anti-melodramatic atmosphere of the evening. It was with pleasure we greeted Papagena, at a late stage in the programme, for we realised that with such a name she couldn't help but be Papageno's affinity, and the two enraptured us with the "littiest" duet.

And the bouquets for the ladies as they made their final half-dozen bows would have "given to think" to those misguided gentlemen, who during the war proposed to deprive the British public of German music! A.R.T.

SHORTHAND CLASSES.

Afternoon or evening classes in the Sloan-Duployan method of shorthand will be held in the Army College, Cologne, provided that there is a sufficient number of applicants.

All troops, living in or near Cologne, who wish to take up this subject should see Capt. Bassford, Army General and Commercial College, Hansa-Ring, Cologne, if possible before Saturday, May 10th. The office will be open for this purpose between the hours of 14.00—15.00 and 17.00—18.00.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

The chance that once thou hast refused
Will never through the centuries recur.
Schiller.

Had Germany realised more fuller the power that is expressed in those words of her greatest poet, perhaps her destiny might have been other than that with which she is now confronted. Infused with a policy of blood and iron, Germany succumbed to the rallying cry of Bernhardi "World power or downfall," little thinking that the latter might prove a sordid reality. The old call to arms has changed to a bemoaning wail, and, now that World Power is out of the question, it is their aim to ignore the alternative they themselves created.

In recent issues we have been able to give the comments of various newspapers on the question of the attitude of the Germans with regard to terms, many of the extracts containing self-accusations not only for the origin of the World War, but for its prolongation and the many crimes which have been enacted during that period. Yesterday we quoted from Die Welt am Montag, in which it was clearly shown that, even though the Germans themselves might not realise the awful depths into which they had plunged, yet the remainder of the world was fully convinced of this fact. The writer denounces his own government as the source of the great upheaval, the instigator of the many crimes, and the cause of the strict terms which assuredly would be exacted by the Allies.

And yet, despite the fact that several prominent members of the New Republic have been trying for some time to enlighten the people and though even the little they already knew from local sources was sufficient to justify the severest terms, yet we find the populace sorrowfully surprised and overwhelmingly indignant.

An emphatic Refusal.

The Vorwärts, with truly German type of reasoning and estimation of justice, publishes in emphatic terms its conclusions.

"At present," it says, "we cannot tell whether this monstrous oppression will meet with our agreements. The huge difficulty in feeding Germany imposes special duties upon us. But it may be expressed that if we do sign this peace it is only because we are compelled to do so by violence. Inwardly, we refus emphatically."

"We cannot imagine it possible to find even one man with his five senses quite normal who believes that this peace can be of any duration. Such terms merely imply the progression of a latent war of destruction — the attempt to eradicate a people, not with the power of armaments, but by means of brutal economical slavery.

"We trust to the strength of the people which, at present, is working in the whole world and which cannot be controlled by foolish attempts at the green table to distort and render unnatural the shape of the world.

"The peace may be concluded at Versailles, but the world will only be the richer by another 'scrap of paper.'

"The real peace, which must create a just settlement and a lasting reconciliation cannot be withheld by this documentary obstruction. It must surmount, too, this abuse of the idea of right.

Is Germany ruined?

"Never, in the hundreds of years which have elapsed since the Punic Wars, has there been imposed on a people such terms as these," says the "Vossische Volkszeitung," resulting in the same end whether accepted or not. The question is can we live if we refuse? According to human judgment it appears highly improbable. Therefore, the next question we must ask ourselves is, can we live if we accept?

NEWS IN BRIEF.

The premature announcement that Lt. Mars R.A.F., was missing is to be officially investigated.

At a village auction sale near Bletchley (Bucks) an enamel saucepan, the original price of which was 1s. 6d., sold for 19s., and a 2s. frying-pan of several years' use fetched 10s.

Three thousand miners at Chihuahua City, Mexico, have asked for help, as Villa's bandits continue their victorious advance. The loyalty of President Carranza's forces is questioned.

Lieut. the Hon. Philip Wodehouse, second son of the Earl of Kimberley, has just died at Kimberley House, Wymondham, Norfolk, from injuries received in France in June last. Born in 1886, the Hon. Philip Wodehouse unsuccessfully contested the Andover division as a Liberal in 1910. He was in the Censor's Department in France.

Captain Guest, for the War Office, stated in the Commons that it was not possible to proceed against those men who joined the Casement brigade whilst prisoners of war in Germany, and consequently they had not been placed under arrest when repatriated to this country. Orders had been issued that the men were to be discharged from the Army for misconduct.

PROFITABLE SPIRITS.

That very engrossing industry of ascertaining how best to avoid payment of taxes has led the whiskey distillers to arrange for the sale of whiskey to be made from bond only direct to the retailer.

By this means the responsibility for payment of the taxes is to be shifted on to the retailer, the middleman being dispensed with, and his profits secured by the distillers.

Under the Spirits (Prices and Description) Order, dated August 25th 1918, spirit prices for sale in bulk were fixed at 20/- the proof gallon, less a minimum discount of 15 per cent. This discount was profit to the wholesale dealer or middleman who passed it on to the retailer. In future, therefore, no discount will be allowed, and it is presumed that the scheme will allow the distillers a clear profit of 100 per cent.

CENTRAL CLASSES — ARMY TROOPS.

will take place in Cologne May 22—1 pm. "Old Boys" of St. Edmunds College, Ware, are invited to communicate with Rev. B. Longstaff C. F London D. A. C., before 15th May.

Answers to Correspondents.

[The flow of correspondence, since the Cologne Post was instituted, has been enormous, and the Editor would like to point out that only a certain number of the innumerable questions can be answered in each issue. Should any inquirer find that his question has not yet been answered, he can have the assurance that it will receive attention in due course, and the answer will appear accordingly. Many questions have been received which could be answered much easier by the Adjutant of the unit concerned, and all such cases which affect the unit commander must be taken to him and not sent here. — Ed.]

Duration.—Your letter would be of sufficient general interest to publish if you had not made the fundamental mistake of confusing the meaning of the two words "cessation" and "suspension." In the phrase employed, viz., "six months after the cessation of hostilities" the meaning intended was "cessation" (not suspension) of hostilities. Obviously the armistice was only a "suspension" as armistices generally are; were it otherwise why were our troops and artillery, etc., brought up here at all.

T.T.—You must apply through the Education Officer of your unit.

H.M.D.—Yes, the 1st Division served in France.

A.B.—See answer to T.T.

24109—The Agricultural College is at Bonn.

Q.M.R—Your Education Officer can give you fuller particulars.

M.U.—On the 16th Dec., 1770, Beethoven was born as a son of a court tenor singer. Bonn is proud of being the birthplace of the great musician. The house, interesting in itself for its quaint architecture, is filled with a Beethoven museum of great value and artistic work. His home is at 10, Bonngasse.

21274.—For a tour of the town of Bonn, and for visiting the various museums from 2 to 5 hours would be required.

FREEDOM FOR HAIG & BEATTY.

The freedom of the City of London, with a sword of honour, will be presented to Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig and Admiral Sir David Beatty at the Guildhall on June 12. After the presentation, a luncheon will be given at the Mansion House in honour of the new freemen.

Sir Douglas Haig leaves London this morning for Glasgow, where he begins a three week's Scottish tour. He will receive the freedom of six boroughs.

GERMAN DELEGATES PLAY THE FIRST CARD.

EXPERTS RUSH TO VERSAILLES.

PREPARING A COUNTER-TREATY.

AND THE USUAL PRESS CAMPAIGN.

RANTZAU COMMENCES HIS CAMPAIGN.

TWO NOTES.

Versailles. The German Delegation has received its first instructions from the German Government and has met to frame the preliminary reply to the Entente. It is reported that it will submit a draft counter treaty. Count Brockdorff-Rantzau has requested a personal meeting with President Wilson for the purpose of oral negotiations.

Versailles, 9th May. Six members of the German Mission left yesterday for Berlin, viz: — Herren Lothringer of the Neue Berliner Zeitung Stampler, chief editor of the Vorwärts, Cahen, private secretary of Count Brockdorff-Rantzau, and three others. Cahen was formerly correspondent of the Frankfurter Zeitung These journalists have apparently a mandate to prepare a press campaign, which in Germany always takes place before decisions of national interest are taken.

As compensation (!) for this departure eight other Germans have arrived. One of them is a prominent man—Count Oberndorff, delegate extraordinary and plenipotentiary minister. He was one of the signatories to the convention of Spa. The others are members either of the Economical Commission or of the Financial Commission. Twenty-five other experts are expected at any time.—Wireless.

Versailles, 9th May. The chief of the German delegation, Foreign Minister Count Brockdorff-Rantzau addressed this evening two notes to the President of the Peace Conference, M. Clemenceau.

The first ran as follows:-

"Herr President!

"The German Peace Delegation has completed its first examination of the delivered Peace Terms.

"The draft treaty contains demands which are not supportable for any people; many of them, according to the opinion of our experts, are not realizable.

"The German Peace Delegation will submit their demonstration in detail and address to the Allied and Associated Governments their remarks and proofs.

"Accept, Herr President, the expression of my highest consideration.

(signed) Count Brockdorff-Rantzau."

9th May, 1919.

The text of the second note was:—

"Herr President!

The German Peace Delegation begs to outline its attitude on the question of the League of Nations, by addressing a memorandum, which, in their opinion, contains important new ideas for the programme of the League of Nations The German Peace Delegation reserve their detailed expressions of opinion about this project of the Allied and Associated Governments. They point out to-day the anomaly of asking Germany to sign the Covenant of the League of Nations as a part of the draft treaty, without being one of the states invited to enter the League of Nations. The German Delegation beg to ask whether such an invitation is intended and if so under what conditions.

"Accept Herr President etc.——

(signed) Count Brockdorff-Rantzau."

9th May, 1919.

THE GERMAN NATIONAL ASSEMBLY.

The sitting of the National Assembly fixed for next Monday at 3 p.m. will take place in the big Hall of the University at Berlin, owing to the Reichstag building being completely infested with vermin as a result of the Spartacist occupation.

BRITISH TROOPS IN RUSSIA.

In the House of Commons yesterday Mr. Winston Churchill, replying to Col. Wedgwood, stated that there are no British troops in Finland, Esthonia, Lettland or the Ukraine. As regards Karelia the War Secretary did not think it advisable to give any details as to the number of our troops at Murmansk. There is also a small Mission comprising twenty-five officers and other ranks in Rumania and Bessarabia and a larger mission with General Denikin in South Russia.

The total number of British troops in the Caucasus including Indian troops, is 24,200. In Siberia and with General Koltchak are about two battalions and the personnel of a strong mission.

EGYPT CALM THROUGHOUT.

Cairo. 6th May. The official communiqué says that since the last communiqué a week ago there has been almost complete calm throughout Egypt Certain elements however are still attempting to foment disturbances by the dissemination of false intelligence and by intimidation. Great progress has been made in the provinces towards the restoration of normal conditions and the establishment of better relations between the inhabitants and the troops.

SELF-DEMOBILIZATION PLOT.

WARNING TO DERBYITES.

Police inquiries in connection with the raid on the premises of the Sailors, Soldiers and Airmen's Union indicate that the scheme was not greatly supported by members of the Forces, many of whom throughout strongly resented the procedure of the Union. The movement only made headway in departmental camps among the six-shillings-a-day men kept at home. The plot for to-day was planned to secure the adherence of Derbyites, many of whom were discontented as regards demobilization. It is believed that the plot will fizzle out as the result of the police action.

The Home Office desires that all Derby men should be warned that any representations made to them that they can leave the army on 11th May are false.

FIELD MARSHAL FRENCH'S CRITICS.

Viscount French arrived in London yesterday. The Manchester Guardian understands that his visit has relation to questions about to be asked in the House of Commons with regard to the publication of his book on the early stages of the war.

The Daily Express in a leading article on the book says: "Public opinion will stand aghast at the picture of one British Field Marshal pursuing his greatest rival beyond the grave with stories and inuendoes to which the grave can make no reply. The Viceroy ought to be asked to resign immediately and relieve the Government of the embarrassment of his presence."

The Daily News says that the discussion in the House will be a "rather unhappy affair for Lord French. Apart from the grave impropriety of a man in his public position making these attacks on others, including a chief who happens to be dead it will be found that Lord French has a very vulnerable heel."

DESPITE THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

At a Banquet given in his honour at Glasgow Sir Douglas Haig said that the outstanding lesson of the war was the extraordinary military advantage gained by superior preparation for war

We have no right, he said, to count upon getting the opportunity of building up an army during a campaign. Despite hopes and expectations in regard to the League of Nations we cannot afford to disregard the necessity for military preparations. Our preparation must be based on a territorial citizen army.

WAR SPIES EXECUTED.

Mr. Shortt, the Home Secretary, informed Major Christopher Lowther in the Commons yesterday that during the years 1914 to 1918 nineteen persons were sentenced to death for treason, espionage, and similar offences against the State. Of these eight were of enemy origin, eight were neutrals, two were of Allied and one of British nationality. The sentence was carried out in 13 cases.

These figures, he added, did not include cases which arose in connection with the Irish rebellion in 1916.

OFFICIAL END OF THE WAR.

Ottawa. — An announcement was made in the Canadian House of Commons yesterday that an intimation had been received from Mr. Borden, the Premier, that the declaration by the King of the official end of the war is not likely to be made before the 1st August. Reuter.

LABOUR AND PEACE TERMS.

The Executive of the Labour Party has issued a manifesto stating its opinion that in some particulars the Summary of the Peace Treaty is opposed to the declarations made by President Wilson. It expresses the hope that there is yet time to bring it more into harmony with the Presidential declarations.

SELLING UP BRITISH WARSHIPS.

In reply to a question of Lord Curzon, Dr. Macnamara, Parliamentary Secretary to the Admiralty, stated that since the Armistice only one British warship—a light cruiser—has been sold, and that in India.

Arrangements are proceeding for the sale of further eleven warships and it was also hoped shortly to dispose of a further hundred and fifty, all these vessels being obsolete. Vessels of fighting value will be sold under a pledge that they will be broken up.

GOVERNMENT CHEESE.

Ottawa. A cable received from the British Ministry for Food announces that the Ministry will purchase the entire exportable supply of Canadian cheese of the present season.—Reuter.

CHARGE AGA NST SPORTING PARSON.

CASE OPENED.

The Rev. Everard Digby, well known as "the sporting parson" and a temporary chaplain to the forces, appeared at the Middlesex Guildhall yesterday morning to answer to the charge of acting improperly towards C.Q.M.S. J.C. West, East Kent Regiment, in London on the 4th March last. Accused pleaded "not guilty." C.Q.M.S. West described in detail what occurred and identified the accused.

Sir Archibald Bodkin, Treasury Counsel, prosecuting, said the offence was alleged to have been committed at Dansey Yard, a narrow thoroughfare behind Shaftesbury Avenue. The Rev. Digby had been dining at the Imperial Cadet Lodge of Freemasons, of which he is chaplain, at the Café Monico.

Mr. Bodkin said that West was excited and indignant at the conduct of accused and complained to a constable, who referred him to Captain Lloyd, A.P.M. on duty at Piccadilly Circus.

Sir Marshall Hall, defending, said witnesses would be called to prove that the accused was still at the Monico at the time of the alleged incident.

FARMERS AND MILK PRICES

PROBABLE DRASTIC ACTION.

An important inquiry bearing on the agitation of the farmers was opened in London yesterday evidence being given from Lancashire and the Western counties before the Travelling Commission which investigated the cost of milk production in various parts of the country. Lancashire farmers stated their case for an increase above the general prices prevailing throughout the country, and a delegation attended from Cornwall, Devon, Somerset, and Dorset to protest against the differential scale which fixed the price for the farmers in these counties a 2d a gallon below the rest of the country.

To a deputation of Yorkshire farmers the Food Controller said it had been represented that the Government ought to take over the whole of the production and distribution of milk. If prices soared much higher the Government would be compelled to take drastic action. He was convinced that the scale was not unfair and he had positive evidence that in many cases it was generous. He therefore refused to revise the scale at the expense of the consumer:

The chairman of the House of Commons Agricultural Committee wrote to the Lancashire Farmers Association deploring the action of the farmers in Lancashire in withholding the supply of milk from the urban and industrial population, and appealed to them to continue the supply. The prices fixed for summer milk may be unsatisfactory to the farmers, but what amounts to a strike of milk producers is not the method which should be adopted to get the grievance redressed and the committee deprecates such action. Representatives of the agricultural industry in the House of Commons are doing, and will do, their utmost by constitutional methods to safeguard the interests of agriculturists, but at a time when it is all important that the general public should understand the needs of agriculture, it is the greatest possible mistake for the farmers to alienate the sympathies of the urban and industrial communities. By the action they are taking they are making it much more difficult for the Government to frame their agricultural policy.

Lancashire milk producers have resolved, in deference to the wishes of the Committee, to recommend the resumption of milk delivery.

ENGLISH IMPORTS AND EXPORTS

According to the Board of Trade returns for April, imports totalled 112,210,747 sterling being a decrease of 7,670,296 sterling as compared with April 1918. April exports totalled 58,482,245 sterling being an increase of 18,410,783 sterling as compared with April last year. Imports and exports during the last three months show respective increases of 34,088,746 sterling and 49,009,172 sterling as compared with the corresponding period of last year.

NEW BREAD AND APPENDICITIS

A medical witness before the Government Committee on night-baking said that night-baking was bad, both from the point of view of the bakers and of the public. Owing to its indigestibility new bread was a frequent cause of appendicitis.

KEEN CO-OPERATIVES.

Workmen of Palmer's Shipbuilding Company at Jarrow responded so well to the invitation to invest money in a new issue of debenture stock, that the 25,000 pounds worth originally set aside for the purpose had to be doubled.

HEIR APPARENT'S STUNTS.

The Prince of Wales yesterday made a special stunting flight at Hounslow, the pilot being Colonel Barker V.C., whose left arm is permanently disabled and strapped to his breast. Col. Barker, who is regarded as the prince of stunters, performed loops, nose dives, stalls and other "Aerobatics."

TINPLATE WORKERS STRIKE.

The strike of tin plate workers at Swansea and Llanelly caused by the action of the annealers, is ended. The grievances of the men will be investigated by the Welsh Tinplate Industrial Council at a meeting arranged for the 13th May.

WEST HAM FOURFOLD TRAGEDY.

WILFUL MURDER.

The inquest on the four members of the Cornish family in connection with whose death Harry Perry, alias Beckett, a private in the 15th Suffolk Regiment, is in custody, was concluded at West Ham yesterday. Perry, who has made a remarkable confession in connection with the murders, was given an opportunity of being present at the inquest, but he is stated to have declined to accept that, and he was not present.

The coroner, in opening the proceedings, drew the attention to the confession Perry had made, and said it practically reconstructed the whole crime and would materially lighten the labours of the jury, who would doubtless find it the right thing to put Perry on his trial for the murders.

Chief Inspector Neil, of Scotland Yard, produced the statement, which the coroner read.

The Coroner to Inspector Neil: Was the school broken into?—Yes.

Did he say anything to you?—Yes, he said Mrs. Cornish received a letter from her sister-in-law at Colchester, and it was after that they twitted him and told him to clear out. Perry added, "I was annoyed."

He was charged?—Yes, and he said, "Yes, I understand, it is quite true."

Detective Pitchley, of Forest-gate, said at 7.15 a.m. on the night of the tragedy he was called by telephone from Queen Mary's Hospital. He went there with Detective-sergeant Foster. He saw Mr. Cornish, and asked him who caused his injuries. He replied. "My wife's nephew has struck me on the head with a chopper." Witness then went to 13, Stukeley-road, and found the body of Marie lying in the cellar with a wound in the head. Going upstairs, he found in an outhouse the body of Mrs. Cornish. The body was only found after removing a quantity of lumber. Stuck in the throat was about 4in of the metal part of a carving fork, and there was also a gash in the throat. The ring finger of the left hand had been severed, and lay beside the body. Under a bench was found a pick-axe smeared with blood, both on the hammer end and on the handle.

Dr. Garden, continuing his evidence of last week, said the blow of the pick-axe on Mrs Cornish had caused a fatal injury to the throat. Witness added that he believed the first blow was that on the back of the woman's head, and the one on the forehead was given when she was lying down. The wound on the throat alone would have caused death. At the bottom of the cellar steps, said the doctor, he found Marie. She had a gaping wound in the throat, and had been dead for about five hours.

Mrs. Ethe Emmeline Sparks said she lived with Mrs. Gallagher. She had known Beckett about a month. He had told her he was a single man, and that he had been a prisoner of war He also said he had been wounded. Mrs. Cornish had introduced him to her as her nephew. She had visited him at Mrs. Cornish's house. She was to have been married to him on May 7 She saw him on Easter Saturday and also on the Sunday, and he did not tell her of any trouble with the Cornishes. Beckett had told her he had relatives at Colchester. Mrs. Cornish had never said anything but good about him. He told her that Perry was his regimental name.

The jury returned a verdict of wilful murder against Beckett.

AFFILIATION ORDER ARREARS.

The question of liability of a soldier to pay arrears under an affiliation order came before the Manchester magistrate yesterday Applicant had obtained an order in March, 1913, for four shillings per week. In December, 1914, defendant joined the army and under the Army Act applicant received four pence daily. Defendant was demobilised in March, 1919, and the question at issue was whether the payment fixed by the Army Act of 1881 was a full or part payment of defendant's liabilities during his period of service.

The Magistrate, regretting that defendant was not legally represented, said his reading was that it was only a part payment, and made an order of four shillings weekly in reduction of the arrears.

KINMEL CAMP RIOTS.

At Thursday's sitting of the Court-martial which is trying men accused of mutinous behaviour at Kinmel Camp, a Toronto University student, Gunner Elliott Evans, of the Canadian Artillery, was acquitted of the charge of participation in the mutiny.

Yesterday the Court-martial acquitted six more Canadian soldiers of charges in connection with the riots.

Gunner Lorette, the first prisoner to come before the Court-martial, has been convicted on the alternative charge of failing to use his utmost endeavour to suppress the mutiny, and is now serving three months' sentence at Wandsworth.

CAPITAL AND LABOUR.

At a banquet of members of the Iron and Steel Institute last night M. Eugene Schneider of the Creusot works dealt with future relationships of capital and labour.

What was wanted, he said, was not the framing of a clever scale of wages but a transformation of habits of thought. Future captains of industry and workers must learn to know each other by mingling together.

TO HONOUR THE NAVY

Speaking at a meeting of the Mercantile Marine Association of Liverpool yesterday, Dr. Macnamara announced that the Admiralty is trying to get together representative crews of the Mercantile Marine who had been torpedoed.

It is intended that they shall take part in the public reception at London to Admiral Beatty and the officers and men of the Navy.

FLYING THE ATLANTIC OCEAN.

STILL WAITING.

St. John's, 8th May. The announcement of the arrival at Halifax of two American seaplanes is causing much excitement here. British airmen are impressed by the promptness of the American effort, but the fact that the five hundred mile flight took ten hours is not regarded as a hopeful augury. It is expected that the Sopwith and Martinsyde machines will maintain a speed of one hundred miles per hour during the whole of the flight. The Englishmen are determined to attempt the flight immediately the weather looks at all favourable though they would prefer waiting for the moon next Wednesday.— Reuter.

Chatham, Massachusetts, 9th May.—The American seaplane N.C. 4 was towed into the harbour this morning with three motors disabled. Reuter.

CLERGYMAN'S STRANGE CONDUCT.

Before Mr. Mead, at Marlborough-street, William Bettison, 73, clerk in holy orders, of the Rectory, Dedendon, Essex, was charged with using insulting words and behaviour in Hyde Park.

According to the evidence of Police-constable Reeve, A, he watched the prisoner on Wednesday evening in consequence of a complaint he received from a lady as to the latter's conduct. He saw him place himself beside a young lady who was sitting reading a paper near Rotten Row, put his face close to hers and say something, at the same time placing his hand on her lap. The lady at once rose and walked away. Then the prisoner went up to two other young women, separately, and repeated his former conduct, apparently to their great annoyance. Witness thereupon asked him to explain his behaviour, and he replied, "I have not done any hurt; I didn't know that girl was with anybody." He was arrested, and on the way to the police-station said to witness, "Do a kind action for once, and let me go; nobody will know," and offered him a 10s. note. At the station he said if allowed to go he would not come to the park again; and gave a name and address which were found to be false. Witness further told the magistrate that before they arrived at the police-station a gentleman gave him his card, and complained strongly of what he had seen of the prisoner's conduct.

Mr. Mead: Was he sober?—He smelt slightly of drink, but was not by any means drunk. The lady who first spoke to me seemed very indignant at what the prisoner said to her, but did not tell me what it was.

Mr. Mead fined the accused 40s., and 10s. costs.

NURSES TRADE UNION

At a meeting of one hundred hospital matrons held in London yesterday it was decided to form an Association of hospital matrons in order to secure much needed reforms on behalf of nurses and training schools.

STUD KENNELS BURNT.

The stud kennels at Dochfour, Inverness, Baroness Burton's home, were destroyed by fire yesterday. A few dogs were saved but about a score of Cairn terriers, including some valuable prize winners, were lost.

STRIKE OF SEAMEN.

Passenger traffic between Southampton and Cowes is at a standstill owing to a strike among the seamen. They ceased working yesterday, demanding increased pay and other concessions. The Packet Company refused the demands as the men's minimum pay is now seventy shillings a week.

COALS AND DUKES.

The Marquis of Bute and Lord Tredegar were the principal witnesses before the Coal Commission yesterday.

Lord Tredegar said that his average annual income from royalties and wayleaves was eighty thousand sterling.

With reference to his title deeds Mr. Hodges asserted that there existed in Cardiff museum a document which proved that the ancestors of Lord Tredegar became possessed of the land by the signature of Edward the Sixth when that monarch was a boy of ten.

The Marquis of Bute said his average annual income from royalties was 109,277 pounds sterling.

LONDON STOCK EXCHANGE.

On the London Stock Exchange yesterday there was a disposition to take profits in several instances at first, but later on markets made a good recovery under the influence and strength of certain Industrials and the sentiment at the close indicates a renewal of activity and strength next week. Investments were quiet in view of the daily competition for new capital issues. Several applications for capital are expected next week. French Rentes were steady and there was a demand for Turkish unified stock on the issue of a reassuring statement regarding payment of coupons. Chilian bonds were strong on negotiations for a loan to Chili by American capitalists. Oils became buoyant again. Shell Transports advanced considerably further on bonus issue of one share at par for every two held. The feature of the Industrial section was a jump of one pound in Courtland's (artificial silk manufacturers) to 9 ½ in anticipation of an announcement regarding the capitalisation scheme. Gold mining shares are steadily improving.

IN REFLECTIVE MOOD.

To-day we permit ourselves the luxury of silence regarding the draft Treaty of Peace. The fever excited expectation, the strenuous labour of communicating to a waiting public the actual terms of the Allies' will, the thankless work of undelayed and careful commentary, these leave the journalistic mind so exhausted that it seeks a welcome relief in less arduous tasks. It is the soldier's duty to win the battle; it is the politician's part to ensure the peace. We remember that peacemakers are blessed and have assigned to them some attribute of divinity, but we prefer our own more human lot in life.

These have been great days — some have been Mr. Britlings and have "seen it through," some have been Mr. Sterlings and "Have stuck it out." But the inevitable reaction is beginning, and days that once seemed halcyon are robbed of their glories by lassitude and disillusionment. Men wonder if the vista that lies before them is as bright as they expected it to be, if the new era that they yearned for is really begun. The optimism that substained them through many an evil day of tragedy and sorrow is losing its flowing splendour. Pessimism has not yet taken hold of their hearts, but it is hovering around with sinister intent. The face of the world is not a shining morning face. It is lined and wrinkled as the countenance of a man of sorrows. Christendom has had bequeathed to it the doleful legacy of war, and war forgets no man in its last will and testament. Instead of new heaven and new earth there is but an old and impoverished universe. Life holds little prospect save that of hard work, heavy taxation, and high cost of living. Struggle will for long be the watchword of nations who have only now emerged from unparalleled struggle and thought they were entering a haven of rest. Nay more—there is a growing fear that war has been scotched, not killed. Can the world revive if it is still to be the scene of eternal revanche?

Courage on the battlefield we know, and never has there been nobler examples of courage than in these years that have slowly passed us by. But we need courage as we never needed it before, a moral and spiritual courage that is as splendid as war's noblest heroism. We must fight against the spirit of disillusionment, against the perils of faintheartedness. We must dare all things rather than lose our high hopes of a better world. No second-best must content us. Let us have faith that the best is yet to be. It is disloyalty to our brave dead to act as if "the homely beauty of the good old cause is gone."

Some men and women at home and abroad have sped to the precarious anodyne of gaiety. Short-sighted, they have placed their faith in easy means of allaying the pains that stab the heart. That is not brave policy. Life is a poor thing without merriment, and it demands happiness of soul and body if it is to thrive. But life is more than pleasure. If the future is to be good and worthy, then we must face its problems with wisdom and courage. Each man may do something for his country that shall help it to pass triumphantly from the evils of war into the paths of enduring peace and good will. Let us scorn the dissipations of pessimism and welcome the joys of hope.

COUNT BROCKDORFF-RANTZAU.

A DIPLOMATIST OF THE OLD SCHOOL.

The extraordinary harangue to which the peace plenipotentiaries were treated by Count Brockdorff-Rantzau is not to be wondered at when we remember the Count's antecedents and surroundings. A Junker by birth, imbued with the ideas of the Wilhelm Strasse, this ex-favourite of the Kaiserin sees fit to read the Entente a lesson on European reconstruction, to which Germany will graciously lend its assistance. In this connection an open letter addressed to the German peace delegates in the Temps by E. Lavisse, the French historian, a few days ago appears peculiarly appropriate.

After regretting the enmity existing between France and Germany, M. Lavisse states that he has no desire to insult the German negotiations who come as France's guests; his only desire is to state what French sentiment is with regard to their presence. First of all the French public is surprised that amongst them none of those men are to be found who protested against the policy of William II, acknowledged Germany's guilt, and were prepared to make restoration. With such men M. Lavisse declared, negotiators and even an understanding would have been easier. Count Brockdorff-Rantzau was a faithful adherent of the old regime, and now, though outwardly a democrat, was nevertheless still a Count, and for a long time past had addressed threats to the Entente. The letter continues: "Now that you are here I would exhort you to spare us declarations which would only make us smile or shrug our shoulders. Do not prate to us about free democratic Germany, or of a peace of reconciliation, any more than of right or justice: still less do we advise you to abuse President Wilson's propositions. Phrases such as these may be appropriate enough in your newspapers or in your debates at Weimar, but in Paris you have to speak with men who will not allow themselves to be hoodwinked and who have to pass stern judgment upon the greatest crime in the history of the world. You will have to suffer much, not only revanche for Bismarck, Wilhelm I, and Blücher, but also for your actions in the present war. You say you do not wish to be condemned to forced labour, in order to pay off your yearly instalments, but we will not be compelled to work for years in order to make good the areas you have devastated, whilst Germany has remained almost untouched by the war, and whilst the Leipzig Fair has been having a phenomenal success." The Peace negotiations Lavisse concludes, are compromised by the old regimé and represent an ambiguous government.

An Irishman presented himself before a Liverpool magistrate to seek advice.

"Sor," he said, I kapes hens in my cellar, but th' wather pipes is bust, an' me hens is all drownded."

"Sorry I can't do anything for you," said the magistrate; "you had better apply to the water company."

A few days later Pat again appeared.

"Well, what now? What did the water company tell you?" queried the magistrate.

"They tould me, yer honor," was the reply, "to kape ducks."

Smith, the hotel manager, and Jones, a manufacturer's agent, were talking one day about their respective business interests.

"I say," remarked Jones, "how ever do you use such an enormous quantity of pears and peaches?"

"Well," replied Smith, "we eat what we can, and what we can't eat we can."

"Indeed!" said the other. "We do about the same in our business."

"How is that?"

"We sell an order, when we can sell it, and when we can't we cancel it."

THE CHRISTIAN APPEAL.

ITS POWER TO SATISFY.

BY A CORRESPONDENT.

With men religion is considered to be an affair of the emotions, or the mind, or the conscience or the will. Religion, I mean the Christian religion especially, does not appeal to every man in the same way. According to our make and bent, the needs of our life, our qualities of heart and brain, our disposition and temperament the great common religious appeal finds an entrance into our life. In spite of denials, religion always appeals to men, but the effectiveness of the answer depends upon whether the whole nature of man is appealed to or merely a part. The emotion, the mind, the conscience, the will, are parts or phases of man's being, and Christianity may appeal to each or to all. The emotional or sentimental channel is considered to be the least resisting, by which religion can enter and permeate the whole fibre of man's being, both mental and spiritual. Man in such a case is touched, won, and held through his affections, and he is satisfied when the deepest part of his emotional nature finds peace. With some, religion is more an affair of the mind by which an appeal is made to their reason and intellect. They are those who are in search for some reasonable explanation of this mysterious world, and of human life. Their religious interests centre round big questions—creation, the being of God, sin, the Sonship of Christ, free-will and human destiny. Then we have those who say "My conscience is my religion," meaning, we suppose, that they consider religion an affair of the conscience. Are sin and need oppressing facts to them. The burden of evil lies heavily on their soul. For them above all things, Christianity is life's refuge, the one power in heaven or earth able to say with authority "Thy sins be forgiven thee." Again to some religion is akin to an affair of the will. They seek the right and the good thing, the straight path and the clear duty; and in religion they find life's one pure ethic, the eternal law of conduct, the power and inspiration to live the clean and wholesome life.

Now we should learn that the Christian religion appeals, or should appeal to the whole personality of man. No matter where it may begin, in the emotion, or in the mind, it claims to have the right to march right through into the very citadel of our being, until it possesses and governs the whole life and being. The Christian believes that there is no province of our being which should be outside a true living Christianity. If we cried to God with our whole nature, our whole nature would receive its peace. However human life is sub-divided into mental, moral or spiritual, Christ is able to make His appeal to each and every part. He is able to satisfy every true and worthy emotion, every kind and generous thought. He has directed, and will direct the human heart to noble sacrifice, to fine ideals, to human kindness, to the love of man and every fair and gracious thing. He satisfies the heroic in us, the call to labour and aspire, to endure, to suffer, to win through loss. He satisfies the mind; the unresting burrowing mind of man. He gives the mind the only peace it can have through a reasonable explanation of the world of life, of ourselves, of destiny and of the great longings and yearnings of our inner life. We hold with conviction that Christ is able to satisfy the reason, to give it a basis for work, a plan for work and an aim for work. He can satisfy the deep demands of our moral nature, all our pass on for righteousness, all our love for truth, and justice, all the demands for the best that is in us. Then again he can satisfy that mysterious spiritual nature within us, which has in all ages gone out gropingly after the eternal and the abiding. To the whole big, broad, deep human nature He stands and says "Come unto me all ye that labour and are heavy laden and I will give you rest."

A MOOD.

Being the Reflection of one suffering from Respectability.

This is surely an age of custom; an age in which the historical continuity of certain conventions of thought or action has arrogated to itself an aspect of almost divine sanction. We search our memoris for traditions of the past upon which to base our experiments of to-morrow.

The experience of yesterday may prove false, that of a thousand yesterdays is surely true!

We have so schooled ourselves to doing that which custom has certified as correct that our minds are incapable of appreciating anything except phantoms of the past.

Is it wrong or strange, or is it only natural, that some men at times, insanely wish not only to destroy the well-propped fabric of custom out to pile stone upon stone until a new whole shall raise it's height in utter, absolute negation of the Oracles of yesterday?

"The act to think," has long ceased to imply creation; to live must only be to imitate.

The conventions and customs of our age are as hollow and as false as the mask of death, yet who dares to break the self-rivetted chains with which we are bound.

Life and Love cry out for new forms of expression and adoration; they are met on every-side by gestures of censure and dismay.

Live as life was lived yesterday; think as men thought yesterday or before; believe what men believed yesterday; do otherwise, and surely your little world shall crumble into ruin.

And yet steadily and surely; even in an eruptive or disruptive manner, the evolution of ideas is progressing, behind, underneath, over around our enchanted castle of respectability. Half the world is using anarchy as a means to the resurrection of a mis-interpreted past; half (is it our half?) is straining mind and heart to perpetuate an anomalous present.

Half would find a panacea for all ills in some age-cherished doctrine of negation, and thus in the acceptance of some equally time-worn affirmatives. Refrain from this, do that — —! Too much of this and that! — This and that which the opinion of generations has subscribed to as right or condemned as wrong.

How dare we presume, who are of the present, that the action of to-day shall be confirmed by the judgment of 1000 days to come?

Yet how often is the rule of life moulded by the dicta of those who lived some thousand years before.

Were they right then, need they be right to-day, must we be right to-morrow? Why not once, if only once, say: "I think, I say, I do! — In spite of the wisdom of the ages, of the visions of the sun, I do — and that which I do is right." INVITIS VENTIS.

During an address to a body of law students ex-President Taft pointed out that too much care cannot be taken in the selection of the jury. In this connection he told of an intelligent-looking farmer who had been examined by both defence and prosecution and was about to be accepted, when the prosecutor chanced to ask:

"Do you believe in capital punishment?"

The farmer hemmed and hawed and after a moment's reflection replied:

"Yes, sir, I do, if it ain't too severe."

CULTURE AND CIVILIZATION.

All the world knows that the Germans are prone to boast about their "kultur" and, although we may now be disillusioned, we were perhaps too ready to lend a sympathetic ear to their claims in pre-war days. For, with but too many people, culture is very easily confused with "civilization," and progress in the latter regarded as a necessary enrichment of the former.

But this is by no means the case. Briefly defined, civilization may be said to represent a nation's material advancement, whereas culture represents its spiritual attainments. Thus, steam engines, telephones, wireless telegraphy, aeroplanes and all the developments in science are things which make part of a nation's civilization, but we measure its culture by its music, poetry, art, philosophy, morals, etc. In other words, civilization is the practical side of existence, whereas culture embraces those ideals and higher aspirations which constitute the soul of a nation.

The great Russian philosopher and novelist, Dostoïveski, went so far as to affirm that civilization and culture were diametrically opposed to each other; that, in proportion to the strides a nation made in civilization, her culture deteriorated. This may seem a somewhat startling theory, but a study of history will reveal much in its support. Dostoïveski was no doubt most influenced by the events in his own country, for he saw there that, as the waves of western civilization were gradually sweeping away the barriers of Russian conservatism, her morals and ideals degenerated. Then, among the greater Powers of the world, the country which, measured by our European standards, is perhaps the most backward in civilization, is China. Yet her spiritual and artistic level is considered by many competent judges to be above ours. On the other hand, the Americans are universally looked upon as the most go-ahead and up-to-date race, but what have they contributed towards the world's store of culture — how many really great poets, sculptors, artists, musicians or philosophers?

We in Britain have not improved our culture since the great industrial revolution and the rapid developments in the world of science. Can our literary and artistic geniuses of the last twenty years bear comparison with those of the preceding century? But, fortunately, we had not allowed the march of materialism to blind us entirely to ideals, and the 4th of August, 1914, found us all ready to sacrifice everything in order to safeguard those essential principles of culture, just as much as those of civilization. And the same may be said of all the Allies, for surely there never was a war fought in which material considerations played so small a part.

This is where Germany failed. True, she had at one time a just claim to "Kultur," as no one can dispute the brilliance of her great musicians and some of her poets and artists. But they mostly existed before the Fatherland emerged as a great Power, and the Germany which gave birth to men like Wagner and Goethe was a very different Germany from that which devoured religiously Bernhardi's and Neitzsche's treatises on the gospel of "Might is Right," and which drove nails into a ludicrous wooden statue of Hindenburg. Many Germans honestly believed that the benefits to be derived from German kultur would far outweigh any suffering entailed by its forcible imposition on other peoples. But it is probable that the average German visualized in "Kultur" things which were really in the province of civilization and, therefore, distinct from culture, e.g.—their commercial and scientific achievements and their old system of Government, under which everything ran smoothly at the point of the bayonet.

A little idealism and true culture might have saved Germany from the policy which has led to her ruin and incidentally has denuded Europe of its manhood.

QUESTION TIME.

OR UNCLE ARTHUR'S LETTER BOX.

PART VI.

All questions by correspondents answered with promptitude, special attention being paid to those concerning demobilisation.

PETER. — Q. What is the Highland Divisional sign?

A. A haggis rampant on a field of 'Sandy Mac'.

SUFFOLK. — Q. Do you know where the R.S.M. was when the recruit called him old sport?

A. Yes, Trotsdorf, I think. Anyway he was beyond Spich!!

PRIVATE. — Q. What is the best way to get on and off a tram when in motion?

A. Cut the right hand smartly across the body and grasp the tram firmly between the thumb and forefinger. Then trust in Providence. To alight, reverse the above motions.

LIEUT. — Q. Can one obtain rooms in the Bernskine Hotel, London, West?

A. Not at present. This Hotel is still taken over by the Government as the Headquarters of the Ministry for the Determination of a universal standard of mark to be affixed to General Elect on Ballot Papers.

RECRUIT. — Q. What is a leave warrant like?

A. I don't know. I've only been out here fourteen months myself.

PIONEER. — Q. What does a mule eat?

A. Trees, canvas, S. D. clothing, neck chains, pickets wood 6 ft., pickets screw iron, barbed wire, etc. (see G1098, List of Ordnance Stores). It is also partial to human flesh. The army idea is, however, that it eats oats and hay.

UBIQUE.

A LAUGH OR TWO.

The village photographer was losing patience with his lady patron. "Just a little smile, please," he said, dwelling somewhat on the last word. "A smile adds much to the artistic effect."

The lady shook her head.

"Of course if you'd rather," commenced the artist.

"I would not," came from the direction of the headrest. "Our one layin' 'en died this mornin', bacon's gone up tuppence a pound, mother's had a couple of fits, my boy George has just broken a plate-glass window, and my husband is in a military hospital with four or five pounds o' lead inside him. If you think I'm goin' to grin like a Cheshire cat when I'm up against that shower o' blessin's you're scratchin' the wrong pig. You git on with it natural, mister."

Harry came running home with a book under his arm. "Why, what's that, Harry?" his mother asked.

"It's a prize, mother."

"A prize? What for?"

"For natural history, mother. Teacher asked me how many legs an ostrich had, and I said three."

"But an ostrich has two legs."

"I know that now, mother, but the rest of the class said four, so I was nearest."

COLOGNE OPERA HOUSE.

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAMME.

DAY	HOUR	OPERA	COMPOSER
Sunday	3	Götter-dämmerung	Wagner
Monday	12	Mignon	Ambroise Thomas
Tuesday		No performance

BRITISH EMPIRE LEAVE CLUB.

FUTURE ENTERTAINMENTS.

On Monday (12th), the opening day, there will be a delightful little concert in the music room at 5 p.m., when Miss Barnard, Q.M.A.A.C., will play a couple of pianoforte solos, Miss van de Weyden, Q.M.A.A.C, will play the violin, and Captain Greenlees, 2nd Royal Scots will sing, so that lovers of good music will have a most enjoyable afternoon. On Monday evening and every following Monday from 6.30 to 9 p.m. there will be a practice dance for the men in the theatre. Tuesday (13th) is the first performance in the Club theatre, when the Woman's Theatre Company, kindly lent by the Church Army, will give a programme of plays and songs and Lt. S.E. Percy, H.L.I., of the Rhine Army Dramatic Co., will produce for the first time in Cologne "The Constant Lover" by St. John Hankin.

On Wednesday (14th) and every following Wednesday there will be a dance for the men in the theatre from 6.30 to 9 p.m.

Thursday (15th) the first of the weekly whist drives will be given from 6.30 to 9 p.m.

Friday (16th) the first lecture will most kindly be given at 6 p.m. by Major Bles, the Town Major, on "The War and its Ending." The chair will be taken by Major General Sillem, C.B.

Saturday (17th) and every following Saturday at 6.30 to 9 p.m. there will be another dance for the men, and on Sunday (18th) the Officer Commanding the 12th Royal Lancers has most kindly given permission for the band of the regiment to play a selection of music from 6.30 to 9 p.m. Cpl. Howard Fry will also sing during the afternoon.

All the above entertainments are free, and every afternoon there is a cinema in the Theatre, from 2.30 to 4.30, for which the tickets are 1 and 2 Marks.

THE "FRAGMENTS".

The patrons of the Deutsche Theatre during the coming week have a distinct treat in store. The "Fragments" (Southern Division concert party) who many will remember at the Apollo last month, are paying a return visit to Cologne, with an up-to-date and well-selected variety programme.

The entire absence of pierrot members marks a distinct line from the concert parties of war days, and it is hoped tha the public will appreciate the efforts to reproduce as far as possible the "Blighty" effect, which each programme should produce.

The Troupe will be supported by a small string orchestra, and numbered among the artistes are 3 "Girls" who must be seen and heard to be thoroughly appreciated. Pte. Alex Hill, the noted Baritone, and Sergt. Cavanagh, the Irish comedian, are also appearing. Several concerted items will be staged, and judging by the programme a good two hours of bright fun and music may be anticipated.

"THE CHEVRONS" CONCERT PARTY

During the past week the "Chevrons" have paid a return visit to the Stadt Theatre, Duren, with an entirely new and original programme. They have played to enthusiastic audiences all week despite the counter-attractions in the town. Outstanding features of the remarkably good performance are the individual efforts of the comedians, who seem to have a huge store of up-to-date gags; the refined duet and quartette scenes from opera, the musical comedy song and dance item, and the well staged Italian burlesque. The latter is brim-full of subtle humour and is a welcome change from the usual run of concert party sketches. A topical Jazz Band turn, which affords much scope for the comedy men, concludes a well-balanced programme. The picturesque costumes make a beautiful colour scheme especially in the concerted numbers. Enquiry has elicited the fact to the "Chevrons" concert party is not a representative selection from Corps or Divisions, but the product of 136 Siege Battery R.G.A. and with all due respect to other shows this party rivals anything in France or the occupied areas. "The Chevrons" will visit Cologne on their first vacancy.

MUSIC AT SIEGBURG.

By kind permission of the Lieut. Col. T.M.C. G. Bridges, the band of the 2nd Royal North Lancs. Regt. will in future play in the market Square, Siegburg, on Sundays and Wednesdays. The programme will be from 5 to 6 p.m.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY A.C.

EFFORTS TO REVIVE THE SPORT.

A determined effort to get athletics going during the present term at Cambridge is being made, and at a further meeting officers and committee have been appointed, whilst the possibility of holding some sports has been fully discussed. The main difficulty confronting the athletes is the fact that the University ground is claimed during the May term by the cricket club, and it is impossible to carry on training whilst cricket is in progress. With only four or five days between now and the end of term on which no cricket is arranged, it means that the men will either have to train in the mornings or the evenings. Further-more, with the term now in full swing, most of the men have already decided to take up other branches of sport. However, not to be discouraged, the officials have decided to hold a sports meeting at the University ground on Saturday, the 24th, provided that permission can be obtained of the cricket club. The athletic club have been considerably handicapped by the absence of an old athletic Blue in residence, and whilst it was hoped that R.S. Woods, who was president in 1914, was coming into residence again, it is now known that he has definitely decided not to do so. An old cross-country Blue, A.C. Telfer, Selwyn, has been elected president; W. Mabane, Caius, secretary; and A.K. Bird, Emmanuel; I. Law, Queen's; H. W. C. Craigmile, King's; G.M. Butler, Trinity; and L.D. Marshall, Sidney, form the committee. Although much cannot be looked for this summer, it may be the means of getting things going as soon as the October term commences.

"PADDLING HIS OWN CANOE."

BOAT-HIRING INCIDENT AT LINDENTHAL LAKE.

ROWER MONOPOLISTS.

With the arrival of scorching sunshine and the consequent demand for balmy zephyrs ones thoughts turn to boating on river or lake. The Rhine, unfortunately, is too "heady", so that in Cologne and neighbourhood one must needs resort to one or other of the miniature artificial lakes with which the district is provided. One of these has been already refered to in "The Cologne Post", namely the pond in the Volksgarten, near the side of which, by the way, is (or was recently) the magnificent residence of Mr. Otto Rotaschild. Another of hese lakes is situated in the Lindenthal Park, some 20 minutes car run from the Dom.

Here everything in the garden may be lovely, but, according to a correspondent, who sends us an account of a recent experience, everything is surely not in perfect working order in the administrative department. At 10—10 a.m., he waited in a queue for a single boat, being a firm believer in paddling his own canoe. According to the blackboard posted outside the boat-house, the boat he desired (No. 7) was next due to arrive in port at 10.40. At 11.35 practically an hour later, the Germanic Commodore who was impersonated by a boy informed the would-be sailor that his boat would only be another 5 minutes.

When the 5 minutes expired another Teuton entered the melodrama—the lady cashier who controlled the finances of the Lindenthal Fleet or at least that portion of it which had not come under the notice of that circumtabular oligarchy at Versailles.

'Confab" with Boy.

This young lady whispered to the boy to give the much coveted No. 7 to the lucky occupant for another hour! All sorts of theories occurred to our informant as to his discomfiture. Was it a diabolical arrangement emanating from the piratical brain of the one and only Tirpitz? Was it a naval counterstroke evolved by Admiral von Capelle, a brain-wave of Captain Persius? From 10.10 a.m. to 11.40 the would-be mariner waited patiently for what was presumably the only single boat available, and was then informed that he must needs wait another hour!

Rightly our informant pointed out to the lady that he did not consider it satisfactory that hirers of boats should be able to occupy them all day if they thought fit while others are waiting. One of the Germans in the queue remarked that the complaint was well founded. The regulation with regard to boat-hiring on this particular lake are unknown to us, but if they permit of the hiring of boats in this unsatisfactory manner, new regulations seem to be overdue.

In this case there ought to be no necessity for submitting the question to the Great Four. A few minutes consideration in some municipal department., and one or two "verboten" and the deed is done. As for the carrying out of the law there can be no dubiety as British Military police circumnavigate the lake assiduously.

CRICKET AT HENNEF.

51st BEDFORDSHIRES GETTING READY FOR "COLOGNE POST" CUP.

The above unit held the first of a series of Company cricket matches on Wednesday, when "B" Coy. met "A" Coy., the main object being to pick out likely starters for the Cologne Post cup which is already beginning to arouse great interest in the Hennef district. The glorious weather attracted quite a good number of spectators, who did not hesitate to shout their appreciation of the Company players. Winning the toss "13" Coy. decided to bat first, but the deadly bowling of Lieut. Sayers and Sgt. Elliot proved too much for, them and "B" Coy had the mortification of seeing all their wickets fall for 14 runs, notwithstanding the presence of "13" Coy's crack bowlers, Lieut. Thompson, who got seven wickets, the remaining three falling to Lieut. Daltrey. The second winnings proved almost as disastrous for "B" Coy., who this time managed to get 20 against "A" Coy's 43 for seven wickets. Scores below:—

"B" Company.—2nd Lieut. Mason c. Lieut. Sayers, 4, Capt. Coward, M.C., b. Lieut. Sayers, 0; Pte. Dachtler b. Lieut. Sayers, 0; Lieut. Thompson b. Lieut. Sayers, 0; Cpl. Tones, run out, 1; Lieut. Daltrey S.A. b. Lieut. Sayers, 2; Pte. Archer J. b. Lieut. Sayers, 2; Pte. Greenwood b. Sgt. Elliot, 5; Pte. Adams b. Lieut. Sayers, 0; L Cpl. Grump b. Sgt. Elliot, 0; Pte. Cross, not out, 0; Total, 14.

Sporting Snippets.

The famous Surrey's Regimental Depot is at Kingston Barracks, and their Sports Club was an important feature at headquarters for a long period prior to the war. Yesterday Maj. J. C. May, D.S.O., Commanding Officer, presided at a meeting which enthusiastically pledged itself to a revival, cricket, football, and hockey sections being arranged, as well as athletics. Financial support was assured, and the future is full of promise. It will be remembered that in the charge at Montauban the East Surreys went over the top dribbling a football right up to the enemy's trenches.

The United Senior League has been wound up. The Cup presented by Mr. Gill Knight was handed over to the winners, Hampstead Town, at a meeting held at Norwich House, High Holborn, on Tuesday night, and the balance in hand of £3 6s. 2d. was voted to the Footballers' Widows and Orphans' Fund.

The Lancashire F.A. have given notice to the Football Association of their intention to move an alteration in those rules which practically debar those who have been professional players from sitting on directorates and committees.

New Zealand and Canadian athletes will take part in a meeting at the Paddington Recreation Grounds this evening. Hector Phillips, the Canadian and 660 yards record holder, will be virtual scratch man in the third heat of the open half-mile.

Entries have closed for the Midland professional golf tournament to be played on May 7 at Castle Bromwich. Forty-two of the leading Midland professionals have entered, among them being G. V. Tuck, the Midland champion.

KEEN GAME AT KALK.

93rd Brigade R.G.A. v. 2nd army XI.

Played at Kalk on Wednesday when a fast and sporting game resulted in a win for the Gunners by 2—0. Owing to the fact that the 93rd Brigade have an unbeaten record the game was looked forward to with great interest by the players and the excellent following of the team, and they went away well satisfied with the result. The score stood at one to nil at half time, a penalty for handling taken by Corpl. James being a great shot. Gnr. Jully (124 Siege Battery) had very hard lines with a shot which struck one of the Army backs (mutual hard lines). Gnr. Morley (159 H.B.) by a fine individual effort from outside right made the game safe by scoring a splendid goal. The goalkeeper made a great effort to stop the shot. Both goalkeepers were much to the fore and acquitted themselves remarkably well, each making some splendid saves. The 93rd are looking forward to a return game in Cologne, when a good game is assured.

2nd. INFANTRY BRIGADE H.Q.V No. 2. FIELD AMBULACE.

At Lengsdorf, on Thursday, in the above match, goals were scored for the Ambulance as follows: Capt. Edwards 3, Howarth 3, Carr 2, Bomford 2, Grundy 1, and Sgt. Wagstaff 1.

It was a runaway match, with only one team in it, and no other comments need be made when one looks at the final score. No. 2. Field Amb. 12; 2nd. Infantry Brigade H.Q., Western Division, Nil.

14th v. 174 SIEGE BATTERY R.G.A.

Played on the Thursday on the formers ground at Stotzheim, near Euskirchen, and resulted in a win for 174 S.B. by three goals to two.

The 174th scored the first goal of the match about ten minutes after the start. After another 15 minutes a smart piece of work on the right wing ended in Bdr. Preece adding another goal for the visitors.

On resumption 14th S.B. broke away and scored by a good combined effort on the left wing. After this play was pretty even until half time, neither side succeeding in scoring though both goalkeepers had a busy time.

Early in the second half 14th S.B. equalised, but 174th broke away again and forced a corner, Smith scoring from the flag kick. The 14th made desparate efforts to equalise, but Cpl. Tanner, in goal for 174th, played a magnificent game.

Play was pretty evenly divided, and the score fairly represented the game.

THE COLOGNE POST CRICKET CUP.

Look out for the league arrangements in connection with this competition which will be published in a day or two

RUGGER AT KONIGSHOVEN.

52nd RIFLE BRIGADE v. DIVISIONAL LEAGUE COY.

A match between the above teams was played at Konigshoven on Wednesday. The visitors came from Frimmersdorf and looked a pretty not crowd when they came in the field.

The Signallers kicked off, and for a short time the play was in the R.B's "25" but the latter soon relieved the pressure and after 15 minutes of fast play the first try was scored for the R.B's by Capt Harrison — almost on the touch line — an angle which made it almost impossible to convert. Almost at once the same officer got over again this time square between the posts and Capt Jones had no difficulty in scoring.

The visitors put up a hard game but they were unable to complete with the pace of Capt Harrison and the tackling of Capt Shaw, who during the whole time played a splendid game. The final result was 52nd Rifle Brigade 22 points; Divisional League Coy. 4, the latter team scoring a fine drop goal just before time. The backs on both sides distinguished themselves but again the R.B's excelled, Capt Hawkins fine kicking into touch materially contributing to the result.

A.G. HILL IN FORM.

WINS HALF-MILE HANDICAP AT TUFNELL.

In the open half-mile handicap at Highgate Harriers sports, which took place at Tufnell Park on Thursday, A. G. Hill the four mile ex-champion, who is now demobilized, ran exceptionally well. From the three yards mark he won in 58 and one fifth seconds.

SOUTHERN COUNTIES CYCLING UNION.

The Southern Counties Cycling Union is now taking active steps to restore the pre-war programme in every branch. The annual Bushey Park meet will be held on the 24th inst., when the Rawson Shield and also a special gold medal for largest club attendance will be again competed for.

The full road programme has been restored and will comprise the "50" Time Trial for the Godward Trophy, and Roberts Shield for teams, to be run off during June; the Syd Gray "100" in July, and the Hill Climb on September 20, the latter event being followed by a tea and smoking concert.

The programme for the path events (which will include the "Cycling" trophy) will be dealt with by the Executive at their next meeting, to-morrow.

NEW SUSSEX SECRETARY.

There were thirty applications for the post of secretary to the Sussex County Cricket Club. The choice has fallen upon Major W. G. Sarel, who at one time played for Surrey and Kent. Practically since the outbreak of war Major Sarel has held a staff appointment. He hopes to be demobilized at once, however, and to commence his new duties about the middle of the present month.

THE CHANGE OF SEASONS.

The Ball: Good-bye, old sport, I have had a good innings and I wish you the same.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

Sunday, May 11, 1919.

Surface wind light or moderate South-Easterly or Southerly. Mainly fine and very warm. Local thunder showers likely. Visibility good.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

(With an Occasional Entertainments Note.)

Horse Racing Devotees.

A certain Field Coy., R.E., have spent quite a chunk of their spare time recently in voluble grousing. It seems, judging by the many letters I have received, that at a recent race meeting only a very small percentage of the rank and file were permitted to attend. So small was this quota, in fact, that if there had been a race meeting every day it would have taken no less than four weeks to ensure that every man had an opportunity of being present.

Swimming.

A swimming enthusiast writes in connection with a paragraph which appeared in this column recently on the subject of swimming in the Rhine, issuing a challenge to our former correspondent to swim any distance that that individual may mention in the Rhine. Unfortunately the suggestor of such a match has been demobilized, but my friend will probably have plenty of opportunity of trying his luck against the expert swimmers in the Army of Occupation when the Swimming Gala, which I understand is being promoted, takes place in Cologne.

Books for Bonn-ies.

The recent enterprise of the Y.M.C.A. at Bonn in providing a book shop and lending library for the use of all ranks is meeting with extraordinary popularity. It would seem from the diversity of the literature circulated through these institutions that the troops stationed hereabouts are a hungry lot of readers. The books sold far exceed the numbers anticipated, and they range from the most dry-as-dust classic to the wildly-sensational novel. In the library, local reference books are greatly in demand, but here, too, a well varied stock of fiction goes the round.

Tennis.

All ranks are complaining of a difficulty in getting hold of tennis gear, particularly flannels. The announcement of the Expeditionary Force Canteen that a large stock of these will shortly be available should therefore be hailed with a good deal of satisfaction. I hear that 2000 shirts and 2000 pairs of trousers will be purchaseable by Officers at the E.F.C. Recreation Depot, and that "other ranks" will have 3000 shirts and 3000 pairs of trousers to share amongst them.

In order that these things may be equally distributed, it has been decided that allotments will be made to each Corps, Brigade etc. This is undoubtedly a wise scheme.

What About a Chess Club?

"May I introduce a subject which has not hitherto been mentioned in your columns, excellent as they are for the diversity of interests there represented? I believe that the Rhine Army would yield a fair number of men interested in chess, if only some means could be devised for bringing them together. My own experience with the Army is that one meets a chess player rarely, and if this is the experience of other players who are at all keen, then I think that the suggestion to form a club in Cologne or Bonn would receive sufficient support to ensure success.

"I suggest a club open to all ranks, meeting once or twice a week in the evening. To furnish the necessary boards and chessmen a small entrance fee would be required, and perhaps a regular subscription to provide light refreshments, such as coffee and biscuits, and also some literature, preferably the British Chess Magazine, a monthly periodical which would certainly deserve the support of the Rhine Army Chess Club."

Thus writes "T. W.," and it would be interesting to know the views of other readers. We contemplated running a Chess Column in this journal, but it struck us that the season was rather out-of-date.

A Slip Explained.

A little explanation is necessary to account for the appearance on this page yesterday of two paragraphs dealing with the subject of the Rugby Unions attitude respecting a charity match in England. On Thursday night we received a telegram announcing that the Rugby Union Committee had barred a match between the Northern Command and the New Zealanders on the ground of professionalism. This was duly set up in type. But before inserting the paragraph, we had reason to suppose that the information was inaccurate. Accordingly, it was put on one side. The next night another telegram arrived denying the first information. This also was set up in type. Then the German workman, who looks after such things, with the little knowledge that his experience in dealing with the Cologne Post has taught him, recognised the word "Rugby" in the heading of each paragraph and decided that they had better be placed together. In the hurry and bustle of "making up" the page, the appearance of the old paragraph with the new was overlooked and by an unhappy chance, was inserted in yesterday's paper.

The Challenge Night.

Private Jack Worman, who, while in England was the 6th Army Corps Champion, is anxious to meet any light weight boxer in the neighbourhood of 10 stone. He has an eye on Birdwhistle with whom he would like to meet on the "Challenge Night" in Cologne. Another challenger is Private Borin, R.A.S.C. who wrestles at 9 st. 9 lbs. Arrangements are being made to match him against S.S.M. Jenkins and if things are fixed up, the contest may take place at the Apollo Theatre.

A heavy weight-lifter is the latest arrival in the list of those anxious for championship honours. Any challenge sent to this office or to the 2nd Army Amusement officer will receive prompt attention.

The Theatres Next Week.

"The Fragment's" pay a welcome return visit to Cologne next week and will undoubtedly attract large audiences to the Deutsche Theatre with their excellent variety show. At the Apollo "The Tabs" will submit a new revue "Get Busy" in which there is plenty of scope for the laughter-makers of the troupe.

As may be seen by our advertisement columns, the picture theatres have some excellent fare to provide and none will complain of a lack of variety, at all events, in the programmes announced.

TANKS ARRIVED IN RUSSIA.

POOR BOLSHEVIST FIGHTERS.

The Russian situation is regarded in official quarters as showing a distinct improvement. The black part is the evacuation of Odessa and Sevastopol by the French and Greek forces. The reason for this is not known, but the Bolsheviks in the neighbourhood of those cities were not in any great strength.

The new name of Army of the Black Sea which has been given to the British Salonica force does not indicate any change in military policy but only an effort at geographical correctness. There is now no British force at Salonica, the troops formerly at that place having been sent to Constantinople, Varna, and the Dobrudja. They preferred to be called the Army of the Black Sea and their wish has been granted.

In the Caucasus a British force of from 25,000 to 30,000 men is now guarding the railway from Batum to Baku. It is not engaged in any military operations, but is waiting for the Peace Conference to decide what the boundaries between the various States there are to be, and will be withdrawn when the decision has been reached.

In Southern Russia, General Denikin is now receiving British munitions, including tanks, guns, and aeroplanes, of which he has been much in need. Some thousands of tons of stores are arriving, and British officers are helping to organise his line of communications. His force is an entirely Russian one, and is showing an excellent front.

In Siberia, Admiral Koltchak is now in a promising position. His troops are being munitioned and, to a large extent, uniformed by Great Britain. His army is exclusively Russian, and is growing in strength; his troops are warmly welcomed as they advance. He has other divisions which he has recently raised and not yet placed in line. These will considerably increase his strength when movements become possible, after the end of the thaw.

In Archangel the British troops are showing excellent morale and giving a good account of themselves. The force of volunteers which has been raised to relieve them is now on its way and is good in every respect. There is no intention of carrying on a prolonged campaign; enlistment in it is only for 12 months. But a Russian army is growing up at Archangel, and this will be able shortly, it is hoped, to join hands with Admiral Koltchak's army.

The British Government is determined not to bring upon the 30,000 or so pro-Ally North Russians the fate which has overtaken Odessa and Sevastopol.

The Bolshevist armies, wherever they are firmly faced, are showing great military weakness.

ALLIED TO FIGHT DISEASE.

COMPOSITE RED CROSS EFFORT.

In pursuance of a sympathetic effort to anticipate, diminish, and relieve the misery produced by disease and calamity, a league of Red Cross Societies has been formed in Paris.

British, French, American, Italian and Japanese societies compose the first list of members, and other national societies are to be invited to join. Sir Arthur Stanley represents the British Red Cross on the Board of Governors.

HUMBERT ACQUITTED.

LENOIR SENTENCED TO DEATH.

The court-martial which has been trying Senator Humbert and others for communicating with the enemy, has sentenced Lenoir to death, and Desouches to 5 years' imprisonment and a fine of £800.

Senator Humbert and Ladoux have been acquitted.—Reuter.

ANOTHER ALLIANCE.

"For mutual benefit," arrangements are to be completed shortly for a triple alliance of British, French and American film producers. In connection with this Mr. William A. Brady, president of the national association of the motion picture industry of America, which represents nine-tenths of the producers and distributors of pictures in the United States, is expected to reach England this week-end, and there to study the kinema conditions of the Old Country. Later he is to pay a visit to France for the same purpose.

"LINKBOY" V.C.

Large numbers of discharged soldiers only fit for light work are finding employment in the theatrical world.

At the New Winter Garden Theatre, Drury Lane, all the men employed in the front of the house as attendants and the like, are 1914 volunteers, who have been discharged on account of wounds. One of these is Private George Wilson, V. C., of the Highland Light Infantry, who captured a German machine gun single-handed, after shooting an officer and six men. He was severely wounded and discharged in 1916.

SHORTHAND CLASSES.

Afternoon or evening classes in the Sloan-Duployan method of shorthand will be held in the Army College, Cologne, provided that there is a sufficient number of applicants.

All troops, living in or near Cologne, who wish to take up this subject should see Capt. Bassford, Army General and Commercial College Hansa-Ring, Cologne, if possible before Saturday, May 10th. The office will be open for this purpose between the hours of 14.00—15.00 and 17.00—18.00.

CENTRAL CLASSES — ARMY TROOPS.

The afternoon classes for Army Troops will re-commence during the the week beginning May 19th, as follows: —

MONDAY AND THURSDAYS.

Arithmetic (Commercial and Workshop), Elementary Mathematics (including Workshop Mathematics), German, Geography, Shorthand (Pitman's), Building Construction.

TUESDAYS AND FRIDAYS.

History, French, Machine Drawing, English Composition and Literature, Applied Mechanics.

WEDNESDAYS AND SATURDAYS.

Commercial Correspondence, Book-keeping.

Army troops who wish to jouin these classes or to prepare either for a full course at one of the Army Colleges, or for the Army First Class Certificate Examination, should see the officer in charge of Education in their units. G.H.Q. personnel should apply direct to the Education Officer, Army Troops, at the Army College, Hansa-Ring, at 14.00 hrs at 17.00 hrs.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

General Friedrich von Bernhardi never spoke truer words than when, in 1911, he stated that if Germany persisted in "that dissipation of energy which now marks our political life there is imminent fear that in the great contest of the nations, which we must inevitably face, we shall be dishonourably beaten: that days of disaster await us in the future, and that once again, as in the days of our former degradation, the poet's lament will be heard:

O Germany, thy oaks still stand
But thou art fallen, glorious land.
Körner.

This apt little quotation was written for an earlier generation of Teutons, but it is equally applicable, if not more so, to the Germany of to-day.

We learn from the German papers that the Government which provoked war and advocated the doctrine of the Power of Militarism is a thing of the past. The Revolution of 1918, it is said, brought this to a timely end; and now a new Republic with fresh ideals must suffer for the iniquity of former governors. That is one of the principal grievances of the Germans at the present time.

A new republic! One section of which is trying to restore the monarchy whilst another extols the old principles of militarism. Trietsche, Goethe, Clouss Wagner, all still have their disciples who hope some day to bring into effect again the teachings of these great advocates of the law of struggle.

It was said by a prominent German militarist that "no people is so little qualified as the German to direct its own destinies, whether in a parliamentarian or republican constitution. The German people has always been incapable of great acts for the common interest except under the irresistible pressure of external conditions."

Therein lies a very important reason for the terms imposed at Versailles. We have not only to exact reparation for the crimes already committed, but we must ensure the future safety of the world from such a repetition by a nation, as this great militarist Bernhardi said, so little qualified to control its own affairs.

German comments on the events of the day must always interest us as sojourners in the Rhineland, but comments on the terms of peace have a more than passing significance. We select one or two opinions expressed in the current press.

Kölnische Zeitung."

In this paper there is an account of a speech delivered by Privy Councillor Zitelman to the students of Bonn University on Matriculation Day. The oration is a plea against giving way to the spirit of discouragement which might well be bred of the Allies' terms of peace. Herr Zitelman reminded his students that a university such as theirs is a haven of peace in the midst of a troubled world of discord, jealousy, and hate. Teachers and scholars, diverse as they may be in their political and social interests, are united by their academic pursuits and have but one aim—the advancement of science. Political convictions do not determine the worth of man. A people's unity is best attained by the furtherance of ideals, ideals of God, honour, the Fatherland, liberty, faithfulness, and rectitude. And these are virtues that are prized in a true university.

It is good to read these words of the Head of Bonn University.

"Deutsche Tageszeitung."

This journal writes somewhat bitterly of the terms of peace. "These terms which make Germany nothing but a mutilated territory, a territory on which to draw up enemy troops in such advantageous fashion that Germany has no possible way of defence, terms which leave Germany a mere economic corpse on which the most desperate attemps at revival must fail. These terms show how a peace of justice looks, when designed in accordance with the ideas of the Allies."

We are reminded of King James's retort to the Duke of Buckingham — "Steenie, Steenie, those who live in glass houses should be careful how they fling stanes."

"Berliner Tageblatt."

This newspaper also waxes vehement against the peace terms, and urges that they are unacceptable. We give the gist of its article. "We were prepared for much," it says, "but the draft treaty surpasses our worst expectations. It is a document of enslavement replacing right by violence, and is far from any ideas of a League of Nations. It is not even touched by a new spirit. Whether it will be possible to alter it by negotiations is still to be seen. If it remains as it is to-day, only one reply is possible—and it is, 'No!' We have no advice to offer, for we have mercifully nothing to do with German politics. War is a nasty business, and it is a good policy not to begin it, for its legacy is always doleful

REWARDS FOR PRISONERS OF WAR

GALLANT SERVICES UNDER FIRE.

An Army Order states that the Army Council has decided that restrictions on recommendations for reward in respect of services connected with capture shall now be removed. Such services will now be considered irrespective of date, provided that the individual has been absolved by competent authority from blame in the matter of capture.

Recommendations, superscribed "Prisoners of War" in red ink, must be duly supported by the evidence of at least two witnesses who have first-hand know-ledge of the services under consideration, one of whom must be an officer.

It is also stated that the following services are eligible for reward provided that no blame has been attached to the individual in respect of original capture.

(a) Exceptional services rendered by officers and soldiers whilst prisoners of war or interned.

(b) Exceptionally gallant conduct and or determination displayed by officers and soldiers in escaping or attempting to escape from captivity.

When merited services of this nature will be eligible for such "gallantry" distinctions as are normally reserved for "services under fire."

CELEBRATING THE KING'S BIRTHDAY.

The King's birthday will be celebrated on June 3, the actual anniversary.

For the first time since the war the event will be honoured in London by the picturesque ceremony of "Trooping the Colour" in Hyde Park and not on the Horse Guards Parade. The change has been necessitated through the temporary war buildings erected on the Guards Parade.

The King and Queen and other members of the Royal Family will be present at the ceremony.

BISHOP OF LICHFIELD.

The Rt. Rev. Dr. Kempthorne, Bishop of Lichfield will preach at the morning service (10.30 a.m.) at the (C. of E.) Military Church, 51, Schildergasse, to-day, May 11.

S.O.S.— RANTZAU'S KNEES OUT OF CONTROL.

BIG CLOTHING ORDER.

GERMAN GOVERNMENT CRISIS POSSIBLE.

"VERBOTEN" FOR SEVEN DAYS.

CLEMENCEAU REPLIES TO RANTZAU.

PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS ONLY.

M. Clemenceau has replied in the name of the Allied and Associated Powers to the two notes of Count Brockdorff-Rantzau. He reminds the Germans that the Powers, in fixing these conditions, have always had in mind the principles as urged by Count Brockdorff-Rantzau in preparing the terms of the Armistice and the Peace Treaty. No discussion about the right to maintain the fundamental conditions of Peace as they have been fixed can be admitted. Only suggestions of a practical order will be considered.

To the second note M. Clemenceau replied that the German suggestions concerning the League of Nations will be submitted to the competent Commission. The German delegation, by a new perusal of the League of Nations, will be able to see that the admission of new members is not only not omitted but is explicitly provided for in the second paragraph of the first Article.

MASTER OF HIS VOICE.

BUT NOT HIS KNEES.

Versailles. 10th May.—The secretary of Count Brochdorff-Rantzau is kept very busy just now reading the English papers, which almost without exception reproach the chief of the German Delegation for not standing while he read his speech on the delivery of the Draft Treaty.

A member asked the Count what he thought of these comments and the Count is understood to have replied that he was master of his voice but not of his knees.—Wireless.

Versailles. 10th May.—The translators accompanying the German Delegation work day and night. Last night forty typists worked up till 4 a.m.—Wireless.

BROCKDORFF-RANTZAU'S SECOND DOUBLE.

Count Brockdorff-Rantzau has addressed two further notes to the Allies. In the first the German Delegation proposes to begin at once negotiations about the question of prisoners of war and interned civilians, apart from the other questions. This proposal is specially put forward because there are many thousands of German prisoners in over-sea countries and in consequence of the condition of the German prisoners in Siberia.

The German Delegation also asks the Allied and Associated Powers if it would not be possible to give new clothes and boots to the prisoners before their repatriation, against payment of the expense by Germany. This request is based on the necessity for raising the spirits of the repatriated, a thing which Germany is not able to do in its present internal condition.

The second note concerns articles 55 and 56 of the draft Covenant of the League of Nations. In forwarding a draft of an agreement on International Labour regulations, the Count says that many of the principles are already in operation in Germany.

The German delegation thinks it necessary that all States should participate in this agreement, even if they do not belong to the Leagu of Nations, and concludes "In order to secure to the workmen, for whom the proposed ameliorations are destined, a participation in the formation of these regulations, the German Delegation considers it necessary to call to Versailles representatives of the Labour organisations of the different States."

GOVERNMENT CRISIS POSSIBLE.

The Kölnische Volkszeitung says "We must try to persuade our adversaries to negotiate. The National Assembly will support this effort, and we have to wait for the results. Events may follow each other very quickly. A Government crisis is not beyond the realm of possibilities."

VERBOTEN!

"By order of the German Government, dances concerts, comic performances at theatres, cabarets and circuses, horse racing and gambling are 'verboten' from the 10th to the 16th May inclusive."

Several forms of distraction would seem to be omitted.

AUSTRIAN DELEGATES NEXT.

Saint Germain. 10th May.— Chancellor Renner, chief of the delegation of the Austrian Republic, accompanied by the Christian Socialist Guerller and the Pan-Germanist Schlienbauer left Vienna yesterday. They are expected at Paris on Wednesday. Wireless.—

DUTCH FRONTIER INCIDENT.

Brussells. 10th. May.— Le Peuple announces that near Eisden, on the Dutch frontier, a Dutch sentry fired at two unarmed Belgian soldiers who were walking along the frontier. One soldier was severely wounded. The Belgian and Dutch military authorities have opened an inquiry into the circumstances.—Wireless.

NORTH RUSSIA RELIEF FORCE.

MAIN BODY STARTS.

The War Office announces that the first units of the North Russian Relief Force will embark as follows:— At Southampton and Newcastle, 12th May; Victoria Docks, London, 13th May; Royal Albert Docks, 14th May.

RUSSIAN MOBILIZATION OF BOLSHEVISTS.

Stockholm. A telegram from Petrograd announces the conscription of all males between the ages of 29 and 33. Certain Soviets say that the only ground of exemption will be work of public utility and explain that the measure is due to the fact that the mobilization of labour has proved ineffective. Owing to the prisons being full to overflowing it has been decided to establish a system of concentration camps, the inmates of which will be compelled to do work of public usefulness.—Reuter.

FIVE BOLSHEVIST REGIMENTS MUTINY.

Helsingfors. According to the Russian papers the discontent in the Red Army is rapidly increasing. During the recent fighting on the Ural front five Bolshevist regiments mutinied and drowned a number of commissaries, including Lindon, Trotzky's private secretary. The Commander of the Russian volunteer Corps on the Pskoff front has informed the Russians at Reval that he intends to attack Petrograd.—Reuter.

DENMARK OBJECTS TO PLEBISCITE

Copenhagen. Opposition to the clauses in the Peace Treaty providing for a plebiscite in the third zone—that is, South Schleswig—is growing in intensity. The newspapers declare that the population of the district is German and has always been German, but doubtless it will vote in favour of incorporation into Denmark for economic reasons and thereby escape German taxes and anarchy. Denmark objects to having forced upon her an alien population which is likely to lead to national conflicts in the future.—Reuter.

CHINA OBJECTING NOW.

Peking. The Chinese Government has instructed its Peace Delegation in Paris not to sign any Peace treaty which gives to Japan the former German rights in Shantung.—Reuter.

GREY ON THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

Lord Grey has furnished Reuter with his views on the Covenant of the League of Nations. He is delighted that so much has been accomplished, having feared that the Conference would achieve much less. The Allied and Associated Powers are convinced that the national development of each could be better assured by the security of a permament peace than by attempts to promote separate national interests. It was good that the Covenant accepted the provisions of the Labour Convention. The most effective reduction of armaments would result from the security of the League. Armaments would diminish as the League grew stronger; consequently it is vital for public opinion within the League to secure the utmost publicity on the question of reduction of armaments. He is convinced that the working of the Covenant will prove that its scope does not go far enough. He hoped that the ambitions in view would inspire the functions of the secretariat in order that it will shortly develop into a great International Civil Service.

Lord Grey paid a handsome tribute to the choice of Sir Eric Drummond as Secretary, whose appointment was originally suggested by the Americans. He is still convinced that Russia and other enemy countries must be admitted to membership as soon as they can be relied upon to observe the Covenant.

The success of the League rests with the people, who can make their Governments do what they will.

NORWAY WANTS COMPENSATION.

Christiania.— Norway has applied to the Peace Conference for compensation by Germany for the loss of Norwegian ships and lives. A Delegation representing the seafaring community is going to Paris—Reuter.

(We hope the Delegation will not omit to mention the six mile limit.)

Scenes of enthusiasm were witnessed at Southampton on Saturday, when the Olympic, with five thousand Canadians aboard, sailed for Halifax.

SINN FEIN OUTRAGE IN IRELAND.

OFFICER'S CASTLE BESIEGED.

Early on Sunday morning a daring Sinn Fein raid was made on Ballyedmond Castle, near Rostrevon, the residence of Capt. Hugert, 5th Lancers, who lately returned from the front.

The raiders, who were a hundred strong, arrived in motor cars and completely isolated the castle buildings, holding up any travellers they encountered on the road until the operation was over. They were evidently in quest of the arms of the South Down Regiment of Ulster Volunteers which at one time were kept in the castle but which were recently removed elsewhere.

A young man has been arrested at Dundalk in connection with the affair.

Capt. Hugert, when he descended from his bedroom, was confronted by twenty armed men and held up with revolvers.

All the telegraph wires were cut.

LIEBKNECHT MURDER TRIAL.

The trial by court-martial of nine persons—eight officers and one soldier—charged with causing the deaths of Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg, is proceeding at Berlin. Seventy witnesses have been subpoenaed. The accusations are for murder, attempted murder, and serious bodily harm by and with the misuse of arms.

The Hussar, Otto Runge, admitted that he had great personal anger against Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg for taking part in the demonstration procession; for that reason, when Liebknecht appeared, he, in a blind rage, aimed two blows at him with the butt-end of his rifle, but he believed that he hit the motor-car, and not Liebknecht. In his temper he had also aimed several blows with the butt-end of his rifle at Rosa Luxemburg, but had no desire to knock her down. He was not incited to do this by any officer.

Lieut.-Captain Horst von Pflug-Hartung declared that he was innocent, and denied that the breakdown of the motor-car in the Tiergarten was a pre-arranged affair. He regarded Liebknecht as sincere and conscientious in his ideas and he felt a certain amount of respect for him. He had protected Liebknecht several times against attacks by the crowd and the soldiers. When the motor-car was found to be out of order, he asked Liebknecht if he felt strong enough to continue his journey on foot, and for this purpose he took him into a side walk. When he turned to give orders to the chauffeur, Liebknecht ran away. He called out to him several times to stop, and as Liebknecht continued to run away he fired at him. Liebknecht continued to run for a few further paces, and then fell to the ground, after the soldiers had also fired. He had no intention of killing Liebknecht, but he had no possibility of preventing his getting away in the darkness than by firing at him. One of the soldiers received a stab in the hand while endeavouring to grasp Liebknecht. It is the fact that a knife with blood on it was discovered near where the body lay, but it was not picked up, and it was found later to have disappeared.—Wireless

GREAT WHISKY COMBINE.

FIELD MARSHAL'S SHARES.

It is announced that the Edinburgh Distillers Company Limited, the vast combine which has almost a world monopoly of the production of grain whisky, has absorbed the business of John Haig and Company of Markinch, Fifeshire.

The chief shareholders in this business are Field Marshal Haig, Lieut.-Col. Oliver Haig and Major John Haig. These three hold ten thousand nine hundred and ninety-six out of nine thousand five hundred ten-pound shares. Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig with three shares, has the smallest holding. The price paid by the Distillers Company on the current valuation of the shares is nearly a quarter of a million sterling.

The Distillers Company has also acquired Preston's Liverpool Distillery Company, which devotes itself entirely to the production of industrial spirits. The capital of the Distillers Company has been increased to two and a half millions and the market valuation of the concern is over five millions sterling. The Chairman states that no scheme for a great combine of the largest whisky producers has yet been formulated.

MORE CANADIAN RIOTERS.

Serious rioting, resulting in much damage to property, occurred last week at Seaford Camp, Sussex, where Canadian soldiers are stationed.

Among other grievances the men alleged that they were never allowed to travel on Saturdays, Sundays, and Mondays without special permits; they were not allowed to travel without belts and puttees, and they were compelled to show their permits to the military police.

The immediate prelext for the rioting was the placing of a coloured soldier, who is very popular, in the guard room. The rioters rescued the nigger and carried him shoulder high. Afterwards the canteens were attacked and casks of beer broached. Only one soldier was injured.

The version of Canadian Headquarters is that a slight disturbance occurred at Seaford on the 4th May, practically no damage being done and nobody being injured. The matter was satisfactorily adjusted on the following day.

FATAL ACCIDENT AT COLOGNE.

We regret to announce that a fatal accident occurred on Monday morning on board M.L. 229, one of the British Rhine Patrol Flotilla. The dead are Lieut. Robinson, D.S.C., and Motor Mechanic Locke, while Chief Motor Mechanic Kennedy and Deck Hand Paterson were injured, the former severely.

An inquiry is being held into the cause of the accident.

SPORTING PARSON COURT MARTIAL.

EVIDENCE AND VERDICT.

The Rev. Everard Digby, known as "the fighting parson," appeared before a court-martial presided over by Colonel Smith Neill, Scots Guards, at Westminster Guildhall, yesterday. Mr. Digby was recently detained in the Tower of London by the military authorities, and subsequently released. He is a chaplain to the forces, and vicar of St. Agatha's, Finsbury. He was charged with an offence under Section 41 of the Army Act, and pleaded not guilty. Sir Archibald Bodkin, representing Captain J. F. Eastwood, conducted the prosecution, and accused was defended by Sir Edward Marshall Hall, K.C., and Mr. Huntly Jenkins.

Sir Archibald Bodkin, after outlining the case, said after the offence, which it was alleged took place in the vicinity of Shaftesbury-avenue at about 10.45 p.m. on March 14, the attention of Captain Lloyd, Assistant Provost-Marshal, was called to the accused. He put to him the question, "Who and what are you?" showing that, after inquiry as to what had occurred, doubt existed as to whether a man who had acted in such a manner could be an officer. The accused's answer to his question was, "What the devil has that got to do with you? I am an Army chaplain." Captain Lloyd then told him of what he was accused, which he immediately denied. Accused stated, in reply to further questions, that he had just come from a Masonic dinner at the Monico. Asked the number of the lodge of the Masonic order to which he belonged, accused said he didn't know, as he belonged to so many.

Counsel hinted that the defence would be that this was a case of mistaken identity.

At this stage of the procedings Mr. Justice Darling and Mr. Horatio Bottomley, members of the Government Committee to consider court-martial procedure, entered the court.

The charge, specifically stated, was of improperly assaulting Quartermaster-Sergeant West, 1st Battalion, East Kent Regiment. Accused pleaded not guilty.

Giving evidence, John Cornelius West, until recently a quartermaster-sergeant in the 1st Battalion East Kent Regiment, identified the accused as having committed the alleged offence, which he said, occurred approximately at 10.30 p.m.

Sir Marsnall Hall: Are you quite sure of the time?—Yes.

If evidence could be brought that the accused did not leave the Monico until five minutes to eleven, would you still be quite sure that you did not make a mistake?—Yes.

Witness added, in reply to other questions, that he brought the occurrence to the notice of the Provost Marshal chiefly because he suspected, in view of the occurrence, that the accused was not in fact a chaplain but was masquerading as such.

Another witness, George Ryland Graves, identified the accused as the man pointed out to him by the previous witness as having committed the alleged offence immediately after it occurred.

PROOFS OF IDENTITY.

Further evidence of identification was given by Police-constable Pretsell, who said he saw accused at the Shaftesbury-avenue end of Wardour-street twice on the night in question, at 10.45, when witness West pointed the accused out to him, and at 11.15.

The manager of the Monico, Mr. G. Rumbona, giving evidence, said the accused was present at a dinner in connection with the Imperial Cadets Lodge of the Freemasons, held at the Monico, on the night of March 14. At 10.45 at the earliest accused had not left the premises.

Captain Richard H. Lloyd, Assistant Provost Marshal for the London District, gave evidence as to the interrogation of the accused after hearing the complaint against him, and corroborated the statements regarding accused's replies made by prosecuting counsel in his opening remarks. Witness further stated that accused, when asked for proofs of identity, referred him to Madame Desysia and Mr. Cochran, both of whom accused said he knew. He subsequently gave witness his card.

In opening the case for the defence, Sir E. Marshall Hall called Lieut.-Colonel Sir Pieter Stewart-Bam, who testified to the excellent character of the accused, describing him as a splendid padre, for whom he could give nothing but praise for the way in which he had carried out his duties.

General Jelf, the commanding officer under whom accused had served, was also called. He described accused as a "gentleman and sportsman, who does his work very well indeed. The men loved him."

Sir E. Marshall Hall, addressing the Court, said that the Rev. Digby's case was that he was not there and knew nothing about it. The finding of the Court was a verdict of "not guilty."

EXPENSIVE CHARITY.

An official report on the subject of street war collections reveals some striking contrasts in the proportions of expenses and receipts frequently not less than 20 per cent of the amount received was swallowed up in organisation and management expenses.

The most successful collection from the point of view of economy was the Italian "Flag Day" on 25th September last year, when 53,371 pounds were raised and the expenses were only six per cent.

Next came the Machine Gun Corps Comforts Fund with 9,697 pounds receipts and nine per cent. expenses.

The most expensive effort was the Grand Fête held at Walthamstow on behalf of the Daily Express Cheery Fund. This fête raised seventy pounds, of which sixty-one pounds, or 87 per cent., went in expenses.

ROUMANIANS ATTACK BAREFOOTED.

A telegram from Bucharest graphically describes the Roumanian attack in Hungary and states that the Roumanian Army, ragged, and barefooted, attacked without waiting for the promised equipment. The result of their unexpected onslaught was the collapse of Hungarian resistance. The lines of communication between the Hungarian and Bolshevists have been cut.—Reuter.

EQUAL PAY FOR EQUAL WORK.

WOMEN IN INDUSTRY.

The report of the War Cabinet Committee on the question of women in industry recommends acceptance of the principle of "equal pay for equal work," saying also that it should be a matter of agreement between employers and Trade Unions.

Where an employer maintains that a woman's work produces less than a man's the burden of proof should rest on the employer. The Committee recommends that the Government should support the principle by applying it without delay in their own establishments.

Other recommendations are a statutory minimum wage; no normal woman should be employed for less than a reasonable subsistence wage; reform and extension of the Factory Acts in the interests of women, and the adoption of a scheme for pensioning mothers.

NURSES' WAR GRATUITIES.

The War Office have just issued a Royal Warrant granting a new rate of gratuity to their nurses. The Q.A.I.M.N.S. (Regular) have been given a war gratuity on the same lines as regular officers, i.e., nurses below the rank of principal matron get a lieutenant's gratuity (£40) for the first year's war service, and increments of £1 or 10s. a month (according to whether they have served overseas or only at home) for each subsequent year or part of a year. Principal matrons are classed with captains (£45), and matrons-in-chief with lieutenant-colonels (£75), while all receive the same increments for service subsequent to the first year.

The temporary nurses (Q.A.I.M.N.S.R. and T.F.N.S.) now get a more generous gratuity than that already provided. Staff nurses get £20 for the first year, sisters £30, and matrons £40, while all get 10s. a month increment for each subsequent year or part of a year, irrespective of whether their service has been at home or overseas.

A gratuity has also been given to V.A.D. nurses and assistant nurses employed by the War Office. They are to get £10 for the first year, with increments similar to those for the Reserve or the T.F.N.S. Nurses who have already drawn gratuities at the old rates may now apply to the paymaster who issued the original gratuities to have them adjusted according to the new, or may keep the old in the very few cases where they are more advantageous.

CURIOUS FIVE-A-SIDE MATCH.

A reprisal which took four years to mature in New York is not with out its humorous aspect to those who can ignore the callous rejoicing on the part of the earlier offenders.

The case was before the New York Supreme Court on Saturday.

The petitioners are presumably five Germans, named Lunglof, Graf, Goepper, Schmeltzer and Breitbach, and they sued five Scotsmen (also presumably) named Mackenzie, Donaldson, Macintyre and Beattie, for making a noise in a confined area. It appears that on the night when the news of the sinking of the Lusitania was received, the Germans played the "Wacht am Rhein" all night. By way of reprisal the Scotsmen played the bagpipes all the night following the announcement of the peace terms.

On the defendants' behalf it was urged that the bagpipes were played to stimulate patriotism at the time when the Government was urging the sale of War Bonds.

The Supreme Court has reserved its decision.

AVIATORS LOST IN CHANNEL.

The bodies of three members of the Royal Air Force, Lt. Stokes and Sgt. Filmore (attached Lympne aerodrome) and of Lt. A. Evans, ferry pilot, were picked up by a destroyer in mid Channel on Saturday. The aviators were returning in a Bristol aeroplane from Marquise aerodrome when the machine fell into the sea owing to engine trouble.

GOOD BYE, AMERICA.

The American Officers Club in London closes on Wednesday next with a final club dinner to be followed by a reception and dance. The American Ambassador will attend, with General Biddle and General Rawlinson.

BRITISH MUNITIONS OUTPUT.

Some idea of the output of munitions required by our armies between Aug. 4, 1914, and Nov. 11, 1918, can be gathered from the following figures, which refer to munitions manufactured in Great Britain.

Field guns and howitzers (complete equipment) 35,000, Trench howitzers or mortars 19,200, Machine guns 186,000, Rifles, 5,050,000, Steel helmets, 7,500,000, Trench-mortar ammunition (rounds) 13,000,000, Small arms ammunition (rounds) 11,141,000,000, Hand grenades, 89,000, Aerial bombs, 4,175,000, High explosives 730,000 tons.

SELF DEMOBILIZATION SOCIETY.

In connection with the alleged project for voluntary demobilisation the Chairman of the National Federation of Discharged Sailors and Soldiers informed a Reuter representative that the Soldiers, Sailors and Airmen's Union is an organisation with a very small membership. Some time ago the Union approached the Federation with the object of combining forces but its overtures were not accepted.

Service men will be glad to know that all matters of legitimate grievances are engaging the close attention of the Federation. Today representatives of the Federation will see the Financial Secretary of the War Office and tomorrow the Chairman has been invited to address the service members of the House of Commons.

WAR — AND AFTER.

There can be but few soldiers in our Army of the Rhine who are seriously dissatisfied with their material circumstances. The city of Cologne is a testimony of a civilization which has done much to ensure comfort and efficiency in worldly matters. Yet such a civilization has its disadvantages. It is not inopportune to speak of the perils of a culture which has real temptations to men who have won their battle and are resting in greater ease than they have known for almost five years. Active warfare meant hardship, discomfort, and danger. Life was cruelly abnormal. The trench, the dug-out, or the cellar was the soldier's domicile for four-and-a-half long years. Over his head was either the canopy of heaven, often inhabited by swift-dealing creatures of death, or the soil of unmotherly earth, dank and evil-smelling. Freedom of movement was denied to all but the over-daring. Companionship and recreation were sternly limited by Mars, the God of War. Then came relief from the stress of battle. The guns that had thundered their insistent message of death were silent, the air rejoiced in the singing of birds and the crooning of friendly aeroplanes, the land of desolation was left behind and veterans of our empire entered a land unblemished by the hand of devastation. How welcome was the change!

The ancient world had full many a campaign of grievous war, and even yet its war story has its lessons. We seek no analogy, for analogy is too often the bane of historical narration — was it not Heine who admonished men to flee analogies? But at times we ponder over the plight of armies of occupation in days that are gone. Hannibal of Carthage was from boyhood's years the sworn foe of the power of Rome. When he had won renown as a leader of men he essayed successfully a bold and wondrous march into the country of his enemy. At Cannae he defeated the legions of L. Aemilius Paulus and gained the greatest triumph of his career. With his victorious army he occupied Capua, one of Italy's most comfortable and luxurious cities. But comfort and luxury spelt the ruin of his army. Men who had conquered their foes failed in the conquest of themselves. Capua was the Cannae of Hannibal

The moral of the Carthaginian venture has not been lost in the modern world, it has given rise to proverbial epigram. Moscow, we are often told, was the Cannae of Napoleon Bonaparte, and it was his Austerlitz. It is surely wise to despise no lesson from the past. No one is foolhardy enough to suggest that the city of Cologne will cast its comfortable glamour over the souls of successful warriors, but no one is foolish enough to deny that in the reaction after war men are liable to weaknesses from which they were immune in the sterner field of battle. The excitement of war leaves the soldier open to depression of spirit, and carpe diem is too often the tonic to which he turns. There is a temptation to take the line of least resitance, to enjoy the moments of life in forgetfulness of its proper perspective. We are in the midst of an alien population, and with the best will in the world we cannot avoid some intercourse. But it is a truism that intercourse has its dangers, and it is most dangerous when it is a means for the satisfaction of a craving for comfort and relaxation. Our Empire is not yet at peace, and our Empire claims the loyalty of her sons. It is their duty and their privilege not to stand at ease but to remain in a worthy attitude of intent preparedness.

These are not days when the creed of Horace satisfies mankind. We need a gospel of the fit body, alert mind, and tutored soul. With such a gospel we do not fear Capua.

THE OPERA.

"GÖTTERDÄMMERUNG."

In the music and text of the Nibelungen Ring one is able to appreciate Wagner's mature conception of a music drama, and "Götterdämmerung." The concluding chapter gives one of the best examples of his operatic methods. The musical structure is almost entirely built up of the "Leit-Motifs" connected with the various characters which have already been heard in the "Evening" of "Rheingold" and the two "days" of the "Walküre" and "Siegfreid," and it is the bold simplicity of these "motifs" that accounts for the grandeur of the music. In the "Ring" one finds Wagner, and also his singers and orchestra, at their best.

The ethical teaching of the story is simple enough and should be heeded by all the nations of the world, but its especial significance in relation to this misguided nation and the present state of affairs which it has brought upon itself must have impressed everyone. It is curious to reflect that many people must have had their first introduction to the characters in the story through their names having been applied to the now battered lines of defence in France. The performance was a memorable one and the rugged force of the drama was well expressed, but even on such a theme as this there is room for more light and shade in the expression of the various emotions, a though Wagner tradition apparently wills otherwise. This cramping tradition also applies to the stage directions. The horse is always a disturbing and pathetic figure on the stage, and a mere suggestion of its presence would be enough, but I am quite aware that I am treading on hallowed ground. The machinery in the last act also altogether spoils the closing scene, which is always a disappointment in many ways. If a little could have been cut off the songs of the Norns and the time saved had been spent in more music for the closing scene we should all be pleased I think, but here again I feel my heavy footstep rebuked by the angels.

As to the production, the orchestral ensemble was not altogether unimpeachable, and some of the "leit-motifs" were played in rather a perfunctory way. This was noticeable in the menacing semitone passage of two notes at the end of the "Bridal" scene. The "brass" as usual was inclined to be rough. The singing of the "Rhine Daughters" was delightful, but the Norns were particularly dull.

Of the singers Herr Gless stood head and shoulders above the rest, while Frau Minna Werhard-Poensgen was admirable as Brünnhilde. Herr Mertens as Alberich gives us an admirable example of clear enunciation, but his vibrato is apt at times to produce an almost humourous effect.

The scenery of the first act was charming, but the setting of the last act was unnecessarily formal and crude. The magnificent Funeral March was given an impressive rendering and must have moved anyone who had a shred of emotional feeling. It is a musical work which can stand alone without any connection with the sister art of the stage. The great weakness of opera is that the two arts are so often at variance with one another and the one hampers the free expression of the other. Music rises to its greatest heights when it is unsupported by any adventitious aids to its expression.

As usual there was a full house, but it does not follow from this that the British Public would give their support to grand Opera in England, as I venture to think that the audiences of officers and men at opera productions here would be considerably reduced if this town were bespattered with English revue and musical comedy performances.

Mr. Bridgeman stated in Parliament on Friday that the Board of Trade are considering whether any special examination is necessary of Oxted Tunnel, on the London, Brighton, and South Coast Railway, where falls of brickwork have occurred.

A King's Bench Divisional Court granted a rule nisi for a writ of habeas corpus, calling on the governor of the Brixton Prison to show cause why he should not "bring up the body" of Mr. Gessel Scholnikoff, described as a Russian dentist, who claimed that the order for the arrest and deportation of "H. Skolinkoff" did not apply to him at all.

LETTER WRITING.

One of the undoubted mental and moral assets which the war has left us, to set off against deficits of which we will not now speak, is the renaissance, for very many the creation, of the art of letter-writing. Killed, or at any rate, largely paralysed, by the hustle and rush of modern life with its shoddy substitutes the postcard and the telephone, letter-writing was bidding fair to become as extinct as Syrian purple.

But there came a war; a war that tore apart lovers, friends, relations; a war that revealed men to themselves and impelled them to communicate that which they found within to those they loved while yet there should be time; a war which flung them among other men of other thoughts, other habits, other training, and fused them in a common humanity productive of the recognition and expression of much within themselves until then dormant. And their only tie with love and home and memory lay in letters. So the Army wrote, and wrote such letters as, but for William of Hohenzollern and his accomplices, they would never have had the impulse or the ability to write, and which must have amazed themselves as much as the recipients, with benefit and delight to both.

For many who in the familiar or the casual intercourse of ordinary hum-drum modern life had little to say that expressed their real and inner selves, owing mainly to the English shyness of expression, now, at a distance, stirred by the great essentials that gripped and surrounded them, felt the fountains of the great deep break forth. And from the Army to its people there poured a steady flood of letters, some more or less illiterate, some clumsily eager, some couched in all the vivid power and glorious beauty of our unequalled language; and thrilling with love, courage, will, pathos, humour, sympathy, streamed to the homelands, a river of molten gold that had never been but for the war with its racking conditions and its conversion of familiar half-heeded presence into the yearnings of separation.

Many who had lived for years together learned thus for the first time, when apart, to know each other. There must have been wonderful revelations.

It may perhaps be fairly doubted whether the replies, eagerly awaited and welcome as they were, rose to the height of the new-born wealth of letter-writing that dug out from the mines of love and thought and feeling in the heart of the soldier. The changes at home had been less cataclysmic, the environment was much the same as ever. But perhaps just those dear ordinary details, that remembered chats was what the Army needed in the revolutionised life of its new members to remind them that they were not lost, disconnected — to bring constantly before them the priceless treasures for which they were devoting themselves.

And, on the other hand, how the new surroundings and incidents of the Great Adventure so far as, grace the censor, they might be told, thrilled the folks at home, who had no more thought of laddy or John ever coping with such conditions. Than he himself had dreamed of it! And just because the Censor had to disallow the simple obvious statements of where we went, or when, the cheap chronicle of movement which so often masquerades as a letter was perforce replaced by impressions of real interest. (There's a good word for the Censor at last!)

How the letters varied! All the variety of human life and character was in them, and those whose duty it was to glance at them, that military secrets might be guarded from the enemy, must have been — were, as I can vouch — reverent before the sacredness of the human heart in its messages. Yet there was inevitably much humour, often unconscious. The man who writes from hospital, suffering from a ghastly wound, and "hoping this finds you as it leaves me at present;" the fervent youth who by the same post breathes vows of undying and unique affection to several different damsels; the newly landed member of a draft who writing from the base at which he has just disembarked describes vividly the horrors of the battle raging round him — there are some of the spots of colour on the great tapestry of Army letters, the tapestry whose whole complex pattern is the soul of Man.

Many authors have used letters as a form to convey a story. (E. V. Lucas's "Vermilion Box" is a recent and well-known example; many others will be recalled.) Biographies are in most cases indebted for their chief interest to the letters included. And why? Because it is in letters rather than in our too-often vapid and and even sloppy conversation of to-day that the real self dares, and has leisure, to express itself. In the old days few wrote; but their letters were worth writing, and worth reading. For in the calm of those less hurried days, men and women had time to reflect, to meditate, to think. Also they had not the probability, due to our increased means of travel, of meeting so frequently for intercourse. So that when they wrote they could, needed to, and did, put themselves and their realities into their letters. The war has given us back something of this, and over an enormously wider range of our nation in conditions of greater poignancy, and at a moment felt by all humanity to be pregnant with the deepest importance for ourselves and those who shall follow us.

Shall we then lose the newly-acquired and infinitely valuable habit of letter-writing, of exchanging thought, comment, experience, sympathy, with those we love or claim as friends? Will the pen be demobilized with the man who first learned to use it seriously at the time when he first handled the no more potent, if almost as strange, rifle or grenade in that moment of crisis and change in his life?

No, I think the habit will persist. For the war, the communal life of the Army, has given to all many friends with whom only thus can they hope to keep up a communication they would be loth to drop. The commerce of ideas, experiences and sympathy will last and grow in the revived glory of Letter Writing.

O. WHYNOTT.

An ex-judge had been nominated mayor in a French country district. It soon devolved upon him to sanction a marriage ceremony.

"Do you consent to marry this gentleman, young lady?" he asked amiably.

"Yes," was the reply.

Then, suddenly changing his tone to one of great severity, he said to her proposed husband: "And you, have you nothing to say in your defence?"

"I suppose Prohibition has made you a little lonely."

"It sure has," replied Uncle Bill Bottletop. "Nobody notices me any more. The folks don't even point me out as a horrible example."

"You simply cannot trust anybody. Everyone seems so dishonest nowadays," declared the woman. "My maid, in whom I had the utmost confidence, left me suddenly yesterday and took with her my beautiful pearl brooch."

"That is too bad," sympathized the friend. "Which one was it?"

"That very pretty one I smuggled through last spring."

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE CHAPLAIN.

(This article appeared in our supplementary edition giving the draft of the Peace Terms published on May 7th. Fearing that merited publicity has not been given to the letter, several readers have asked us to republish the article.—Editor.)

Dear Padre.

We hear a lot from the pulpit, we want you to hear a bit from the pew. We criticise everybody from the C.O. downwards, and you come in for your full share of it.

You're not a bad sort, but we sometimes wonder if you understand us, and whether you realise that we want to know more about religion than you ladle out to us Sunday by Sunday. We're not theologians and at the same time we're not fools. We don't kid ourselves that we're atheists and imagine that this wonderful world in which we live was the result of some freak or chance. And it is wonderful!

We don't see much of the beauty of nature when we are taking a little exercise in the form of a route march and the road is long and dusty and has no "pub" in it, but in the evening, sometimes, we have our think and, well—it wants explaining.

We've got sense enough to realise that a universe created and controlled must have some master mind behind it, and that men haven't given their lives in times past for something that's nothing at all. We know that a faith that's lasted and grown for nigh on two thousand years must have something mighty good in it and, Padre, we want to know the truth.

Give us a pure untarnished religion that we can believe in and hold fast to.

Give us the religion of the "Man who went about doing good," unhampered by ecclesiastical conditions.

Give us a practical living faith that will make us better men, and the world a better place in which to live.

And we don't forget that there are such things as different denominations, but we can't quite understand how that came about. Men have their own opinions on every subject, and so different people worship God in different ways. But it's all the same religion, and we'd like to see a stronger unity in the spirit of the cause. Padre, we'd like to remind you that neither the Maker of the universe nor the Nazarene was narrow-minded.

They say that the Church has failed to grapple with the problems brought about by the war, and so it has. But that isn't the fault of the religion, it's the fault of those who've had the handling of it.

We know you can't feed us on heavy theology any more than you can feed a baby on beefsteak, but prove to us what you can, show us that it's plausible, and then we can believe and enjoy the experience that you talk about.

We want to believe! We want to think that our pals who went down beside us are better off than we are, and we want to look forward to something more than six feet of earth ourselves.

And Padre, its your chance of a lifetime.

We have got to come and hear you now, but when that happy day arrives and we get our "ticket," it will be a matter of choice.

If you want to keep us then, get us now.

Padre, you're not a bad sort, but do your job.

We've all had our dose of hell; show us how to get a bit of heaven,

W.E.S.

"LET'S FORGET ABOUT IT."

The above thought is probably the uppermost one in the minds of nine out of every ten Germans to-day. Thanks to the skilful suppression of facts during the war and the child-like faith which they placed in their official bulletins, the inhabitants of the occupied area are very perplexed by the turn of affairs which has put them under the temporary dominion of their enemies. For the average German does not yet believe that their Armies were defeated on the 11th November, 1918. If you ask him: "In that case, how do you account for our presence here?" he will probably make some vague remark about "We didn't want any more men to be killed" or "The intrigues of our politicians left the Army Commanders helpless." In making the latter statement, they entirely ignore the fact, already pointed out in the Cologne Post, that the urgent appeal to sign the Armistice did not come from Berlin to Spa, but from G.H.Q. in the field at Spa to Berlin. As regards the former plea, little surprise will be evinced at the mentality which still imagines the Germans signed the Armistice on purely humanitarian grounds, when it is mentioned that the following remark was overheard in Cologne a few days ago: "It is a pity that the British fleet did not come out to give our navy a chance!"

However, although still stoutly refusing to believe that they have been "defeated," the overwhelming evidence on all sides has gradually impressed upon even the most pig-headed Prussian that, by some inexplicable phenomenon, his country has got the worst of the deal. But he does not want to have the matter explained to him — it is all ready so boring and unpleasant. If you casually allude to the submarine and Gotha outrages, the systematic devastation and pillaging of occupied territory, or any of the other charges of barbarity in our indictment against Germany, he will yawn and say: "Oh! yes, but all that happened in the war. There is no war now, so let's forget all about it!" Or, translated into Scotch, "Why not let the flea stick to the wa'?" Certainly, a most inspired and truly comfortable way of viewing the situation!

But will the relatives of our million "killed and missing" ever forget? Our two million wounded, the mothers of little mites butchered in air raids, the thousands of families in Flanders rendered homeless by the war and who have been subjected to a four year's reign of terror, our men who were imprisoned in Germany—will they ever forget? Or even the more fortunate of us who have come through the campaign relatively unscathed, will we ever forget the Hell of the trenches with their shells, poison gas, liquid fire, mud and lice? Can we ever forget the sinking of the "Lusitania," the murders of Nurse Cavell and Captain Fryatt, the wholesale massacres and rapes in Belgian villages, the torpedoing of hospital ships and the firing on rescue boats, the poisoned wells and the dropping of poisoned sweets to trap innocent children?

The list of German atrocities is by no means exhausted, but sufficient has been mentioned to make us realize that it is our duty to ourselves and to the world to remember. Let us try to banish mistrust and cut-throat rivalry between nations and work to promote a truer conception of international ideals by all means, but we cannot and must not ever forget. While working earnestly to bring about that Milennium, which we hope the League of Nations may give us, we must all the time remember Germany's past, and in nautical language, keep a "weather eye" on her.

"THE PRONGS" AT HERSEL.

FLATTERING RECEPTION TO A TALENTED PARTY.

What finer compliment would be paid to any concert party than that which was paid to the "Prongs" (92nd Bde, R.G.A.) on Sunday? After their show in the Meenee Cinema, which is run by the 1/4th Cheshires at Hersel, they were besieged with requests to pay a return visit at an early date.

Before crowded houses, this concert party appeared on Saturday and Sunday and presented well balanced programmes, the excellence of which was testified by the thunderous applause of well pleased audiences.

Jimmy Robinson proved himself to be a born comedian, and had the house simply rocking as a result of his drolleries. His numbers consisted of "Did you see the Crowd?" "I'm the Lad from Lancashire", "Did I do that?" and "The Photo of the Girl I left Behind Me." His patter, mostly impromptu, proved equally as amusing as his songs.

Fresh from his successes at Brussels the late tenor of the "Bundooks" concert party, E. Batey, rendered, like a Caruso, such fine ballads as "My Dreams," "There is a Land" and "On with the Motley." With the latter he simply brought down the house, and he was not allowed to leave the stage until he had given an encore. He obliged with "Because."

The concerted numbers "Absent" and "My Tennessee" rendered by Norton, Hart and Hastead, also went down very well, while Jeff Hart's rendering of "Trumpeter" will always be assured of a hearty reception.

Another outstanding feature of the evening's entertainment was "Old Bill" (Cpl. Bert Rudd), who delighted his audience by his humourous rendering of "We can't find Bill." His remarks about army life in general, and certain sergeant-majors in particular, were understood and appreciated by the audience. His turn well merited the vociferous applause which greeted it.

A. L. Clark, in addition to officiating as pianist, obliged by giving character studies from Dickens, the excellence of which was quite in harmony with the tone of the whole show.

In "Jones of the Lancers," J. Wade gave a fine impersonation of that dashing Major, while a rendering of "Mate of Mine," by J. Night baritone, also earned the applause awarded to it.

The tit-bit of the evening was undoubtedly the sketch "A Yorkshire Lad in London," in which that inimitable comedian, Jimmy Robinson, was seen to great advantage. There was not a single member of the audience who was not absolutely convulsed by his absurdities. In this sketch he was assisted in dispensing the humour by Jeff Hart. J. Wade, A. Clark, and "Violet" (E. Baker.)

"THE LIGHT FANTASTIC TOE."

"Enthusiast" writes as follows: In view of the fact that dancing is occupying to-day in England a more prominent position than it ever held before, may I suggest, through the medium of your columns, that some enterprising agency for the welfare of British Troops here institute classes whereby we, or such of us as desire it, may be initiated into the mysteries of the modern dances now in vogue—I refer to the "Maxina," "On Leave Fox Trot," "Victory" Valse and (of course) "Jazz."

I should be pleased, and so, I feel sure, would many other devotees, to hear if there are any classes, with either English instructors, or, failing that, German dancing masters, where instruction could be obtained.

This would not, of course, by any means be an infringement of the "No Fraternizing" order, and it is obvious I think that one loses touch here with the developments in modern dancing.

Also (I add as an afterthought) such instruction would conform with the theory of the Army Education Scheme, that men be fitted adequately to fill their places as civilians on demobilization. Imagine, Sir, the agony of mind of a man who returns home not knowing the evolutions of a one step!

My correspondent has surely not been reading his Cologne Pos regularly or he would have seen that the British Empire Leave Club are undertaking such a scheme.

FOLLOWING HIS DEAR OLD DAD

Mr. Harry Tate, the comedian, having been ordered to the south of France owing to a breakdown, his son, aged 17, who has only just left Dulwich College and was apprenticed to Messrs. Vickers, has taken up his part on tour in the sketch "Selling a Car." He opened last night at the Palace, Manchester.

The main rehearsal was held in Mr. Tate's bedroom at his house in Tooting.

KEEN SOCCER STRUGGLE.

The 2/4 Duke of Wellington West Riding Regt. Battery team journeyed to Bruhl on Wednesday to meet the R.A.S.C. (M.T.) taking with them a goodly number of supporters who were afterwards entertained to tea. The match was a real thriller from the commencement. Five minutes after play had started Lieut. Pearson placed a shot and netted for the Dukes. Just before half time Perrins gave the Dukes their second goal.

The second half had plenty of excitement, for the home team went off with a dash, and in a few minutes Rippon scored from a penalty. Rippon scored again very shortly afterwards for the home team. Then after a keen struggle in front of the goal Rippon gave the home team the lead by netting the ball again.

Here the Dukes put in some fine work and from a free kick Perrins scored his second goal. Excitement here ran high for it looked as though the game would end in a draw. But after some brilliant combination work Perrins scored his third and winning goal for the Dukes.

Result: 2/4 Duke of Wellington's 4; R.A.S.C. (M.T.) 3. The referee was Staff-Sergt. Baker.

THE CALL OF CRICKET.

A BRILLIANT CENTURY.

HOBBS RUNS UP FAULTLESS 106 AT THE OVAL.

There was a considerable amount of cricket in England on Saturday though the first county matches do not begin until next week end.

Playing for F.T. Badcocks XI against E.J. Hayes XI in the Surrey trial match at the Oval, Hobbs made a brilliant 106 before being caught after eighty minutes play. He hit freely all round the wicket.

His partner, Sandham, scored 81 in 2½ hours, never giving a chance. Subsequently the wickets fell quickly. The scores in the first innings were:

Badcocks XI . . . 308,
Hayes XI . . . . . 198.

Hitch for Badcocks dismissed four batsmen in the first two overs and took six wickets out of seven down for 42 at the end of an hour.

AUSTRALIANS' CRICKET TOUR.

KELLEWAY ELECTED CAPTAIN.

The Australian Imperial Forces, who commence their tour with a match against Mr. Lionel Robinson's Eleven at Attleborough (Norfolk), to-morrow, have now settled upon the players from whom they will choose the teams for the early engagements.

The list is as follows: C. Kelleway, C. T. Docker, E. J. Long, J. M. Taylor, H. L. Collins, J. M. Gregory, G. V. Maidment, W. A. Oldfield, W. L. Trennery, E. A. Bull, and G. Love (New South Wales), R. W. Herring, D. Hotchin, A. W. Lampard, C. B. Willis (Victoria), J. T. Murray, C. E. Pellew, and W. S. Stirling (South Australia), and J. F. Shepherd (Queensland).

Of these Docker is the fast bowler, Kelleway and Gregory bowl fast medium, Willis medium, Lampard and Trennery slow right, and Collins and Stirling slow left. Long is the wicketkeeper, but both Love and Lampard can act in that capacity.

Kelleway, who was a notable member of the Australian teams of 1909 and 1912, has been elected captain.

A FAULTLESS INNINGS.

Capt. Bond's XI v. 112th Battery R.F.A.

A cricket match was played at Bonn on Friday between Capt. Bond's XI 2/4 Duke of Wellington's Regt. and the 112th Battery R.F.A., the weather being ideal.

Capt. Bond's XI batted first, and out of a total of 78 Cpl. Albone played a faultless innings of 39 not out. North also reached 23 when he fell a victim to Aston. During one part of the game Gunner Page caused havoc taking four wickets with four successive balls.

The 112th Battery responded, but were not able to complete with the bowling of North and Bond, dismissing them for a total of 38. Sergt. Billing and Driver Chadwick were the only two to reach double figures. Details:

CAVALRY PRACTICE MATCH.

RAIN INTERFERES WITH INTERESTING GAME.

The Cavalry Divisional H.Q.'s Club are certainly getting their house in order, in their endeavour to snatch our Cup. Ambition is everything nowadays. A trial game was played on Sunday, between picked teams from the Signal Squadron and Headquarters. The former batted first and just as the last wicket fell, down came the rain, with the thunder, which put an end to the play. The Signals made a decent score (101), and when the game is resumed, H.Q.'s will have to go all the way. Lieut. J. C. W. Jennings D.C.M. was top scorer, making a capital 47 by good all round cricket. Spr. Dearnley (12) and Lieut. Johnson were the only batsmen who gave any assistance in remaining with him any length of time. Major Reynolds took 4 for 26, and Sergt. Murden who came out with 2 for 14 had exceptionally hard lines. He bowled 11 overs, five of which were maidens. Six runs were knocked off his first over, which meant that his other 10 overs only produced eight runs. Good bowling, but hard luck.

The scores were as follows: — Sergt. Keevie, D.C.M., 3; Capt. Sterncliffe, 8; Spr. Dearnley, 12; Spr. Wakeley, 5; Lieut. Jennings D.C.M., 47; Spr. Bennett, 0; Lieut. Dart, 5; Lieut. Johnson, 8; Dvr. Drinkler, 1; Capt. Tolley, 6; Spr. Evans not out, 0; extras 12. Total 101.

FOUR BALL GOLF MATCH.

A four ball golf match was played on the Ashford Manor Golf Club course on Saturday, when Hilton and the home professional Kirby were beaten by J. H. Taylor and S. H. Fry, both of Mid-Surrey. The Scores in the morning were:— Hilton and Kirby 74; Fry and Taylor 74.

In the afternoon the scores were:— Fry and Taylor 70; Hilton and Kirby 73.

111 v. 227 SIEGE BATTERY.

This match was played at Nothberg on Saturday; 227 had the better of the opening exchanges, but 111 were the first to score through Lieut. Taylor, who netted from a centre from the left wing. Shortly before half-time 227 equalised through their outside left, who ran through on his own.

About 15 minutes after the resumption Lieut. Taylor scored again for 111 and immediately afterwards Bdr. Barker added a third. Shortly before the end Howlett scored a fourth goal for the home team.

Result: — 111 S. Battery 4; 227 S. Battery 1.

Last Wednesday 111 Siege Battery beat 13 Siege Battery by 2—0, Barker and Howlett scoring the goals.

5th v. 78th LABOUR COY.

This semi-final tie in the Labour Group competition was played on the 17th Lab. Coy's ground at Kalk on Sunday in dull, warm weather. Both sides were short of regular players, the 78th especially.

The game consisted of constant pressure by the 5th, relieved at intervals by the 78th having to kick off from mid-field. Only on one occasion did the 78th look like scoring when L. C. Wilkinson fell while clearing, but Cooney saved the situation Goals were scored for the 5th in the first half by Swan (3) and the 78th's goalkeeper assisted by Brady, and in the second half by Oddie (2), Swan, and McConville.

Result: 5th Labour Coy 8; 78th Labour Coy 0.

SHERWOOD FORESTERS REGIMENTAL SHIELD.

53rd. BATTALION'S CROSS COUNTRY RUN.

On Tuesday a further effort was made by Companies of the above Regiment towards obtaining points to become the proud possessors of the Regimental Shield, and a cross-country run was indulged in. Teams of 12 of which eight were to count from each Company, took part, the winning team being that which received the lowest number of points. This honour went to "A" Company, whose team was ably led by 2/Lt. Lawler thereby adding 10 points to their total towards the Shield. "B" Company supplied the first man home in Sgt. Bell who ran well over a trying course of over four miles in 25 minutes. His team was second and with 5 points for Sgt. Bell and 5 points for the second team home, "B" Company also added 10 points to their total.

There is going to be a hard fight for the Shield and no doubt the boxing tournament next week will alter the appearance of things considerably.

The following points have been obtained by Companies: "D," 50; "A," 27; "B," 27; "C," 26.

REAL FOOTBALL ENTHUSIASTS.

MIDLAND DIV. H.Q. (SCRATCH TEAM) v. 209th EMPLOYMENT COY.

In spite of the tropical heat, the above teams met in the Schloss grounds at Bruhl before an appreciative crowd of onlookers. D.H.Q. were the first to score. Play was fast, and by a combined spurt the "Light Horse" forwards equalized. Shortly after resumption of play, fine work by D.H.Q.'s midget left winger resulted in a goal. A further off-side goal by D.H.Q. almost escaped the referee's notice, but was disallowed after an appeal. Result:— Midland Div. H.Q. 2, 209th Emp't Co. 1.

D.H.Q. now challenge other Midland Div. units to a game any really hot afternoon. Strongly recommended and more efficacious than physical "jerks" or Antipon for flesh reducing.

3 COMPANY WESTERN DIVISION TRAIN. v. No. 2. FIELD AMBULANCE.

The Ambulance turned a weak team out in this game, which was played at Impekoven on Saturday. The Ambulance however had most of the play, Grundy scoring two goals for them in the first half.

There was no score in the second half, the heat evidently affecting the players. Result: No. 2 Field Amb. 2; No. 3 Coy. 0.

"R" BATTERY (A.A.) v. 4th MOBILE WORKSHOPS.

This match was played at Volksgarten on Saturday, and ended in a draw of two goals each. It was a very fast game in spite of the terrific heat.

Page, at outside right, and Ellis, centre forward, were very prominent, and these two players were very unlucky in not scoring for the "Archies" in the last quarter of an hour. But for the splendid play of the Workshops right back they would have undoubtedly done so.

U. S. ARMY ROWING.

The American Army, says a Reuter's Paris telegram, has entered for the Eights, Coxwainless Fours, and Singles at Henley on the 4th of July. The Americans have begun training.

SPORTING ITEMS IN BRIEF.

French Racing.

The racing in Paris is now in full swing. Among those present at the meeting at Longchamp on Friday were President and Mrs. Wilson.

Military Rank Dropped.

In connection with the forthcoming cricket tour of the Australian Forces, which opens to-morrow at Norfolk, all military ranks will be dropped.

Trout Fishing.

Two 33lb. salmon have been caught in the Wye, near Hereford. Trout-fishing prospects are good in the south of England.

Fisherman Thrown Into River.

For throwing into the river an alleged poacher whom he caught trout fishing on his father's property, Mr. G. B. Kinnear, solicitor, Edinburgh, was fined £2 at Aberdeen.

Goddard-Beckett Boxing.

The date of the Goddard-Beckett boxing match has now been altered to Tuesday, June 17, to avoid clashing with the N.S.C. fixture. It is proposed that the winner of the match shall meet Carpentier on Tuesday, Sept. 2.

"Aussies" Lawn Tennis.

The Australian Imperial Forces team have arranged an interesting series of fixtures for the grass court season. The following matches will be played.

May 14, v. Surrey County.
May 17, v. Cambridge University.
May 26, v. Oxford University.

CHARITY GAMES.

The results of friendly charity matches played on Saturday were as follows:—

Fulham	2	Tottenham Hotspur	2
West Ham United	2	Arsenal	3
Crystal Palace	0	Millwall Athletic	4
Liverpool	4	Manchester United	0
Sheffield United	3	Manchester City	2

BIRMINGHAM COUNTY CHARITY CUP.

SCOTTISH LEAGUE.

Ayr United	0	Celtic	2
Clyde	0	Glasgow Rangers	4
Airdrieonians	3	Hibernians	3
Paisley St. Mirren	3	Heart of Midlothian	3

Celtic thus won the League Championship with 58 points to Rangers 57.

WEST RIDING CHARITY CUP SEMI-FINAL.

Huddersfield and Bradford City Clubs replayed the West Riding Charity Cup semi-final on Saturday, the result being a draw, 2—2 after extra time.

LEAGUE CHAMPIONS MATCH.

The first of two matches to decide the football League Championship between Notts Forest, the winners of the Midland Section and Everton, the winners of the Lancashire Section was played at Nottingham on Saturday. The result was a draw, 0—0.

FOOTBALL LEAGUE FINANCES.

The statement issued by the English Football League amounts to over 150,000 pounds. The gate receipts for the past season were more than double those of 1917—18, including the receipts of the Lancashire Section (£79,298), and of the Midland Section (£16,714). The receipts for April were £30,600 compared with £4,000 for April 1918.

HURST PARK MEETING.

The Hurst Park Race Meeting was held in fine weather on Saturday, when the following were the results:—

May Plate:— 1, Clapgate (11—2 on); 2, Wall Flower (20—1); 3, Saintly Maude (6—1). Three ran.

T.Y.O. Plate:— Skeets had a walk over.

Durham Handicap:— 1, All Alone (2—1); 2, Leanders (2—1); 3, Furore (5—2). Five ran.

Victoria Cup:— 1, Carados (100—8); 2, Golly Eyes (100—9); 3, Grand Fleet (3—1). Nine ran. A length separated the first and second and a head the second and third.

Claremont Stakes:— 1, Lady Phoebe (evens); 2, Burberry (2—1); 3, Throsga (33—1). Eight ran.

Vyner Plate:— 1, Tetra Colon (6—5); 2, White Heat (5—2); 3, Joli Coeur (10—1). Seven ran.

LONDON BETTING.

"Jubilee" Handicap (run May 17th): 4 to 1 Royal Bucks; 5 to 1 Zinovia; 100 to 15 Dansellon; 9 to 1 Silver Bullet; 100 to 8 By Jingo; all taken and offered.

The Derby: 7 to 4 Panther; 6 to 1 Lord Basil; 10 to 1 Buchan; 100 to 6 Paper Money; 18 to 1 Grand Parade; all taken and offered.

BOOTLESS GUARDS.

DIVERTING RACE AT ROYAL WARWICKS' SPORTS.

A most enjoyable afternoon was spent by the young guards of "D" Coy 52nd Royal Warwicks at Delbruck on Thursday when a good afternoon's sport was enjoyed, consisting of some very fine races, which had been arranged by the Company Sports Officer, 2nd Lieut. Far, who takes a great interest in the lads' sports.

The result of the races were:—

100 yards was won by Cpl. Bennett, Lce. Cpl. Ackers coming in second after a very close race.

440 yards was won by L/Cpl. Lloyd. This also was a very close race, L/Cpl. Fulford coming in second.

Sack Race was full of amusement and most exciting, Pte. Sartin becoming an easy winner. Pte. Hayes came in second after a few tumbles.

880 yards:— This was a very fine race, there being eight entries. L/Cpl. Massey became an easy winner, Pte. Mc. Claughlin coming in second.

Boot Race:— This race caused a great deal of amusement. All the competitors, of whom there were 25, took off their boots and put them into sacks. After these were tied the men were taken 50 yards distant. The winner of this race had to run to the sacks, find his boots, put them on and lace them up and return to the starting point. Boots were flying in all directions, the rule being that men who picked up the wrong pair should throw them as far as possible. The first prize was won by Pte. Burrell and the second by Pte. Bosley.

1 Mile Race:— This race was won by L/Cpl. Massey who shows every prospect of becoming a fine long distant runner.

BIG SCORING AT DUREN.

51st GORDONS H. Q. SIGNAL SECTION v. EDUCATIONAL STAFF.

These teams were favoured with splendid weather for their return game at Duren on Monday afternoon. For the first twenty minutes or so fast end to end play was the rule and both defences were kept busy. It fell to the Signallers to open the scoring, but it was only at his second attempt that McCombie got the ball through. A few minutes before the interval Wishart put through another for the "Sigs" from a fine cross by Mc Combie and half time found them leading 2—0.

The teachers were early on the agressive in the second period and only the fine defence of the Signallers kept them from scoring. Play continued on the same strenuous lines and two goals were scored by the Headquarters men in rapid succession, through Mc Guire, and Robertson. The teachers made strenuous efforts to break their "duck" but the defence beat them, and just before the finish McCombie put on a fifth goal for the "Sigs".

Result: Signal Section 5, Education 0.

Both defences were good, the "Sigs" if anything being the stronger, Harvey, Lieut. Brown, M. C. and Lieut. Mc Gregor carrying off the honours for the Signallers, and Sgt. Cunningham, Lieut. Mather, and Sgt. Carmichael doing likewise for the Education men. It was in the forward lines that the difference lay. The Signal quintette played well together throughout, but the teachers' front five played disjointedly, their two steadiest men being Henderson and Petrie.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

Tuesday, May 13, 1919.

Wind South-West, 10—15 m.p.h. in the day. Cloudy; probably some showers. Moderate temperature. Fair visibility.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

(With an Occasional Entertainments Note.)

The Cricket Boom.

The week-end witnessed a display of the great keenness in cricket which is promised during the present season. On Saturday and Sunday every possible pitch was occupied and in many cases some capital cricket resulted. After four years inaction, the great summer game is gradually reviving in a manner that indicates a boom more vigorous than has ever been known before. And this, notwithstanding the pessimistic predictions of those people, suffering from the "brighter cricket" craze, who insisted that nothing in the world would reinstate the game to anything like a high level of popularity.

Many splendid batting performances are reported in connection with the week-end games, among them being the trundling of C. Q. M. S. Stead of "B" Coy, 2/4 Duke of Wellington's Regiment, who, in a match against Capt Bond's eleven of the same unit, bowled five men at the expense only of the same number of runs.

The Picnicers' Home.

Konigsforst is a little village within tram-car distance of Cologne, whereto all "picnicers" hie them during the week-end. And there is a real rural liveliness at this place, the like of which is not frequently met with round about these parts. The tram terminus is on the fringe of the most delightfully quiet wood, and a walk of a few yards brings one to little clearings after the heart of the picnic enthusiast. During the last week-end some thousands of people must have eaten al fresco meals at this spot, although no one would have imagined so had the rather heavy thunderstorm on Sunday evening not caused them to scurry from their sylvan retreats and crowd the one hotel much beyond its capacity. A troupe of the real old picturesque vagabonds with fiddles and mandolines and more or less musical vocal qualities made their appearance at the hotel during the storm and endeavoured to brighten the feelings of the wet and rather bedraggled-looking holiday makers with song and dance. Whether or not they succeeded in this it is difficult to say, but they appeared to reap rich reward for their efforts.

Amateur Dramatics.

The last performance in the three night run of "The Mollusc," at the Deutsches Theatre, was played to a crowded house on Saturday and the excellent reputation of the Rhine Army Dramatic Company was still further enhanced thereby. During the next week or two, the Company will be on tour.

On May 19th, the Deutsches Theatre bill will again be filled by the R.A.A.D.C. when "Man and Super-Man" will be staged. The caste will include Miss Shirley King, Miss Gabriel Paul, Miss Inez Bensusan, Major Pollock, Capt. Bigg, Lieut. Blackall and Lieut. Percy. The latter artiste played the difficult part of John Turner over a thousand times when the same play had an enormously successful run in London.

Rowing.

Some time ago it was pointed out that although several eights had been hard at practice on the Thames, no crew, representative of the Army of the Rhine, had been selected for the forthcoming Henley Regatta. It is satisfactory to note that a definite move to remedy such a state of affairs is now being made and there is some likelihood of an officers crew being got together from the many enthusiasts included in the Rhine Army. With this idea in view, will all scullers interested, inform Capt. Tew, R.T.O. Cologne, of their qualifications as soon as possible.

THE RAMBLER.

EXCITING RUGBY AT MUNSTEREIFEL.

GLORIOUS CHANCES MISSED.

These rivals met at Munstereifel on Thursday and an exciting though scrappy game ended in a victory by the 53rd to the tune of 8 points (1 goal try) to nil.

The opening exchanges were in favour of the 51st who by dint of forward rushes, gained a footing near their opponents line. Their advantage, however, was of short duration for clear runs by Major Long and dogged work at the base of the scrum by Riella enabled the 53rd to retaliate brilliantly.

Glover and Ayres played magnificently at this stage and their tackling was largely instrumental in preventing the attackers from scoring. However the latter after an excellent round of passing registered a try through Major Long. Mc Wean converted.

The second half saw the visiting backs missing glorious chances through bad passing, and indifferent handling. They made repeated efforts to equalize, but the home backs proved their efficiency in defence as well as attack, Capt. Mc Wean and Major Long being especially conspicuous by lengthy useful kicks to touch. Of the visiting forwards notable work was performed at this stage by 2nd Lieut. Dawson. The venue of the play again changed to inside the visitors' half and after a deal of scrappy play wherein glorious opportunities went a begging, Major Long succeeded in scoring the second — a last try of the match.

Final 53rd S.W.B. 1 goal, 1 try, 8 goints; 51st S.W.B. nil.

The teams were as follows. —

51st Battalion — 2nd Lieut. Ayres, back; Lieuts. Cannon, Davies, Ptes. Wilson, Howell threequarters back; 2nd Lieut. Priston, Cpl. Powell, halfbacks; 2nd Lieuts. Glover, Douglas. Dawson, Hall, Thomas, Lieut. Fairo, C.S.M. Wicks, Sergt. Boyd, forwards.

53rd Battalion: Sergt. Taylor, back; 2nd Lieut. Upham, Capt. Mc Wean; Lieut. Green, Sergt. Watkins, threequarters backs; Major Long, Pte Riella, halfbacks; Capt. Tatham, Lieuts. Mason, Rogers, Temple, Thomas, Sergts. Baymires. Holley, Tantrum.

The Metropolitan Railway's war memorial to the members of their staff who have fallen will take the form of an athletic ground at Wembley, and a club or institute for the use of the staff, while a tablet is to be placed at Baker-street Station, bearing the names of 127 men who have given their lives.

The old village football club at Kimpton, Herts, has been informed (says the "Sunday Times") that the new local council will devote its share of income from an old charity to arranging a football match and providing teas for the players. This, it is hoped, will lead to the club being re-established.

A POLICE RAID.

AND ITS SEQUEL.

Originated for a perfectly legitimate purpose it has been revealed that the Sailors, Soldiers and Airmen's Union has launched out on a sphere of activities which resembles Bolshevism, with the result that the London Police raided the headquarters of the Union on Thursday last.

This action on the part of the authorities appears to have had the desired effect, for no further raids have been made and the new effort, which was nothing less than an incitement to soldiers, sailors and airmen to mutiny, has been nipped in the bud.

Inquiries now show that the authorities have been watching the activities of the movement for many months past and it was discovered that instead of keeping to its original projects, which included the improvement of the conditions of demobilized men, there were diversions in the shape of efforts to encourage active service men to become full members. These efforts were made on the ground that whether as soldiers, sailors or airmen their work or employment was just as much a trade as any organized Union. So far there has been little indication that this appeal has met with any large response. The propaganda has certainly not been in the hands of soldiers; it has been developed and enthused by civilians of extreme socialistic, not to say revolutionary, tendencies.

An attempt has lately been made to exploit the not unnatural impatience of men who have been in the Army, under the Derby scheme, in the interests of the union, and apparently the present moment has been seized upon as an occasion to bring the propaganda to a head. The impatience of the "Derby" men has been largely due to a misunderstanding as to what is meant by "the duration of the war," and this misunderstanding has undoubtedly been intensified by the fact that in Army Form B 2512A the phrase "the termination of hostilities" is used as if it might mean the same thing as "the duration of the war."

The pity is that, even in the pressure of circumstances which existed at the time, more care was not taken to make the vital conditions of the soldiers' contract of enlistment clear beyond doubt. At the same time, it has now to be recognized and it is clear that the majority of the men do recognize that the armistice meant only a suspension of hostilities, and neither the termination of hostilities nor the end of the war. So long as the terms of peace submitted to the Germans remain unsigned it cannot be said that hostilities have terminated, or that the war is at an end.

Under "the Termination of the Present War" (Definition) Act, 1918, the war will not end until "the exchange or deposit of ratifications of the treaty or treaties of peace," and, further, under the new Military Service Act, all essential men, whatever their contract of enlistment, may be retained until April 30, 1920. For the suggestion that the "Derby" and other men in the Army of Occupation are being retained for a new war against Russia there is absolutely no justification. To this suggestion it is a sufficient answer to say that the relief force, which is to be sent to Russia within the next few days, is a volunteer force which has been enlisted for a period of 12 months or such shorter time as may be necessary.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

HALF MAST.

The German nation has decided to go into mourning. The Kölnische Volkszeitung in commenting upon this says that such an order might have been thought unnecessary, for anybody with a truly German spirit has been for a long time devoid of any desire for amusement. Those however, who, despite the order of the Government and the earnest appeals of the Press, continue to make merry publicly are not worthy to be called Germans. "Forgive them for they know not what they do." After commenting very briefly on the peace terms, the writer refers to an article in the Morning Post in which it is said that the Treaty would arouse a cry of fury in Germany. A cry of fury demands vigour, he says, and that is an element of which Germany is lacking.

Christianity and Capitalism.

At the Gürzenich, last week Prof. Scheler lectured on the subject of "Capitalism and its future."

In the beginning he drew a contrast between Christianity and Capitalism, and showed that they are opposed to each other as much as are fire and water.

After a thorough analysis of the capitalistic spirit, the Professor explained how it had developed especially during the last centuries. The astonishment of Rabrind vana Tagore at the disposition of the capitalist minds is the best proof of its limitations, both historically and geographically.

Professor Scheler then dealt with the future of Capitalism. It is the duty of the young generation, to crush this spirit by creating a new type of manhood — one with a better heart and which agrees more with the true Christian type.

In commenting upon the political programme of the new republic the Professor said that he would like to see the new world built upon a Christian socialism—neither a capitalist dictature nor a Bolshevist one, but a policy between the two.

OLD HARROVIAN DINNER.

Many renewals of old acquaintances were made and still many more reminiscences told at the Old Harrovian dinner held recently at the VI Corps Club.

The event in every way was a huge success and will no doubt prove unforgettable to those who had the privilege of being present.

"Mine host" had made most commendable efforts to profide a sumptuous repast, and the result was, at least, the ideal possible. Full justice was done to every dish.

Several highly distinguished officers were among the company, which numbered close upon seventy.

The usual loyal toasts were given and that in honour of "Dear Old Harrow" was received most enthusiastically. Most of the speeches were reminiscent in character and several good stories of early school-days, boyhood "scraps," and sports were related.

Efforts were made to prevail upon the Generals present, each to give a song, and eventually they consented to sing conjointly the opening verse of "Forty Years On," the second, third and fourth verses being sung in turn by field officers below the rank of General, Captains and Subalterns respectively. This afforded great enjoyment. The following were present:

2 Lt. M. H. Aird, 9th. Lancers; Lt.-Colonel Sir G. A. Armitage, Bart., C.M.G., D.S.O.; Lt.-Colonel G. H. Arrdagn, D.S.O.;

Rev. R.L. Barnes, C.F., Midland Division; Major G. G. M. Bennett, 3rd. M.G.G.; Lieut. M. P. Benton, 16th. Bde. R.H.A.; Lieut. E. Bleackeley, Inniskilling Dragoons;

NEWS IN BRIEF.

Dover civic authorities, invited by the Burgomaster, took part in Vindictive Day celebrations at Ostend on Friday.

A War Office offer of a German field gun has been refused by Blyth Council, who stated that they wanted nothing German.

A new handbook for the relatives of deceased officers may be had from the Secretary, Stationery Branch, Ministry of Pensions, Millbank, S.W. 1.

"So far as we are able to judge, the medical profession as a whole is not convinced of the necessity for total prohibition," says the British Medical Journal.

Unemployment was pleaded by most of 400 persons summoned recently at Birmingham for non-payment of income tax for the quarter ended October 1, 1918.

"In gratitude for what our boys have done," Mr. Dan Mason, of Chiswick, is to provide a new out-patients' department at West London Hospital, Hammersmith, to cost £22,000.

As he had done no work for two months and could not get any, a man at Bow County Court said he was willing to give up possession of his house as he was going to join the Army of Occupation.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

The Editor, in publishing letters from Correspondents, will use his own discretion, and if necessary, limit the publishing of correspondence on any subject whatever. It must be understood, however that he is not responsible for the views stated.

All communications for this column should be brief and to the point, and preference will be given to those which bear the writers' signatures for publication. No letter will be published unless accompanied by rank name, and unit of sender, which are needed for the purpose of reference.

Many letters of a perverse nature have reached the office, and the Editor wishes to point out that these only cause waste of time both to the writer and the Editor himself. Letters of this nature will not be published.

THE OPERA CHORUS.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.—One of the most interesting features of the Post, to my mind, has been the description and criticism of the opera. The correspondence on "Parsifal" and A. F. Jones' articles on some of the operas proved excellent reading, and I am sure all opera lovers join in appreciation of the artistes and their productions at the Opera House.

There is, however, a weakness that has been apparent upon each occasion that I have visited the Opera. I anticipate that there are many excuses for such weakness, but it is wise to mention the matter in case the producer is led to believe that silence over the subject means that the "Engländer" has not observed the defect. I refer to the male members of the chorus. The singing of these gentlemen requires a great deal of improvement to even approach the standard of such fine artistes as Schorr, Schröder, Renner, Krauss, Mizinisky and many other singers who have given us so much pleasure.

On Good Friday I heard a large choir give a concert rendering of Bach's St. Matthew Passion at the Gürzenich. It was a splendid performance, and the choir, including the male voices, was superb. I estimate that there were about 100 tenors and basses in that choir. Cologne, I understand, was celebrated for its male voice choirs. Surely there are some left? I mention these facts to indicate that there are a great number of male voices about, and of the right quality. Let us hope that if we are here for the next opera season the chorus master will be able to get hold of some of them.

PHOTOGRAPHIC EXHIBITION.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.—May I offer a few comments on the proposed "Photographic Exhibition?" Make the exhibition an Arts and Crafts Exhibition. Enlarge the scheme for exhibitors. Give the "Tommy" a chance who may not be able to paint or possess a camera but is mighty useful at making something out of nothing. Get out of the rut and popularize. My work prevents me also, but I will help.

Answers to Correspondents.

[The flow of correspondence, since the Cologne Post was instituted, has been enormous, and the Editor would like to point out that only a certain number of the innumerable questions can be answered in each issue. Should any inquirer find that his question has not yet been answered, he can have the assurance that it will receive attention in due course, and the answer will appear accordingly. Many questions have been received which could be answered much easier by the Adjutant of the unit concerned, and all such cases which affect the unit commander must be taken to him and not sent here. — Ed.]

EX-SOLDIERS AND COLOURED LABOUR.

A deputation of the Manchester branch of the Comrades of the Great War was received at the House of Commons yesterday by representatives of the War Office, Ministry of Pensions, etc., before whom certain grievances of discharged men were laid.

Mr. Griffiths, secretary of the Manchester branch, contended that the 20 per cent. disability pension was inadequate, and ought to be increased by at least 100 per cent. to meet the present cost of living. He asked also for a flat rate for men undergoing training, and contended that it ought to be at least £3 a week, instead of 27s. 6d., to meet the high cost of commodities. Pleas were also made for increasing the war gratuity, for State provision of light labour for partially disabled men, and for the discharge of female labour, to make room for discharged men.

One member of the deputation asserted that there would have been trouble in Manchester if it were not for the "Comrades" stepping in, owing to the employment of the many black men and Chinamen.

Mr. Ben Tillett, M.P., said that the problem of coloured labour had become very serious, and a strong attitude was being taken up by many of the dockers at Salford.

Major Hamilton, on behalf of the Ministry of Pensions, offered to take up direct any cases submitted to him. Instructions had been issued that any paid servant in the Ministry should be preferably an ex-service man, and that first preference should be given to disabled ex-service men. He thought the State might ultimately have to increase the training grant. Six hundred disabled soldiers had been found work in the Ministry since the Armistice.

SCHEIDEMANN STATES HIS CASE.

NATIONAL ASSEMBLY MEETS.

RANTZAU SUBMITS A FIFTH NOTE.

AEROPLANES AND AFRIDIS.

GERMAN NATIONAL ASSEMBLY MEETS.

CONDITIONS UNACCEPTABLE.

The German National Assembly met in the University Hall on Monday. Welcoming the assembly in the name of Berlin University, Prof. Dr. Kahl reminded the audience of the festival which took place in the same hall in 1910 on the occasion of the University's centenary, when representatives of France (the mathematician Poincaré), Great Britain, Italy, Russia, United States and Japan, eulogised the German people and the German spirit as necessary elements of the world history. In the same hall Fichte the great philosopher, gave his famous discourses "To the German nation."

Prime minister Scheidemann, said "Let me speak without any consideration of tactics about this book wherein hundreds of paragraphs begin with "Germany renounces, renounces, renounces." After having given a resumé of all that Germany has to renounce he said "I ask you who can, as an honest man, I will not even say, as a German, but as an honest man who wants to keep his promises, accept such conditions? We have made counter proposals and we shall make others. We consider it, with your consent, our most sacred duty to come to negotiations. This contract is, according to the opinion of the Imperial Government, unacceptable; so unacceptable, that I dare not believe that earth could olerate such a book. We know our way. It does not lead through these conditions."

After asserting that if the conditions were to be accepted it would be not only the corpse of Germany which would remain on the battlefield of Versailles but all ideals of self-determination of people, independence of free nations etc. etc. etc., he ended by saying "A peace of work is our aim, our hope. By such a peace we can fulfil the legitimate claims of our adversaries; by it alone we can lead our people to health again. We are no longer fighting—we want peace. Indeed, woe betide those who started the war, but thrice woe betide those who actually defer peace, even for one day!"

With Monday's demonstration against "This" Peace the first session of the National Assembly in Berlin ended. The Deputies will now leave Berlin and go to their own electoral districts to enlighten their voters about the consequences of the peace conditions.

The National Assembly will have another sitting at Berlin and then go back to Weimar. Then they will sign.

ENGLISH PRESS COMMENTS.

Regarding Count Brockdorff-Rantzau's second note and its reference to inclusion in the League of Nations, which assumes that the Allies ought to be anxious to welcome Germany with open arms, the Times asks "When will Germany understand that people are stern with her because she is responsible for the death or maiming of those who are dearest to them; that they look for some sign of contrition, and that bad manners do not mend bad morals. The German suggestion towards the League of Nations will of course be considered, but if they are anything like those put forward a couple of months ago they have no chance of acceptance, for they contemplate the creation of an international super-state which the Conference of Paris decisively and with good reason rejected. As for Germany's complaint that she has not been admitted already to the League, she is reminded that her admission depends on herself. As soon as she can convince two thirds of the Assembly of the League she may be admitted under article one of the Covenant provided that she gives the required quarantees. That will be early enough. She cannot be a loyal member of the League unless she is loyal to the Treaty as a whole and as she has not even signed it yet we are a very long way from proof of her loyalty to it." The article concludes: "It is against the interest of humanity that under the plea of saving Germany's self-respect we should abate any thing from the humiliation of the rulers who brought the awful suffering of the war on the world. The Germans will pass from their protests that they will never sign, to intrigue and apparent acquiescence, but they will sign for the simple reason that they have no alternative and that sentence on them is no more, though it may at some points be less than just."

The Daily Telegraph Paris correspondent draws attention to the carefully elaborated campaign of newspaper protest that is rising up from all quarters in Germany. That is merely a move in the game, he says, that must be obvious to every one, but there is, unfortunately for Germany, a ready test of its honesty which they can hardly disown. When the Treaties of Brest Litovsk and Bukharest were published in Germany, the merciless terms imposed upon Russia and Roumania were received by the Teutonic press with rapture. By the latter treaty Germany exacted terms not merely that were intended to deprive Roumania of a large part of her fluid assets, her chief source of wealth, the oilfields, were to be exploited for the benefit of Germany and her army was to be held at the disposal of the victors should they require it against the Ukraine Government. It is necessary to point out that the spirit which dictated the eminently reasonable terms of the Versailles settlement is at the other end of the moral scale from that which had as its object partly the destruction and partly the exploitation of an almost defenceless little State from which no further danger could have been expected by any reasonable man in Berlin.

RANTZAU SUBMITS A FIFTH NOTE

COLONIES THIS TIME.

Count Brockdorff-Rantzau has addressed a fifth note to M. Clemenceau. It concerns the clauses by which Germany renounces its Colonies, and contains a suggestion that they shall be internationalised!

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

A French newspaper describes the interval between the receipt and signature of the Peace terms by Germany as a play, the scenario of which is as follows:—

Act I. Scene. Berlin. Protest of the German Government, repeated by the Press chorus.

Act II. Scheidemann makes a speech. Applause by all parties of the National Assembly.

Act III. Scene Versailles. First scene: Count Brockdorff-Rantzau presents counter-proposals.
Second scene: Allies energetically refuse same.

Act IV. German delegates sign. The rush for souvenirs.

GERMAN GOVERNMENT CRISIS.

Berlin. Herr von Payer, President of the Democratic party, has informed Scheidemann that his party will withdraw from the Government if the Treaty is signed in its present form. The Centre party is contemplating taking the same step.—Reuter.

SIGN, BUT DON'T PAY.

Berlin. 12th May. A conference of the Independent Socialists passed a resolution protesting against a peace of violence and declaring that the present Government by re-establishing militarism had strengthened the universal mistrust of Germany. The Resolution declares that it is of no use hoping for substantial alleviation of the conditions and expresses the opinion that in the last resort Germany must bow to compulsion and sign the treaty, as abstention would mean the detention of prisoners, the occupation of districts producing raw materials, the tightening of the blockade with consequent unemployment and famine and the death of masses of people, ultimately bringing about a terrible catastrophe and thus compelling signature. The resolution concludes with the cynical comment that as the treaties of Brest Litovsk and Bucharest have been short lived so will the Peace of Versailles be annulled by revolutionary development.—Reuter.

SWITZERLAND CHIPS IN.

Switzerland has asked to participate, as a riparian State, in the negotiations about revision of the agreement of 1869 on Rhine navigation. She demands to have at least two representatives on the Commission dealing with Navigation on the Rhine.

QUIETUDE IN INDIA.

The India Office announces that in the Punjab no further disturbances have been reported. Further "snowball" postcards addressed to either Moslems or Hindus, or both, have been found in circulation of rumours that the agitation continues. An attempt by two students to stir up disaffection among the Jats of the Hissar district is reported, but elsewhere quiet continues. There in no change in the Mohammedan situation.

In a report received from an Afghan source, Indian agitators are stated to have pledged themselves to make attacks on aircraft and mechanical transport and to incendiarism.—Reuter.

FIGHTING ON THE NORTH WEST FRONTIER.

Reuter learns that the news from Afghanistan during the week-end was somewhat scanty but satisfactory. A collision occurred with the enemy on Friday, in which the British drove the Afghans from one of their positions at Ashrasiukheb. The British casualties were slight.

Aeroplanes also were employed. They crossed the frontier and bombed enemy positions at Losdatta with good results. The enemy is still in position to the West.

The section of the frontier adjoining the Khyber Pass has never been demarcated, but Landi Kotal is indisputably on the British side, and in advancing to its vicinity the Afghans have committed a deliberate act of invasion for which they have received no provocation whatever.

Some unrest is reported in the city of Peshawur, where martial law was proclaimed on May 8. A number of arrests have been made, with good results.

Landi Kotal is a small town on the Khyber Pass, about eight miles south of the Afghan frontier and twenty-five miles from Peshawur.

It is proposed to make some reduction of railway-fares for relatives of fallen soldiers who wish to visit overseas graves.

FIELD MARSHAL FRENCH'S RECRIMINATIONS.

QUESTIONS IN PARLIAMENT.

The remarkable disclosures made in Field Marshal French's book "1914," appearing day by day in the Daily Telegraph, are causing keen resentment among Service members of the House of Commons. It must be said that in works of this kind the average reader is unable to distinguish where fact ends and opinion begins.

Captain Ormsby-Gore asked the Secretary of State for War whether, by paragraph 453 of the King's Regulations governing the conduct of the Army, all officers on the active list and soldiers are forbidden to publish in any form whatever, or communicate directly or indirectly to the Press, his views on military subjects without special authority of the same paragraph, any information acquired by any officer or soldier while travelling or employed on duty is the property of the War Department, and may not be published in the press without the previous sanction of the Army Council.

Mr. Bonar Law said that the Government were not prepared to relax the regulations by which serving officers are forbidden to publish accounts of operations in order to reply to strictures of former chiefs, although no general rule could be laid down.

Mr. Winston Churchill said the Army Council were not in any way responsible for Field Marshal French's articles. The application of the Army Act distinguished between serving soldiers and Field Marshals unemployed in a military capacity.

Brigadier General Sir Owen Thomas is asking the Prime Minister whether, in view of Lord French's adverse comments on the action of the late Lord Kitchener, he will now consent to the publication of the evidence and report in Case 2, Court of Inquiry, 1916, under the Army (Court of Inquiry) Act, 1916, such evidence and report having hitherto been withheld in war interests.

The Westminster Gazette says that Field Marshal French's remarkable statements concerning his differences with Lord Kitchener have naturally evoked much indignation amongst the friends of the latter. It is extremely probable that the other side of the picture will be presented to the public in the near future. The real reason, supported by official testimony, which compelled the Government to send Lord Kitchener to interview Field Marshal French at Paris will most likely be made public.

FRENCH CARRYING ON.

Continuing his narrative in the Daily Telegraph, Field Marshall French speaks of his anxiety regarding the Channel ports and gives extracts from a paper written by him before the war for the Committee of Imperial Defence in which he said "I think it will be allowed that in any war between ourselves and a great Continental power the possession of the Eastern Channel coastline between Dunkirk and Boulogne by submarines assisted by aircraft would effectually deny passage of the Straits of Dover to any war or other vessel which is not submersible. In fact the command of the sea, so far as this part of the Channel is concerned, would not depend upon the relative strength of the opposing navies but would remain in dispute until one side or other effected the practical destruction of its adversaries by means of aircraft and submarines.

"The way would then lie open to the Power which had gained this advantage to move an invading force of any size in comparative safety across the Straits to any part of the coast between Ramsgate and Dungeness or Dunkirk and Boulogne. The command of these Straits would be a contest between submarines and aeroplanes. I hold that the Straits of Dover must be regarded as a military obstacle to the invasion of this country. They will in the not far distant future altogether lose their maritime character and I hold that the only reliable defence against a powerful attack by hostile aircraft and submarines in vastly superior numbers is to possess a strong bridge-head on the French coast with effective means of passing and repassing across the Straits, which can only be secured by the projected Channel tunnel."

French, proceeding, says that on the night of the 16th September 1914 he arrived at the conclusion that a frontal attack would be hopeless whilst it also began to appear that any threat against the German flank would be effectually countered, if not actually turned against ourselves.

"This then was my great fear. What was there to prevent the enemy launching a powerful movement for the purpose of securing the Channel ports whilst the main forces were engaged in practically neutralising one another?" Nevertheless French, despite his anxiety about the ports, held on to his positions on the Aisne and did not carry out the famous transfer of his army to the left of the French Army until his positions on the Aisne were completed and Joffre was ready to take them over. His plans were endorsed by Joffre, and the transfer of the British Army, as will be remembered, was effected without the knowledge of the Germans.

GERMAN ARMS IN CORK.

Following the recent police discovery at Cork Sinn Fein arsenal, when sixty-two bombs were found under a shoemaker's, raids on shops for arms on a wholesale scale were made yesterday throughout the city by the police and military. In all twenty-two houses of Sinn Feiners were visited, four arrests made, and a quantity of arms and ammunition taken. The latter included automatic German revolvers of the latest pattern, and they were fully loaded.

AMNESTY FOR MILITARY PRISONERS.

In the House of Commons yesterday Mr. Winston Churchill said that the whole question of the granting of an amnesty on the occasion of the conclusion of peace to soldiers undergoing imprisonment for purely military offences is receiving careful consideration. Mr. Churchill said he hoped to make a statement on the subject very shortly.

NORTH RUSSIAN RELIEF SEND OFF.

TROTSKI STORMERS FIRST STOP.

The departure of the North Russian Relief Force from Newcastle and Southampton yesterday was quite unlike anything that happened during the war. Great crowds assembled and cheered the volunteers and there was much enthusiasm.

The contingent which embarked on the transport Czaritza at Newcastle for Archangel numbered 1,500 officers and men, under the command of Lt. Col. Nasmith. A remarkable spirit of cheerfulness animated the troops, among whom were many of the "old contemptibles."

On the carriages of the trains which brought them to Newcastle were chalked such inscriptions as "Trotski stormers," "First stop Russia." "Old Red Army," "Who fears Bolshies." The men were played to the quayside by the fife and drum band of the Devons.

The Southampton contingent left in the afternoon aboard the Czar. The party included sixty-eight naval and ninety-one military officers and 1,423 naval and military men.

Ringing cheers were given by those ashore and responded to heartily by those aboard as the Czar weighed anchor.

It is expected that Murmansk will be reached in Saturday.

FATAL ACCIDENT AT COLOGNE.

CORRECTION.

In yesterday's issue we stated that in a fatal accident on board M. L. 223, one of the British Rhine Patrol flotilla, Lieut. Robinson, D.S.C. was killed.

Such, happily is not the case, and we greatly regret that our announcement, which was due to a hasty transcription of rough notes, may be the means of giving pain to Lieutenant Robinson's relatives and friends. We have already anticipated by telegram the arrival of the printed news in England.

Lieut. Robinson thus joins the select band whose death "is greatly exaggerated" and it is pleasant to read a note from him in the cheery "Navy way" in which he says "I am alive and well in No. 36 C.C.S. Hospital." His injuries are slight and he expects to return to duty inside a week.

The funeral of the one victim of the accident, Motor Mechanic Locke, takes place to-day (Wednesday), the cortege leaving No. 44 C.C.S. at 9.30 a. m.

FIGHTING WITH CANADIANS.

STREET SCENES AT GUILDFORD.

Free fights between Canadian soldiers, men of the Queen's West Surreys, and demobilized soldiers occurred in North street, Guildford, on Saturday and Sunday nights. The trouble arose over the Guildford girls preference for Colonials, and the local men interfered with the Canadians as they came from a dancing hall. During the fight on Saturday two "Queen's" men were stabbed with knives, but not seriously. Mounted police had to clear the street on Sunday.

IMPERIAL GUARDS.

The formation of a regiment of Imperial Guards is advocated by the Times, which says "it might comprise two battalions, one composed of officers and men from Canada, South Africa and Newfoundland, the other from Australia and New Zealand. This is only a tentative suggestion and leaves India out of account but it could easily be modified. The Dominions, we feel sure, would welcome the creation of the Imperial Guards with enthusiasm. There would be competition for openings for officers and men and in this country the Imperial Guards would live as a perpetual memorial of the deeds of the Dominion troops during the war."

LABOUR TO TAKE OVER GOVERNMENT SHIPYARDS.

Reuter learns officially that the Government has offered to leave (lease) the National Shipyards at Chepstow, Beachley and Portbury to the Federations of the Engineering and Shipbuilding Trades, which embrace a considerable number of Trades Unions. This action has been taken in response to the demands emanating from some Trade Union circles, that Labour should run the industry.

The whole subject is to be discussed at the twenty-ninth annual meeting of the Federation at Cardiff on Thursday and Friday next.

FOR THE COLOGNE LEAVE CLUB.

An appeal has been issued to members of the Baltic Exchange to contribute to the upkeep of the Leave Club at Cologne for non-commissioned officers and men of the Rhine Army.

The appeal says, "We shall arrange meals, well cooked and well served; indoor and outdoor sports; music and dances. The club will berun by between sixty and seventy specially selected voluntary women workers. It will be conducted on the lines of the British Army and Navy League Club at Paris." It is hoped to obtain from fifteen to twenty thousand sterling through the appeal.

VERY LUCKY UNIT.

Members of Eastham (Hants) Police welcomed home their comrades, who had served at the front, by giving a dinner. In the course of this pleasant function one of their number who attained the rank of captain mentioned that the Eastham station had been extremely lucky, as all the men, including two sergeants, fifteen constables and one detective officer, had returned alive.

THREE IN A TWO-SEATER AEROPLANE.

INQUEST ON AVIATORS.

At Dover yesterday an inquiry was opened concerning the deaths of Capt. Evans, Lieut. Stokes and Sgt. Feltmore, all of the R. A. F., whose bodies were picked up in mid-Channel on Friday. The commanding officer at Lympne aerodrome said that Sgt. Feltmore left on Friday to bring back Lieut. Stokes from France. The machine used was a new Bristol fighter, and Sgt. Feltmore was an excellent pilot. The presence of a third man on a two-seater would make no difference to a machine of this sort. Witness attributed the accident to engine failure.

In reply to a question put by the father of Lieut. Stokes, witness admitted that it was not in order for the two pilots, in addition to the Sergeant, to be in a two-seater machine.

Lieutenant George Cooper gave evidence as to steps he took when the machine did not arrive. On Friday he telephoned all round the coast advising a sharp look-out by the coast guards, and also telephoned to France. The next morning he heard that Hythe fishermen had reported seeing bodies afloat off Littlestone, and he motored to Littlestone coastguard station.

The coroner asked why the fishermen did not pick up the bodies, and witness said he understood it was a superstition with them; they would have nothing to do with dead bodies. He added that he advised the Dover patrol, and vessels were sent in search, the destroyer Teazer recovering the bodies.

The coroner's verdict was that the three airmen died at sea, their machine having come down through engine trouble.

ADDING TO THE NAVY.

Messrs. J. Samuel White & Co., Ltd., East Cowes, Isle of Wight, have delivered the ocean-going torpedo-boat destroyer "Trusty" to the Admiralty. This war vessel was laid down on April 11, 1918, and launched on Nov. 6th last. The "Trusty" which is the 70th torpedo vessel completed at the East Cowes shipyard, attained a speed of 35½ knots on the measured mile during her acceptance trials.

MOST BOMBED ENGLISH TOWN.

The Allied Towns War Roll of Honour, shows that Ramsgate is foremost in Britain's list of heroic areas. The list, compiled from official raid statistics, shows that the most bombed towns are, firstly, Dunkirk, secondly, Calais, and thirdly Ramsgate. Thus the well-known seaside resort takes first place in the English list. Ramsgate suffered 119 air raids and bombardments from the sea. The town also ranks foremost in the voluntary recruiting records. The Mayor in pressing a claim before the King for an investiture similar to the honour accorded Dunkirk, on the grounds that the town is thoroughly deserving of the recognition so spontaneously given to a foreign town. There is also a proposal afoot to pay an entente cordiale visit to Calais at the earliest opportunity, many leading townsmen agreeing to take part in the ceremony.

STEAMER FOR MERRY MARGATE.

It is intended to resume this season the Thames-Margate daily passenger service. The paddle-steamer Royal Sovereign has been thoroughly overhauled and fitted with new boilers, new decks, etc.—the promenade deck being about 300ft. long. It steams 16 knots per hour, and has accommodation for about 2,000 passengers. Refreshments are to be supplied at popular prices.

ROUMANIAN ADVANCE STOPPED.

A report emanating from Vienna comes from the Roumanian Bureau at Berne to the effect that as the result of the intervention of the British and American Missions the Roumanian Army has been obliged to cease its march on Buda-Pesth.

The Soviet authorities at Buda-Pesth are divided on the question as to whether it is possible to defend the city. The majority is convinced that it is impossible, but there is a determined minority in favour of a retreat through the forest leading to Wiener Neustadt.

MONS STARS READY FOR ISSUE.

The War Office announces that the 1914 star is now ready for issue to officers and other ranks of the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry, Hampshire, Wiltshire, Devonshire, Somerset and Lancashire Regiments.

BELGIAN THANK OFFERING.

H.M. Commissioners of Works have submitted to the London County Council details of a Belgian National Memorial to be erected on the Victoria Embankment opposite Cleopatra's Needle.

The entire expense will be defrayed by Belgian residents as a token of gratitude towards Great Britain for aid given to Belgium during the War.

LONDON STOCK EXCHANGE.

The general tendency was satisfactory with a fair volume of business, notably in good class industrials at improving values, cable companies, textiles and Canadian land shares being particularly favoured. The gold mining section attracted considerable attention and a fairly general advance was recorded on the expectation that shortly mining companies will be free to sell their gold in the open market. Moreover it is stated that gold for industrial purposes is selling at higher prices.

Home funds were quiet as the result of the growing volume of industrial capital issues. French Rentes weakened again under the influence of the rate of exchange. The Russian group was quiet and easier. Oils continued active with a further advance in the leaders, but more speculative descriptions were subject to profit taking sales.

SEA WARFARE.

It is one of the minor disadvantages of life in Cologne that readers cannot very readily lay their hands on the latest contributions to letters. Even when it is possible to procure a coveted book the difficulties of transport place a stern restraint upon extravagance of purchase. Thus we have often to content ourselves with a glance at captivating titles and tantalising reviews. There is, however, some pleasure in building literary castles in the air and giving rein to an imagination which glibly constructs the fabric of unread literature. The phantom world may have its dangers, but it is not without its joys. What has M. Henry Bordeaux, for example, to say within the covers of "Sur le Rhin"? He knew the cities of the Rhineland before war maimed the face of Europe in 1914, and he followed the triumphal march of the French Army into these cities in the closing days of 1918. Is he a herald of literary craftsmen who will make the literature of France in excelsis vie in fascination with that of France in profundis? His is a hard task.

Then there is another book which attracts our attention. Sir Reginald Custance has lately published a volume entitled "War at Sea; Modern Theory and Ancient Practice." He seeks to show that naval policy has a notable tradition. Now the late Captain Mahan proved for all time that sea-power has been the decisive element in warfare. That is a truth which Englishmen have easily learned, and it is a truth which our foes have learned with sorrow. Alfred the Great, Henry the Fifth, Queen Elizabeth, Oliver Cromwell — these are but a few of the far-seeing statesmen who knew the value of sea mastery. Blake served his country well in the seventeenth-century war against Spain; in the Seven Years' War of the eighteenth century it was the British Navy which frustated the French designs of Dupleix in India and Montcalm in Canada, and Hawke and his fellows played a gallant part in world politics; and in the stern struggle of the Napoleonic wars was it not Nelson who made possible the triumph of Wellington? Last of all, the achievements of the Grand Fleet in the campaign that is drawing to an end prove conclusively the paramount influence of sea power. Yes, naval policy has a glorious tradition.

But Sir Reginald Custance goes further. In his opinion sea warfare has not only traditions but continuity of strategy. He sees clearly enough that in the Persian and Peloponnesian wars the influence of sea power was of vital importance, and he gives himself the task of going back to Herodotus and Thucydides that he may recast their vivid accounts of naval battles in the light of modern theories of war. It is curious to read that the flanking tactics used by Themistocles at Salamis are still the foundation of sea strategy. We cannot follow the author in his detailed narration of battles fought in the latter part of the fifth century B.C. To do so demands expert knowledge of a perplexing period of Greek history and considerable acquaintance with naval technique. In no spirit of criticism we remark that it is now well-nigh impossible to paint a full and accurate picture of these battles in all of their details. Yet a good case is made out for the ancient history of a sea strategy which we are too apt to reckon modern. Sir Reginald Custance claims that the theory of naval war which he propounds is the same as that used by the victors in the Persian and Peloponnesian wars, and that our country has been defended for more than three centuries on the basis of that theory.

It is all very interesting and scientific—and first a little depressing. Have we not evolved any master strategy in English seamanship? Are Nicostratus and Pharmio still our exemplars despite England's long and honourable naval history? Humility and reverence are good for the soul, and we need not chafe at our backwardness, But there is something more to be said even by the amateurs. Let it be granted that naval strategy from earliest days has been an attack "on the wings," and that we have not improved on such strategy. That does not carry us very far. Flanking movements are naturally as old as the days when one man quarrelled with another—they are instructive movements of attack. It is possible to put so much emphasis on the broad lines of strategy that too little attention is paid to two elements that must be taken into account. There is first of all the ever increasing tactics that are necessary before strategy can play its part, and tactics have been altered in strict accordance with the alteration of the design, size, speed, and armament of naval shipping. These are not unimportant as the present campaign has shown. To say that "Arginusae was the prototype of Trafalgar" is not more illuminating than to say that Trafalgar was the prototype of Jutland. The second element is the human. A vast deal must ever depend on the personnel of the Navy. We do not belittle strategy and tactics, but we must never forget the dauntless bravery and initiative of men like Drake, Hawke, and Nelson. Have we not heard even in these last days of "the Nelson touch"?

THE QUESTION OF TONGUES.

A FURTHER APPEAL TO THE YOUTH OF GREAT BRITAIN.

IV.

WILLIAM ROBERT PATTERSON, F.R.G.S. ETC.

Present conditions have brought with them a renewal of trade. That we desire to recover lost trade and to renew our dealings with other lands—these dealings having been temporarily suspended during hostilities—is beyond denial. And in order to be successful in our negotiations with foreign merchants we must be first in the field, and, more important still, we must know the languages they speak. You young fellows who have taken over, in such excellent spirit, the work that our indomitable armies performed for our country, have also a duty to perform for yourselves and for the prestige of our nation. Do you realise that every individual success materially helps toward the success of one's mother-country? Perhaps you have not thought of this, but it is so. That is why Great Britain is so great and so revered by other powers. Britain's greatness came, to a great extent, from individual effort and not absolutely from national policy. Each of you has the power and opportunity of taking a giant step towards the maintenance of the prestige of the finest, noblest and biggest Empire that our world has ever known, an Empire that is respected by all for its integrity and it's desire for justice. Be proud of your land and strive for it's advancement! Endeavour to know as much as possible of the language of the country whither you intend to travel, since, by so doing, you lay the foundation of successful enterprise. This may not be done all in a day. The acquisition of a sound knowledge of any new tongue requires much patience and steady and continual application. Do not be misled by advertisements that profess to teach you a foreign language in a few weeks. or you will soon become disheartened. You must work hard. Who knows but that you who read this article may not be able, in some years' time, to perform some act or do some business for which the country will thank you! Sometimes our country is slow to thank —but it does so in the end, and the good feeling of satisfaction is ever with you.

Since you have plenty of time there is no reason why you should not learn well more than one language. For business purposes the four most useful languages in the future, will be English, French, Spanish and German.

(1) English will be spoken in almost all parts of the world, but—
(2) French will be needed by us in French transactions and for diplomacy.
(3) Spanish is essential for trade with Spain and all important countries in South America with the exception of Brazil, where Portuguese is spoken.
(4) German will be needed for many reasons—trade, diplomatic, military, etc, and I advise everyone to learn this tongue.

The very fact that German prisoners in England were studying Spanish during their captivity should suggest to the British that they intend to secure all possible trade in South America, a continent which can produce almost everything in bulk. And the Germans will not be our only competitors! I appeal to you young soldiers here and to the youth of our country—learn languages!

ON SHRUGGING SHOULDERS.

Shrug your shoulders! It is the art of living. That is why the gesture is so characteristic of the French, who, above all others, have mastered and developed the science of how to live and how to extract the most conscious enjoyment out of life.

Is trouble imminent? Take all the means you can against it and then—shrug your shoulders. Probably it will never arrive. One of the wisest things I ever saw was pinned up over the desk in a certain Town Major's office. It read thus:—"To-day is the to-morrow that we worried about yesterday; but it didn't happen!"

That was a shrug, if you like, and an invitation to future shrugging!

Suppose the trouble does arrive. Well, it is there, and must be dealt with. That's duty. But after all—and in ten year's time!—(Here followeth a shrug).

Or it is (how rarely!) so great as to make all the difference to our future. Well, what must be, must. Kismet. Why pile Pelion upon Osea by adding worry to trouble? Accept it, and shrug your shoulders.

Care killed the cat, says the adage. I don't know whether a cat can shrug her shoulders; but if she could, she might, I am sure, have doubled her allotted span and lived eighteen lives before succumbing to care. And we, if less endowed with repetitive life than poor Pussy, may at least prolong and sweeten our existence by this simple gymnastic exercise.

Nothing is so terrible as it seems at first, as the man said who committed bigamy and was left large legacies by each of his mothers-in-law. We have to turn corners in life's road (the oftener the better) and we never know what is round each corner. It may be a bank, merry with daffodils, or a maiden flushed with the Spring; or alternatively, it may be a mad bull. In the latter case, you have but to climb the nearest tree, admire the landscape, and—shrug your shoulders, while you hope the brute will go away well before closing time.

Does she nag? Shrug at her. Did that remittance not arrive? Shrug! Is "demobilization," like "Mesopotamia," a biessèd word of greater length than meaning? Shrug on. It commits you to nothing and saves you from much.

But the shrugging, of course, does not preclude necessary action. Only, it ensures that such action is taken in a philosophic and temperate manner; therefore probably with success. The Frenchman who, after four years and more of war and absence from his family home to the last of the old French line, comes back and finds it a ruin, does not sit down and mourn. No, he shrugs his shoulders and sets to work to reconstruct as far as may be a new world from the ashes of the old. I have seen it, and admired. It is the shrug that saves him from collapse and despair and gives him strength to start again.

Sometimes—often—we can change our Fate: but not always. Even then we can shrug away its menace of woe, and so, head high, heart undaunted, accept what comes and laugh at and with it. To meet what is good with appreciation, what is bad and inevitable with a shrug of the shoulders—that is the art of life. A.W.

A TRIP UP THE RHINE.

52nd D.L.I.

Saturday was an ideal day for a river trip, and right glad we were when the morning dawned in the freshness and beauty which augured well a still more glorious day.

We commenced embarkation at 8.45 and at 9.30 we cast off and settled down for the day's outing. Within two hours' time Bonn was reached, with its bridge, its spires, and its ancient university. Many were the snapshots taken of this historic town. The Drachenfels now came into fuller view and one realised that the once familiar rift valleys of the Rhine actually did exist and were full of the most gorgeous scenery. The cultivation of the vine on the western slopes aroused much interest; the patches of buttercups mingling with green pasture land and the perfect brown of the ploughed fields completed the beauty of the scene. Unkel, Linz and Rheinbrohl, amongst many other riverside places, all attracted attention and admiration. The peculiarities of each village were topics of much conversation and reference to guide books, whilst the forests and scattered ruins all helped to complete the picture.

Meanwhile, dinner was served, and all credit is due to those whose labours succesfully culminated in that happy expression of satisfaction seen on all faces—a sure sign that the other half of man was not being neglected!

At 2.30 we commenced our return journey. On turning round we obtained a wonderful sight of the river in its upper course. The visual revision of sights already seen for the first time but a few moments before did not fail to locate many extra points of beauty and interest hitherto unnoticed.

The band discoursed sweet music throughout the trip, and this, coupled with the "impromptus" so dear to Tommy's heart, contributed much to the happiness of all.

E. B. B.

THIS YEAR : NEXT YEAR—

A young soldier while home on leave got married. A year later his wife wrote to him informing him of the good news that she had given birth to a boy, asking him at the same time when his next leave was due, also how long he thought the war would last.

Reply from the husband: "Dear wife.—I am very pleased with the news that you have sent me, but I do not know when my next leave is coming off, neither do I know how long the war will last, but should the boy be called up before I get my next leave you can give him a parcel to bring out to me."

OUR MESS.

CHAPTER ONE.

It seems — nay, it is — a very short time ago since I used to parade for meals, and, armed to the teeth with knife, fork, and spoon, with martial tread hie myself unto the huts of "grub," alias Dining Hall.

In those days it was best for each man to look after himself, and woe unto the sixteenth on the table.

I must confess that very soon I was a past-master at the noble art of looking after myself. Months passed. . . .

One day, I arose and found myself exalted on high, i.e., I was a Sergeant. I washed, dressed, and cleaned my buttons and my boots, and brushed my hair, before "Cook-house" blew.

I can recommend this method of procedure to all N.C.O.'s. It is not only highly beneficial to the health, but is very easing to the conscience should Educational Lectures be given, with especial emphases laid on those points of etiquette.

I sat down, fortunately not alone in my fulsome glory, and was astonished to observe that the table was clothed, with a brave attempt at civilian customs. There was also a knife and fork. At first I was somewhat shaky as to which edge of the knife to use, having inherited from my forefathers an intense horror of bloodshed, but at length decided on the thinner.

The waiter brought in the breakfast and tea, both of which I consumed with great relish.

In those days the general atmosphere of the Mess was really pleasing. For one thing, we had a genial President. He had a happy knack of using nicknames. Mine was "Crawfy" (in consequence of my enormous capacity for consuming Crawford's biscuits — in which delectable preparation I was at that time wont to indulge to an indigestible degree).

There was a piano in my room. Many a Sergeant, temporarily posing as a connoisseur in musical instruments, has gravely told me that the case was worth an enormous sum.

Of that I had no doubt. But I could not overlook the fact that its interior had been sadly deranged by the pouring in (on divers jubilant and festive occasions) of much Pale Ale, Guiness' Stout, and large whiskies — not to mention many choice examples of the glass manufacturer's art.

When demobilization became a thing of flesh and blood, changes were many.

In the first flush of his enthusiasm the Demobilisation Officer had effected the departure of numerous crossing-sweepers, page-boys, and printers'-devils, and many other highly important pivotal men, whose absence was causing such a paralysis in the industrial world. My twin-brother, however—his occupation almost equalling the aforesaid in point of skill and ingenuity — was overlooked, and consequently is still in receipt of two salaries instead of one . . .

Old faces disappeared, and new ones came into our ken. Not before we had given a dance as a farewell celebration.

There was a huge attendance of hungry W.A.A.C.'s, whose pedestrian feats did not prove any one of them to be perfect demonstrators of the terpsichorean art.

So passed the old, so came the new.

With the latter entered a new President. He cast his eye somewhat scornfully over the collection of N.C.O.'s before him; grumbled miserably as to the scarcity of his rations; and when he had finished, proceeded to elaborate to us at great length his novel scheme for the improvement of the Battalion.

I believe that was the only time I ever fell asleep at the breakfast-table.

Nothing was ever quite right for him. Orderly Sergeants, reporting hastily at his bunk at 7 a.m., were instantly ordered to put themselves on a charge; privates heard with bated breath how C.S.M.'s were "brought up" — whom theretofore they had regarded as gods in miniature; and, hearing, trembled for their own small lives.

We moved, with much blowing of trumpets, to Germany.

We discovered that we were provided with a Mess worthy of Julius Caesar's batman-in-chief, so decided to hold in a future not far remote a "Smoker" as a celebration of our arrival.

FAMOUS BUILDINGS.

THE Q. M. STORES.

A Quarter-Master's stores derives its name from its interesting custom of issuing a "quarter" of the amount of stores applied for. It is presided over by a quartermaster, who is a gentleman of quiet and unassuming mien, and when attacked covers himself with indents and talks backwards.

Like the Orderly Room, the Quarter-Master's Stores is issued with one sentry (G.S. Pattern, Part worn) but unlike the former case this factotum's job is no sinecure, as, without his presence most of the hard-won loot that overflows outside would swiftly return to its rightful owner. A Q.M. Stores may be described as any building or barn filled with a miscellaneous collection of goods (I nearly said "tripe"). Here may be found axes, flint-stone, soldiers, commonavarious, chain armour as supplied to the crusaders, shell shock, sawyer stores from the field of Waterloo, tons of alleged "Barrack Furniture," and a few odd socks. All these priceless relics have taken generations of Q.M.'s to "scrounge" and therefore are guarded with zealous care by a horde of hired plunderers. Most reputable stores have a special heirloom which is their one pride and joy. One unit I knew adopted as its "lucky charm" a few thousand feet of barbed wire more hopelessly entangled than the Peace Conference, while another famous Battalion would have sooner given away its last rum jar than have parted with 50 four-feet spiral spikes which were used in older days to prod Mastadons out of funk holes. It is needless to say that frequent attacks are made on this treasure trove by unscrupulous people armed with indents, but these raids are nearly always beaten off by a wily diplomat known as a R.Q.M.S., who informs the raider (if he is an officer) that he must indent on A.F.Z. 99¾ in triplicate, countersigned by a Field Marshal and certified by Royalty, and such indents can only be accepted between February 30th and 31st. Sometimes as a balm to the officer's lacerated feelings, the R.Q.M.S. will magnificently dole out a few care-worn oil-bottles and moth-eaten pull-throughs. It is incorrect to assume that no clothing is ever issued from the stores, as I have irrefutable evidence that there have been such issues, but in this case the issue must be recommended by a certain high person, and this is generally done by the same person pointing out on an inspection that whisker-edged tunics are no longer considered chic in the best regiments. This generally results in the blushing hero of this episode exchanging one old tunic, that he can wear, for one new one that he can't. Of course Q.M. stores should have a motto; such an institution would be incomplete without it. Our stores has one. I saw it yesterday. It was written in gold under the regimental crest and was displayed immediately above an obviously "scrounged" wash stand; it read thus:

"HONI SOIT QUI MAL'Y PENSE."

MYSTERIOUS JAZZ "LADY."

EASTERN DIVISION CONCERT PARTY'S GALA NIGHT AT SIEGBURG.

The Eastern Division Concert Party gave a gala night on Thursday at Siegburg. The theatre was filled, and the audience were keenly appreciative of the very fine performance given. This well-known concert party has still some of its old time members left, including Billy French, Jack Streets, Shiel Anderson, and Ted Lacey.

The triumph of the evening was "Some Jazz Band" by the whole party. Rumour has it that the pianist had been searching Germany for days, looking for dummy instruments. A weird and terrible noise was the result, and the imitation canteen bar, with the usual "No Soap, No Chocolate" notices appealed to the boys who have seen them so often in reality. Ted Lacey made a good female character and was very funny in "her" attempts to learn dancing. But who was the really beautiful "girl" that came on with the Jazz Band? All round I heard exclamations of surprise, until someone mentioned the name of a Mess servant.

The programme included a Charlie Chaplin film, and concluded with a one-act play entitled "The Library." The Concert Party will not be performing for a week or two as it is understood they are going on leave.

A NIGHT WITH THE "FRAGMENTS."

SOUTHERN DIVISION CONCERT PARTY AT THE DEUTSCHES THEATRE.

Anyone desirous of spending a pleasant evening can hardly do better than pay a visit to the Deutsches Theatre this week. The "Fragments" (Southern Divisional Concert Party) are putting on a fine programme of concerted sketches and variety turns which would do credit to a first class music-hall.

The opening item and chorus "Bohemia" is a scene in a cabaret in which the whole company are holding high revel, the sketches, "Mixed Milk" a domestic melodrama; "I dont want to get well," a hospital scene; and "Wedding Bells' are well put on and sustained throughout. A pretty Oriental number "Omar Khayyam" is also effective and was much appreciated.

As a comedian, Chas. Cavanagh would be hard to beat, whilst the individual turns by Alex Hill, (baritone) and Jas Taylor and H.V.O. Hughes (both "girls") were rendered in finely finished style.

Two duets "We'll have a Cottage" by Alex Hill and Billie Threlfall and "Home Town" by W. Ashes and H.V.O. Hughes are well staged and executed. Neville Giordans in "Devil may care" and B. Huxter, coloured coon dancer, contributed entertaining items and the whole show, supported as it is by a small but excellent orchestra, reflects much credit on the organisers and the Southern Division to which it belongs.

Y COY. DISORDERLY ROOM.

ENTERTAINING CONCERT BY HALLAMSHIRES' ARTISTES.

A very entertaining concert was given by C. Coy to the rest of the Battalion on Wednesday.

The programme commenced with a song by Pte. Hunt. Cpl. Martlock assisted with the violin and Sergt. Bennett presided at the piano. Lieut. Miller and Cpl. Thorn proved very popular with their famous double turn. Lieut Midley gave an amusing monologue, and a song "I hear you calling me" by Lieut Griffin was loudly applauded. L Cpl. Boyes gave a good impersonation of George Formby and the concert concluded with a humorous Sketch entitled "Y Coy Orderly Room," showing how a Coy. Orderly Room should not be conducted. C.S.M. Stone acted as O.C. Company; and Sergt. Dawes as Sgt.-Major.

The rest of the artistes were Sergt. Bennett, Sergt. Park, Cpl. Hyde, L/Cpl. Gill, L/Cpl. Boyes, and L/Cpl. Hewitt.

FOLK DANCING AT EUSKIRCHEN.

Saturday last was an anxious day for the lady folk dancers at Euskirchen. There was to be a demonstration by the men of the "E" Corps Signal Coy R.E., their teachers, and the lady folk dancers from Bonn who had come to assist for the occasion. The demonstration was held in the Y.M.C.A. Hall. The audience proved very appreciative, especially of the "Flamborough Sword Dance" and the winsome "29th of May." In regard to the former its intricate movements were most admirably executed by the pupils without any assistance from their teachers. The whole evening was a great success and the teachers and pupils must be congratulated upon such a result of three short weeks of hard and unobtrusive work.

CROSS COUNTRY RUN AT LIND.

An inter-Platoon Cross Country Run, held by "B" Company of the 53rd Bn., Royal Sussex Regiment, at Lind on Friday afternoon, produced excellent results despite the hot weather and heavy going along four miles of sandy ground.

Of the 30 odd competitors, L/C. Dix (7 Platoon) was first home, followed closely by Pte. Monk (8 Platoon), both receiving prizes and the congratulations of Lt.-Col. A. L. Thomson, D.S.O., the Commanding Officer.

The Competition proper was won by No. 8 Platoon with 106 points, No. 7 Platoon being second with 122 points. L/C. Ring (trainer), L/Cs. Evans and Aldridge, and Ptes. Monk, Newcombe, Parkes, Barnes, Buring, Murphy and Wheeler were the members of the winning team.

Hobbs 118.

Hobbs scored 118 in the second innings of the trial match at the Oval on Monday, this making two separate hundreds in the same match.

RHINELAND CRICKET.

WON BY AN INNINGS

17th BRIGADE R.F.A. v 1st BATT. KING'S REGT.

On Saturday a very enjoyable game was played at Neukirchen between the Cadres of the 17th Brigade R.F.A. and the 1st Batt. King's Regt. The gunners, thanks to several practice games and a knowledge of the contours of the ground, won by an innings and 24 runs.

ARMY TROOPS SPORTS.

It is pointed out for the information of those who may be in doubt on the point, that in connection with the Army Troops Athletic Sports to be held at Cologne on the 23rd and 24th May, the figures advertised indicate the value of the various prizes to be awarded and not that actual money will be presented to winners.

OUR CRICKET CUP.

OVER 150 ENTRIES FOR "THE COLOGNE POST" COMPETITION.

There has been a great rush of last minute entries for The Cologne Post Cricket Cup, bringing the total number to over 150.

Unfortunately, the secretaries of many competing clubs have failed to mention the location of their teams in their entries, and the work of grouping the leagues has been rendered enormously difficult in consequence.

However, things are now being sorted out satisfactorily and we hope to be able to publish to-morrow the composition of the six leagues into which it is proposed to divide the competitors. The fixtures will be arranged without delay and by next week the competition should be in smooth running order.

EXCITING FINISH AT ERP.

Much enthusiasm prevailed at Erp when 2/4 Duke of Wellington Regt. set out to win back the laurels they had lost the previous Monday. Capt. Bonds XI won the toss and elected to bat. They made only a very feeble show against the bowling of Lieut Lawes and C.Q.M.S., Stead, the whole side scoring the paltry total of 29. "Mr. Extras" accounted for 16 of the total.

"B" Coy started their innings full of confidence but were soon doomed to disappointment, no one being able to stand against the bowling of Lce. Cpl. Bond and North. The end came amidst great excitement the last wicket falling at 23. Details:

A LOCAL DERBY.

70 v. 263 SIEGE BATTERY.

The third meeting between these teams took place at Efferen on Monday. Each side had a win to their credit and the match under notice was in the nature of a decider.

Playing the cleverer football, 70 Siege Battery gained the victory by the odd goal in three, but the score does not by any means flatter the winners. The 70 Siege Battery were attacking for quite three-quarters of the game and the fact that they were only able to score twice speaks volumes for the clever display given by Nesbit. It was a desperate struggle to the end.

The teams were:— 70 Siege Battery:— Gumby, Bombr. Garnham, Maycroft, Manson, George Smith, Hinchcliffe, Allen, Strachan, Watson, McKinley and Stevens.

263 Siege Battery:—Cpl. Nesbit, Sergt. Rothwell, Bdr. Tilcock, Antrobus, Simpson, Godridge, Smith, Broom, Goulds, Inkle and Poulton.

"KNOTS" v. "POULTICE WALLAHS."

An eleven of the 16th Field Ambulance visited the 1—5th South Staffords at Commern last week only to find the "Knots" in their usual winning mood. This was perhaps unfortunate for the "Poultice Wallahs" but they had the unique distinction of penetrating the Staffords' defence, a feat which no other team had succeeded in doing for some months.

From the kick off the visitors caught the home team's defence napping and the inside right scored. A quarter of an hour from the start, Pte. Townsend, the "Knots" left back, equalized with a splendid drive. Shortly afterwards Pte. Ball gave the home team the lead with a similar shot. The visiting forwards found a stumbling block in the "Knots" pair of backs, Cpl. Chambers and Pte. Townsend.

Although the Staffords won by 5—1 the score would have been heavier had the forwards not shot so wildly. The visitors played with one man short in the second half, one player being injured.

THE SPORTING HALLAMSHIRES.

Not content with football as the only sport, the Hallamshires branched out last week with boat-racing, cross-country running and tug-of-war, besides soccer.

The boat-racing proved very exciting and was held on the Blucher Park lake, C. Coy winning. C. Coy also pulled off the cross-country run and the tug-of-war, Capt Sykes assisting in the latter. Unfortunately for D. Coy they were too good in Soccer and carried home the points.

"HAT TRICK" AT KALK.

BRITISH "DOUGH-BOYS" FOOTBALL MATCH.

The R.A.S.C. Bakers, Kalk, played the R.A.S.C. Bakers, Ehrenfeld, at football last week, the match being played at Kalk before a good attendance. After some hard luck Chapman opened the score for the home team, Forsyth adding a second goal soon after. Five minutes from half-time the visitors scored from a free-kick.

The home team now had the sun and wind at their backs and it was not long before Chapman passed four players and beat the goalkeeper with a low shot. Five minutes later the same player found the net again, thus performing the "hat trick." Ten minutes from the finish Forsyth put the home team farther ahead, and soon afterwards Aitkin scored again for the home team and Green for the visitors which brought the game to an end with the score:—

R.A.S.C. Bakers, Kalk 6; R.A.S.C. Bakers, Ehrenfeld 2.

D 104 BDE R.F.A. v. 39th BDE. DETAILS.

A very interesting match was played Miel on Wednesday between the above teams. After about twenty minutes play Gr. Monks opened the score for D. Battery. About 10 minutes later Lieut. Pollock equalized. Half time arrived with the scores equal.

Play in the second half was very fast and exciting, during which Gr. Brown, the D. Battery goalkeeper, made some fine saves. After 15 minutes play L/Cpl. Richardson put 39th Brigade ahead. After this reverse D. Battery pressed hotly and their efforts were rewarded by Bdr. Duff equalising two minutes from time. An interesting game ended in a draw of two goals each.

A COY. v. D COY. 52nd BN. RIFLE BRIGADE.

3rd Light Brigade Competition.—A ding-dong game played at Konigshoven between the above companies on Monday evening ended in a win for A Coy. The winning goal resulted from a penalty (netted by Lieut Galbraith) after extra time had been played. Both teams played very fast games.

D Company proved the more scientific team and but for the fact that Kempster (A Company's goalkeeper) was at the top of his form, would doubtless have netted on more than one occasion.

SPORTING ITEMS IN BRIEF.

Rugby International.

The Rugby International between France and New Zealand at Toulouse on Sunday resulted in a win for the latter by 14 points to 13.

Schoolboys' International.

The International football game (Scotland v. England) for schoolboys attracted 20,000 spectators at Glasgow and there was much enthusiasm over the home side's victory by 5 goals to 0.

Bury's New Manager.

Mr. Fred Hargreaves, of Blackburn, having withdrawn for domestic reasons from the position of secretary and manager to the Bury Football Club, Will Cameron, the well-known player, formerly with Blackburn Rovers and Bury, and later with Hull City, has been appointed.

Cambridge U. v. Edinburgh U.

At Cambridge on Saturday Cambridge University beat Edinburgh University at tennis by 8 matches to love. One match was left unfinished owing to rain.

A North Hants Cricketer.

Geo. Thompson, the Northants cricketer, has not signed for Burnley, and says he does not expect to play cricket this season.

Future of Rugby in Wales.

"I think the future of the Rugby game in Wales rests entirely with the sportsmanship of the players," said Geo. Hirst, the famous Welsh international and wing threequarter in discussing with a representative of 'The People' the question: Will Soccer supersede Rugby in the Principality?

Northern Com. O.; N. Zealand 33.

The visit of the New Zealand team to Leeds, on Saturday aroused considerable interest and a crowd of 7,000 people assembled on the Headingly ground to see the Colonials win by 3 goals and 6 tries to 0.

WILLARD v. DEMPSEY.

POINTS FOR AND AGAINST THE CHAMPION.

In a letter to Jack Skelly, of "The Yonkers' Herald," an old Chicago friend says he never saw Willard looking better than on the occasion of a recent visit to the champion. He is not hog fat, as reported, and should not experience much trouble to get down to about 17st 7lb and be in good condition for Dempsey. Willard remarked the forthcoming fight would most likely be his last, and he was anxious to show the public that he was a real champion before he retired.

In sizing Willard up the same correspondent gives him the following eight advantageous points over Dempsey:

1. The monster champion's superior weight and height. Some forty pounds or more heavier and 6½in. taller.
2. Has the greatest reach—83½in.
3. Has a greater defence, and is harder to hit on the jaw, especially.
4. Willard is by far the best boxer in most every way.
5. Jess doesn't waste many blows nor energy by any tiresome footwork.
6. The champion can deliver a stiff straight left or right, and doesn't leave an opening by swinging wildly.
7. Is remarkably cool under fire, and never takes a rash chance.
8. Jess can stand more heavy bombardment without showing any apparent effect than any man I ever saw in the ring.

FOUR POINTS AGAINST WILLARD.

1. The big champion's age is somewhat of a mystery. Jess declares he's only 32, while others say he's 40 and over. I believe he's about 38, which makes him 11 years older than Dempsey. This difference should certainly be some considerable advantage to "Jack the Giant-killer."
2. Willard has been out of the ring too long, while Dempsey has been banging away to beat the band for the last two years at least.
3. Jess is apt to be rather slow up against such a very speedy, dashing opponent, who'll fight at a terrific pace to try and confuse the champion.
4. Too much weight will be a great disadvantage to Jess, and he must work off his superfluous flesh without weakening his strength and stamina.

BOXING AT NATIONAL SPORTING CLUB.

At the National Sporting Club on Monday in a twenty rounds contest for the light heavies belt stakes and a purse amounting to £1000 Eddie McGoorty America beat Harry Reeve in the third round.

Tal Jones beat Billy Ralph, the referee stopping the contest after the eighth round.

1st ROYAL DRAGOONS v. 51st HAMPSHIRES.

The football team of the 1st Royal Dragoons visited Wermelskirchen last week and played a good even game against the 51st Hampshires. Ellis (inside left) put through the first goal for the Hampshire team and just before half time Dawes (R. D. inside left) equalized.

In the second half the R.D. scored again pretty quickly, but the Hampshires were getting their full share of the ball and after a good run up Applegate put through the shot which brought the score to two all.

SPORT AT HILGEN.

Very keen football was witnessed on Saturday last when D Coy 5th Devons defeated B Coy by 3 goals to one. D Coy have a well balanced side and taken in hand should provide formidable opposition for any Coy team.

Later, on the same ground, a Battalion team played the return with the No 3 Div. Train and after a very ordinary game the Battalion team suddenly sprang into life and put on a few goals largely through the good individual play of the C.S.M.

Next Saturday a small Athletic Meeting is taking place including a cross-country run.

The native costume of the Cheyenne Indian chief, Don White Eagle, who died on a French battlefield, has been presented to the American Museum of Natural History.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

Wednesday, May 14, 1919.

Wind light mainly Easterly. Fine. Day visibility fair. Warm.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

(With an Occasional Entertainments Note.)

Tennis Court Dimensions.

A large number of correspondents have recently enquired the dimensions of a tennis court and several times we have given the measurements in the "Answers to Correspondents" column. For the benefit of those who are still at fault, however, and in the hope that many may in future be saved the trouble of writing, here are the details again: The court itself is 78 feet by 36 feet, but there should be plenty of room all round it, in order to avoid a cramped feeling. It should be laid so that the sun shall pass across it in line with the net. The outside lines having been marked, the position of the net should be arranged across the centre. The remaining lines should then be marked from the side lines. The centre oblong is 42 feet long by 27 feet wide, which means that the distance from the side lines is 4 feet 6 inches.

Bureau for Changing Kit.

An "Army of Oc." officer sends along rather a bright idea. He suggests that in view of the many officers who are being demobilised and by reason of the difficulty generally experienced in renewing kit, a bureau should be instituted whereat personal items might be sold or exchanged. The object of the individual homeward bound is to have as few goods and chattels as possible to hike along with him. He may, in a moment of reckless extravagance, recently have purchased a pair of field boots, a compass, or a pair of leggings, for which articles he will have not the slightest use in future. This is where the said bureau comes in. A list is here kept of all officers' requirements; the vendor consults this and is thus placed in touch with possible clients and so the business goes on merrily.

Cavalry Division Sports Club.

Like poets, successful sports secretaries are born, not made. They have to possess the organising ability of an election agent, the tact of a chancellor of the exchequer and a hide as impervious to personal abuse as a "rhino" is to pea-shooter ammunition. The Cavalry Division—which now controls all its sports through the Headquarters Divisional Sports Clubs—are therefore lucky in having a man who possesses these qualities to undertake the sport secretarial duties. Driver W.E. Pinnell, R.E., who is the individual referred to, has had considerable experience in such a sphere of duty, having, among other similar appointments, been hon. sec. of the Bristol and Surburban Association Football League. It is therefore safe to prophesy that the Cavalry Division will not suffer anything through lack of attention to detail in the "pen or ink" department.

Challenge Night "Kaput."

So the great challenge night that was to have produced champion exponents of boxing, wrestling, weight lifting and other things has definitely been knocked on the head. I always thought that Lieut. Onions, who light-heartedly undertook the organising of this event, had not a very enviable job and after the trouble he has had in connection with it, he must be rather disappointed at the unsatisfactory result of his efforts. The project has had to be abandoned on account of the unsuitability of the weights of the various aspirants in the proposed contests and the withdrawal of several of the prospective entrants. Those matches that were fixed up, however, are not to be turned down altogether, but will be contested at some suitable date probably at the Apollo Theatre, Cologne.

THE RAMBLER.

BATTALION SPORT.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S RIFLES AT NIEDERAUSSEM.

The Battalion sports of the Queen Victoria's Rifles (9th London Rgt.) Light Division, were held on Saturday last at Niederaussem and although no records were broken some remarkably good sporting events resulted.

Amongst the best performances Lieut. Gracie's long jump 22 feet, high jump 5 feet and cricket ball 99 yards led the way and did much towards "C" Company getting second place in the Company Championship.

Rfn. Walker's long jump 15—11½ feet, and high jump 4 feet 11 ins. were distinctly good efforts, considering he was badly handicapped throught want of proper shoes, and helped with Rfn. Skinner's cricket ball throw of 85 yards to secure second place in these events for "B" Coy.

In the running events "D" Coy through Rfn. Penn secured the 100 yards and quarter mile. L.-Cpl. Paines gained the half mile for "A" Coy.

The relay race and mile fell to "B" Coy, L.-Cpl. Keen winning the latter in magnificent style and with L.-Cpl. Stevens and Rfn. Watson helped to gain the former race notwithstanding a good fight put up by "C" Coy.

The tug of war also went to "B" Coy who outpulled "A" Coy and showed what a highly trained team can do when up against a heavier but less highly trained team.

COY. CHAMPIONSHIP.

The number of points secured by the respective companies was as follows:

1st, "B", 25½ points;
2nd, "C", 17 points;
3rd, "D", 9½ points;
4th, "A", 8 points.

466 BATTERY R.F.A. v. D. BATTERY 104 BRIGADE.

This match was played on the ground of the former at Buschoven on Saturday afternoon in hot weather. The first half was very evenly contested and the only score was a goal for the 466 Battery by Driver Smellie their inside left.

On the resumption of play during a scramble in the visitors' goalmouth Driver Loades unfortunately put through his own goal. Thus 466 Battery were now two goals ahead. On the re-start D. Battery pressed and Gunner Downie (outside right) scored. This ended the scoring and an enjoyable and pleasant game ended in a win for the home team by two goals to one.

The teams are hoping to meet again next Saturday on D/104's ground at Miel.

POLO SEASON OPENED.

The polo season opened at Ranelagh and Hurlingham on Monday in a match between Hurlingham and the Wanderers. The former won by the odd goal in five after a keenly contested game.

AGRICULTURE AND EDUCATION.

TWO MILLION POUNDS FOR RESEARCH.

The Government proposes (if Parliament agrees) to expend during the next five years about £2,000,000 on agricultural research and agricultural education. Substantial scholarships will be offered to men who have distinguished themselves in the natural sciences at the universities, and a certain number will be selected for employment in universities and other institutions Research is already carried on at Cambridge, Rothamsted, Bristol, and Reading; but whereas at present there are probably not more than 40 men in England and Wales engaged on pure research in agricultural science, it is hoped that during the next decade or so the number may be raised to about 150.

Another feature will be the encouragement of higher agricultural education in colleges by means of grants and in other ways. There are about a dozen agricultural colleges in England and Wales and it is hoped to bring the farmer into more sympathetic touch with them by the creation of more demonstration farms and of a keener sense of the general value of science in agriculture.

Most of the education committees of the counties handle agricultural and horticultural education and, as a rule, they maintain a travelling staff which advises farmers, organizes classes, and so on. Adequate funds will now be available to treat these committees generously. For every £1 the local authorities expend on agricultural education they will now receive at least £2 from the State. It is believed that the majority of the counties will set up farm schools or farm institutes where men may go for winter courses and women for summer courses, and where school teachers may be instructed in the agricultural and horticultural subjects to be taught in the new continuation schools. Lancashire, Yorkshire, Essex; and a few other counties have spent money freely in the past in this way, but many counties have done little or nothing.

ALEXANDRA DAY.

FOURTEEN MILLION ROSES.

Alexandra Day will be celebrated on June 25 in every metropolitan borough and nearly 400 provincial towns. Orders have been given for 14,000,000 roses, and in London alone there will be 10,000 lady sellers attired in white costumes with summer hats garlanded with dainty pink roses. Hundreds of depots have been arranged, and from these the vendors will replenish their baskets as stocks are disposed of. Designs have been made for decorating business premises, private residences and motorcars with roses.

The proceeds of the sales are devoted to hospitals and churches, in which Queen Alexandra takes personal interest, and as many ordinary subscriptions have been transferred to war charities, the need this year is more acute than usual. Previous Alexandra Days have raised £700,000, and it is confidently hoped that this year's appeal will realise a total of £1,000,000.

MAIMED SOLDIERS AND JOY RIDES.

The County of London Royal Army Service Corps, Motor Transport (Volunteers), (private car owners' section) have restarted their work for the coming season by taking for a drive through Surrey one hundred maimed men from the Roehampton Military Hospital and entertaining them to tea. Those who have sufficient accommodation within a radius of twenty-five miles of London are urged to invite to tea one hundred wounded men on any Sunday they may choose. All arrangements for their transport in open touring cars will be made by the Corps—we require only the accommodation.

THE INDISPENSABLES.

WAR MEDAL DESIGN.

LONDON ARTIST WINS £500 PRIZE.

The question of the design of the British war medal to be issued in commemoration of the war was discussed by the authorities in 1917, and it was decided that a Committee should be assembled, consisting of representatives of the Royal Academy, British Sculptors, British Museum, National Gallery, and Royal Mint, to determine the best method of obtaining the most artistic and suitable design. It was decided that the design should be thrown open to competition among prominent artists. and invitations were therefore issued to 96 probable competitors. In response to these invitations, designs were submitted by 51 artists. These designs were submitted to the committee, and the works of the following artists were judged to be the three best in order of merit: —

1. Mr. Wm. McMillan, 14a, Cheyne-row, Chelsea.
2. Mr. Chas. Wheeler, Justice Walk Studios, Chelsea.
3. Mr. C.L.G. Doman, 18, Bonneville Rd., Clapham Park.

These three winners have been awarded monetary prizes the first £500, the second £150, and the third £75. Mr. McMillian's design will be the one adopted for the reverse of the medal.

47-HOUR WEEK.

Ministry of Labour Announcement. At a meeting of the Joint Industrial Council for Local Authorities' Non-Trading Services (Manual Workers), (England and Wales), held in London on Friday, the following resolution on maximum hours of work was unanimously adopted:—

That it be a recommendation to all Local Authorities that the working week for day men and women (manual workers) in non-trading departments shall not be more than 47 hours, exclusive of meal times.

That any change in hours implied by this resolution shall not entail any loss of pay.

That this resolution shall come into operation as and from the last pay-day in May.

That the question of a one or two-break day be left for local settlement.

That in no case where a smaller number of hours are worked shall that number be increased.

THE RESTORATION OF EUROPE.

A mass meeting will be held at the Albert Hall on May 19, at 8 p.m., to bring home to the general public the necessity for a Peace of Reconciliation, and to urge the desirability of International Co-operation, equal economic opportunity for all peoples, and generous relief for the famine stricken districts of Europe. Lord Parmoor will take the chair, and among the speakers will be Earl Beauchamp, the Bishop of Southwark, Lieut.-Col. Sir A. Pearce Gould, Lieut.-Com. Kenworthy (M.P. for Central Hull), Miss Maude Royden, and Mr. Robert Smillie.

IN STRIKE LAND.

LONDON TUBE MEN.

The difficulty which has arisen among the London tube men over the question of meals relief on Sundays was satisfactorily settled yesterday, after an interview between a committee of the men and Mr. H. F. Blain, operating manager of the traffic combine. Mr. Blain recently stated that the trouble had been considerably magnified. "In reality," he said, "it was quite a small dispute and was settled after about five minutes conversation."

AIRCRAFT WORKER'S THREAT.

Trouble has arisen among a considerable section of aircraft workers in London over the system of payment by results. Various executives of the affiliated unions in the aircraft industry have, it is stated, decided that the bonus system should be abolished, and that all members employed by firms who retain the system should cease work unless their demand is met. The workers of all large firms have taken definite action.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

BE PREPARED!

Comment anent the Peace Terms are beginning to wane. The papers have given their impressions and now, in the light of possible negotiations, all are awaiting future developments.

We can safely say that the majority of the Germans expect to see many alterations and a considerable slackening of the grip by which Germany is held. The people realise, just as do we, that there can be no shuffling within this grip, unless the Allies think fit to relieve the tension. Naturally the nation, as a whole, is eager to learn its fate, and the Government is being urged from all sides to make a quick decision.

In view of this restlessness, and in order to relieve the anxiety, the Vorwärts, the official organ of the Socialist party portrays to the people the necessity for calm and slow deliberation. The time between now and the 21st May, it says, must be used in preparing an answer worthy of the German people. At the end of this period we must say, as a people through our delegation, what we intend to do; and before that time no power on earth can force us to open our lips. That shall be done as a whole, the writer further states, but it is allowed for any individual to say to his compatriots "be prepared."

Feeding their Pigs.

The Rheinische Zeitung finds cause to comment in a recent article from the pen of Renaudel, France's leading socialist, and the successor of Jaurés. It will be remembered that Renaudel, unlike many of his compatriots, declared the terms too stiff, and offered to Germany several suggestions with regard to the probable negotiations.

It is not a difficult task for Renaudel to offer these propositions, says the Cologne Socialist paper, but what would happen if these were to fail. "The Allies, in all peacefulness of mind, can make a counter attack by re-strengthening the blockade and occupying Westphalia. Would Mr. Renaudel then give us help?

"The cry of the East Prussian noblemen is easily understood; they are sitting in the castles, feeding their pigs and planting their cabbages. The Indedepents and Communists, however, have a new iron in the fire; they promise peace to our people, a peace which the Government would refuse in faithful adherence to the demagogy which finally brought victory to the Bolshevists against Kerenski."

Request or Demand?

"The world needs peace; the world shall have peace." With those words Prince Lichnowsky, late Ambassador in London, concludes his letter to the Press. The Prince urges the necessity for great alterations in the Treaty. He says that to accept such terms as are at present disclosed would mean not only political and economical annihilation, but also the deprivation of any esteem the neutral states, friends or foes, have for the Germans.

Needless to say this esteem vanished long ago. "Peace is just as necessary to the Allies as it is to the Germans," says the ex-Ambassador, "and I look forward with certainty to a change in the public opinion which will enable us to negotiate and render the terms more profitable to ourselves. The results which would necessarily arise from the breaking-off of negotiations are trifling when compared with the request to sign the Peace Treaty.

NEWS IN BRIEF.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

The Editor, in publishing letters from Correspondents, will use his own discretion, and if necessary, limit the publishing of correspondence on any subject whatever. It must be understood, however that he is not responsible for the views stated.

All communications for this column should be brief and to the point, and preference will be given to those which bear the writers' signatures for publication. No letter will be published unless accompanied by rank name, and unit of sender, which are needed for the purpose of reference.

Many letters of a perverse nature have reached the office, and the Editor wishes to point out that these only cause waste of time both to the writer and the Editor himself. Letters of this nature will not be published.

WESLEYANS IN COLOGNE.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.—As the Senior Chaplain of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, may I request the favour of the publicity of your paper, to call the attention of all Wesleyans in the Army of the Rhine to the fact that on Wednesday and Fridays of each week, a Wesleyan Chaplain will be in attendance at the Scottish Churches' Huts 8a, Schildergasse, at 6 p.m. for consultation and help in any direction. All Wesleyans desirous of meeting a Wesleyan Chaplain, will be heartily welcomed at these gatherings.

Answers to Correspondents.

[The flow of correspondence, since the Cologne Post was instituted, has been enormous, and the Editor would like to point out that only a certain number of the innumerable questions can be answered in each issue. Should any inquirer find that his question has not yet been answered, he can have the assurance that it will receive attention in due course, and the answer will appear accordingly. Many questions have been received which could be answered much easier by the Adjutant of the unit concerned, and all such cases which affect the unit commander must be taken to him and not sent here. — Ed.]

DECORATION DAY.

The American community in Great Britain has arranged to celebrate Decoration Day on the 30th inst. by placing the Stars and Stripes and floral tributes on the graves of the two thousand American officers and men who are buried in the British Isles. The English-Speaking Union is inviting its British members and friends to assist in paying this tribute to American comrades.

FORGED ARMY FORMS.

Charles Morris, printer's cutter, and Chas. Bligh, compositor, were charged, on remand, at Clerkenwell on Saturday, with being concerned in forging returned overcoat Army forms, and were dealt with for breaches of regulations under D.O.R.A.

Wm. Rolph was charged on remand with attempting to obtain £1 from the cloakroom at Euston Station by means of the forged form.

Morris and Rolph pleaded guilty, and Bligh said he thought he was printing the forms for an officer in a hurry. Morris said a soldier gave him £5 for 500 forms, and Bligh had 10s. for setting the forme.

The magistrate fined Morris £40, or two months; and Bligh £25, or six weeks, they having good characters. Rolph had already been bound over, and was sent to prison for two months.

PEACE ILLUMINATIONS.

All "Dora" lighting restrictions on buildings and streets are to be suspended for four days during peace week, in order that full scope may be given to illuminations.

The Rev. Charles Steer, M.C., has been instituted to the vicarate of Hornchurch, Essex. When war broke out he joined up as a private, and later became a chaplain. He won the M.C., and was afterwards taken prisoner.

BRITISH EMPIRE LEAVE CLUB.

To the soldiers of the Rhine Army, Monday, the 12th, will ever be a red-letter day, in that the Leave Club—a replica of that grand institution in Paris—was informally opened.

There was no great outward display, no lengthy speeches were delivered; the four hundred soldiers detailed for leave simply walking into the building to find all their needs satisfied.

In the afternoon there was a cinematograph show and also an impromptu concert; whilst the evening was spent in dancing, those not wishing to dance being able to indulge in the pleasures of a second cinema show.

Great appreciation was shown by all men for the splendid organization which Miss Decima Moore has created, and there is no doubt that the British Empire Leave Club in Cologne will rank amongst the greatest achievements ever made for the welfare of the troops.

RANTZAU STILL WRITING NOTES.

APPEAL TO THE POPE.

GERMANY BEGINS TO CONFESS.

RUSSIAN SOVIETS AND POLAND

THREE MORE NOTES FROM RANTZAU.

GERMAN CONSCIENCE INNOCENT

Count Brockdorff-Rantzau is indefatigable. He has addressed three more notes to M. Clemenceau, making eight in all.

SHIPPING.

The sixth note, stating that in two generations Germany has changed from an agrarian to an industrial nation, deals with the displacement of labour caused by the surrender of the German mercantile marine, involving fifteen million people. In the ordinary way, if work were not available emigration would afford some relief, but as the most important countries of the world will be closed to Germans, great suffering will ensue.

RESPONSIBILITY.

The seventh note raises the whole question of responsibility for the war.

Rantzau's preamble repeats that according to Article 231 of the Draft Treaty Germany and Her Allies are responsible for all loss and damage caused to Allied and Associated Governments and populations by the war imposed on them by the attack of Germany and her Allies.

Germany has accepted the responsibility for reparation, as distinct from the question of responsibility of he war.

The German Delegation, says Rantzau, cannot recognize that the German people should be held responsible for the guilt of the former German Government in the beginning of the war. He says the representatives of the Allied and Associated Powers have declared again and again that the German people would not be made responsible for the faults of their Government. The German people did not want war and would never have begun an offensive war. In the conscience of the German people this war has always been a defensive war.

The opinion of the Allied and Associated Governments as to who is guilty for the war is not the opinion of the German Delegation, which does not consider the late German Government as the sole and principal culprit in this war. There is no proof for such an opinion in the draft of Treaty. The German Delegates ask for the report of the Commission appointed by the Allied and Associated Governments to decide the responsibility of the authors of the war.

TERRITORIAL.

The third note states that the conditions attaching to the surrender of territory other than colonies is incompatible with the principles expressed in the preamble to the Peace terms. Rantzau says that he reserves the right to deal with the questions of Alsace Lorraine and Kenl later on, but he opposes the annexation of districts other than those to which the principle of self-determination is accorded. He says that it is inadmissible by the terms of the Treaty for the adversaries of Germany to satisfy financial or economic demands by changing German populations and German territories from one sovereignty to another as if they were only stones in a childish game. This is especially the case in the Saar district, he says, and adds "That the whole population in defending itself with all its strength against such a separation from the old Fatherland will not be unknown to the occupation authorities."

GERMANY BEGINS TO CONFESS.

WANTED, A FRANCIS OF ASSISI.

The President of the German National Assembly, Herr Fehrenbach, in a speech winding up the debate at which the Peace terms were discussed, bewailed the lack of a new Francis of Assisi, animated with tender feelings for German women and children and mutilated soldiers.

He further said that he was glad to be able to make a free and sincere pronouncement as to the responsibility for the war. Germany's fault was that it had degenerated; its science had become impure, its art debased; its life lacked morality and its social intercourse was without love. There was a total lack of the voluntary obedience of an independent people.

The German people themselves had been the most ready for peace. They only aspired to a little sunshine, which they did not in the least begrudge to others.

Incessant protests were made by all the Independent and some of the Majority Socialists, who kept their seats while the remainder of the Assembly vociferously applauded.

APPEAL TO THE POPE.

Cardinal von Hartmann, Archbishop of Cologne, and Dr. Schulte, Bishop of Paderborn (Westphalia) have made an appeal to the Pope to intervene for a mitigation of the Peace conditions, "which must lead to the despair of the German people and to a world revolution."

The Archbishop of Cologne has ordered thirteen hours "public prayer" on Sunday next, for a "peace of Justice".

OUTSPOKEN GERMAN TELLS SOME TRUTHS.

A NEW SPIRIT REQUIRED.

One German, at least, has no illusions on the justice of the peace terms, and points out to Germany that they seem harsh because even yet there has been no sign of regret for all the horrors of the war. What is required, says the famous and outspoken Socialist, Maximilian Harden, is a proof to the world of the existence of a new spirit in Germany. He says:—

"The Peace conditions are not harder than I expected. To the greater part of the people they were unpleasant, but could one really have expected them to be otherwise?

"During the six months since the revolution Germans have not given very convincing mental guarantees that they have changed their systems from top to toe. On the contrary, the present Government and the Press have used the same methods of incitement and the same tricks of bluff as under the old rule of the petty nobility.

"The Government's proclamations and speeches are only bad copies of the Kaiser's time. The whole Press resounds in these days with protests, and has started a campaign of incitement against the Allies couched in violent language. It is agitating for a refusal to sign the Treaty.

"The Government are trying to follow the old way of bluffing. The Allies made the conditions hard because they are suspicious of Germany. If Germany openly showed its goodwill to do what was in its power to comply with the Allies' requests, the Allies would see that the conditions were changed in favour of Germany, because they know there must be a Germany, and it is impossible to destroy the German people.

"President Wilson's power would have been all the greater if you and your like had not remained on the side of unreason and iniquity; if you had only said one decisive word against the destruction of Belgium, the carrying off of men and young girls, and the destruction of machinery in the Belgian and French factories. Had the Germany which presented itself to the world as a new Germany expressed repentant regret through its official organs, or at least through the public bodies, and exposed the guilty parties, President Wilson would have had a weapon against French and Belgian rage, which is the most easily comprehensible in history.

"Those who demand justice from others must first prove themselves just. Germany cannot claim her rights until, with brave dignity, she acknowledges her wrongdoing. Because no word of regret has come from the head of our Republic, no willingness to atone, the peace will be hard, and those that reject it must understand that they stand before the tribunal of the nations, and are bound to answer clearly the question, what have they done in order to prove to the world that a new spirit has made its entry into their Fatherland?"

Herr Harden incidentally remarks that the naval blockade, which is given the disgusting name of hunger blockade, is, as everybody must know, and even the war jurist, Kriege, always admitted, a military method permitted by international law, the mildest ever applied and one the application of which was always regarded as inevitable, and which Great Britain was willing in 1907 to renounce. It only remained applicable in 1914, he says, because seven years previously at The Hague, Germany secured the defeat of the motion for its abolition.

SWITZERLAND AND THE RHINE.

FREE ACCESS TO THE SEA.

Basing its standpoint on the Treaty of Paris of May 30, 1814, and the final Act of the Congress of Vienna and the Rhine Navigation Act of 1868, the Swiss Delegation on the Peace Conference Commission on the International régime of ports, waterways, and railways has formulated the following demands with regard to the peace preliminaries:

As a riverine State the Confederation claims the right to representation on the Rhine Navigation Commission, to take part in the revision of the Act of 1868, and to have the port of Basle treated as far as possible as if it were a sea port. The Swiss Government also asks that (1) fixed boat bridges should at once be altered in such a way as to assure during the entire year full navigation for all ships to and from Basle, (2) works provided for by Article 28 of the Convention of 1868 should be carried out at once (3) exemption from all navigation taxation should be maintained and guaranteed to all ships up to Basle.

The Rhine, states a communiqué issued at Berne, might be used for Central European traffic as far as Basle providing that the existing law is maintained, which forbids any barrier on the Rhine below Basle and any diversion of the waters of the Rhine to the prejudice of international navigation. It is of vital importance to Switzerland that her independence should not be compromised by the constant menace of fortified works. Switzerland considers the recognition of the free right of access to the sea and to navigation on international waterways in war as well as in peace as essential to the free development of countries deprived of any maritime port.

TRYING TO SILENCE LORD FRENCH.

NOT A SERVING SOLDIER.

Apparently there is no method of restraining Field Marshal Viscount French from continuing the publication of his book "1914."

The Service members of the House of Commons plied the Secretary of State for War with searching questions and elicited the information that as the Field Marshal is not drawing any pay from the army he is not amenable to Kings Regulations.

In the House of Commons Captain Ormsby-Gore (C.U., Stafford) asked whether Viscount French was an officer on the active list; and whether he was in receipt of any pay or allowances from War Office funds.

Mr. Churchill: Lord French is drawing no pay or allowances from Army funds, and he occupies no military post. He is, it is true, a Field Marshal, and, in consequence, technically on the active list. But Field Marshals in the past, when not employed under the War Office, have allowed themselves and have been allowed a very considerable measure of freedom in regard to controversial military matters. Field Marshal Lord Wolseley published, while on the Field Marshal list, a memoir of his life, in which he severely criticised not only former Governments but the Government of the day. The writings and speeches of Field Marshal Earl Roberts are also well known. It is certainly not intended that a Field Marshal, when not employed in a military capacity, should be placed by his rank under any special disadvantage. Such a rule would convert the highest military honour into in actual disability. The case of an unemployed Field Marshal is, therefore, different from that of a serving soldier, and public policy enjoins that the precedent should be recognised. I should add that the Army Council were not consulted in any way before the articles were published.

Captain Ormsby Gore: Do not these articles actually conflict with the Army Act and also with the Official Secrets Act?

Mr. Churchill: In the application of the Army Act it seems to me proper that a distinction should be drawn between serving solders and unemployed Field Marshals the honour of Field Marshal being the only honour on the active list enjoyed while life lasts.

Colonel. Yate (C.U., Melton): Is it not true that Lord French is Commander-in-Chief in Ireland?

Mr. Churchill: No. It is a nominal title, but there is a military Commander-in-Chief in Ireland. Lord French is not under the War Office in any way.

Major Earl Winterton (C.U., Horsham and Worthing) asked the Leader of the House whether it was open to any officer of his Majesty's Army or Navy who had held high military or naval office, and who subsequently held civilian office under the Crown, to write and publish his account of naval and military operations during the war; and, if so, whether he would relax the regulations by which serving officers in either service were forbidden to publish accounts of operations in order that they might have an opportunity of replying to the strictures of their former chiefs.

Mr. Bonar Law: As regards the first part of the question, it is not possible. I think, to lay down any general rule in such a matter. As regards the latter part, the Government are not prepared to make the change suggested.

ANTWERP REVELATIONS.

Yesterday's instalment of Field Marshal French's book contains his views regarding the siege and fall of Antwerp. He admits that the sudden news of the grave situation came as a suprise to him. Reviewing what happened he comes to the conclusion that here also the Germans gave "an example of the over-confidence which for ever possessed that army which set out for world conquest. As on the Marne, so at Antwerp, they were not prepared to seize the psychological moment and to play boldly for the great stake. It is seldom that fortune offers another chance to a military leader who has once failed to gather the rich harvest which she has put into his grasp. Yet the German Emperor presents, together with his great General Staff, one of the few instances in history of a Commander-in-Chief so soon being given a splendid opportunity to retrieve such mistakes as those of Sept. 5 and 6."

French complains that as regards Antwerp "Lord Kitchener did not make things easy for me. Keenly desirous to influence the course of operations, his telegrams followed one after another, each containing directions regarding a local situation of which, in London, he could know very little."

The Field Marshal repudiates any responsibility whatever for what happened in the north during the first ten days of October, and continues "I feel sure that, had the views of the commanders in the field (Joffre and myself) been accepted a much better and easier situation would have been created. It is perfectly clear that the operations for the relief of Antwerp should never have been directed from London. It should have been left entirely in the hands of the French Commander-in-Chief (or in mine acting with him) to decide upon the dispositions and destination of the troops immediately they left British shores. We alone were in a position to judge as to the best methods by which to co-ordinate the objectives and distribute the troops between the northern and southern theatres.

As things turned out Lille might have been saved. It is quite possible also to conceive a situation starting from these preliminary dispositions which would have resulted in saving Ostend, even Zeebrugge and that line of coast, the possession of which by the enemy, dating from October, 1914, was a source of such infinite trouble to us."

General Sir Hubert Plumer will visit Lincoln on Saturday next to unveil a memorial tablet in Lincoln Cathedral to Major Lancelot Edwards, of the Lincolnshire Regiment.

Statements to the effect that Ciro's Club has been sold are incorrect. The owners have no intention of selling the premises.

LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL ESTIMATES.

THE NEW RATE.

The London County Council reassembled yesterday after the Easter recess and gave preliminary consideration to the Estimates for the year 1919-20. The estimates of expenditure on rate and debt accounts amount to £14,260,399. The estimated income, other than that to be raised by county contributions and excluding balances brought forward, is £6,224,449, giving a net expenditure of £8,035,950, in respect of which £7,550,172 is to be raised by rate, the difference of £485,778 being taken from the balances.

The proposed rate for the new year for purposes other than education is 1s. 7d. in the £, as compared with 1s. 5d. for 1918-19, and comprises 1s. 5d. for general county and 2d. for special county purposes, the former being increased by 1.75d. and the latter by .25d., as compared with the rate for 1918-19. The rate for purposes of education is 1s. 9d. in the £, a reduction of 6d.—due to additional Government grants—as compared with 1918-19. The rate for the first six months of the year is 20d. in the £, being 19d. for general county purposes (including education) and 1d. for special county purposes.

RECRUITING FOR THE ARMY.

HIGHER AGE, LOWER CATEGORY.

An Army Order states that it has been decided to enlist, for garrison duties with the Armies of Occupation, a number of men (ex-soldiers or men who have not previously served) who do not satisfy the normal physical and other standards. Enlistments will be for a period up to April 30, 1920, or for such less period during which the Armies of Occupation are maintained as such. The qualifications for enlistment are:

(a) Age, 18 years and upwards.

(b) Physical standards—Men 38 years and over should be category A, B (i) or B (ii). Men below this age can only be accepted if in category B (ii).

(c) Height, 5ft and upwards; chest measurement, &c., is left to discretion of examining medical officer.

Men enlisting under this Order will draw the ordinary rates of pay of their corps, including the increases granted by Army Order 1 of 1918. They will also receive the bonus referred to in Army Order 54 of 1919, for so long as the grant is continued to men serving in the Armies of Occupation.

A number of men are also to be enlisted for special duties in connection with the scheme for the exhumation of bodies and the centralization of military cemeteries in France.

RUSSIAN SOVIETS AND POLAND.

Warsaw. The Government of Russian Soviets has warned the Polish Minister of Foreign Affairs of Poland that the occupation of Vilna by the Poles will be considered as a declaration of war.—Wireless.

KOLCHAK'S SIBERIAN OFFENSIVE.

GREAT CAPTURES.

Reuter learns that, according to a telegram from Omsk of April 29, the Siberian troops, in the sector west of Ufa alone, made an enormous capture of prisoners and booty. The official list is as fallows: 36 guns, 200 machine-guns, 9,000 rifles, over 10,000 prisoners, 20,000 shells, 5,000,000 cartridges, 2 armoured trains, 50 locomotives, 600 railway cars, 100 steamers, 70 barges, 2 ambulances, numerous vehicles, a quantity of forage, and other miscellaneous booty.

North of the Perm railway fighting is in progress for the possession of the Kirkinsk works.

North and south of the Kazan railway Admiral Kolchak's troops have taken the offensive on the rivers Nylga and Val, while along the Volga-Bugulma line the attack in developing successfully without interruption from the enemy.

In the Samara railway sector the enemy is offering strong resistance. Good progress is also reported from the Chelny front, where in one day the troops advanced eighteen miles.

ENGLAND FREE FROM BELGIANS.

Practically all the Belgian refugees have now left England and returned to their "native" land. Last week one English vessel left with 590 passengers on board for Antwerp, and another with 384 for Ostend.

Upwards of 200,000 refugees fled from Belgium to Great Britain in consequence of the German occupation. At first they were received in this country by voluntary organisations, but before long the Government extended to them the hospitality of the nation through about 2,000 local committees acting under the authority of the Local Government Board. Before the armistice about 75,000 refugees had left England, some being called up for the Belgian army, and others given employment in France, where there is not the language difficulty which occurs in England. After the cessation of hostilities in November last the work of repatriation proceeded apace, about 125,000 refugees being dealt with by Mr. Basil Peto as Commissioner under the Local Government Board. The President, Dr. Addison, has sent a letter of thanks to Mr. Peto for his services.

£10,000 ARMY PAY ORDERS THEFT.

No arrest has yet been made in connection with the theft of between two and three hundred Army pay orders of a face value of nearly £10,000 from the Army Pay Office at Dover. Action is being taken to stop payment of the orders, and to trace the man who is believed to be cashing them in the London area, and of whom a description has been circulated to the post offices.

MUNITIONS OUTPUT IN FRANCE.

ENORMOUS EFFORTS.

M. Eugène Schneider, head of the famous French armament firm, gives an interesting account of the work of the firm during the war.

At the commencement of the war the north and east of France were invaded and occupied by the enemy. Seventy per cent. of their works were stopped and occupied. Their remaining works in close proximity to the battlefield, and their staff, were continually exposed to danger. The rest of the country had to make good the loss, and it was necessary, therefore, to erect new factories and plants to make up for those which had been taken out of their hands. In the first days of the war 55 per cent. of their labour was mobilized. Women colonials, and foreigners were engaged. The coal production was reduced by one half, but it was afterwards developed to three-quarters of the normal production before the war—(hear, hear)—although the mines were under enemy fire. The amount of coal consumed before the war was 60,000,000 tons, and the production was 41,000,000 tons, leaving some 20,000,000 tons to be imported. At the commencement of the war the output of coke was reduced from 4,000,000 tons to 1,800,000 tons. This was developed during the war to 3,200,000 tons, an augmentation of 80 per cent. In his own works the construction of new coke furnaces enabled them to produce 500,000 tons per annum. The production of cast iron and steel before the war was: Cast iron 5,200,000 tons, steel 4,700,000 tons. The works taken by the Germans produced: Cast iron 3,300,000 tons, steel 2,200,000 tons. This meant a reduction of production of 62 to 64 per cent. Since 1915 fifty blast furnaces have been restarted.

M. Schneider said the production of artillery and machinery in his works during the war was: Heavy artillery, 15,000; light artillery, from 500 to 600 per month; tanks of various types, 4,100; aerial motors (from 200 to 500 h. p.), 4,500 per month; and shells of different calibres, 200,000 to 250,000 per day. They produced about 70 per cent. of the heavy artillery during the war. (Cheers.) They also made a large quantity of parts for light artillery to be assembled in the arsenals, and had turned out more than 2,000 finished materials. Further, they supplied several Allied nations with materials, including Serbia, Russia, Roumania, Greece, Portugal, and the United States. Their output of howitzers was 520. This, of course, meant the erection of new workshops, and the adaptation of old shops for new purposes. During the war their production of shells increased from 3,000 to 30,000 per day, and of fuses from 3,000 to 100,000 per day. At one stage they reduced their production of shells in order that all their machinery might be used for artillery purposes, after having first instructed smaller works in the manufacture of shells.

WOMEN THRASH BOLSHEVIST LEADERS.

Stockholm. According to a message received from Petrograd grave disorders broke out there during the first week in May. The trouble started in the factories among the workmen, who were exasperated by recent mobilisation decrees.

Women workers in the Treougolnik factories were particularly violent. They thrashed Bolshevist commissaries and hissed Labour leaders who were endeavouring to harangue the workers. For the first time the cry was heard in the streets of Petograd "Long live Koltchak, our Saviour."

Terrible threats were uttered against the Bolshevists, but the Soviet authorities did not dare to take any measures against the women.—Reuter.

MEN OR MALINGERERS?

Nearly five thousand miners are on strike in South Wales. The collieries at Llwynpia have been idle since Thursday as a protest in reference to the employment of discharged soldiers.

Twelve hundred miners at the Nantgarw pits at Penycraig struck work yesterday.

WAITING LIST AT CAMBRIDGE.

Wonderful matriculation results were achieved at Cambridge on the 8th May, when five hundred and eighty-three fresh students registered. The number of freshmen entered this academical year is now 1,823 which is easily the best record. The previous highest total was in 1909-10 when 1,218 students matriculated. Colleges are refusing to accept any more names and it is probable that a waiting list will have to be kept.

WAR EXHIBITION AT CRYSTAL PALACE.

It is stated that the Committee of the Imperial War Musuem has obtained the use of the main building at the Crystal Palace and will open an Imperial War Exhibition next summer. Over ninety thousand museum exhibits have already been catalogued. At the Palace, Aircraft will be suspended from the high roof.

BETTER THAN KEYMONEY.

The remarkable scarcity of houses in London is illustrated by the offer of a Devonshire lady. She expresses her willingness to give one thousand pounds as a thank-offering to the Royal Hospital for Incurables at Putney, if the Secretary of that institution will secure for her a suitable house near London.

SHORTAGE OF SILK HATS.

The rapid return to popularity of the silk hat, which it was thought the war had killed, has caught manufacturers unprepared. It is difficult to meet the great demand, and prices are soaring in consequence.

ALSACE-LORRAINE.

The draft Treaty of Peace declares that Alsace-Lorraine shall be ceded by Germany to France, and there must be few critics amongst our Allies and even amongst neutral peoples who will cavil at the declaration. The cession was universally expected when Germany failed in her bid for world dominion, and even those who profess to be perturbed by the fashion of French imperialism are agreed that justice has been meted out in this instance. International treaties have since earliest days meant territorial rearrangements, and the rearrangements inspired by the Peace of Paris 1919 will be momentous. It is our intention to write a few articles from time to time on the history of some of the affected countries. Our aim is to avoid the noisy arena of controversy and to seek the academic calm of dispassionate narration. There is little doubt of the just claims which Alsace-Lorraine can put forward for pride of place in any survey of European territories. In it we find our hardest task. Many treaties and pamphlets have been written on the history of this disputed land, and too often counsel has been darkened by a multiplicity of words. Mr. Ernest Vizetelly who tells the "true story" of Alsace-Lorraine, M. Jules Duhem, and even M. Ernest Lavisse have not spoken the last word.

To many it may seem an impertinence but to us it is a manifest truth to say that no Frenchman nor German can write impartially and convincingly of Alsace-Lorraine. On the one hand, our Allies tell us that the history of this territory can be traced back to the days when Julius Caesar fought against Ariovistus. It was a part of Gaul, and Gaul was bounded on the east by the Rhine. Alsace-Lorraine, therefore, was a part of the future France, and now she is "reunited" to her long-lost province. But historically the matter cannot be settled in this easy manner. The formula of "reunion" which is so often used by French historians—even by Ernest Lavisse—is petitio principii. On the other hand, our enemies hark back to the days of Charles the Great, and rightly enough insist that Alsace-Lorraine was a part of the old Empire. But that is not helpful. Where was Germany on Christmas Day 800 A.D.? Thus the story of the territory is usually told in two ways. If France took as her motto "Clausa Germanis Gallia," there was naturally a counter motto "Clausa Gallis Germania," and Bismarck saw to it that it was rudely translated into practical politics. So the sorry game of partizan history has gone on, and there is no promise of its ending.

After the great empire of Charles the Great fell to pieces Alsace and Lorraine formed parts of Lotharingia, a country that sometimes leaned towards the Franks and sometimes towards the Germans. Ultimately it became an integral portion of the Hapsburg dominions and therefore was absorbed in the Holy Roman Empire, a fate shared by Belgium, Holland, and parts of Italy. At the Reformation an important annexation was made by France. The protestant princes in their conflict with Charles V invited the help of Henry II of France, and by the Treaty of Friedewalde, 1552, Henry's aid to the rebellious Protestants was rewarded by liberty "to occupy and to keep the towns that are not of German speech, namely, Toul, Metz, Verdun, and others of a like description". In the seventeenth century the help of France was once again requested, and when the Peace of Westphalia was concluded in 1648 Austrian Alsace was given to France in return for her part in the Thirty-Years' War. In addition to this she was confirmed in her possession of the Lorraine bishoprics of Metz, Toul, and Verdun, and was given "prefecture" over ten imperial cities in Alsace. Theoretically these cities and territories still belonged to the Empire, and any appeals went not to France but to the imperial court at Speier. But imperial suzerainty was merely nominal, and France to her glory ruled Alsace so wisely that there was then begun a sentimental attachment between German Alsace and French rule which has continued to the present day.

France conceived a generous interpretation of the 1648 Treaty, and occupied the whole of Alsace. In 1681 the power of Louis XIV and his army was so strong that Strasbourg was taken over, and the Peace of Ryswick recognized the French possession of the province. Even a Richelieu could not have wished a better "natural frontier" than France held at the close of the seventheenth century. The part of Lorraine that was still outside of her influence passed in 1768 to the irrestible France as a consequence of the Polish Succession War, and in 1798 France had the gratification of opening her arms to Mulhouse which of its own free will left the Swiss Confederation for the French Republic. Then came 1871 and the day of cruel sorrow for France. Alsace and that part of Lorraine which lies between Metz and the Vosges were wrenched from her and made into a Reichsland of the German Empire. But now France smiles through her tears, for the lost provinces are hers once more.

The strongest claim that France can make in regard to Alsace is that Alsace is her creation. At a time when it was possible to win the affection and loyalty of Alsatians France made a great and worthy effort. Alsace was not a unity but exceedingly complex, and it had suffered grievously during the seventeenth century wars. Consequently its peoples responded to a statesmanship which favoured immigration, manufactures, agriculture, and the organization of justice and order. Thus patriotism grew and flourished, and the days when Germany took back an unwilling people into an unwelcome fold did not destroy but rather quickened the patriotic spirit. That is a better claim than that of the historians who wander back to the dim days of ancient Gaul.

UP TO YOU!

It's a gloomy day, a tomby day,
A blue and dismal rainy day,
A sad, forlorn and tearful day,
If you would make it so.
A lonesome day, a sighing day,
A cheerless and a crying day,
A "what's the use in trying" day—
It's up to you, you know.

It's a glorious day, a happy day,
A joyous and a buoyant day,
A merry, laughing, snappy day,
If you would make it so.
A brilliant day, a sunny day,
A rare, a fair, a funny day,
A "good for making money" day—
It's up to you, you know.

Life.

LEST WE FORGET.

In a recent edition of The Cologne Post appeared a news item to the effect that a citizen of Cologne had been arrested and fined 10,000 Marks for being in possession of a cake of soap. Just that, and nothing more. To some of us Britishers who are "doing" the famous twin-steepled cathedral city (or is it vice-versa?), the news came more or less as a shock, forgetting in our surprise, of the many similar happenings that occurred in our own land during the period when the newly-born coupon system was "cutting the teeth". We have all vivid recollections how the phrase "without a coupon" was rolled round the tongues of many with a sort of secret glee; and of how folks vied each other to evade the edicts of the Food Controller, who after all, was only doing his best, literally and figuratively, to "save our bacon"; and how the gentle D. O. R. A. repeatedly made "the catch of the season," when she stretched forth her long arm, personified in a blue uniform. It is of these hings we would speak, should we prove to criticize unduly the aforesaid German citizen, and lest we forget.
